John Maynard.

Library of the Theological Seminary,

PRINCETON, N. J.

Stuart Fund

Division SCC

Section 2043

Shelf.....

Number V.6

THE

WORKS

OF THE

REV. P. DODDRIDGE, D. D.

VOLUME VI.

THE

FAMILY EXPOSITOR,

CONTAINING THE FORMER PART OF

THE HISTORY OF OUR LORD JESUS CHRIST,

AS RECORDED BY

THE FOUR EVANGELISTS,

DISPOSED IN THE ORDER OF AN HARMONY.

Ει δε τις υπο τυλων μη πασχη των λογων, υπο μονων αν των εν αδη δικαστηριων υπευθυνθειη.
SIMPLIC. in EPICTET. Proem.

LEEDS:

PRINTED BY EDWARD BAINES,

FOR THE EDITORS; CONDER, BUCKLERSBURY; BUTTON, PATERNOSTER-ROW; WILLIAMS, STATIONERS'-COURT; BAYNES, PATERNOSTER-ROW; OGLE, GREAT-TURN-STILE; NUNN, QUEEN-STREET; AND JONES, PATERNOSTER-ROW, LONDON; AND FOR BAINES, AND BINNS, LEEDS; COLBERT, DUBLIN; WILSON AND SPENCE, YORK; OGLE AND AIKMAN, EDINBURGH; M. OGLE, GLASGOW; CROOKES, ROTHERHAM; AND ABEL, NORTHAMPTON.

1804.

PRINCETON THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY

TO HER ROYAL HIGHNESS

THE PRINCESS OF WALES.

MADAM,

I Most thankfully acknowledge the condescension of your Royal Highness in allowing me the honour of laying this work at your feet, and committing it to so august a protection; and humbly beg your favourable acceptance of it, as a most sincere, though inconsiderable, expression of the profoundest duty, and most cordial esteem.

Could I lay open to your Royal Highness all the secret sentiments of my heart, you would read there the most affectionate sense of that gracious Providence which conducted you hither, to instruct and adorn Great Britain by so amiable an example, as well as to bless it with a race of princes descended from the illustrious houses of Brunswick and Saxe-Gotha in so happy an union! Joyfully have I, long since, taken my part with thousands, in congratulating my country and your Royal Highness on this occasion, and acknowledging that wise and paternal care his Majesty hath therein expressed for the happiness of succeeding generations: but permit me, Madam, freely to add, that with regard to yourself, I rejoice not so much in this accession to your grandeur, as in the persuasion I have, that you are possessed of a mind so superior to it, as to render it in all its remotest consequences, what greatness is not always to its possessors, safe, honourable, and advantageous. Universal report leaves me no room to doubt, that even in this blooming age you are tenderly sensible of the shining dangers inseparable from so high a rank; and that it appears to your princely wisdom chiefly desirable, on account of those distinguished advantages which it may give, of approving yourself the faithful servant of God, and the generous friend of the public.

Among the principal of these advantages, your Royal Highness will undoubtedly number the opportunity which this exalted station of life affords you of forming to early sentiments of religion and virtue the opening minds of your royal offspring; those dear pledges of the liberty and happiness of ages yet to come, on whose temper and character, so much of public glory to our nation, so much of private felicity to yet unformed families, will depend. We adore the great Disposer of all events, who hath lodged this important trust in so wise and so pious a hand; and it must argue a very irreligious, or a very careless temper, if any neglect earnestly to pray, that He who hath so graciously assigned it to you, may direct and prosper you in it. While you, Madam, during the tender years which most naturally fall under the care of a mother, are endeavouring to bless these lovely infants with an education like that which you received from the excellent princes your parents, may your Royal Highness, in a success like theirs, receive the joys you have given! May they arise and shine on the whole Protestant world, in the lustre of every royal virtue and every Christian grace, which can render them dear to God and to their country, and, to say all in a word, worthy their relation to the Prince and Princess of Wales, and to all the glorious line of remoter ancestors from which they spring!

I should esteem it one of the greatest blessings of my life, and should be able to relish the thought in the nearest views of death itself, if this humble present which I here offer to your Royal Highness might give you any assistance in these pious cares. If the kings of Israel were required, not only to read the law of Moses all the days of their lives, but to write out a copy of it with with their own hand; it may reasonably be expected, that Christian princes should make the far more glorious gospel of the Son of God their daily study, that it may be their constant guide. And I persuade myself, Madam, that none of the fashionable amusements of the age will seem to you in any degree comparable to that rational and elevated pleasure, which you will find in pointing out to your happy charge, as they grow capable of such instructions, the resplendent example of Jesus, the Prince of heaven, and the King of glory; in tracing the marvellous and edifying circumstances of his life, as here described; and in urging their humble and dutiful regards to that Divine, yet condescending Redeemer; to whom your Royal Highness, with all those amiable virtues which render you the delight and boast of our nation, will thankfully ascribe your own hopes of being finally accepted by God, and sharing the joys of his eternal presence.

These hopes, Madam, are the grand supports of the human mind in those views, from which royalty and empire cannot shelter it. An awful Providence, which we must all long lament, did early write these admonitions to your Royal Highness in the dust of one of the best of Queens. The attention with which her late Majesty studied the sacred oracles, and the evidences of our holy religion, for which, even in her departing moments, she expressed so firm a regard, will, I hope, never be forgotten by any allied to her, or descended from her. Nor am I able, in all the overflowings of the most affectionate gratitude and duty which I now feel, to form a more important wish for that condescending Patroness to whom I am addressing, than (to borrow the words of the Hebrew Monarch) that the testimonies of God may be her delight and her counsellors! And I trust, Madam, that they are so; I trust that, conscious of a heart devoted to God, and supported by a well-grounded confidence in his favour, you are fixing your eyes on a celestial diadem, which shall sparkle with immortal glories, when the kingdoms of this earth shall be known no more, and all its pageantry shall be passed away like a dream. May you at length, in a very distant moment, have a happy accession to that never-fading crown; and, after having long adorned the highest stations here with that amiable Prince, whose constant and endearing friendship is so much more to your Royal Highness than all the grandeur which can result from your relation to him, may you be both exalted to the superior glories of the heavenly kingdom!

I hope your Royal Highness will please to pardon me, that I have expressed myself with so much warmth and freedom, in a presence I so highly revere: but I should be most unworthy of the name and honour of a Christian Minister, if I were ever ashamed of sentiments like these; and the assiduity with which I have lately been sitting at the feet of my Divine Master, while commenting on these authentic memoirs of his life and history, hath inspired me with a veneration and ardour which it is not easy to repress. I am sensible, Madam, these are unfashionable strains on such an occasion; and it would have been easy to have filled many more pages than these with panegyric, on what I have read of your illustrious ancestors, and what I have heard from multitudes, of the charms of your Royal Highness's person and character; but I imagined that such hints as these were more suitable to that plainness and simplicity which at all times become a servant of Christ; and I flatter myself, that, to a person of your Royal Highness's penetration, they will not seem less expressive of that undissembled esteem and affectionate zeal, with which I am,

MADAM,

Your Royal Highness's

Most faithful, most dutiful,

And most obedient, humble Servant,

PHILIP DODDRIDGE.

PREFACE.

I HAVE long been convinced, that if any thing can stop that progress of infidelity and vice, which every wise man beholds with sorrow and fear; that if any thing can allay those animosities, which (unnatural as they are) have so long inflamed us, and pained the heart of every generous Christian; in a word, that if any thing can establish the purity and order, the peace and glory of the church, or spread the triumphs of personal and domestic religion among us, it must be an attentive study of the word of God, and especially of the New Testament; that best of books, which, if read with impartiality and seriousness, under the influences of that blessed Spirit by whom it was inspired, would have the noblest tendency to enlighten and adorn the mind, and not only to touch, but to animate and transform the heart.

The station of life in which Divine Providence has placed me, rendered it peculiarly necessary for me to make these sacred oracles my principal study; and having, to my unspeakable delight and advantage, felt much of their energy, I long since determined that it should be the main business of my life as an author to illustrate them, and to lead my fellow-christians into a due regard for them, by endeavouring, in as plain and popular a manner as I could, to display their beauty, their spirit, and their use; and I thankfully acknowledge the goodness of God to me, in giving me health and spirits to finish so considerable a part of my design, though I have so much other business on my hands, and have been obliged to execute this in a much more laborious manner than I at first apprehended would have been requisite.

The title I have given to the work sufficiently explains its original design, which was chiefly to promote family religion, and to render the reading of the New Testament more pleasant and improving to those that wanted the benefit of a learned education, and had not opportunity or inclination to consult a variety of commentators. And I thought it proper still to retain the title of The Family Expositor, even when I had made some alteration in the plan; because that is still the leading view of the greater part of the work. In pursuit of this, I have given a large paraphrase on the sacred text, well knowing that this is the most agreeable and useful manner of explaining it to common readers, who hardly know how to manage annotations, especially when they are to be read to others. The chief objection against this way is, that when a whole verse, and much more when several verses are taken together (as they frequently are,) it requires a great attention, and in some places some considerable penetration, to trace the exact correspondence between the respective clauses of the text and the paraphrase. There are some performances of this kind in our own language, as well as in others, in which such liberties are taken, that I freely confess that, were it not for the initial references, or opposite column, I should not be able to guess from the paraphrase itself, what the scripture was which it pretended to explain. This must undoubtedly give the greatest advantage for disguise and misrepresentation; and where those glosses are read by themselves without the scriptures (which I know has been the case in some families,) it is really exchanging the prophets and apostles for modern divines. To prevent this intolerable evil, I have formed my paraphrase so, that it is impossible to read it without the text, having every where interwoven the words of scripture with it, and carefully distinguished them from the rest by the Italic character: so that every one may immediately see, not only the particular clause to which any explication answers, but also what are the words of the sacred original, and what merely the sense of a fallible man, who is liable, though in the integrity of his heart, to mislead his readers, and dares not attribute to himself the singular glory of having put off every prejudice, even while he would deliberately and knowingly allow none.

scriptures

I thought it might be some additional improvement of this work, and some entertainment to the more accurate reader, to give the text in a new version; which I have accordingly done from the original with all the care I could. There are so few places in which the general sense will appear different from our received translation, that some will perhaps think this an unnecessary trouble: but I can by no means repent it, as it has given me an opportunity of searching more accurately into several beauties of expression which had before escaped me; and of making some alterations, which, though they may not be very material to the edification of men's souls, may yet in some degree do a farther honour to scripture; raising some of those ornaments which were before depressed; and sufficiently proving that several objections urged against it were entirely of an English growth: ends, which might yet more abundantly be answered by a new version of the Old Testament, which has suffered much more in our translation, as it is natural to suppose it must.

I thought it might also conduce to the usefulness of this exposition to digest the history of the four evangelists into one continued series, or, in other words, to throw it into the order of an harmony. By this means each story and discourse is exhibited with all its concurrent circumstances, as recorded by the sacred penmen; frequent repetitions are prevented; and a multitude of seeming oppositions are so evidently reconciled, as to supersede many objections, and render the very mention of them unnecessary. My reader will hardly imagine the pains that this part of the work has cost me, both in examining the order of the several texts, and collating the different accounts in each, in such a manner, that no one clause in any of the evangelists might be omitted, and yet the several passages to be inserted might make one connected sense, and, without any large addition, stand in a due grammatical order. I was the more sensible of this labour, as I laid it down for a maxim to myself, when I entered on this work, that I would study as much as possible to make it an original in all its parts. Accordingly, the first copy of it was drawn up with hardly any other assistance than that of the Greek Testament, which I endeavoured to harmonize, to translate, to paraphrase and to improve, just as if none had ever attempted any thing of that nature before me. Afterwards I was obliged to compare it with what others had done; and, as may easily be supposed, I found in many instances an agreement, and in many others a difference betwixt them and myself. Where we differed, I endeavoured impartially to examine the reasons on both sides; and where I have perceived myself indebted to any, for leading me into a more just and beautiful version, explication or disposition, than I had before chosen, I have generally, and, so far as I can recollect, universally, acknowledged it; unless where the hint came from some living friend, where such acknowledgment would not have been agreeable. There are, no doubt, many other instances in which the thoughts that seemed originally my own might be suggested by memory, though I knew not from whence they came; and a thousand more are so obvious, that one would suppose they must occur to every attentive reader, who has any genius and furniture for criticism. To have multiplied plied references and quotations in such a case, would have been, I think, a very useless and burthensome piece of pedantry, and might (as I fear has been the case with Pfeiffer and Wolfius) have discouraged the reader from consulting any, in so great a crowd. I could not well brook the drudgery of transcribing the works of others, and should scorn the meanness of dressing myself up in borrowed plumes; but if any imagine me a mere compiler, I shall not be greatly concerned at their mistake, but say, with the modest and excellent Mons. Rollin, "*If the things themselves are good, it signifies very little whose they are."

The notes are, at the desire of many friends, entirely added to my first scheme; and when I saw so many persons of learning and rank were pleased to encourage my undertaking, I thought it would be no unacceptable expression of my gratitude to them to insert several which I should otherwise have omitted. Some of them seemed absolutely necessary to justify the version and paraphrase, in what might seem most peculiar in it: several more refer to the order, and give my reasons for leaving the general track, where I have left it; and for not leaving it much oftener, where some very learned and ingenious authors have taken a great deal of pains (though, I persuade myself, with a very good intent) to lead us out of the way: and as several of these are modern writers, the remarks are such as do not commonly occur. The rest of the notes consist, either of some observations on the beauty and force of various passages, which I do not remember to have seen elsewhere; or of references to, and observations upon, considerable writers, whether they be or be not professed expositors of scripture, who seem in the most masterly manner to examine or to illustrate and confirm the sense I have given. These are generally but very short; because it would have been quite foreign to my purpose, and utterly inconsistent with my scheme, to have formed them into large critical essays: but I hope they may be some guide to young students, who, if they have libraries at hand, are in great danger of being lost in a wood, where, I am sorry to say it, they will find a multitude of prickly and knotty shrubs, and in comparison but few pleasant and fruitful trees. It has appeared to me an office of real and important friendship to gentlemen in this station of life, to endeavour to select for them the most valuable passages which occur in reading, and to remit them thither, not only for the illustration of scripture, but also for their direction in studying the evidences and contents both of natural and revealed religion. This I have done with great care and labour in a pretty large work, which perhaps may be published after my death, if surviving friends should judge it proper. To that I have generally referred those citations which relate to polemical divinity; and at present only add that, with regard to these notes, I have endeavoured to render them easy and entertaining, even to an English reader; and for that purpose have cautiously excluded quotations from the learned languages, even where they might have served to illustrate customs referred to, or words to be explained. That deficiency may be abundantly made up by the perusal of Elsner, Albert, Bos, Wolfius, Raphelius, Fortuita Sacra, &c†; books which I cannot but

* Que m'importe d'ou il soit, pourvu qu'il se trouve utile.—Roll. Man. d'enseign. vol. i. p. 75.

† As some of the books mentioned above are not very common among us, it may not be improper to insert their titles, viz.

Jacobi Elsner. Observat. Sacræ, 2 vol. 8vo. Traject. ad Rhen. 1720.
Alberti Observ. Philolog. Lugd. Bat. 1725.
Lamberti Bos Exercitat. Philolog. Franek. 1700
——— Animadvers. Franck. 1715.
——— Observat. Miscell. Leovard. 1731.
Raphelii Annotat. Philol. in Nov. Test. ex Xenophonte, Polybio, & Herodoto collectæ, 3 tom. Lugd. 1731.
Wolfii Curæ Philolog. & Criticæ, 4to. Hamb. 1725.

recommend recommend to my young friends, as proper not only to ascertain the sense of a variety of words and phrases, which occur in the apostolic writings; but also to form them to the most useful method of studying the Greek classics, those great masters of solid sense, elegant expression, just lively painting, and masculine eloquence, to the neglect of which I cannot but ascribe that enervate, dissolute, and puerile manner of writing, which is growing so much on the present age, and will probably consign so many of its productions to speedy oblivion.

The improvement of each section is entirely of a practical nature, and generally consists of a pressing exhortations, and devout meditations, grounded on the general design, or on some particular passages, of the section to which they are annexed. They are all in an evangelical strain, and they could not with any propriety have been otherwise. I am well aware that this manner is not much in the present taste, and I think it at once a sad instance and cause of our degeneracy that it is not. If it be necessary that I should offer any apology, it must in short be this: I have with all possible attention and impartiality considered first the general evidences of the truth of Christianity, and then those of the inspiration of the New Testament, which seems to me inseparably connected with the former; and, on the whole, am in my conscience persuaded of both, and have been confirmed in that conviction by the most laboured attempts to overthrow them. It seems a necessary consequence of this conviction (and I am astonished it should not be more generally attended to), that we are with the humblest submission of mind to form our religious notions on this plan, and to give up the most darling maxims which will not bear the test of it.

I should think an impartial reader must immediately see, and every judicious critic be daily more confirmed in it, that the New Testament teaches us to conceive of Christ, not as a generous Benefactor only, who, having performed some actions of heroic virtue and benevolence, is now retired from all intercourse with our world, so that we have no more to do with him than to preserve a grateful remembrance of his character and favours; but that he is to be considered as an ever-living and ever-present friend, with whom we are to maintain a daily commerce by faith and prayer, and from whom we are to derive those supplies of divine grace, whereby we may be strengthened for the duties of life, and ripened for a state of perfect holiness and felicity. This is evident not only from particular passages of scripture, in which he is described as always with his church (Mat. xxviii. 20.) as present wherever two or three are assembled in his name (Mat. xviii. 20), as upholding all things by the word of his power (Heb. i. 3), and as Head over all to his church (Eph. i. 22), but indeed from the whole scope and tenor of the New Testament. These views are therefore continually to be kept up; and for any to pretend that this is a round-about method (as some have presumed to call it,) and that men may be led to virtue, the great end of all, by a much plainer and more direct way, seems to me only a vain and arrogant attempt to be wiser than God himself; which therefore must in the end appear to be folly, with whatever subtlety of argument it may be defended, or with whatever pomp of rhetoric it be adorned.

The New Testament is a book written with the most consummate knowledge of human nature; and though there are a thousand latent beauties in it, which it is the business and glory of true criticism to place in a true point of light, the general sense and design of it is plain to every honest reader even at the very first perusal. It is evidently intended to bring us to God through Christ, in an humble dependence on the communications of his sanctifying and quickening Spirit; and to engage us to a course of faithful and universal obedience, chiefly from a grateful sense of the riches of divine grace grace manifested to us in the gospel. And though this scheme is indeed liable to abuse, as every thing else is, it appears to me plain in fact, that it has been and still is the grand instrument of reforming a very degenerate world; and according to the best observations I have been able to make on what has passed about me, or within my own breast, I have found, that, in proportion to the degree in which this evangelical scheme is received and relished, the interest of true virtue and holiness flourishes, and the mind is formed to manly devotion, diffusive benevolence, steady fortitude, and, in short, made ready to every good word and work. To this therefore I am determined, at all adventures, to adhere; nor am I at all ashamed or afraid of any scorn which I may encounter in such a cause; and I would earnestly exhort, and entreat, all my brethren in the Christian ministry to join with me, as well knowing to whom we have committed our souls; and cheerfully hoping, that He, by whom we have hitherto, if faithful in our calling, been supported and animated, will at length confess us before the presence of his Father and the holy angels in that day, when it will be found no dishonour to the greatest and wisest of the children of men to have listed themselves under the banner of the cross, and constantly and affectionately to have kept their divine Leader in view.

I cannot flatter myself so far, as to imagine that I have fallen into no mistakes, in a work of so great compass and difficulty; but my own conscience acquits me of having designedly misrepresented any single passage of scripture, or of having written one line with a purpose of inflaming the hearts of Christians against each other. I should esteem it one of the most aggravated crimes to make the life of the gentle and benevolent Jesus a vehicle to convey such a poison. Would to God that all the party-names, and unscriptural phrases and forms, which have divided the Christian world, were forgot; and that we might agree to sit down together, as humble loving disciples, at the feet of our common Master, to hear his word, to imbibe his Spirit, and to transcribe his life in our own!

I hope it is some token of such growing candour on one side, as I am sure it should be an engagement to cultivate it on the other, that so many of the reverend clergy of the establishment, as well as other persons of distinction in it, have favoured this undertaking with their encouragement. To them, and, all my other friends, I return my most hearty thanks; and shall remember that the regard they have been pleased to express to it, obliges me to pursue the remainder of the work with the utmost care and application; and earnestly entreat the farther assistance of their prayers, that it may be conducted in a manner subservient to the honour of the gospel and the edification of the church.

In these volumes I have been desirous to express my gratitude to the subscribers, by sparing nothing in my power which might render the work acceptable to them; both with respect to its contents and its form. The consequence of this is, that it hath swelled to a number of sheets, which by more than a third part exceeds what I promised in the proposals; which, though at a great expence, I chose to permit, rather than I would either sink the paper and character beneath the specimen, or omit some remarks in the notes which appeared to me of moment, and rose in my mind while I was transcribing them. But I hope this large addition to what was at first expected will excuse my not complying with the importunity of some of my friends, who have requested that I would introduce this work with a dissertation on such points of Jewish antiquity as might be serviceable for the fuller understanding the New Testament, or with a discourse on its genuineness, credibility, inspiration and use.

As to the first of these (a compendious view of such articles of Jewish antiquity as may be a proper introduction to the critical study of scripture,)

I do with great pleasure refer the generality of readers and young students to the general preface to the Prussian Testament, published by Mess. L'Enfant and Beausobre; which preface was some years since translated into English, and suits the purpose better than any thing I have seen within so small a compass. As to the latter, I purpose, if God permit, when I have finished the second volume, to publish with another edition of my Three Sermons on the Evidences of Christianity, two or three discourses more on the inspiration of the New Testament, and on its usefulness, especially that of the Evangelical History; to which I may perhaps add some farther directions for the most profitable manner of reading it. At present I shall only add, that daily experience convinces me more and more, that as a thousand charms discover themselves in the works of nature, when attentively viewed with glasses, which had escaped the naked eye; so our admiration of the holy scriptures will rise in proportion to the accuracy with which they are studied.

As for these histories and discourses of Christ, I may say of them, with far greater justice, what Simplicius doth of Epictetus, in the passage of which my motto is a part, and which I shall conclude my preface: "The words themselves are generally plain and intelligible: but I have endeavoured thus to unfold them, that my own heart might be more deeply impressed with the spirit and certainty of them; and that others, who have not themselves equal advantage for entering into it, might be guided into their true interpretation. But if, on the whole, any reader continue entirely unaffected with them, there is little prospect that any thing will reclaim him till he come to the *tribunal of the invisible world."

* Και εισι μεν οι λογοι σαφεις· η χειρον δε ισως, καθα το δυνατον διαπλυσσειν αυθις. Ο τε γαρ γραφων, συμπαθεστερος τε αμα προς αυθις γενησεται, και της αληθειας αυθων καθανοητικωτερος· και των φιλομαθων οι προς λογους ασυνηθεστεροι, ισως εξουσι τινα χειραγωγιαν εκ της ερμενειας αυθων.— Ει δε τις υπο τυφων μη φασχη των λογων, υπο μονων αν των εν αδη δικαστηριων υπευθυνθειη.

Northampton, Nov. 27, 1738. Simplic. in Epictet. Proem.

Directions for reading the Family Expositor.

AS to the manner of reading this book in families, I would advise as follows:—First, Let the passage of Scripture be read from the common translation in the inner column, unless the family have their Bibles before them: then read the new version by itself, which is interwoven with the paraphrase, but distinguished by the italic character; and then the paraphrase and improvement.

As for the notes, I should advise the person who officiates to select such as are of the most general concern, and read them after the paragraph to which they belong; for it is not so agreeable to interrupt the sense by introducing them before it is completed. Other notes may perhaps be more fitly made matter of conversation afterwards; but this is referred to the prudence of particular persons, who will judge with a regard to the state and character of the families in question.

In reading the compound text it may be observed, that the words of the several evangelists are distinguished by crotchets, thus [ ]; and the clauses included within them are always marked with the name of the evangelist from whom they are taken, unless a single text only be added at the end of the verse to which they must of course belong; or, where more texts than one are added, the crotchets which have nothing to distinguish them belong to the first.

I am pleased to think with how much ease any attentive reader will distinguish the text itself from the paraphrase in consequence of the extraordinary care which hath been taken to keep the work in that particular remarkably correct; for which I am obliged to pay my public and most thankful acknowledgments to my worthy brother and friend, the Reverend Mr. GODWIN, who generously undertook the great trouble, not only of revising each sheet as it came from the press, but also of inspecting the manuscript before it went thither, and of making several important alterations in it very much for the better; of which I should have been ready to have given a more particular account if his modesty and goodness would have permitted it.

A TABLE

OF

THE CHAPTERS IN THIS HARMONY,

DIRECTING

TO THE SECTIONS WHERE THEY ARE PLACED.

MATTHEW.		MARK.		LUKE.		JOHN.
Chap.	Sect.	Chap.	Sect.	Chap.	Sect.	Chap.	Sect.
I.	9, 8.	I.	15, 16. 18, 19. 31, 33, 35, 36. 44.	I.	1, 3, 4. 5, 6, 7.	I.	2, 17. 20, 21. 22.
II.	12, 13.			II.	10, 11. 14.	II.	23, 24.
III.	15, 16. 18.	II.	45, 71. 49.	III.	15, 16. 28, 18. 9.	III.	25, 26. 27.
IV.	19, 31. 33, 36.	III.	50, 51. 52, 56. 61, 64.	IV.	19, 32. 33, 35. 36.	IV.	29, 30. 31.
V.	37, 38. 39.	IV.	65, 66. 68, 69.	V.	34, 44. 45, 71	V.	46, 47. 48.
VI.	40, 41.	V.	70, 72.	VI.	49, 50. 52, 53. 54.	VI.	78, 79. 80, 81. 82.
VII.	42, 43.	VI.	73, 74. 76, 77. 28, 78. 79.	VII.	55, 56. 57, 58. 60.	VII.	98, 99. 100,101.
VIII.	44, 55. 35, 36. 69, 70.	VII.	83, 84. 85.	VIII.	61, 65. 66, 64. 69, 70. 72.	VIII.	102,103. 104,105.
IX.	70, 45. 71, 72. 73.	VIII.	86, 87. 88, 89.	IX.	74, 76. 77, 78. 88, 89. 69, 90. 91, 92. 93, 96. 127.	IX.	130, 131. 132.
X.	74, 75. 76.	IX.	89, 90. 91, 92. 93, 96. 93.	X.		X.	132, 133. 134.
XI.	76, 57. 58, 59.	X.	135, 136. 137, 142. 143.	XI.		XI.	139, 140. 141.
XII.	49, 50. 51, 61. 62, 63. 64.			XII.		XII.	145, 146. 148, 149. 150.
XIII.	65, 66. 67, 68. 73.

Matthew.		Mark.		Luke.		John.
Chap.	Sect.	Chap.	Sect.	Chap.	Sect.	Chap.	Sect.
XIV.	77, 28, 78, 79,	XI.	146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151.	X.	97, 106, 107, 108.	XIII.	168, 169, 170, 171.
XV.	83, 84, 85, 86,	XII.	151, 152, 154, 155, 156, 157, 159.	XI.	61, 62, 63, 64, 109, 110.	XIV.	173, 174.
XVI.	87, 88, 89.	XIII.	160, 161, 162, 163.	XII.	111, 112, 113, 114, 115.	XV.	175, 176.
XVII.	90, 91, 92.	XIV.	167, 145, 167, 168, 170, 172, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 184.	XIII.	116, 117, 118.	XVI.	177, 178.
XVIII.	93, 94, 95.	XV.	186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192.	XIV.	119, 120, 121.	XVII.	179, 180.
XIX.	135, 136, 137.	XVI.	194, 195, 196, 198, 202, 203.	XV.	122, 123.	XVIII.	181, 183, 184, 195, 186, 187,
XX.	138, 142, 143.			XVI.	124, 125.	XIX.	188, 189, 190, 191, 192.
XXI.	146, 147, 148, 149, 151, 152.			XVII.	126, 127, 128.	XX.	194, 195, 198, 199, 203.
XXII.	153, 154, 155, 156.			XVIII.	129, 136, 131, 142, 143.	XXI.	200, 201, 203.
XXIII.	157, 158,			XIX.	143, 144, 146, 147,
XXIV.	160, 161, 162, 163.			XX.	151, 152, 154, 155, 156, 157.
XXV.	164, 165, 166.			XXI.	159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 167.
XXVI.	167, 145, 167, 168, 170, 172, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 184.			XXII.	167, 168, 172, 170, 169, 171, 173, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185.
XXVII.	186, 193, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193,			XXIII.	186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192.
XXVIII.	194, 195, 196, 202.			XXIV.	194, 195, 197, 198, 202, 203.

Acts.
I. ver. 2, to 12.	202, 203.

A TABLE

OF

THE SECTIONS IN THEIR ORDER,

SHEWING

THE DISPOSITION OF THE HARMONY.

SECT.	MATTHEW.	MARK.	LUKE.	JOHN.
I.	———	———	i. 1—4.	———
II.	———	———	———	i. 1—14.
III.	———	———	i. 5—25.	———
IV.	———	———	i. 26—38.	———
V.	———	———	i. 39—56.	———
VI.	———	———	i. 57—66.	———
VII.	———	———	i. 67, ad fin.	———
VIII.	i. 18, ad fin.	———	———	———
IX.	i. 1—17.	———	iii. 23, ad fin.	———
X.	———	———	ii. 1—21.	———
XI.	———	———	ii. 22—39.	———
XII.	ii. 1—12.	———	———	———
XIII.	ii. 13, ad fin.	———	———	———
XIV.	———	———	ii. 40, ad fin.	———
XV.	iii. 1—6.	i. 1—6.	iii. 1—6.	———
XVI.	iii. 7—12.	i. 7, 8.	iii. 7—18.	———
XVII.	———	———	———	i. 15—18.
XVIII.	iii. 13, ad fin.	i. 9—11.	iii. 21—23.	———
XIX.	iv. 1—11.	i. 12, 13.	iv. 1—13.	———
XX.	———	———	———	i. 19—28.
XXI.	———	———	———	i. 29—42.
XXII.	———	———	———	i. 43, ad fin.
XXIII.	———	———	———	ii. 1—11.
XXIV.	———	———	———	ii. 12, ad fin.
XXV.	———	———	———	iii. 1—10.
XXVI.	———	———	———	iii. 11—21.
XXVII.	———	———	———	iii. 22, ad fin.
XXVIII.	xiv. 3—5.	vi. 17—20.	iii. 19, 20.	———
XXIX.	———	———	———	iv. 1—26.
XXX.	———	———	———	iv. 27—42.
XXXI.	iv. 12.	i. 14, 15.	———	iv. 43, ad fin.
XXXII.	———	———	iv. 14—30.	———
XXXIII.	iv. 13—22.	i. 16—20.	iv. 31, 32.	———
XXXIV.	———	———	v. 1—11.	———
XXXV.	viii. 14, 15.	i. 21—31.	iv. 33—39.	———
XXXVI.	iv. 23, ad fin viii. 16, 17.	i. 32—39.	iv. 40, ad fin.	———
XXXVII.	v. 1—16.	———	———	———
XXXVIII.	v. 17—26.	———	———	———
XXXIX.	v. 27, ad fin.	———	———	———
XL.	vi. 1—18.	———	———	———
XLI.	vi. 19, ad fin.	———	———	———
XLII.	vii. 1—20.	———	———	———
XLIII.	vii. 21, ad fin.	———	———	———
XLIV.	viii. 1—4.	i. 40, ad fin.	v. 12—16.	———
XLV.	ix. 2—9.	ii. 1—14.	v. 17—28.	———
XLVI.	———	———	———	v. 1—16.
XLVII.	———	———	———	v. 17—30.
XLVIII.	———	———	———	v. 31, ad fin.

Sect.	Matthew.	Mark.	Luke.	John.
XLIX.	xii. 1—8.	ii. 23, ad fin.	vi. 1—5.	———
L.	xii. 9—15.	iii. 1—7.	vi. 6—11.	———
LI.	xii. 15—21.	iii. 7—12.	———	———
LII.	———	iii. 13—19.	vi. 12—19.	———
LIII.	———	———	vi. 20—36.	———
LIV.	———	———	vi. 37, ad fin.	———
LV.	viii. 5—13.	———	vii. 1—10.	———
LVI.	———	iii. 19—21.	vii. 11—17.	———
LVII.	xi. 2—6.	———	vii. 18—23.	———
LVIII.	xi. 7—19.	———	vii. 24—35.	———
LIX.	xi. 20, ad fin.	———	———	———
LX.	———	———	vii. 36, ad fin.	———
LXI.	xii. 22—32.	iii. 22—30.	viii. 1—3. xi. 14, 15. 17—23.	———
LXII.	xii. 33—37.	———	xi. 27, 28.	———
LXIII.	xii. 38—45.	———	xi. 16. 24—26. 29—32.	———
LXIV.	xii. 46, ad fin.	iii. 31, ad fin.	xi. 33—36. viii. 19—21.	———
LXV.	xiii. 1—17.	iv. 1—12.	viii. 4—10.	———
LXVI.	xiii. 18—23.	iv. 13—25.	viii. 11—18.	———
LXVII.	xiii. 24—30 36—43	———	———	———
LXVIII.	xiii. 31—35 44—53	iv. 26—34.	———	———
LXIX.	viii. 18—27.	iv. 35, ad fin.	viii. 22—25. ix. 57, ad fin.	———
LXX.	viii. 28, ad fin ix. 1.	v. 1—21.	viii. 26—40.	———
LXXI.	ix. 10—17.	ii. 15—22.	v. 29, ad fin.	———
LXXII.	ix. 18—34.	v. 22, ad fin.	viii. 41, ad fin.	———
LXXIII.	xiii. 54, ad fin ix. 35, ad fin.	vi. 1—6.	———	———
LXXIV.	x. 1—15.	vi. 7—11.	ix. 1—5.	———
LXXV.	x. 16—28.	———	———	———
LXXVI.	x. 29, ad fin xi. 1.	vi. 12, 13.	ix. 6.	———
LXXVII.	xiv. 1, 2, 6—12	vi. 14—29.	ix. 7—9.	———
LXXVIII.	xiv. 13—23.	vi. 30—46.	ix. 10—17.	vi. 1—15.
LXXIX.	xiv. 24, ad fin.	vi. 47, ad fin.	———	vi. 16—21.
LXXX.	———	———	———	vi. 22—40.
LXXXI.	———	———	———	vi. 41—58.
LXXXII.	———	———	———	vi. 59, ad fin.
LXXXIII.	xv. 1—9.	vii. 1—13.	———	———
LXXXIV.	xv. 10—20.	vii. 14—23.	———	———
LXXXV.	xv. 21—29.	vii. 24, ad fin.	———	———
LXXXVI.	xv. 30, ad fin.	viii. 1—10.	———	———
LXXXVII	xvi. 1—12.	viii. 11—21.	———	———
LXXXVIII.	xvi. 13—20.	viii. 22—30.	ix. 18—21.	———
LXXXIX.	xvi. 21, ad fin.	viii. 31, ad fin ix. 1.	ix. 22—27.	———
XC.	xvii. 1—13.	ix. 2—13.	ix. 28—36.	———
XCI.	xvii. 14—21.	ix. 14—29.	ix. 37—43.—	———
XCII.	xvii. 22, ad fin.	ix. —30—33.	ix. —43—45.	———
XCIII.	xviii. 1—9.	ix. 33—37. 42, ad fin.	ix. 46—48.	———
XCIV.	xviii. 10—20.	———	———	———
XCV.	xviii. 21, ad fin.	———	———	———
XCVI.	———	ix. 38—41.	ix. 49, 50.	———
XCVII.	———	———	x. 1—16.	———
XCVIII.	———	———	———	vii. 1—13.

Sect.	Matthew.	Mark.	Luke.	John.
XCIX.	———	———	———	vii. 14—24.
C.	———	———	———	vii. 25—36.
CI.	———	———	———	vii. 37, ad fin.
CII.	———	———	———	viii. 1—11.
CIII.	———	———	———	viii. 12—29.
CIV.	———	———	———	viii. 30—47.
CV.	———	———	———	viii 48, ad fin.
CVI.	———	———	x. 17---24.	———
CVII.	———	———	x. 25---37.	———
CVIII.	———	———	x. 38, ad fin.	———
CIX.	———	———	xi. 1---13.	———
CX.	———	———	xi. 37, ad fin.	———
CXI.	———	———	xii. 1---12.	———
CXII.	———	———	xii. 13---21.	———
CXIII.	———	———	xii. 22---34.	———
CXIV.	———	———	xii. 35---48.	———
CXV.	———	———	xii. 49, ad fin.	———
CXVI.	———	———	xiii. 1---9.	———
CXVII.	———	———	xiii. 10---22.	———
CXVIII.	———	———	xiii. 23, ad fin.	———
CXIX.	———	———	xiv. 1---14.	———
CXX.	———	———	xiv. 15---24.	———
CXXI.	———	———	xiv. 25, ad fin.	———
CXXII.	———	———	xv. 1---10.	———
CXXIII.	———	———	xv. 11, ad fin.	———
CXXIV.	———	———	xvi. 1---18.	———
CXXV.	———	———	xvi. 19, ad fin.	———
CXXVI.	———	———	xvii. 1---11.	———
CXXVII.	———	———	{ ix. 51---56. { xvii. 12--19.	———
CXXVIII.	———	———	xvii. 20, ad fin.	———
CXXIX.	———	———	xviii. 1---14.	———
CXXX.	———	———	———	ix. 1—23.
CXXXI.	———	———	———	ix. 24—38.
CXXXII.	———	———	———	{ ix. 39, ad fin. { x. 1—10.
CXXXIII.	———	———	———	x. 11—21.
CXXXIV.	———	———	———	x. 22, ad fin.
CXXXV.	xix. 1---12.	x. 1---12.	———	———
CXXXVI.	xix. 13---15.	x. 13---16.	xviii. 15—17.	———
CXXXVII.	xix. 16, ad fin.	x. 17---31.	xviii. 18—30.	———
CXXXVIII.	xx. 1---16.	———	———	———
CXXXIX.	———	———	———	xi. 1—16.
CXL.	———	———	———	xi. 17—46.
CXLI.	———	———	———	xi. 47, ad fin.
CXLII.	xx. 17---28.	x. 32---46.	xviii. 31—34.	———
CXLIII.	xx. 29, ad fin.	x. 46, ad fin.	{ xviii35, ad fin { xix. 1—10.	———
CXLIV.	———	———	xix. 11—28.	———
CXLV.	xxvi. 6—13.	xiv. 3---9.	———	xii. 1—11.
CXLVI.	xxi. 1—9.	xi. 1---10.	xix. 29—40.	xii. 12—19.
CXLVII.	xxi. 10—16.	xi. 11---	xix. 41, ad fin.	———
CXLVIII.	xxi. 17.	xi. ---11.	———	xii. 20—36.
CXLIX	xxi. 18, 19.	xi. 12---14.	———	xii. 37—43.
CL.	———	xi. 15---19.	———	xii. 44, ad fin.
CLI.	xxi. 20—32.	{ xi. 20, ad fin. { xii. 1—	xx. 1—9.	———
CLII.	xxi. 33, ad fin.	xii.---1---12.	xx.—9—19.	———
CLIII.	xxii. 1—14.	———	———	———
CLIV.	xxii. 15—22.	xii. 13---17.	xx. 20—26.	———
CLV.	xxii. 23—33.	xii. 18---27.	xx. 27—40.	———

Sect.	Matthew.	Mark.	Luke.	John.
CLVI.	xxii. 34, ad fin.	xii. 28—37.	xx. 41—44.	———
CLVII.	xxiii. 1—22.	xii. 38—40.	xx. 45, ad fin.	———
CLVIII.	xxiii. 23, ad fin	———	———	———
CLIX.	———	xii. 41, ad fin.	xxi. 1—4.	———
CLX.	xxiv. 1—14.	xiii. 1—13.	xxi. 5—19.	———
CLXI.	xxiv. 15—28.	xiii. 14—23.	xxi. 20—24.	———
CLXII.	xxiv. 29—36.	xiii. 24—32.	xxi. 25—33.	———
CLXIII.	xxiv. 37, ad fin.	xiii. 33, ad fin	xxi. 34—36.	———
CLXIV.	xxv. 1—13.	———	———	———
CLXV.	xxv. 14—30.	———	———	———
CLXVI.	xxv. 31, ad fin.	———	———	———
CLXVII.	xxvi. 1—5. 14—16	xiv. 1,2,10,11	xxi. 37, ad fin xxii. 1—6.	———
CLXVIII.	xxvi. 17—20.	xiv. 12—17.	xxii. 7—18.	xiii. 1.
CLXIX.	———	———	xxii. 24—27.	xii. 2—3—17.
CLXX.	xxvi. 21—25.	xiv. 18—21.	xxii. 21—23, 28—30.	xiii.—2. 18—30.
CLXXI.	———	———	xxii. 31—34.	xiii. 31, ad fin.
CLXXII.	xxvi. 26—30.	xiv. 22—26.	xxii. 19, 20.	———
CLXXIII.	———	———	xxii. 35—38.	xiv. 1—14.
CLXXIV.	———	———	———	xiv. 15, ad fin.
CLXXV.	———	———	———	xv. 1—11.
CLXXVI.	———	———	———	xv. 12, ad fin.
CLXXVII.	———	———	———	xvi. 1—15.
CLXXVIII.	———	———	———	xvi. 16, ad fin.
CLXXIX.	———	———	———	xvii. 1—12.
CLXXX.	———	———	———	xvii. 13, ad fin.
CLXXXI.	xxvi. 31—35.	xiv. 27—31.	xxii. 39.	xviii. 1.
CLXXXII.	xxvi. 36—46.	xiv. 32—42.	xxii. 40—46.	———
CLXXXIII.	xxvi. 47—56.	xiv 43—52.	xxii. 47—53.	xviii. 2—12.
CLXXXIV.	xxvi. 57, 58. 69, ad fin	xiv. 53, 54. 66, ad fin	xxii. 54—62.	xviii. 13—18. 24—27.
CLXXXV.	xxvi. 59—68.	xiv. 55—65.	xxii. 63, ad fin.	xviii. 19—23, 28.—
CLXXXVI.	xxvii. 1, 2. 11—14.	xv. 1—5.	xxiii. 1—4.	xviii. 28—38.
CLXXXVII.	xxvii. 15-18 20—23.	xv. 6—14.	xxiii. 5—23.	xviii. 39, ad fin
CLXXXVIII.	xxvii. 19, 24, 31	xv. 15—20.	xxiii. 24—25.	xix. 1—16.—
CLXXXIX.	xxvii. 32 34 38.	xv. 21—23. 25, 27, 28.	xxiii. 26—34.	xix. 16—18:
CXC.	xxvii. 35-37 39-44.	xv. 24, 26. 29—32.	xxiii.—34- 43.	xix.—19—24.
CXCI.	xxvii. 45—54.	xv. 33—39.	xxiii. 44—48.	xix. 25—30.
CXCII.	xxvii. 55—61.	xv. 40, ad fin	xxiii. 49, ad fin	xix. 31, ad fin
CXCIII.	xxvii.3—10 62, ad fin.	———	———	———
CXCIV.	xxviii. 1—4.	xvi. 1, 2, 3, 4.	xxiv. 1, 2. 12.	xx. 1—17.
CXCV.	xxviii. 5—10.	xvi. 2—5—11.	xxiv. 3—11.	xx. 18.
CXCVI.	xxviii. 11—15	xvi. 12, 13.	———	———
CXCVII.	———	———	xxiv. 13—33.	———
CXCVIII.	———	xvi. 14.	xxiv.—33—43	xx. 19—23:
CXCIX.	———	———	———	xx. 24—29:
CC.	———	———	———	xxi. 1—14:
CCI.	———	———	———	xxi. 15—24.
CCII.	xxviii. 16. ad fin.	xvi. 15—18.	xxiv. 44—49.	———*
CCIII.	———	xvi. 19, ad fin.	xxiv. 50, ad fin	xx. 30, ad fin xxi. ult.†

* Acts i.—2, 3: † Acts i. 4—12.

THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

THE FAMILY EXPOSITOR.

THE FORMER PART OF THE HISTORY OF CHRIST, AS RECORDED BY THE EVANGELISTS.

SECT. I.

St. Luke's preface to his history, dedicated to Theophilus, a Christian friend, for whose comfort and establishment he was particularly concerned. Luke I. ver. 1—4.

LUKE I. ver. 1.

FORASMUCH as many have taken in hand to set forth in order a declaration of those things which are most surely believed among us, LUKE I. Verse 1.

SECT. I.

WHEREAS many have undertaken[a] to compose the history[b] of those important facts which have been confirmed among us Christians with the fullest and most satisfactory evidence[c], as the great foundation of our common faith; and since some of these historians have written, not on their own personal knowledge, but as they (whether apostles or others) have transmitted them

I. 1.

2 Even as they delivered a Whereas many have undertaken.] This must refer to some histories of the life of Christ which are now lost; for Matthew and Mark, the only evangelists which can be supposed to have written before Luke, could not with any propriety be called many; and of these two, Matthew at least wrote from personal knowledge, not the testimony of others. One must readily conclude the books referred to are lost, as none of the apocryphal gospels now extant, published particularly by Fabricius, (in his Codex. Apoc. Nov. Test.) or Mr. Jones, (in his history of the Canon) can with any shadow of reason pretend to equal antiquity with this of St. Luke. But I cannot, with Ambrose and Epiphanius, suppose that the evangelist here intends the gospels of Basilides, Cerinthus, and some other early heretics; since he seems to allow these histories, whatever they were, to have been at least honestly written, according to information received from the most capable judges. And it is strange that Eusebius should imagine the words are intended as a severe censure on the now unknown compilers of these histories, whoever they were. Euseb. Eccles. Hist. lib. iii. cap. 24.

b To compose the history.] To set forth in order a declaration is so antiquated a phrase, that it would hardly be understood any where but here; at least I am sure none could, by reading it, so much as guess at the elegance and propriety of St. Luke's words, ανατάξασθαι διηγησιν, which may more literally, and, I think, far more justly be rendered, to compose a history: and I doubt not, but our English word compose may express as much regularity in the order of facts as the evangelist meant to intimate.

c Confirmed among us with the fullest evidence.] I think πεπληροφορημενων is rather to be understood as referring to the fulness of that evidence with which the facts were attended, than to the confidence with which they were believed. This seems most honourable to the gospel; but as I know the word is ambiguous, and often used in the latter sense, I have chose to express that also in the paraphrase. Compare 2 Tim. iv. 5—17. Gr.

SECT. i.

Luke i. 2.

them to us, who were themselves from the beginning of Christ's ministry eye-witnesses of what passed, and in proof of the sincerity of their testimony courageously became ministers of the word[d], that is, of the gospel, amidst the greatest 3 opposition; I also having accurately traced all these things[e] from their first rise[f], even from the very conception of John the Baptist, who was the forerunner of our Lord, have thought it proper to write an orderly account of them[g]: and I chuse to inscribe it to thee, O most noble Theophilus[h]; because, though thou art already, in the general, acquainted with them, yet I cannot but be 4 concerned that thou mayest more fully and circumstantially know the exact and certain truth of those things in which thou hast formerly been instructed[i] by those who were the happy instruments of initiating thee into the Christian faith; and I am persuaded thou wilt be greatly confirmed in it by the attentive perusal of that history with which I here present thee.

livered them unto us, which from the beginning were eye-witnesses, and ministers of the word:

3 It seemed good to me also, having had perfect understanding of all things from the very first, to write unto thee in order, most excellent Theophilus,

4 That thou mightest know the certainty of those things wherein thou hast been instructed.

IMPROVE-

[d] Of the word.] Some have conjectured that λογος, the word, here signifies Christ, as in the beginning of St. John's gospel: perhaps it may; but I did not think it so evident as to venture fixing it to that sense.

[e] Having accurately traced all these things.] The original, παρηκολουθηκοτι πασιν ακριβως, plainly signifies that accuracy of investigation on which the perfect understanding of his subject was built.

[f] From their first rise.] Some very pious and learned writers have pleaded this text as an argument for the inspiration of St. Luke's gospel, and consequently of the rest, because the word ανωθεν sometimes signifies from above, or from heaven; as it plainly doth, John iii. 31. Jam. i. 17. iii. 15, 17. But Luke so evidently uses it in the sense here given, Acts xxvi. 5. and that sense is so common elsewhere, and seems so absolutely necessary in this connection with παρηκολουθηκοτι, that I cannot think this text at all to the purpose. The argument I mention is one of those which, like pieces of superfluous armour, encumber rather than defend; and the more I am concerned about the conclusion here or elsewhere, the more cautions shall I always be, that I may not draw it from such premises.

[g] To write an orderly account of them, καθεξης σοι γραψαι.] It is chiefly on the authority of this clause that M. Le Clerc, and many other modern harmonizers have thought (as Beza also did) that all the other gospels are to be reduced to the order of Luke, wherever they differ from it: a conclusion which I apprehend, for reasons that shall afterwards be given at large, to be an occasion of many errors, and particularly injurious to the character of St. Matthew. I would only here observe that the foundation of it is very precarious; since it is evident this evangelist might, with great propriety, be said to have given an orderly account of the history of Christ, as the leading facts are in their due series, though some particulars are transposed.

[h] O most noble Theophilus.] That Theophilus is the name of a particular person eminent in the church in those early days, and not (as Salvian thought it) a general title applicable to every Christian as a lover of God, Dr. Whitby, after many others, hath abundantly proved. What his rank in life was, we do not indeed certainly know; but it seems that it was pretty considerable; for Κρατιστε was then, as Excellency among us is, a title of honour and respect usual in addressing noble personages (see Acts xxiii. 26. xxiv. 3. xxvi. 25.) and it might with some peculiar propriety be applied here, as Theophilus was so worthy the name he bore, which signifies a true lover of God.

[i] Hast been instructed, περι ων κατηχηθης.] The word doth with great accuracy express the instructions given to those who were training up for an admission to the Christian church, whose name of catechumens was, as it is well known, derived from hence, and applied without any particular regard to the age of the persons concerned. Compare Acts xviii. 25. Rom. ii. 18. I endeavour to express this in the paraphrase; but it would be very improper to use the English word which most literally answers to the Greek, because that is now almost wholly appropriated to children.

a The

IMPROVEMENT. SECT. i.

LET us humbly adore the Divine Goodness, that facts of so great importance as these now to be laid before us were not left to the uncertainty of oral tradition, but delivered to the church in writing, by persons who had so many opportunities of learning the truth, and have given such full proof of their integrity in relating it.—Let us be thankful that we have not only one such history, but that several undertook this excellent and necessary work, by whose united testimony the whole is confirmed; while it is also illustrated by the variety of their narrations, each inserting some considerable circumstance which the rest have omitted. Let us rejoice in that providential care which hath preserved this invaluable treasure through so many succeeding ages, and some of them periods of the grossest darkness and the hottest persecution. Ver. 2 1

While we study this orderly series of sacred story, let us be concerned that our faith may be established by it, and our other graces proportionably advanced; maintaining a continual dependance on that blessed Spirit, by whose instruction it was written to lead us into wise and pious reflections upon it. 4

To conclude; from the care which this holy evangelist expresseth for the edification and comfort of his friend Theophilus, let us learn to regard it as one of the most important offices of friendship to labour for the spiritual advantage of each other; by endeavouring not only to awaken and instruct those that are entirely unacquainted or unaffected with divine things, but also, as we have opportunity, to confirm the faith and quicken the zeal of the most established Christians with whom we converse. Happy the men whose tongues and whose pens are employed in so good a work: may they never, in the remotest ages, fail of some excellent Theophilus to welcome and encourage their pious attempts! 5

SECT. II.

St. John begins his gospel with a very sublime and emphatical account of the deity and incarnation of Christ; and of those glorious and important purposes for which he condescended to appear among us in the human nature. John I. 1—14.

JOHN I. 1.

IN the beginning was the word, and the word

JOHN I. 1.

IN the beginning, before the foundation of the world, or the first production of any created being, a glorious person existed, who (on account of the perfections of his nature and his being in time the medium of divine manifestations to us) may properly be called the word of God[a]. And the a The word of God.] The Greek logos is now become so familiar to an English ear, that I doubt not but most of my readers would have understood me had I retained it in the word was originally with God the Father of all; so that to him the words of Solomon might justly be applied, Prov. viii. 30. "He was by him as one brought up with him, and was daily his delight." Nay, by a generation which none can declare, and an union which none can fully conceive, the word was himself God [b], that is, possessed of a nature truly and properly divine. 2 I repeat it again, that the condescension of his incarnation may be more attentively considered, this divine [word] was in the very beginning with God, and, by virtue of his most intimate union with him, was possessed of infinite glory and felicity. 3 And when it pleased God to begin his work of creation, all things in the word was with God, and the word was God.

SECT. ii.

John i. 1.

2. The same was in the beginning with God.

3. All things were made by him; and without in my translation; which, on account of the singularity of the idea here signified by it, I should have done had I not feared it might have been unintelligible to a few at least, and so have impaired the pleasure they might find in so excellent a passage. I know that some of the fathers render logos, reason, as M. Le Clerc doth; though I apprehend they mean it in a very different sense from him, who seems to understand it only as a strong eastern phrase, to signify the consummate wisdom of the gospel scheme. See his Harmony, p. 44. But this will entirely enervate and destroy the sense of ver. 14. as well as of those texts which speak of Christ's coming out from God, enjoying glory with him before the world was, &c.

[b] The word was God.] I know how eagerly many have contended that the word God is used here in an inferior sense; the necessary consequence of which is (as indeed some have expressly avowed it) that this clause should be rendered The word was a god, that is, a kind of inferior deity, as governors are called gods. See John x. 34, and 1 Cor. viii. 5. But it is impossible he should here be so called merely as a governor, because he is spoken of as existing before the production of any creatures whom he could govern: and it is to me most incredible that, when the Jews were so exceeding averse to idolatry, and the Gentiles so unhappily prone to it, such a plain writer as this apostle should lay so dangerous a stumbling-block on the very threshold of his work, and represent it as the Christian doctrine, that in the beginning of all things there were two gods, one supreme and the other subordinate: a difficulty which, if possible, would be yet farther increased by recollecting what so many ancient writers assert, that this gospel was written with a particular view of opposing the Corinthians and Ebionites (see Iren. l. i. c. 26; l. iii. c. 11; Euseb. Eccl. Hist. l. vi. c. 14), on which account a greater accuracy of expression must have been necessary. There are so many instances in the writings of this apostle, and even in this chapter (see ver. 6, 12, 13, 18,) where Θεος, without the article, is used to signify God in the highest sense of the word, that it is something surprising such a stress should be laid on the want of that article, as a proof that it is used only in a subordinate sense.—On the other hand, to conceive of Christ as a distinct and co-ordinate God, would be equally inconsistent with the most express declarations of scripture, and far more irreconcileable with reason. Nothing I have said above can, by any means, be justly interpreted in such a sense: and I here solemnly disclaim the least intention of insinuating one thought of that kind, by any thing I have ever written, here or elsewhere.—— The order of the words in the original (Θεος ην ο λογος), is such, that some have thought the clause might more exactly be translated, God was the word. But there are almost every where so many instances of such a construction as our version supposes, that I chose rather to follow it than to vary from it, unnecessarily, in this important passage.—I am deeply sensible of the sublime and mysterious nature of the doctrine of Christ's deity, as here declared; but it would be quite foreign to my purpose to enter into a large discussion of that great foundation of our faith; it has often been done by much abler hands. It was, however, matter of conscience with me, on the one hand, thus strongly to declare my belief of it; and, on the other, to leave it as far as I could in the simplicity of scripture expressions. I shall only add in the words, or at least in the sense of Bishop Burnet, "That had not St. John and the other without him was not any thing made that was made.

4. In him was life, and the life was the light of men.

the whole compass of nature were made by him[c], even by his almighty word; and without him was not any thing made, not so much as one single being[d], whether among the noblest or the meanest of God's various works. That fulness of power, wisdom, and benignity, which was in him, was the fountain of life[e] to the whole creation: and it is in particular our concern to remember

SECT. ii.

John 1. 4.

other apostles thought it a doctrine of great importance in the gospel scheme, they would rather have waved than asserted and insisted upon it, considering the critical circumstances in which they wrote." See Burnet on the Articles, page 40.

c All things were made by him.] It would be the work of a treatise rather than a note to represent the Jewish doctrine of the creation of all things by the divine Logos; to which (rather than the platonic) there may be some reference here. They who have no opportunity of examining the original authors, may see what those learned men have said, to whom Dr. A. Taylor refers in his Treatise on the Trinity, p. 258; to which add Dr. Pearson on the Creed, p. 118; Dr. Scott's Christian Life, Vol. III. p. 565, &c. fol. and Dr. Watts's Dissertation on the Trinity, No. IV. § 3.—There is, however, a remarkable passage I shall mention to this purpose as a specimen of the rest; and the rather because it is omitted in most of the collections I have seen on this head, and not fully cited and explained in what I take to be its exact sense in any. Philo Judæus (de Profug. p. 465.) speaking of the cherubims on the mercy seat as symbolical representations of what he calls the creating and governing powers, makes this additional reflection: "The divine Word (Logos) is above these, of whom we can have no idea by the sight or any other sense; he being himself the image of God, the eldest of all intelligent beings, sitting nearest to Him who is truly THE HOLY ONE, there being no distance between them:" (alluding, I suppose, to the form of those ancient chariots where, as in the chairs we use upon the road, the driver sat close to the person driven; which was not the case in all: compare Acts viii. 38. "And therefore he (that is, God) says, I will speak unto thee from the mercy seat between the two cherubims; thereby representing the Logos as the charioteer by whom the motion of these powers is directed; and himself who speaks to him as the rider (or person carried) who commands the charioteer how he is to manage the reins." Ο δε υπερανω τουτων (scil. δυναμεων ποιητικης και βασιλικης) ΛΟΓΟΣ ΘΕΙΟΣ, τις γαρ ημιν ουκ ηλθεν ιδεαν, αλλ μηδενι των κατ' αισθησιν εμφερης ων, αλλ' αυτος εικων υπαρχων Θεου, των νοητων απας απαντων ο πρεσβυταλος, ο εγγυταλος, μηδενος ουδε, μεθορια διαστηματος, ΤΟΥ ΜΟΝΟΥ ο εστιν αψευδες αφιδρυμενος. Λεγεται γαρ, Καλησω σοι ανωθεν τα Ιλαστηριω ανα μεσον των δυοιν Χερουβιμ· ασθ' ηνιοχον μεν ειναι των δυναμεων τον ΛΟΓΟΝ, εποχον δε τον καλουμενον, επικι' ενομενον τω ηνιοχω τα προς ωφθην τε παντος ηνιοχησειν. I insert this as a key to a great many other passages in Philo; and shall only mention one more (De Agricult. p. 195) where he represents God as "governing the whole course of nature, both in heaven and earth, as the great Shepherd and King, by wise and righteous laws; having constituted his unerring Word, his only begotten Son, to preside as his viceroy over his holy flock:" for the illustration of which he quotes those remarkable words, Exod. xxiii. 20, though in a form something different from our reading and version, "Behold I am; I will send my angel before thy face to keep thee in the way." Γ'ην και υδωρ κ. τ. λ. — — — τα μεν ζωτα, τα δε θεια, (a remarkable distribution) ως ποιμην και βασιλευς ο Θεος αγει καθα δικην και νομον, προσηκαμενος τον ορθον αυτου ΛΟΓΟΝ πρωτογονον υιον, ος την επιμελειαν της ιερας ταυτης αγελης, οια τι μεγαλου βασιλεως υπαρχος, διαδεξεται. Και γαρ ειρηται που, Ιδου εγω ειμι, αποστελω αγγελον μου εις προσωπον σου φυλαξαι σε εν τη οδω.

d Not so much as one single being.] There is an emphasis in the words ουδε εν, which I thought it proper to express in the version, than which nothing can be more literal.

e That which was in him was life.] The most ancient fathers that quote this text so generally join the words ο γεγονεν with this fourth verse, that I cannot but apprehend this to be the true reading. (See Dr. Mill's Prolog.) But if any think it improbable that γεγονε should have different senses here and in the third verse, they will please to observe that the full sense of our version is expressed in the paraphrase, and that the alteration here made is of very small importance. That the Heathens sometimes speak of their deities and heroes as the light and life of mankind, Elsner has shewn on this text.

f Did

SECT. ii.

remember that the life which was in him was the light of men, as all the light of reason and revelation was the effect of his energy on the mind.

John I. 5. And the light long shone in the heathen world, and under the dispensation of Moses; and it still shineth in darkness, even on the minds of the most ignorant and prejudiced part of mankind; and yet the darkness was so gross that it opposed its passage; and such was the prevailing degeneracy of their hearts, that they did not apprehend it[f], or regard its dictates in such a manner as to secure the blessings to which it would have led them.

5. And the light shineth in darkness, and the darkness comprehended it not.

6 As this was the case for many ages, the Divine Wisdom was pleased to interpose in these latter days by a clearer and fuller discovery: and for this purpose, a man, whose name was John, afterwards called the Baptist, was sent as a messenger from God; of whose miraculous conception and important ministry a more particular account is 7 elsewhere given: But here it may be sufficient to observe in general that though he was himself, in an inferior sense, "a burning and shining light," (compare John v. 35.) yet he came only under the character of a servant, and for a witness that he might testify concerning Christ the true light, that all who heard his discourses might by his means be engaged to believe and fol- 8 low that divine illumination. And accordingly he most readily confessed that he himself was not that light, but only [came] to bear witness con- 9 cerning it. The true light of which he spake was Christ[g], even that Sun of righteousness and Source of truth which, coming into the world, enlighteneth every man[h], dispersing his beams, as it

6 There was a man sent from God, whose name was John;

7 The same came for a witness, to bear witness of the light, that all men through him might believe.

8 He was not that light, but was sent to bear witness of that light.

9 That was the true light which lighteth every man that cometh into the world.

f Did not apprehend it, ου κατελαβεν.] It might not seem so strange that the world did not fully comprehend the spiritual, since it certainly doth not fully comprehend the material light, nor indeed any of the most familiar objects it discovers: but the word is capable of other senses, and is sometimes used for apprehending or laying hold of a thing, 1 Cor. ix. 24. Phil. iii. 12, 13. and sometimes for perceiving it, Acts iv. 13. x. 34. Compare Acts xiv. 17. xvii. 25. Rom. i. 20. which all illustrate the evangelist's assertion.

g The true light was Christ.] The original yet more clearly expresses the antithesis between this and the former verse: I have endeavoured to follow it in my version without supposing αυτος understood here to answer to εκεινος there. I cannot but think the conjecture of the learned Heinsius very elegant, that the ην at the beginning of this verse might belong to the end of the former: the exact construction then would be, He, viz. John was not that light, but he was (that is, he existed and came) that he might bear witness to that light: the true light, &c. was in the world, &c. See Heinsius in loc.

h Which coming into the world, enlighteneth every man.] So I chuse to render it, though I acknowledge that our version may be consistent with the truth, and that it most exactly suits the order of the words in the original; but the other is also very grammatical, φως ερχομενον εις τον κοσμον, and suggests an idea more distinct from ver. 4

Not

it were from one end of the heavens to the other, to the Gentile world, which was in midnight darknesss, as well as to the Jews, who enjoyed but a kind of twilight. He was in the world in a human form; and though the world was made by him[i], yet the world knew and acknowledged him not. Yea, he came into his own [territories], even to the Jewish nation, which was under such distinguished obligations to him, and to whom he had been so expressly promised as their great Messiah; yet his own [people] did not receive him[k] as they ought; but, on the contrary, treated him in the most contemptuous and ungrateful manner. Nevertheless the detriment was theirs, and it was indeed unspeakably great to them; for to as many as received him, and by a firm and lively faith believed on his name, [even] to all of them, without any exception of even the poorest or the vilest, he granted the glorious privilege of becoming the sons of God; that is, he adopted them into God's family, so that they became entitled to the present immunities and the future eternal inheritance of his children. And they who thus believed on him were possessed of these privileges, not in consequence of their being born of blood, of their being descended from the loins of the holy patriarchs, or sharing in circumcision and 10 He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not.

11 He came unto his own, and his own received him not.

12 But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name:

13 Which were born, not of blood, nor of the will of the flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God.

Not to urge that the phrase of coming into the world is with peculiar emphasis used of Christ, and especially under the notion of a light. Compare John xii. 46. I am come a light into the world. John iii. 19. This is the condemnation, that light is come into the world.

[i] The world was made by him.] Some have supposed this particularly levelled against the Gnostics, who maintained that the world was made by an evil genius; and that the God of the Old Testament and the New were different and contrary persons. It is certain that Irenæus, and several others of the fathers, with great propriety have urged this text against that mad notion. Eusebius exposes these wretches in a very just and lively manner, and makes use of words which, if he had been our contemporary, might have seemed directly levelled at a late unhappy writer, who strangely took it into his head to call himself, The moral philosopher. But, alas! every succeeding age has had its moral philosophers, who have attempted to remove that burthensome stone the Bible, and have found it returning upon them, so as to grind them, and their schemes and their confidence to powder. The words in my view are these: (Euseb. Eccles. Hist. lib. v. cap. 28. in fin.) Απλως αγνοησαμενοι την τε νομον και τους προφητας, ανομου και αθεου διδασκαλιας, προφασει χαριτος, εις εσχατον απωλειας ολεθρον καλωλισθησαν. "Some" (who yet, it seems, pretended to be Christians) "absolutely rejecting the law and the prophets by a licentious and atheistical doctrine, which they introduced under a pretence of magnifying the divine goodness, or the gospel," (for χαριτος, grace, may signify either) "have plunged themselves into the lowest gulf of perdition."

[k] He came into his own [territories], yet his own [people] did not receive him.] It is so difficult to express the difference between εις τα ιδια, and οι ιδιοι, that few versions have attempted it; yet, as Grotius hath well observed, the energy of the text cannot be understood without attending to it. That the Jewish nation was, in some peculiar sense, under the care and guardianship of Christ before his incarnation, this passage seems strongly to intimate; and many learned men have shewn it in what appears to me a convincing light.

SECT. ii.

and the blood of the sacrifices; nor could they ascribe it merely to the will of the flesh, or to their own superior wisdom and goodness, as if, by the power of corrupted nature alone, they had made themselves to differ; nor to the will of man, or to the wisest advice and most powerful exhortations which their fellow-creatures might address to them; but most humbly acknowledge that they were born of God[l], and indebted to the efficacious influences of his regenerating grace for all their privileges and for all their hopes. Compare John iii. 1—8. Tit. iii. 3—7. and Jam. 1. 18.

John I. 13.

14 And in order to raise us sinful creatures to such illustrious dignity and happiness, the divine and eternal word, that glorious person whom we mentioned above, by a most amazing condescension was made flesh[m], that is, united himself to our inferior and miserable nature with all its innocent infirmities; and he not only made us a transient visit for an hour or a day, but for a considerable time pitched his tabernacle among us[n] on earth; and we who are now recording these things contemplated his glory (compare 1 John i. 1.) with so strict an attention that, from our own personal knowledge, we can bear our testimony to it, that it was in every respect such a glory as became the Only-begotten of the Father; for it shone forth, not merely in that radiant appearance which invested him on the mount

14 And the word was made flesh and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the Only-begotten of the Father) full of grace and truth.

[l] Who were not born of blood, &c. but of God.] I am sensible this verse is liable to great difficulty and ambiguity. It is an amazing liberty the author of the New Translation, published 1727, has taken with it, in explaining it of a birth which they had not from circumcision, nor from the constitution of the body, nor from the institution of man, but from God. I readily allow that ἐξ αἱμάτων, of bloods, may include circumcision, but cannot confine it to that: patriarchal descent and the blood of sacrifices were so much depended upon by the Jews, that one would suppose them included. Dr. Whitby, with many others, takes the will of the flesh to signify carnal descent; and the will of man adoption; which I should prefer to the opinion of Mess. L'Enfant and Beausobre, who, without any reason assigned, understand by those born of the will of man, proselytes, as opposed to native Jews; a sense in which I never could find the phrase used. The paraphrase I have given, keeps the ideas distinct; answers the frequent signification of flesh elsewhere; (compare John iii. 6. Rom. vii. 25. viii. 3, 8, 12. and Gal. v. 17.) and conveys an important and edifying sense, very agreeable to the tenor of scripture. But I submit it to the reader, without pretending that it is the only interpretation the words will bear. I hope he will always carefully distinguish between the text and the paraphrase, and remember how very different a regard is owing to the one and the other.

[m] Was made flesh.] Flesh often signifies man in this infirm and calamitous state. Compare Gen. vi. 12. Numb. xvi. 22. Deut. v. 26. Psal. cxlv. 21. Isa. xlix. 26. Acts ii. 17. 1 Cor. i. 29. and many other places.

[n] Pitched his tabernacle among us.] There is so visible a reference in the word ἐσκήνωσεν, to the dwelling of the Shechinah in the tabernacle of Moses, that it was very proper to render it by the word I have used.

[o] Full

SECT. ii.

mount of transfiguration, and in the splendor of his continued miracles, but in all his temper, ministration and conduct, through the whole series of his life, in which he appeared full of grace and truth[o]; that is, as he was in himself most benevolent and upright, so he made the amplest discoveries of pardon to sinners, which the Mosaic dispensation could not possibly do, and exhibited the most important and substantial blessings[p], whereas that was at best but "a shadow of good things to come." Compare Heb. x. 1.

John 1. 14.

IMPROVEMENT.

Justly hath our Redeemer said, Blessed is the man that is not offended in me: and we may peculiarly apply the words to that great and glorious doctrine of the deity of Christ, which is here before us. A thousand high and curious thoughts will naturally arise in our corrupt hearts on this view of it; but may Divine Grace subdue them all to the obedience of an humble faith; so that, with Thomas, we may each of us fall down at his feet, and cry out with sincere and unreserved devotion, My Lord and my God! Ver. 1, 2

Let us adore him as the Creator and Preserver of all, the overflowing Fountain of light and life. Let us with unutterable pleasure hail this Sun of Righteousness, whose rays, by the tender mercies of the Father, have visited our benighted world to guide our feet into the way of peace: and while we lament that the darkness hath not apprehended and received him, let us earnestly pray that he may ere long penetrate every cloud of ignorance and mist of error, and may diffuse among all the nations knowledge and grace, purity and joy. Let us especially pray that he may penetrate our beclouded souls; and that they may, in holy correspondence to the purposes of his appearing, be turned as clay to the seal[q]. Job xxxviii. 14.—The world knew him not; but may we know him, and give him that honourable and grateful reception which so great a favour may justly demand!—Yet what returns can be pro- 3, 4 5 ¶ 10

[o] Full of grace and truth.] It is plain that those words, and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the Only-begotten of the Father, are to be considered as a parenthesis; and these are to be joined with the preceding, thus, He dwelt among us—full of grace and truth. But the length of the paraphrase made it inconvenient to transpose them.

[p] The most substantial blessings.] That truth is sometimes used, not so much in opposition to falsehood, as to hieroglyphicks, shadows and types, an attentive reader must often have observed. See Heb. viii. 2. ix. 24. and Dan. vii. 16. Compare Col. ii. 17.

[q] Turned as clay to the seal.] This beautiful metaphor of the inspired writer seems, by a very expressive contrast, to illustrate the meaning of κατελαβεν in the fifth verse. It was for want of this the darkness did not apprehend or receive the light; did not form itself into a due correspondence to it so as to put on its habit, and clothe itself with the lustre of its reflected beams. How glorious and happy is that soul on which the knowledge of Christ hath that genuine influence!

SECT. ii. proportionable to his condescension in becoming flesh for us, and pitching his tabernacle among miserable and sinful mortals?—

Ver. 11 Happy apostles that beheld his glory! And surely there are in his word such reflections of it as we may also behold, and as will oblige us to acknowledge it to be a glory that became the Only-begotten of the Father.

Let us cordially receive him as full of grace and truth, that we 12 also may stand entitled to the privileges of God's children. And if we are already of that happy number, let us not arrogate the glory of it to ourselves, or ascribe it entirely to those who have been the instruments of this important change; but remember that of his 13 own will God hath begotten us by the word of his power, and that of him we are in Christ Jesus: to him then let us refer the ultimate praise, if that divine and almighty Saviour be made unto us wisdom and righteousness and sanctification and redemption. 1 Cor. i. 30.

SECT. III.

An angel appears to Zacharias to give him notice of the birth of John the Baptist; and his mother on her conception retires. Luke I. 5—25.

LUKE I. 5.

SECT. iii. IN the days of Herod the Great, whom the Romans had made king of Judea, there was a priest named Zacharias, who belonged to that course of priests in the temple which was called the course of Abiah: as Abiah was the head of one of the twenty-four courses into which David distributed the priests (compare 1 Chron. xxiii. 6, and xxiv. 10.) whose memory was still kept up, though none of his line returned from the captivity: And his wife (that is, the wife of Zacharias) was one of the daughters of the honourable family of Aaron, and her name was Elizabeth.

Luke I. 5.

6 And they were both of them persons of a very fair character among men; and not only so, but sincerely and eminently righteous in the sight of God, walking before him in the simplicity of their hearts, in a faithful observance of all the moral commands, as well as ceremonial ordinances and institutions[a] of the Lord, in a very blameless and 7 exemplary manner. And they had no child, because Elizabeth was barren; and so pious a man as

LUKE I. 5.

THERE was in the days of Herod, the king of Judea, a certain priest, named Zacharias of the course of Abiah: and his wife was of the daughters of Aaron, and her name was Elizabeth.

6 And they were both righteous before God, walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless.

7 And they had no child, because that Elizabeth a Moral commands, as well as ceremonial institutions.] Some have thought this distinction too nice: but it is certain the word δικαιωμαῖα is sometimes used to signify ceremonial institutions (see Heb. ix. 1, 10), though it is often taken in a much more extensive sense. It is, however, evident that all expressed in the paraphrase must be intended in the text, since under the Jewish dispensation they could not have approved themselves upright before God without an obedient regard to the ceremonial law.

b Taking

Elizabeth was barren, and they both were now well striken in years.

as Zacharias was, would not, on any terms, think of taking another wife while she lived[b]; and indeed there was no human prospect that their family would ever be built up, because they were both very far advanced in years.

SECT. iii.

Luke i. 7.

8 And it came to pass, that, while he executed the priest's office before God, in the order of his course,

And it came to pass, that when he was at Jerusalem, performing the priest's office before God, in the order of his course, or of the class to which he belonged, 8 9 According to the custom of the priest's office, his lot was to burn incense when he went into the temple of the Lord.

According to the custom of assigning the respective offices of the priesthood to particular persons then in waiting, which was done by lot, it so happened, that his lot was then to perform the most honourable service of daily ministration, that is, to burn incense on the golden altar which was before the Lord, contiguous to the holy of holies. (Exod. xxx. 7. xl. 5—26.) This he accordingly did, when he went into the temple of the Lord, either at the time of morning or evening sacrifice. 9 10 And the whole multitude of the people were praying without, at the time of incense.

And the whole multitude of pious Jews assembled for divine worship (according to the usual custom of the people at that time), were praying without in the courts of the temple at the time of incense[c], to declare their concurrence with the priest in that intercession which he was making to God on their account. Compare Rev. viii. 3, 4. 10

11 And there appeared unto him an angel of the Lord, standing on the right side of the altar of incense.

And, while Zacharias was in the midst of his devotions, on a sudden there appeared to him a person, whom, by the form and manner of his appearance, he immediately knew to be an angel of the Lord; and he was standing at the right hand of the altar of incense, before which he was then ministering. 11 12 And when Zacharias saw him he was troubled, and fear fell upon him.

And Zacharias, seeing [him], though he was a man of such remarkable and experienced piety, was greatly discomposed, and an unusual terror fell upon him. 12

But

b Taking another wife while she lived.] Polygamy as well as divorce were, for the hardness of their hearts, tolerated among the Jews; but they seem both to have been, in this age at least, disapproved by persons of the best character. Compare Mal. ii. 14—16. and 1 Tim. iii. 2.

c Were praying without at the time of incense.] This was the foundation of that elegant figure by which prayer is so often compared to incense; (see Psal. cxli. 2. Mal. i. 11. Rev. viii. 3, 4.) and perhaps one reason of ordaining incense might be to intimate the acceptableness of those pious prayers which were to accompany it. And indeed burning fragrant perfumes was, and in the eastern nations still is, so important a part of the entertainment of illustrious families, that one might well expect it in the house of God. It is so plain that this was only an office of daily ministration, and that Zacharias was one of the ordinary priests, that one cannot but be surprized that any should ever conclude from this circumstance of the story that Zacharias was sagan, or assistant to the high-priest, and was now performing his grand office on the day of atonement, and so on this foundation should calculate the birth of John the Baptist and of Christ, and all the other feasts which depend upon them: yet this is done in the calendars both of the Roman and Greek church.

SECT. iii.

Luke i. 13.

But the angel immediately scattered his fears, and said unto him, with great gentleness of aspect and voice, Fear not, Zacharias; for I come unto thee with no message of terror, but, on the contrary, I am sent to assure thee that thy frequently repeated prayer for the redemption of Israel, as well as that which thou hast formerly offered for a blessing on thine own family, is at length heard[d]: and in proof of it, I add, that Elizabeth thy wife shall ere long bear thee a son to comfort thee in this thy declining age; and, in token of the gracious regard of God to him, thou shalt call his name John[e], that is, the grace and favour of God, to intimate that the Divine Grace shall, in a very eminent manner, be upon him. And this intimation shall be abundantly answered: for he shall be a person of so distinguished a character, that thou shalt have joy and transport[f] in him; and many others shall also have reason to rejoice with thee on occasion of his birth. For he shall be great, not in circumstances of outward dignity and splendor, but what is infinitely more important, in the sight of the Lord, even Jehovah his God, whose approbation is the highest glory: and, in token of his being in a peculiar manner separated to his service, like the ancient Nazarites, Numb. vi. 3.) he shall drink neither wine nor any other sort of intoxicating liquor; and he shall be so early remarkable for wisdom and piety, that he shall appear to be filled with the Holy Spirit, even from his mother's womb. And, thus trained up and animated for service, he shall, when he appears under a public character, turn many of the children of Israel to the Lord their God; whose ways they have

13. But the angel said unto him, Fear not, Zacharias; for thy prayer is heard, and thy wife Elizabeth shall bear thee a son, and thou shalt call his name John.

14. And thou shalt have joy and gladness, and many shall rejoice at his birth.

15. For he shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink; and he shall be filled with the Holy Ghost, even from his mother's womb.

16. And many of the children of Israel shall he turn to the Lord their God.

[d] Thy prayer is heard.] No doubt he had often prayed for children; but, as he seems now to have given up all expectations of that kind, it is reasonable to conclude that these words chiefly relate to his prayers for the deliverance of Israel by the Messiah, whose appearance was then expected by pious persons conversant in the sacred writings (Luke ii. 25, 38. xix. 11. xxiii. 51,) and the more earnestly desired just at this time, as they suffered so many grievous things by the oppression of the Romans and the tyranny of Herod, which toward the close of his reign grew more and more insupportable.

[e] Thou shalt call his name John.] It was the office of the father to name the child. Compare verse 62. It is well known that this name, in Hebrew JOHANAN, (which occurs near thirty times in the Old Testament, though the English reader is not aware that it is the same,) is derived from JEHOVAH and CHEN, and properly signifies the grace and favour of the Lord. Elhanan, and many of the other proper names among the Hebrews, had such a kind of signification, and probably were given in token of their good wishes to the infant that received them.

[f] Joy and transport.] Αγαλλιασις properly answers to the word exultation, or leaping for joy, and is far more expressive than gladness. Compare 1 Pet. i. 8. iv. 13. and Mat. v. 12.. in which last places we render it by being exceeding glad.

have so generally forsaken, even while they are professing themselves to be his peculiar people and boasting in such an extraordinary relation to him. And, to prepare them to receive the Lord their God appearing in the person of the Messiah, he shall go before him, as an illustrious harbinger, in the spirit and power of Elijah; that is, animated by the same sanctity, courage and zeal for reformation, which appeared so remarkable in that celebrated prophet; and, according to that prediction of Malachi, (with which the sacred canon concludes, Mal. iv. 6.) he shall meet with such glorious success in his ministry, as to convert the hearts of the fathers with those of the children [g]; that is, he shall bring many both of the rising and the declining age, to that real piety towards God, which will be the surest band of their mutual duty towards each other: and many of those who have hitherto been disobedient to the wisdom of the just; that is, insensible of the obligations to real religion, which is the greatest wisdom, shall he make ready, as a people prepared for the Lord, raising in their minds an expectation of the Messiah, and a disposition to welcome him when he shall appear.

17. And he shall go before him in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just, to make ready a people prepared for the Lord.

And Zacharias then said to the angel, By what 18 sign shall I know that this desirable and wonderful event shall be accomplished? for, in the course of nature, it seems most improbable; since I am an old man, and my wife is also considerably advanced in years.

18. And Zacharias said unto the angel, Whereby shall I know this? for I am an old man, and my wife well stricken in years.

And the angel, answering, said unto him, I am 19
Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God, and near the throne of his Majesty, as one of the chief officers in his celestial court; of whose appearance to Daniel thou hast so frequently read, (Dan.

19. And the angel, answering, said unto him, I am Gabriel, that stand in the presence of God; and am sent to speak unto thee, and to shew thee these glad tidings.

[g] To convert the hearts of the fathers with those of the children; επιστρεψαι καρδιας πατερων επι τεκνα.] Here is a plain allusion to Mal. iv. 6. where it is said (as we render it) that Elijah shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers: "LEB ABOTH AL BENIM," which the seventy render, καρδιαν πατερος προς υιον; in which words it is quoted, Ecclus. xlviii. 10. but St. Luke's version seems as agreeable to the Hebrew. I thought Sir Norton Knatchbull's reason sufficient to justify my rendering it as I have done; which is just as our translators have rendered the like phrase, Judith ix. 10. δουλον επ' αρχοντι, και αρχοντα επι στρατοπεδω, the servant with the prince, and the prince with the servant. But, as Mr. L'Enfant and others, not without some probability render it, to reconcile fathers and children, supposing it may relate to domestic dissensions, inseparable from the variety of religious sects then amongst the Jews, I was willing to comprehend that sense in my paraphrase.—Sir Norton Knatchbull's manner of pointing the last clause of the verse appeared to me so elegant, that I could not but follow it. Elsner would render it nearly in the same sense, By the wisdom of the just, to prepare the disobedient as a people furnished for the Lord, or formed for him. (Compare Isa. xlii. 7. Septuag.) See Elsner Observ. Vol. I. p. 170—173.

[h] From

SECT. iii.

Luke I. 20.

(Dan. viii. 16. ix. 21.) and it is by a peculiar favour that I am now sent to speak to thee in this form of unusual condescension, and to tell thee these joyful tidings. My very appearance ought therefore to have been owned, as a sufficient confirmation of the truth of my message; especially by thee, who canst not but know how frequently in Israel the most illustrious persons have been raised up from parents who had long been barren[h]. And, since thou dost not acquiesce in this, God will give thee a sign; which, while it confirms thy faith, shall also intimate his displeasure against this sinful mixture of unbelief: for, behold, thou shalt, from this moment, be silent, and unable to speak any more, till the day in which these things shall be accomplished, even till the day in which the child shall be born; because thou hast not immediately believed my words, which yet, through the divine indulgence and favour to thee, shall be assuredly fulfilled in their season, that is, as soon as thou canst reasonably expect after thy return home.

20 And, behold, thou shalt be dumb, and not able to speak, until the day that these things shall be performed, because thou believest not my words, which shall be fulfilled in their season.

And the people, who stood without, were waiting for Zacharias, that he might dismiss them with his blessing, (Numb. vi. 23—27. and Lev. ix. 22, 23.) and they wondered that he continued so long in the temple[i], beyond the usual time: for he stayed a while after the angel disappeared, to present before God such humiliations and thanksgivings as this extraordinary circumstance required. But when he came out he was not able to speak to them; and, by the consternation in which he appeared, they perceived that he had seen a vision in the temple; and he himself, by signs, intimated [it] to them; and he continued deaf and dumb[k] during the remainder of his stay at 21 And the people waited for Zacharias, and marvelled that he tarried so long in the temple.

22 And when he came out he could not speak unto them; and they perceived that he had seen a vision in the temple: for he beckoned unto them, and remained speechless.

[h] From parents who had long been barren.] Zacharias, being so pious a priest, could not but often have read the account which the scripture gives of the birth of Isaac, Jacob, Joseph, Samson, Samuel, &c. who were all descended from mothers that had been long barren. The resemblance in circumstances might well have produced a peculiar regard to them; and one would have imagined he must immediately have recollected the story of the angel's appearance to Manoah in particular, when the same scene was acted over before his own eyes, and some of the same expressions used by the celestial messenger. Compare Judg. xiii. 2—14.

[i] So long in the temple.] All that is here recorded might have passed in a few minutes: it seems probable, therefore, that, since the people took notice of his continuing so much longer than ordinary in the holy place, he spent some time in secret devotion, where, in a mixture of holy affections, rising on so great and extraordinary an occasion, he might easily forget how fast the moments passed away.

[k] Deaf and dumb.] As κωφος signifies deaf, (Mat. xi. 5. Mark vii. 32, 37. ix. 25. and Luke vii. 22.) as well as dumb, (Mat. ix. 33. xii. 22. xv. 31. and Luke xi. 14.) So it is plain, from verse 62, that Zacharias lost his hearing with his speech, during this interval.

[l] My

at Jerusalem; a circumstance wisely ordered by Providence to awaken a greater and more general expectation as to the event of so strange an occurrence. SECT. iii. Luke I. 23.

23 And it came to pass that, as soon as the days of his ministration were accomplished, he departed to his own house.

And, after this appearance of the angel to him, 23 it came to pass that, when the remaining days of his ministration were fulfilled, he departed to his own house.

24 And after these days his wife Elizabeth conceived, and hid herself five months, saying,

And quickly after these days were ended, Elizabeth his wife conceived, according to the prediction of the angel; and, apprehending her condition, she concealed herself five months in an obscure retirement, not only that her conception might more certainly appear, but chiefly that she might enjoy opportunity for those extraordinary devotions which this wonderful favour of Providence demanded: nor could she, under such a circumstance, refrain from saying, 24

25 Thus hath the Lord dealt with me, in the days wherein he looked on me, to take away my reproach among men.

The most solemn acknowledgments well become me, because the Lord himself hath thus miraculously interposed, and done this great work for me, in his own good time, even in the days in which he hath graciously looked down upon me, to take away my reproach of barrenness among men[1]. For barrenness was accounted a peculiar reproach among the Jews, who looked upon it as a singular happiness to be instrumental in multiplying the holy seed, according to the promises which God had made them relating to it. 25

IMPROVEMENT.

How amiable is the character of this pious pair, who were found walking in all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless! May our behaviour be thus unblameable, and our obedience thus sincere and universal! And let those, whose office leads them nearer Ver. 6

1 My reproach among men.] That barrenness was so amongst the Jews, appears from Gen. xxx. 23. 1 Sam. i. 11. Isa. iv. 1. liv. 1, 4. and many other passages. That a branch of the family of Aaron should fail, would also be looked upon as a particular calamity, and might, by ignorant and uncharitable people, be interpreted as a judgment: and so much the rather, considering the many promises God had made to increase the families of his obedient people, Exod. xxxii. 13. Lev. xxvi. 9. Deut. vii. 13. and Psal. cxxvii. 3, 4, 5.—I will here digress so far as to observe, that, considering how the whole Jewish policy was interwoven with those acts of religion which were to be performed by the priests alone, it might seem wonderful that no provision at all should be made for entailing the priesthood on any other family, if that of Aaron should happen to be extinct. Leaving this contingency unprovided for, was in effect putting the whole credit of the Jewish religion upon the perpetual continuance of the male branches of that family: an issue on which no man of Moses' prudence, nor indeed of common sense, would have rested his legislation, if he had not been truly conscious of its divine original; especially after two of Aaron's four sons had been cut off in one day for a rash act in the execution of their office, as soon as they were initiated into it, and died without any children. Numb. iii. 4.

a Nazareth.]

SECT. iii. nearer to God than others, remember their peculiar obligation to imitate such an example.

Ver. 13 Let us observe, with pleasure, that the prayers which such worshippers offer come up with acceptance before God; to whom no costly perfume is so sweet as the fragrancy of a character like this. —An answer of peace was here returned when the case seemed to be most helpless. Let us learn to wait patiently for the Lord, and leave it to his own infinite wisdom to chuse the time and manner in which he shall appear for us.

12 Zacharias, accustomed as he was to converse with the God of heaven, was nevertheless, as we see, thrown into great consternation at the appearance of his angelic messenger. And may we not regard it, therefore, as an instance of the goodness as well as wisdom of God, that he determines that the services which these 13, 19 heavenly spirits render us should be generally invisible?—It is delightful to observe that amiable condescension with which Gabriel, the courtier of heaven, behaved on this occasion. Let it teach us with pleasure to pursue the humblest offices of duty and love which God may assign us towards any of our fellow-servants, even in the lowest stations.

17 Happy was the holy Baptist in being employed in this blessed work of preparing men's hearts to receive a Saviour, and reducing the disobedient to the wisdom of the just. May we be inspired with some degree of zeal like his, in our proper sphere, to pursue so noble a design!

18, 20 We see, in the instance of Zacharias, that some remainders of unbelief may be found even in a faithful heart: let us guard against them, as remembering they will be displeasing to God, and hurtful to ourselves.—And, to conclude, when Providence 24 favours us with any peculiarly gracious interpositions, let us attentively remark the hand of God in them; and let religious retirement leave room for serious recollection and devout acknowledgments.

SECT. IV.

The angel Gabriel is sent to the virgin Mary, to inform her of the conception of Christ by her, in which she humbly acquiesces. Luke I. 26—38.

LUKE I. 26.

SECT. iv. IN the sixth month after Elizabeth had conceived, the same angel Gabriel, who had been Luke I. 26 the messenger of such good news to Zacharias, was sent from God to a small and inconsiderable city of Galilee, which was called Nazareth[a]; being charged with an important commission to a 27 virgin,

LUKE I. 26.

AND in the sixth month the angel Gabriel was sent from God unto a city of Galilee, named Nazareth.

a Nazareth.] A city in the tribe of Zebulun, which was reduced to so low and contemptible a condition, that no good thing was expected from thence. John i. 46.

b She

SECT. iv.

Luke I. 28.

27 To a virgin espoused to a man whose name was Joseph, of the house of David; and the virgin's name was Mary.

28 And the angel came in unto her, and said, Hail, thou that art highly favoured; the Lord, is with thee: blessed art thou among women.

29 And when she saw him she was troubled at his saying, and cast in her mind what manner of salutation this should be.

30 And the angel said unto her, Fear not, Mary; for thou hast found favour with God.

31 And behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a son, and shalt call his name Jesus.

32 He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David:

virgin, who was contracted, according to the Jewish method of espousals, to a man whose name was Joseph: a descendant of the royal house of David; which illustrious family was now reduced to so low a condition, that Joseph followed the employment of a carpenter: and the virgin's name was Mary, of the same lineage. And the angel entered in to the room, in which she was alone; and, standing before her, surrounded her with an extraordinary lustre, he addressed himself unto her, and said, Hail, O thou distinguished favourite of heaven! I congratulate thy happiness; for the Lord is with thee, and is about to manifest his condescending regard in a manner which shall oblige all around thee to acknowledge that thou art blessed among women, the greatest and happiest of thy sex.

Now the pious and modest virgin, when she 29 saw this appearance of [the angel,] and heard his message, as she plainly perceived it to be something of a very extraordinary nature, was much disturbed at his discourse[b]; and, not imagining herself at all worthy of such applause and congratulation, she reasoned with herself, for a while, what kind of salutation this could be[c], and from what original it could proceed.

And the angel, immediately perceiving it, to 30 disperse the doubt she was in, said unto her again, Fear not, Mary; for I am a messenger sent from heaven to tell thee that thou hast found signal favour with God. And behold and observe 31
it with due regard, for I assure thee, in his name, that from this very time thou shalt be with child, and at the proper season shalt be delivered of a son, and shalt call his name Jesus, the divine Saviour; for he shall come on that important errand, to save men from the tyranny of sin and the displeasure of God. He shall be incompa- 32 rably great and glorious, insomuch that he shall justly be called the Son of the Most High God; and the Lord God shall give him the throne of David his father, from whom thou art descended; so that, like David, he shall be the Sovereign of God's chosen people, and possess that extensive empire

b She was disturbed at his discourse.] Some would render επι τω λογω αυτω, on account of him; and Heinsius hath abundantly shewn how common this manner of speaking is in the sacred writings.

c What kind of salutation.] She seems to have suspected it might possibly proceed from the artifice of some evil spirit, to inspire her with sentiments of vanity and pride.

SECT. iv.

empire which was promised to the seed of that holy patriarch: (2 Sam. vii. 12, 13. Psal. ii. 7, 8. and Psal. cxxxii. 11, 12.) And he shall inherit Luke I. 33. the kingdom, with this circumstance of superior glory, that, whereas David is now sleeping with his fathers, this exalted Prince shall rule over the house of Jacob, even all the true Israel of God, for ever; and, though the most potent monarchies of the earth will be successively dissolved, yet of his kingdom there shall be no end, even as long as the sun and moon endure. See Psal. lxxii. 5, 17. Isa. ix. 7. Dan. vii. 14.

33 And he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end.

34 And Mary replied to the angel, O thou heavenly messenger, permit me to ask, How can this possibly be from this time, as thou hast intimated to me, since I am as yet a virgin[d] ?

34 Then said Mary unto the angel, How shall this be, seeing I know not a man?

35 And the angel, answering, said unto her, There is nothing in that objection, great as it may seem, for this whole affair is to be a scene of miracle: the Holy Spirit shall come upon thee, and the power of the Most High God shall thus overshadow thee by an amazing energy, to produce an effect hitherto, from the foundation of the earth, unknown: and therefore that holy Offspring of thine shall, with regard to this miraculous conception, as well as another and yet greater consideration, 36 be called the Son of God. And behold, to confirm thy faith in a declaration which might seem so incredible, I farther assure thee that thy cousin Elizabeth also hath, by the miraculous power of God, conceived a son, though she be now in her old age; and this is the sixth month of pregnancy with her who hath long been called barren[e], and spoken of as one who could have no hope of being a mother. And scruple not to believe what I have told thee with regard to thyself as 35 And the angel answered and said unto her, The Holy Ghost shall come upon thee, and the power of the Highest shall overshadow thee: therefore also that Holy Thing which shall be born of thee shall be called the Son of God.

36 And, behold, thy cousin Elizabeth, she hath also conceived a son in her old age: and this is the sixth month with her who was called barren.

[d] How can this be,—since I am as yet a virgin?] Some would render this, What! shall this be if I have no intercourse with a man? as if she would be resolved whether this birth were to be produced in a common or a miraculous manner. But I think it is more natural to suppose that she understood the former words as an intimation that the effect was immediately to take place, to which her present circumstance seemed, humanly speaking, an invincible objection. Our English version, I know not a man, is more literal than what is here given; but I do not apprehend that the strictest fidelity requires to render the Hebraism so exactly; the sense is evidently the same.

[e] Who hath been called barren.] I cannot think (with some learned and judicious persons) that to be called and to be, signify entirely the same thing, so as that the former should be thought a mere pleonasm, and rendered just as the latter. The phrase seems to signify, in the language of scripture, not only that the thing shall really be what it is called, but also that it shall be taken notice of in that view: which I think will appear from an attentive consideration of the chief texts which have been produced to establish the opposite opinion. Compare Isa. i. 26. ix. 6. xxxv. 8. xlvii. 1, 5. lvi. 7. lxi. 3, 6. Mat. v. 9, 19. xxi. 13. Mark xi. 17. 1 John iii. 1.

f Mary

37 For with God nothing shall be impossible.

as well as her; for thou well knowest that nothing is, or ever will be, impossible to God, whose almighty power operates with equal ease in the most miraculous as in the most common productions.

SECT. iv.

Luke I. 37.

38 And Mary said, Behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it unto me according to thy word. And the angel departed from her.

And, strange as the message was, Mary firmly believed it[f], and said, with the most amiable humility and piety, Behold, I am the handmaid of the Lord, and would approve myself faithful and obedient; may it be unto me according to thy word! I thankfully accept the honour, of which I confess I am unworthy; and humbly resign my reputation, and even my life[g], to the divine care and providence, while I wait the accomplishment of thy prediction. 38

Then the angel, having executed his commission, departed from her, and returned to his abode in the heavenly regions.

IMPROVEMENT.

WITH what holy wonder and pleasure should we trace this notice of an incarnate Redeemer? and how thankfully should we adore his condescending goodness, that for us men, and for our salvation, he did not despise the womb of so obscure a virgin? Ver. 26, 27

We too are ready in our thoughts, with Gabriel, to congratulate her on so distinguished an honour, and to say, as one did to Christ, in the days of his flesh, Blessed is the womb that bare thee, O Lord, and the breasts which thou hast sucked! (Luke xi. 27.) But let us remember there is yet a nobler blessedness than this attending those, in whose hearts he is so formed by divine grace, that they hear his word and do it. 28

Let us hear it, with joy, that he is Jesus the Saviour; but let us also consider that he is Christ the anointed Sovereign, who is to rule over God's people for ever. Remember, O my soul, that of his kingdom there shall be no end; and esteem it thine unspeakable honour and happiness to be enrolled amongst his faithful subjects. 31, 32

The

[f] Mary firmly believed it.] It is worthy of our remark, that Mary, though a young virgin, should so readily believe an event, in itself so much more wonderful than that which Zacharias, though an aged priest, had found it so difficult to credit. And it may be observed, that the sacred writers are particularly careful to record instances of this kind in which God doth, as it were, out of the mouths of babes and sucklings perfect his praise.

[g] Resign my reputation, and even my life.] For both these, humanly speaking, might have been in danger, considering the severity of the Mosaic law against those who had violated the faith of their espousals. (Compare Deut. xxii. 23, 24.) And though so impious a prince as Herod, who was then on the Jewish throne, undoubtedly controlled many of the laws of God, yet the natural severity and extravagant jealousy of his temper, would probably engage him to execute this in its full terror.

SECT. IV.

The glories promised to such in the future state are so far beyond experience, or even imagination, that they might, to sense, appear as incredible as the message which Mary received: but let us remember the eternal truth of what Gabriel suggested to her, that nothing is impossible to God. He can therefore ripen our imperfect souls to all the improvement and pleasures of the heavenly state, as easily as he produces the meanest vegetable on the earth.

Ver. 33 37

Let the temper of the blessed virgin, on this great occasion, be therefore the beautiful model of ours: so, when the purposes of the Divine Love are declared to us, may we resign ourselves unto the Lord; and with such calm tranquillity, firm faith and joyful acquiescence, may we wait the accomplishment of his gracious promise, and say, Behold the servants of the Lord! be it unto us 38 according to his word! So do thou, O Lord, animate and support us! and the weakest of thy children shall not stumble at the greatest of thy promises through unbelief; but, being strong in faith, shall give glory to God.

SECT. V.

Mary visits Elizabeth; her faith is confirmed by it, and she breaks out into a song of praise. Luke I. 39—56.

Luke I. 39.

SECT. V.

IN those days, or soon after the time that she received the extraordinary message mentioned above, Mary arose from Nazareth, where she then was, and went[a], with all the expedition she conveniently could, to what was called the hill-country, which lay towards the south of Canaan; and came into a city of Judah, where Zacharias dwelt, with a comfortable expectation that this visit might tend both to confirm her faith and 40 vindicate her character. And accordingly she entered into the house of her kinsman Zacharias, and, to the pleasing surprise of her friend, saluted Elizabeth.

Luke I. 39.

41 And it came to pass that, as soon as Elizabeth heard the salutation of Mary, the infant in her womb did, with a most unusual emotion, leap for joy, as sensible of the approach of Him whose fore-

Luke I. 39.

AND Mary arose in those days, and went into the hill-country with haste into a city of Judah, 40 And entered into the house of Zacharias, and saluted Elizabeth.

41 And it came to pass that when Elizabeth heard the salutation of Mary, the babe leaped in her womb: and a Mary arose and went, &c.] This was a very wise determination; as it was very probable that, by communicating the vision she had seen, and perhaps also describing the form in which the angel appeared, she might convince Zacharias and Elizabeth that there was something singular in her case, and so might bring in the reputation of such worthy and eminent persons to establish her own, in a circumstance which might otherwise expose her to great suspicion and censure. I shall only add, that it is not improbable the city here spoken of might be Hebron; a city belonging to the priests in the tribe of Judah and the hill-country. Josh. xxi. 11.

b Happy

and Elizabeth was filled with the Holy Ghost.

forerunner he was appointed to be. And Elizabeth was directed to consider it in this view; for she was immediately filled with an extraordinary degree of divine inspiration, by the influences of the Holy Spirit. And, far from envying the superior honour of her young cousin, she, in very exalted language, congratulated her on the occasion; and, crying out with a loud voice, as in a sacred kind of transport, she said, in the very words which Gabriel had before used to the virgin: SECT. V. Luke I. 41.

42. And she spake out with a loud voice, and said, Blessed art thou among women, and blessed is the fruit of thy womb.

42 Most blessed art thou, O Mary, among all the women in the whole world; and most blessed is the sacred and miraculous fruit of thy womb.

43. And whence is this to me, that the mother of my Lord should come to me?

43 And indeed, when I consider the matter attentively, I cannot but cry out, in amazement, Whence is this honour done to me, that she, who is so highly honoured as to be the mother of that wonderful and divine child, whom I would with all humility own as my Lord, should come unto me as a guest under my roof; to whom I should rather have hastened to pay my homage? And that he, of whom thou art now pregnant, is indeed my Lord the Messiah, I certainly know by

44. For lo, as soon as the voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, the babe leaped in my womb for joy.

44 what I have now felt: for, behold, as soon as the first voice of thy salutation sounded in mine ears, as thou wast entering into the house, the very infant within me leaped in my womb for joy, with a vigour and sprightliness unknown before; which I am taught to interpret as a homage done to Him before whose face he is to go to prepare his way.

45. And blessed is she that believed: for there shall be a performance of those things, which were told her from the Lord.

And, when I consider the whole affair 45 in all its variety of circumstances, I have reason to say, Happy is she that so readily believed [b] what to sense appeared so utterly incredible, without so much as requiring any miraculous sign of it; for surely there shall be a very faithful and an exact accomplishment of all those things which have been spoken to her from the Lord.

46. And Mary said, My soul doth magnify the Lord,

Then Mary also was filled with a transport of holy joy; and, under the direction of the same 46 Spirit, as well as in many of those words which she [b] Happy is she that believeth, &c.] I doubt not but here is an oblique reference to the unhappiness of Zacharias, who had not immediately believed the promise of God to him, and thereby had incurred so sensible a mark of the divine displeasure. I have gently touched upon it in the paraphrase; but I was cautious of being too express, lest I should violate that great decorum, which the Spirit of God, as well as the rules of modesty and piety, taught her to observe, when the faults of a husband were in question. It may be added, that these words shewed her knowledge of Mary's immediate belief of the promise made to her: a knowledge which she could only gain by divine revelation, and which, therefore, would be a mutual confirmation of the faith of both.

SECT. V.

she had learnt from the sacred oracles, she, in the warmth of her devotion, said, [c] [c] My very soul doth most affectionately magnify and extol the Lord. And my spirit, with all its most exalted powers, rejoiceth in God as my Saviour; who, I trust, is granting me my own share in that gospel which, by the appearance of this his dear Son, he is sending to so many others:

Luke 1. 47.

47 And my spirit hath rejoiced in God my Saviour.

48 For, notwithstanding all the meanness of my circumstances, and the obscure condition in which I live, yet he hath looked with a distinguishing regard and most surprising condescension, upon the low estate of his handmaid; for, behold, he hath conferred such an honour upon me, that I am fully persuaded, according to his word by the angel, that not only the present age, but all future generations shall call me happy, [d] and shall admire the peculiar grace and favour that the Lord

48 For he hath regarded the low estate of his handmaiden; for behold, from henceforth all generations shall call me blessed.

49 hath shewn me. For he who is powerful beyond all our conceptions, even the Almighty God, to whom this strange event is not only possible, but easy, hath done these great and unheard of things for me; and his name and nature [is] so holy, that I cannot suspect the accomplishment of any thing that he hath

49 For he that is mighty hath done to me great things, and holy is his name:

50 promised. His mercy also hath in every age been the hope and confidence of his people; and I well know that it [is] from generation

50 And his mercy is on them that fear him, from generation to generation.

51 to generation on them that fear him. He hath often wrought the most glorious displays of strength by his irresistible arm: he hath often dispersed the haughty sinners that exalt themselves against him, and confounded them in those schemes which were the most laboured 51 He hath shewed strength with his arm; he hath scattered the proud in the imagination of their hearts.

52 imagination of their own hearts. [e] He hath often

52 He hath put down the [c] Mary also said.] It is observable that most of these phrases are borrowed from the Old Testament, with which the pious virgin seems to have been very conversant; especially from the Song of Hannah; in which there were so many passages remarkably suitable to her own case. Compare 1 Sam. ii. 1—10. Gen. xxx. 13. Psalm ciii. 17. xcviii. 1. lxxxix. 10. cvii. 9. and Mic. vii. 20.

[d] Shall call me happy, μακαριουσι.] I think there are several other texts where μακαριος should rather be rendered happy than blessed, which is the proper signification of ευλογητος; (see 1 Tim. i. 11. vi. 15. and Rev. xx. 6.) yet I cannot say that the distinction is always material, nor do I always observe it in the following version.

[e] He hath dispersed the haughty, &c. διεσκορπισεν υπερφανους διανοια καρδιας αυτων.] I know this may be rendered, He hath scattered those that prided themselves in the imagination, or thought, of their hearts: but I apprehend the words would well bear the yet more emphatical sense I have here given them. And thus they are peculiarly applicable to the gospel; in which God doth not only cast down imaginations and every high thing, &c. (2 Cor. x. 5.) by the humbling scheme of his recovering grace, but hath remarkably confounded his most insolent enemies in their own most elaborate projects, and the mighty from their seats, and exalted them of low degree:

SECT. V.

Luke I. 52.

often brought down mighty potentates from their thrones of dignity and power, and, by some singular interposition of his providence, hath exalted the lowly from their obscurest state, as he is now doing with respect to me. He 53 He hath filled the hungry with good things, and the rich he hath sent empty away.

53 hath often filled the hungry with a variety of good things, and hath sent away the rich and luxurious sinner empty[f]; having stripped him of all his plenty, and turned him out of all those possessions in which he was once so confident. And, as a glorious instance of his

54 He hath holpen his servant Israel, in remembrance of his mercy,

54 condescension and his power, though our condition be so low in comparison of what it once was, he hath now succoured Israel[g], and taken him as his child into paternal protection: and all this he hath graciously done in remembrance of his everlasting mercy[h], Even as he

55 As he spake to our fathers, to Abraham, and to his seed for ever.

55 long ago spoke to our fathers, and promised it to Abraham and to his seed, throughout all generations: and we, the heirs of those promises, shall now behold them happily fulfilled in all the fulness of their extent and glory."

56 And Mary abode with her about three months, and returned to her own house.

Then Mary abode with her cousin Elizabeth 56 about three months, till very near the time of her delivery; and then returned to her own house and lived privately there; concealing, but not forgetting these extraordinary things, which had so powerful a tendency to establish and animate her mind[i].

IMPROVE-

established his sacred cause by the violent attempts they have made to suppress it. (Compare Psal. ii. 1—3.) A triumph of divine wisdom, of which succeeding ages furnish out memorable and frequent instances at home and abroad.

[f] Sent away the rich empty.] Εξαπεστειλε strictly signifies, hath sent, or turned them out of doors; and very beautifully represents God as the great proprietor of all, and the greatest of men as his tenants at will, whom he can strip and turn out, whenever he pleases.

[g] He hath succoured Israel.] That the word αντιλαβετο properly signifies to interpose in favour of a person in great necessity, or extreme danger, Elsner hath abundantly proved, Observ. Vol. I. page 175.

[h] In remembrance of his everlasting mercy.] The beginning of the 55th verse should, I think, be included in a parenthesis. It makes an easier and stronger sense to suppose that this remembrance of his mercy for ever refers to his everlasting mercies promised to the patriarchs. Compare Gen. xvii. 19. Isa. lv. 3. Rom. xi. 29. Yet I acknowledge those blessings might be said to be promised to them, and their seed for ever, which were entailed on their remotest generations. (Compare Gen. xii. 15. xviii. 8. &c.) Care is therefore taken to express both in the paraphrase.

[i] Animate her mind.] Many of the things which had passed in this journey, and especially that rapturous inspiration which she had herself experienced, and which till now was probably unknown to her, must elevate her thoughts to a very sublime pitch, and enkindle in her attentive reflecting mind high expectations and glorious hopes. See Luke ii. 19, 51.

SECT. V.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. 40 How natural is it for those, who have themselves received mercy of the Lord, to communicate their joy to others, and to seek the society of their fellow saints, whom he hath honoured with the signal manifestations of his favour?—Happy are they, whose friendship is confirmed and heightened by such endearing 41, 42 ties! And thrice happy the humble and generous souls who can thus, like Elizabeth, lose the thoughts of private honour and interest in a cordial concern for the glory of God and the good of men; rejoicing to see others, perhaps in some respects their inferiors, raised to stations of service more distinguished than their own!

43 If this pious matron thought herself so highly honoured in receiving a visit from the mother of our infant Saviour, how much more doth it become us to admire the condescension of our glorious Lord, that he will represent himself as graciously knocking at the door of our hearts, and ready not only to make us a transient visit, but to take up his stated abode with us?

May our faith, like that of the blessed virgin, delightfully rest on all the promises he makes, as firmly believing that there shall be 45 an accomplishment of these things which are spoken! And, while that accomplishment is delayed, may the pleasing expectation of 46 it tune our voice to a song of praise like hers!—Let our souls also 47 magnify the Lord, and our spirits rejoice in that God whom we hope, through grace, to be our Saviour; whose condescension hath 38 regarded us in such low circumstances; and whose almighty power 49 and everlasting love have done such great things for us.—He 53, 55 hath provided heavenly food, to satisfy our hungry souls; and hath 54 raised us to enjoy the mercies which, in more obscure intimations only, he promised to the pious patriarchs.—His mercy is on all 50 that fear him, through succeeding generations.—May such distinguished favours animate our hearts with those sentiments of devotion and zeal which they are so well qualified to excite! Otherwise the joy of the Old Testament saints, in the distant and imperfect prospect of these blessings, will testify against our insensibility in the superior advantages with which we are favoured.

SECT. VI.

The birth and circumcision of John the Baptist. Luke I. 57—66.

LUKE I. 57.

SECT. VI.

AND, when the full time for Elizabeth's delivery was come, she brought forth a son, exactly according to the prediction of the angel to Zacharias. And her neighbours, and her relations,

Luke I. 57.

LUKE I. 57.

NOW Elizabeth's full time came, that she should be delivered; and she brought forth a son.

58 And her neighbours and her cousins heard how the Lord had shewed great mercy upon her; and they rejoiced with her.

59 And it came to pass, that on the eighth day they came to circumcise the child; and they called him Zacharias, after the name of his father.

60 And his mother answered and said, Not so; but he shall be called John.

61 And they said unto her, There is none of thy kindred that is called by this name.

62 And they made signs to his father, how he would have him called;

63 And he asked for a writing table, and wrote, saying, His name is John. And they marvelled all.

64 And his mouth was opened immediately, and his tongue loosed: and he spake, and praised God.

SECT. VI.

Luke I. 58.

tions, were acquainted with it; and, having heard that the Lord, in so illustrious and remarkable a manner, had magnified and displayed his mercy to her, they ran to testify their joy, and sincerely congratulated her on the happy occasion.

And, in particular, it came to pass, that on the 59 eighth day they came together in some considerable numbers, to circumcise the child according to the law (Gen. xvii. 12. Lev. xii. 3.) and, as it was then customary to give it a name[a], they that were present would have called him Zacharias, after the name of his father: But his mother, 60 who had been more particularly informed by her husband of what had passed between him and the angel in the temple, answered and said, Nay, my friends, it must not be so; but he shall be called John. And when they objected to this, and said 61 unto her, None of thy kindred, either by birth or marriage, is called by this name: In order to 62 determine the question, and to be fully satisfied, they made signs to his father, to know what he would have him called. And he, by signs, asked 63 for a writing tablet[b]; and, when he had received it, he wrote, saying, His name is John; thereby declaring it a settled point, that would admit of no farther debate. And they were all amazed at the determination. But greater still was their astonishment, to find his tongue at liberty and 64 his speech restored; for his mouth was immediately opened, and his tongue [loosed]; and he spake audibly and distinctly; beginning, as it was most reasonable, with praising God[c] in that sublime hymn which we shall presently record.

And

[a] As it was then customary to give it a name.] The giving the child its name was no more a part of the original intent of circumcision than of baptism; it was an incidental circumstance which custom had added. And I cannot forbear saying that, in administering the Christian ordinance, I think care should be taken to order the voice so that it may plainly appear we only then speak to the child by the name which hath been already given it.---That the father among the ancients used to name the children, and that it was customary often to give them the name of their immediate ancestors, Elsner has shewn on this text.

[b] A writing tablet, πινακιδιον.] We have so few diminutives in our language, that I was not willing to lose this, which much more exactly answers the original than table.

[c] And his tongue [loosed]; and he spake, praising God.] I entirely agree with the learned Raphelius, (Annot. ex Herod. pages 219, 220.) that Elsner's criticism (Observ. Vol. I. page 178, 179.) is not to be admitted, which would render it, And his tongue also spake, praising God. It would then have been ευλογουσα, instead of ευλογων; and Raphelius has given unanswerable instances, in the most approved writers, of a verb joined with two nouns, when in strict propriety it can only belong to one of them. Compare 1 Cor. iii. 2. where the original is, Γαλα υμας εποτισα, και ου βρωμα· I have given you milk to drink, and not meat.

SECT. VI.

Luke I. 65.

And a religious awful kind of dread fell, not only on those that were present, but on all that dwelt near them: and all these things, in a very particular detail of circumstances, were published, and became the great topic of conversation
66 over the whole hill-country of Judea. And all wise and pious persons that heard [them] laid them up carefully in their hearts, as matters highly worthy their future consideration, saying, What kind of a child will this be, who is ushered into the world in so extraordinary a way? And their expectations were farther raised by observing that, as he grew up, the hand of the Lord was signally with him; and, through the divine blessing, he appeared not only a healthful and thriving, but likewise, on other and higher accounts, a very hopeful child.

65 And fear came on all that dwelt round about them: and all these sayings were noised abroad throughout all the hill-country of Judea.

66 And all they that had heard them, laid them up in their hearts, saying, What manner of child shall this be? And the hand of the Lord was with him.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. So sure are the promises of God, and so certainly will the full 57 accomplishment of them another day shame our suspicious unbelieving hearts, and awaken the tongues of his servants to songs of
58 praise! Happy the souls who, by a lively faith in them, are anticipating that blessed day, and whose minds, kept in tune by these pleasing views, are opening themselves to the most tender sympathy with others, and, like the kindred of this pious pair, are making the religious joys of others their own; so sharing, rather than envying the superior favours bestowed upon them!

65, 66 Let us learn, with them, wisely to observe what God is doing around us and to lay up remarkable occurrences in our hearts: that, by comparing one step of divine conduct with another, we may the better understand the loving kindness of the Lord, and be engaged to act with more regular obedience in a holy subserviency to his gracious purposes.

66 When, like good Zacharias and Elizabeth, we have the pleasure to see our infant offspring growing up in safety and chearfulness, with healthy constitutions of body and towardly dispositions of mind too, let us ascribe it to the hand of the Lord, which is upon them for good. Let us remember that we are at best but the instruments of the divine care and favour to them; and that our families would soon become scenes of desolation, did not God watch over them in a thousand circumstances of danger and distress, which no prudence of ours could have foreseen, and which no care of ours could have been able to provide against.

SECT.

SECT. VII.

Zacharias, on the birth of his son, breaks out into a sublime anthem of praise. Luke I. 67, to the end.

LUKE I. 67.
AND his father Zacharias was filled with the Holy Ghost, and prophesied, saying,

Luke I. 67.

SECT. VII.

NOW John being born, as we have before described it, Zacharias his father, when he first spake after the birth of this extraordinary child, was filled with the influences of the Holy Spirit; and, in an exalted strain of sacred rapture, he prophesied, saying,

Luke i. 67.

68 Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, for he hath visited and redeemed his people.

"Blessed be Jehovah, the God of Israel, be- 68 cause he hath now owned the relation in so signal a manner; for he hath graciously looked down upon his people in their distress, and wrought out an illustrious and complete redemption for them:

69 And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David;

And he hath raised up for 69 us a horn of salvation,[a] even an honourable and powerful Saviour, who is already conceived, and will quickly be born, according to our long expectation, in the family of his servant David:

70 As he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been since the world began;

As he hath spoken by the 70 inspiration of his Spirit, and given frequent intimations to us by the mouth of his holy prophets, which have been from the beginning of time.[b]

71 That we should be saved from our enemies, and from the hand of all that hate us:

It now appears that none of those 71 predictions are forgotten by him, since he is preparing for us such a glorious deliverance that we may thus obtain salvation from the power of the most formidable of our enemies, and may at length be rescued, by his redeeming grace, from the hand of all that hate us:[c]

72 To perform the mercy promised to our fathers

And this gracious messenger, hath God now sent, that he may faithfully perform the mercy 72
which

[a] A horn of salvation.] As a horn is often used, for the most obvious reasons, to express strength and dignity, it being the ornament and defence of the creature that wears it; so it is sometimes used in the Old Testament with a peculiar reference to the Messiah. Compare Psalm cxxxii. 17. lxxxix. 24. 1 Sam. ii. 10. and 2 Sam. xxii. 3.

[b] From the beginning of time.] It cannot certainly be inferred from hence, as some have argued, that there was from the beginning of the world a series of prophets, or that every individual prophet spoke of the Messiah; which can never be proved without doing great violence to the remaining writings of some amongst them. The words of Zacharias only amount to this, that the generality of prophecies, in all ages, refer to this great event. Compare Acts x. 43.

[c] Be rescued by his redeeming grace from the hand of all that hate us.] This seems to have been the mind of the Spirit, as appears by the whole tenor of scripture; but it is impossible to say whether Zacharias fully understood his own words, which, it is certain, the older prophets, in some cases, did not. See 1 Pet. i. 10, 11.

[a] Perform

SECT. vii.

Luke i. 72.

which he [promised] to our fathers,[d] the blessed effects of which extend also to them; and by him shall God appear to be mindful of his holy covenant, which hath passed through so many various dispensations, yet still in the main 73 continues the same: It being indeed no other than the oath which he so solemnly sware unto Abraham[e] our father, [Gen. xxii. 16, 74 17.] According to the tenor of which he will now grant us the favour of an opportunity and a heart to serve him without fear, being delivered out of the hands of our enemies,
75 [And to walk] before him, under a religious sense of his presence, all the days of our life, in the paths of the strictest holiness and righteousness.[f]

Then, turning to his new-born son, he added, 76 And thou, my dear child, shalt have the honour to be justly called The prophet of the Most High God: an illustrious Prophet indeed! for thou art he, who, according to the prediction of Isaiah, (Isa. xl. 3.) shalt go before the face of the Lord, even of our Divine Messiah, to give notice of his approach, and to prepare his ways.
77 It shall be thine honourable and delightful office, not merely to bring the tidings of some temporal deliverance, but to give the knowledge of eternal salvation to his people in directing them how they are to obtain the for-
78 giveness of their sins; Which, how great soever they have been, may now be obtained through the tender compassions of our God[g], whose bowels of mercy have yearned over his backsliding children; by virtue of which com-79 passions the dawning of the celestial day[h] hath visited fathers, and to remember his holy covenant:

73 The oath which he sware to our father Abraham;

74 That he would grant unto us, that we being delivered out of the hands of our enemies, might serve him without fear, 75 In holiness and righteousness before him, all the days of our life.

76 And thou, child, shalt be called the Prophet of the Highest; for thou shalt go before the face of the Lord, to prepare his ways;

77 To give knowledge of salvation unto his people, by the remission of their sins,

78 Through the tender mercies of our God; whereby the day-spring from on high hath visited us,

79 To give light to them

[d] Perform the mercy promised towards our fathers.] Ποιησαι ελεος μετα των πατερων ημων most literally signifies to exercise mercy towards our fathers; and might perhaps intimate that the mercy extended to the pious patriarchs was owing to Christ, who was afterwards to appear. Compare Rom. iii. 25. I cannot recollect any other place where ποιησαι ελεος is to perform a promise.

[e] The oath which he sware unto Abraham.] In vindication of our version from any objection which might arise to a learned reader from the construction of that original μνησθηναι διαθηκης—ορκον ον ωμοσε κ. τ. λ. see Bos, exercit. p. 35. and Elsner in loc.

[f] And to walk in holiness and righteousness.] This, as well as deliverance from enemies, being spoken of as the merciful grant of God, I cannot but conclude it refers to those passages in which God promised to pour out extraordinary degrees of a pious spirit on his people under the reign of the Messiah. Compare Is. xliv. 1—5. Jer. xxxi. 31—34. and Ezek. xxxvi. 25—27.

[g] Tender compassions of our God.] Σπλαγχνα ελεους, his bowels of mercy: A strong Hebraism; which, though I have not literally retained it in my version, I have expressed in the paraphrase; and it is a method I shall often take in like cases. Compare Jer. xxxi. 18—20.

[h] The dawning of the day.] It is true that ανατολη may signify, as some here render it, the rising sun: and I doubt not but here is a reference to such texts as Mal. iv. 2. and Is. lx. 1—3. and, possibly, considering them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, to guide our feet into the way of peace.

SECT. vii.

Luke i. 79.

visited us from on high: And the Sun of Righteousness is shortly arising, to spread sacred knowledge and joy over the regions of ignorance and misery, to enlighten those that sit in darkness, and, as it were, in the very shadow of death[i] itself, or in the most gloomy and dangerous condition, and to direct our wandering feet into the way of peace and felicity."

80 And the child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, and was in the deserts till the day of his shewing unto Israel.

Thus was John the Baptist ushered into the world, and thus were his infant days graced with wonders. And the child grew up and became 80 strong in spirit, giving early tokens both of an heroic genius and a pious disposition, through the work of God's Spirit upon him. Compare Judg. xiii. 24, 25. And, his pious parents dying while he was young, or being peculiarly directed by a divine revelation in this affair, he did not appear in the service of the temple, even when he came to the age in which the priests began their ministrations; but, by divine dispensation and direction, was led to retire into desert places, and to continue there till the day of his being publicly manifested to Israel, and, as it were, inaugurated among them under his prophetic character; for which the austerity and devotion of this solitude was a happy preparation[k].

IMPROVE-

ing the known ambiguity of the Hebrew word ZEMACH, which also signifies a branch, there may be some allusion to Jer. xxiii. 5. and Zech. iii. 8. But it is strange that any should have thought Zacharias, a Jewish priest, hath here referred to the Greek version of those texts. It is well known the word properly signifies that part of the heavens where the light begins to arise and the first shining of that light. Compare Rev. vii. 2. The dawning of the day seemed therefore a very literal version; and, I apprehend, it more beautifully describes the state of things just at this interval than if the sun had been represented as actually risen.

i The shadow of death.] Such phrases as these, do, with peculiar propriety, describe the ignorant and miserable state of the Gentile world, and perhaps this former part of the verse may refer to them; but, as Christ's preaching to the Jews in Galilee (for it was only to Jews he applied, Mat. xv. 24 x. 5, 6. and Rom. xv. 8.) is said, Mat. iv. 14—16. to be an accomplishment of Isa. ix. 1, 2. to which Zacharias here probably refers, I was not willing in the paraphrase to fix it to the Gentiles. The sad character and circumstances of the Jews at this time, as described by Josephus, too well suit the representation here made.

k This solitude was a happy preparation.] It may further be observed that such a retirement also contributed to his acceptance, by raising a character for eminent mortification and sanctity; inured him to the oppositions he was to expect in his work; and naturally prevented any such intimacy with Christ, in their childhood and youth, as might possibly have occasioned some suspicion as to the impartiality of the testimony which John afterwards bore to him. Compare John i. 31.—Elsner hath shewn, as Schmidius had before observed, that the word αναδειξις often signifies the inauguration of a public officer. Observ. Vol. I. p. 183.

SECT. vii.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. With what sacred joy should we join in this hymn of praise!
67 The blessings celebrated in it were not peculiar to the family of Zacharias or to the house of Israel; but we, through the 68 Divine Goodness, have our share in them: the Lord God of Israel hath visited and redeemed us. He hath remembered his covenant with the pious patriarchs in favour of millions who are their seed 72, 73 only as heirs of the faith of Abraham.—To us hath he accomplished 70, 78 the words he had spoken by his holy prophets, and through his tender mercies hath caused the Sun of Righteousness to arise upon 79 us; upon us who were once indeed sitting in darkness and in the shadow of death; and whose ancestors, for many succeeding generations, were lost in ignorance, idolatry and wickedness. Let us bless the Lord, who hath given us light; and make it our daily prayer that it may be the happy means of guiding our feet into the way of peace.—Let us, with pleasure and thankfulness, receive 77 the knowledge of salvation by the remission of our sins, without which we shall never see it but at an unapproachable distance.

Let us repose our chearful confidence in this Almighty Saviour, 69 this Horn of Salvation, which God's own right-hand hath raised up for us: through him let us seek the pardon of our sins and 74 deliverance from all the enemies of our souls. And let a grateful sense of his redeeming love engage us resolutely to walk in the 75 strictest holiness and righteousness, as in the presence of God, and carefully to maintain before him a conscience void of offence all the days of our lives.

80 May we carry this temper along with us into solitude and retirement: may it animate us in the busiest scenes of life; and, in every particular instance, may it determine us in our choice of either and regulate our conduct in both!

SECT. VIII.

Joseph's suspicions concerning Mary removed by the appearance of an angel to him. Mat. I. 18, to the end.

MAT. I. 18.

SECT. viii.

AND now, having given an account of the birth of John, afterwards surnamed the Baptist, we proceed to that of JESUS CHRIST, the great subject of our history, which was attended with the most surprising circumstances, and was thus introduced. His mother Mary being contracted to Joseph, according to the method of the Jewish espousals, before they came to cohabit together as man and wife, she was found to be

Mat. I. 18.

MAT. I. 18.

NOW the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise: When as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost.

be with child; and this pregnancy was (as we have been informed above) by the miraculous operation of the Holy Spirit. Now Joseph her husband, being a righteous man[a], perceiving there was something very extraordinary in the case, and being by no means willing to expose her to public infamy[b] by any severe prosecution, nevertheless was so confounded with the concurrence of the strange circumstances that attended this affair, as that, in order to secure the honour of his own character and to behave with all the tenderness that might be to a person that he loved, he purposed to himself to have divorced her as privately as the law of Moses would have allowed, that is, only in the presence of two witnesses and without assigning any particular cause.

Mat. I. 19.

19 Then Joseph her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her a public example, was minded to put her away privily.

And as he was revolving these things in his mind during the night-season, full of the thoughts of what he was to do, he fell asleep; and, behold, an angel of the Lord[c] appeared to him in a dream, and said unto him, Joseph, thou son of David, (as being lineally descended from him) fear not to take home Mary thy wife, according to the espousals that have passed between you, though there may seem some danger of bringing a reflection on thyself and family; for that which is begotten and formed in her, is of no human original, but was produced by the miraculous and unexampled operation of the Holy Spirit himself. And, in consequence of it, when her time is fulfilled, she

20

20 But while he thought on these things, behold the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream, saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife; for that which is conceived in her, is of the Holy Ghost.

21

21 And she shall bring forth a Son, and thou

a A righteous man.] It is without any just reason that this text is often assigned as an instance where the word δικαιος is used to signify merciful, and some accordingly have here translated it a good-natured man. If we consider the information which Joseph might have received from persons of such an extraordinary character as Zacharias and Elizabeth, (who would certainly think themselves obliged to interpose on such an occasion, and whose story so remarkably carried its own evidence along with it) besides the intimation the prophecy of Isaiah gave, and the satisfaction he undoubtedly had in the virtuous character of Mary herself, we must conclude that he had acted a very severe and unrighteous part, had he proceeded to extremities without serious deliberation; and that putting her away privately would, in these circumstances, have been the hardest measure which justice would have suffered him to take.

b To expose her to public infamy.] It is very possible παραδειγματισαι may here refer to that exemplary punishment which the law inflicted on those who had violated the faith of their espousals before the marriage was completed: Deut. xxii. 23, 24. where it is expressly ordered that a betrothed virgin, if she lay with another man, should be stoned. We may suppose, however, that the infamy of a public divorce, though she had not been stoned, may also be expressed by the same word. But then there was besides, a private kind of divorce, in which no reason was assigned, and the dowry was not forfeited, as in the former case: and by this she would not have been so defamed. See Selden. Ux. Heb. lib. iii. cap. xvi. p. 302, 365, 366. and Lightfoot. Hor. Heb. in loc.

c An angel of the Lord.] Probably Gabriel, who had been sent to Zacharias and Mary. That Joseph's scruple did not proceed, as some of the fathers supposed, merely from veneration, appears from the reason given why he should take Mary, which in that case would have been the only reason against it.

d Call

SECT. viii.

she shall bring forth a Son; and thou, under whose protection and care he shall be placed during his infancy, shalt call his name Jesus,[d] that is, God the Saviour; for he shall prove that glorious and divine person intended by God to save his people, even all that truly believe in him, both from the punishment and the dominion of their sins, by procuring an ample pardon for them, and raising them, after a life of holiness on earth, to a state of complete perfection and happiness.

Mat. I. 21.

thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins.

22 Now all this was done (that is, this miraculous conception, together with all the circumstances proper to attend it, was effected) that this celebrated prophecy might be accomplished[e] which the Lord had so long before spoken by the prophet Isaiah, (Is. vii. 14.) who said to the house of David in the reign of Ahaz, when it seemed in the utmost danger of being destroyed,

22 (Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying,

23 "Behold, and attend to it with a becoming regard, while I assure you that God will accomplish a yet nobler work than what he is ready to perform in your deliverance from Pekah and the son of Tabeal; for an unspotted virgin, descended many ages hence from this royal family now to be rescued, shall, in a miraculous manner, conceive, and bring forth a Son; and they shall call his name Emmanuel;" which, being translated, signifies God with us, that is, God

23 Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a Son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which, being interpreted, is, God with us.)

d Call his name Jesus.] Bishop Pearson seems to have set the etymology of this name in the clearest light, in his large discourse on it, (Pearson on the Creed, p. 69—71.) in which he endeavours to prove that JAH, one of the names of God, enters into the composition of the Hebrew name Jehoshuah, to which Jesus answers. (Compare Heb. iv. 8. where, by the way, I think it should have been rendered if Joshua had given them rest.) This derivation most plainly shews how Christ's being called Jesus was in effect an accomplishment of the prophecy that he should be called Emmanuel.

e That this prophecy might be accomplished.] Few are strangers to the objections which have been made against applying this prophecy to Christ, which drove Grotius and many others unhappily to suppose that it immediately related to the birth of a child of Isaiah's in a natural way, and only in a secondary sense referred to Christ. The controversy is too large for this place. I content myself with observing that a son's being born of one then a virgin, when she was married, was no such miraculous event as to answer such a pompous introduction; and that it seems most reasonable to interpret Isa. vii. 16. as referring to Shearjashub, whom Isaiah was ordered to take in his hand (ver. 3.) for no other imaginable reason but that something remarkable was to be said of him. So that the general sense, in short, is this: "You have affronted God by refusing a sign now; yet his transcendant mercy will make your present forfeited deliverance, (by the death of these confederate kings, which shall happen before [HANAHAR] this child in my hand is grown up to the exercise of reason) a sign of a much nobler deliverance by the Messiah, who shall be born of an immaculate virgin, and condescend to pass through the tender scenes of infancy as other children do." Compare Isa. vii. 10—16. And see Bishop Chandler's excellent remarks on this text, in his Defence of Christianity, page 325—331. Mr. Green's 4th Letter to Mr. Collins; and Usher's Annals, A. M. 3262.

f Till

SECT. viii.

Mat. i. 24.

God dwelling in our nature, on the most gracious and important design; a name in signification nearly equivalent to that of Jesus.

24 Then Joseph being raised from sleep, did as the angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife;

25 And knew her not till she had brought forth her first-born Son; and he called his name Jesus.

Then Joseph, arising from his sleep, with entire satisfaction and humble acknowledgment, did as the angel of the Lord had appointed him; and without any farther delay, took home Mary his wife. Nevertheless, in expectation of this wonderful event, and out of reverence to this sacred birth, he knew her not as a wife, though she dwelt under his roof; but she continued a pure virgin even till she had brought forth her divinely begotten Son, who on account of his distinguished glories, with peculiar propriety might be called the first-born:[f] And, according to the direction of the angel, he called his name Jesus. But several other circumstances, relating to this important event, will afterwards be recounted. 25

IMPROVEMENT.

We see here, in Joseph, an excellent pattern of gentleness and prudence. In an affair which appeared dubious, he chose, as we should always do, rather to err on the favourable, than on the severe extreme. He was careful to avoid any precipitate steps; and, in the moments of deliberation, God interposes to guide and determine his resolves. Ver. 19 20

With what wonder and pleasure did he receive these glad tidings! With what pleasure should we also receive them! For we too are informed of Jesus who came to save his people from their sins. An important and glorious salvation indeed! Hosannah to him that cometh in the name of the Lord! Blessed Jesus! answer thy character in delivering us not only from sin's condemning, but from its reigning power! 21

Let

[f] Till she had brought forth her Son, the first-born.] There seems to be some peculiar emphasis in the expression, τον υιον αυτης τον πρωτοτοκον, which justifies the turn I have given to the words. Compare Luke ii. 7. (where the very same words are used with a remarkable exactness;) Rom. viii. 29. Col. i. 15. and Heb. i. 6. —Though I confess the force of the learned and candid Dr. Daniel Scott's remarks on this note to be such as to convince me that this expression might have been used with regard to the first-born son of any family, and consequently, that no certain argument of Christ's superior dignity and glory can be drawn from it, yet, from the pen of one so deeply impressed with the thought of it as Luke as well as Matthew was, I think it may probably contain some references to it.—On what terms Joseph and Mary afterwards lived is of so little importance to us, that I cannot but wonder it should have been the subject of so much debate. It is sufficient for us to know that she was a virgin, not only at the time of Christ's conception, but at his birth, as the prophecy foretold she should be. The evangelist therefore wisely contented himself with recording this, without affirming any thing farther either way on this delicate subject: I say, either way, for that the manner of expression here used will not certainly prove that Mary had more children afterwards, appears from comparing Gen. xxviii. 15. 1 Sam. xv. 35. Job xxvii. 5. Psal. cx. 1. cxii. 8. and Mat. xii. 20.

[g] In

SECT. viii.

Let our souls bow to Emmanuel, our incarnate God: and, while with holy wonder we survey the various scenes of his humiliation, let us remember too his native dignity and his divine glory. By him God hath fulfilled his ancient promises in the most ample and glorious manner, in the fulness of time sending forth his Son, made of a woman, and sprung like a tender shoot from the decayed stock of David his servant.

Mat. I. 21.

22 While we study the oracles of the Old Testament, let us with pleasure trace the notices of the great Messiah there, even of Jesus, to whom all the prophets give witness. May his name be ever inscribed upon our hearts! In that name may we lift up our banners, and judge those reproaches a glory which we may meet with in his sacred cause [g]!

SECT. IX.

The genealogy of Christ from Abraham, as recorded by Matthew; and from Adam, as recorded by Luke. Mat. I. 1—17. Luke III. 23, to the end.

MAT. I. 1.

SECT. ix.

Mat. I. 1.

BEFORE we proceed to the birth of this Divine Infant, whose conception was so very remarkable, it will be proper to give some account of his descent according to the flesh. And we shall therefore introduce it with a table of the genealogy of Jesus Christ;[a] which is intended, not only as an introduction to his history, but more especially to shew that he was the son of David, and the son of Abraham, as it was often foretold the Messiah should be. (Compare Psal. cxxxii. 11. Isa. xi. 1. Jer. xxiii. 5. xxxiii. 15. and Gen. xii. 3. xxii. 18. xxvi. 4. xxviii. 14.)

Mat. I. 1. THE book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham.

2 Now it is well known that Abraham, that renowned patriarch and friend of God, from whom the whole Jewish nation had the honour to descend, begat Isaac in his old age, that son of Sarah, according to the promise, with whom God's covenant was established; and Isaac begat Jacob

2 Abraham begat Isaac, and Isaac begat Jacob, and Jacob begat Judas and his brethren.

[g] In his sacred cause.] There was, humanly speaking, a probability that Joseph might have brought some suspicion on his character, or reflection on his family by admitting Mary in these circumstances.

[a] The genealogy of Jesus Christ.] I am well aware that the word γενεσις, and the Hebrew TILEDETH which corresponds to it, sometimes signifies the history of a person's life (as well as other things,) and not merely his genealogy; (compare Gen. i. 9. xxxviii. 2. Judith xiii. 18. Jam. i. 23. and iii. 6. Gr.) and that the learned Vitringa understands it so in this place: (See Vitring. Observ. Sacr. lib. i. dissert. i. pag. 39.) Yet, as it is much more frequently used in the latter sense (see Gen. v. 1. x. 1. xi. 10—27. xxv. 12. xxxvi. 1, 9. Numb. i. 20, &c. and Ruth iv. 18. in all which places it is applied to genealogies), I think it best, with the learned Dr. Scott, to render it as above; only giving a little hint of the more extensive sense the word may possibly bear.

[b] Till

SECT. IX.

Jacob, on whom also it was entailed in preference to Esau, though his elder brother; and Jacob begat Judah and his eleven brethren, who became the heads of their respective tribes. Mat. I. 3.

3 And Judas begat Phares and Zara of Thamar, and Phares begat Esrom, and Esrom begat Aram;

And as Judah was the person to whom that extraordinary promise was made, that his descendants should continue a distinct tribe, with some form of government amongst them, till Shiloh, that is, the Messiah, came [b] (Gen. xlix. 10.) and as it was from him that Christ descended, we shall confine ourselves to the line of his posterity. We therefore add that Judah begat Pharez, and at the same time Zarah his twin-brother, of Thamar, who had been his son's wife; and Pharez begat Esrom, and Esrom begat Aram; And Aram begat Aminidab, and Aminidab begat 4 4 And Aram begat Aminidab, and Aminidab begat Naasson, and Naasson begat Salmon;

Naasson, who was prince of the tribe of Judah when the people were numbered and marshalled at mount Sinai (Numb. i. 7. x. 14.) and Naasson begat Salmon.

5 And Salmon begat Booz of Rachab, and Booz begat Obed of Ruth, and Obed begat Jesse;

And, after their settlement in Canaan, Salmon 5 begat Boaz of Rahab [c], who had been a native of that country, but entertained the spies at Jericho, and, afterwards embracing the Jewish religion, had the honour to be thus incorporated with this noble family; and Boaz their son begat Obed of Ruth, the Moabitess [d], who had so resolutely chosen to adhere to the God and people of Israel; and Obed, in a very advanced age, begat Jesse [e]: And Jesse begat, besides several 6

6 And Jesse begat David

elder

b Till Shiloh, that is, the Messiah, came.] This sense of Jacob's prophecy is so beautifully illustrated and so strongly asserted by the learned Dr. Sherlock, bishop of London, in his Discourses on Prophecy, Dissert. 3. page 317, &c. that, if I was writing on this passage of the Old Testament, I should have little to do but to refer my reader to it.

c Of Rahab.] It is not indeed expressly said she was Rahab of Jericho, commonly called the harlot; but I think there can be no room to doubt it, as we know she was contemporary with Salmon, and may conclude that she (this Rahab) was, as all the other women mentioned in this list, a remarkable person. Now there was no other of that name, especially of this age, of whom the compiler of this table could (so far as we can judge) suppose his reader to have any knowledge.

d Boaz begat Obed of Ruth the Moabitess.] The son of a Moabite, by an Israelitish woman, could never be allowed to enter into the congregation of the Lord; that is, at least he was rendered incapable of being a prince in Israel, and perhaps even of being naturalized by circumcision; which may be the meaning of the phrase, Deut. xxiii. 3. (See Mr. Lowman's Hebrew Government, p. 130, & seq.) But it evidently appears, from this celebrated instance, that this precept was not understood as excluding the descendants of an Israelite by a Moabitish woman from any hereditary honours and privileges; otherwise, surely, Salmon, the son of Naasson, prince of Judah, would never have married Rahab, one of the accursed people of Canaan; nor would the kinsman of Boaz have wanted a much better reason than he assigned (Ruth iv. 6.) for refusing to marry Ruth when she became a widow.

e Obed, in a very advanced age, begat Jesse.] That Salmon, Boaz, and Obed, must each of them have been about an hundred years old at the birth of his son here recorded, hath been observed by many and is well accounted for by Dr. Whitby in particular: Annot. on ver. 4.

f Jehoram

SECT. ix.

elder children, David, the celebrated king of Israel, who was favoured with the title of "The man after God's own heart," and had an express promise that the Messiah should descend from him; (compare 2 Sam. vii. 12—16. and Acts ii. 30.) And David the king begat Solomon of Bathsheba, who had before been [the wife] of Uriah the Hittite: and, though that holy man, in this unhappy affair, acted in a way most unworthy his character, yet God, on his deep repentance, graciously forgave him, and entailed the promise on his seed by her.

Mat. I. 6.

David the king, and David the king begat Solomon of her that had been the wife of Urias;

7 And, to go forward therefore with the genealogy according to this line, Solomon begat Rehoboam, from whose government the ten tribes revolted under Jeroboam the son of Nebat; and Rehoboam begat Abijah; and Abijah begat Asa, 8 whose reign was so long and prosperous: And Asa begat the good Jehoshaphat; and Jehoshaphat begat Jehoram, who unhappily dishonoured the holy family by an alliance with Athaliah the daughter of Ahab, 2 Kings viii. 18.

7 And Solomon begat Roboam, and Roboam begat Abia, and Abia begat Asa;

8 And Asa begat Josaphat, and Josaphat begat Joram, and Joram begat Ozias;

And (to omit Ahaziah, the son of that wicked woman, whose impieties and cruelties rendered her so infamous, 2 Chron. xxiv. 7. the ungrateful Joash, her grandson, who murdered Zechariah the prophet, the son of his great benefactor Jehoida, 2 Chron. xxiv. 20, 21, 22. and Amaziah, his son, who succeeded him) Jehoram, at the distance of the fourth generation, may be 9 said to have begat Uzziah the leper[f]. And Uzziah begat Jotham; and Jotham begat that wicked Ahaz, who, instead of being reformed by the chastising hand of God, trespassed yet more and more against him, 2 Chron. xxviii. 22. and Ahaz begat the religious Hezekiah, that 10 distinguished favourite of heaven: And Hezekiah begat Manasseh, so remarkable once for his enormous wickedness and afterwards for his humble repentance; and Manasseh begat that infamous and hardened sinner, Amon; and Amon begat Josiah, that eminently pious prince, whose

9 And Ozias begat Joatham, and Joatham begat Achaz, and Achaz begat Ezekias;

10 And Ezekias begat Manasses, and Manasses begat Amon, and Amon begat Josias;

[f] Jehoram may be said to have begat Uzziah.] It is undeniably evident, from 2 Chron. chap. xxii. and following, that three princes are here omitted. If this table was taken from any public records amongst the Jews, the Evangelist does not seem responsible for the exactness of it: but, if he himself drew it up, I think it will be but modest in us to suppose that it was by some peculiar divine direction that the sin of Jehoram is thus animadverted upon even to the fourth generation; his intermediate descendants being thus blotted out of the records of Christ's family, and overlooked as if they had never been.

SECT. ix.

Mat. I. 11.

whose heart was so early and so tenderly impressed with an apprehension of God's approaching judgments: And Josiah begat Jehoiakim and his royal brethren, Jehoahaz and Zedekiah, who both of them were kings of Judah, the former predecessor to Jehoiakim, and the latter the successor of his son [g]: and about the time of the Babylonish captivity, Jehoiakim begat Jehoiachin, otherwise called Jeconiah [h], who was so long the prisoner of the Chaldeans.

11 And Josias begat Jechonias and his brethren, about the time they were carried away to Babylon.

12 And after they were brought to Babylon, Jechonias begat Salathiel,

12 And, after the Babylonish captivity commenced, this Jeconiah begat Salathiel [i]; and Salathiel begat

g The successor of his son.] On the death of Josiah the people took Jehoahaz, otherwise called Shallum, though a younger brother, and made him king in his father's stead (2 Kings xxiii. 30, 31.) but Pharaoh-Necho, in three months time, deposed him and carried him captive to Egypt, according to the prediction of the prophet concerning him, (Jer. xxii. 10—12. compared with 2 Kings xxiii. 33, 34.) And, having thus deposed him, he made Jehoiakim, the elder brother, who was formerly called Eliakim, king in his room. But this Jehoiakim was soon subdued by the king of Babylon, who, after his conquest, suffered him for a while to continue on the throne; but, on his revolt to the king of Egypt again, he was slain by the Chaldeans (2 Kings xxiv. 1, 2), and thrown out unburied, as Josephus tells us, (Antiq. lib. x. cap. 6. [al. 8.] § 3. Havercamp.) agreeable to what the prophet had foretold, Jer. xxii. 18, 19. xxxvi. 30. After his death his son Jehoiachin, by some called Jehoiakim the Second, was put in his place; and this is he who is elsewhere called Jeconiah, 1 Chron. iii. 16. and Coniah, Jer. xxii. 24. But, after a reign of three months, he was taken captive and imprisoned by Nebuchadnezzar, 2 Kings xxiv. 8—16. (according to the prophecy, Jer. xxii. 24—26) and after thirty-seven years released, 2 Kings xxv. 27. In the mean time, upon his being deposed, his uncle Zedekiah, the third son of Josiah, was raised to the throne; but, after a reign of eleven years, his eyes were put out and he was carried captive to Babylon, Jerusalem and the temple being destroyed, 2 Kings xxiv. 17, 18. xxv. 7. I have traced and stated the matter thus particularly, chiefly because it is a key not only to the paraphrase on this text, but to much of the book of Jeremiah, which, as it is plain that several chapters of it are displaced, cannot be well understood without a very exact knowledge of the preceding history.

h Jehoiakim begat Jeconiah.] I here follow the reading of the Bodleian and other manuscripts, (notice of which is taken in the margin of our Bibles) Ιωσια; δε εγεννησε τον Ιωακειμ· Ιωακειμ δε εγεννησε τον Ιεχονιαν. And this indeed seems absolutely necessary, to keep up the number of fourteen generations; unless we suppose that the Jeconiah here is a different person from that Jeconiah mentioned in the next verse, which seems a very unreasonable supposition, since it is certain that throughout this whole table, each person is mentioned twice, first as the son of the preceding and then as the father of the following.---I am obliged to the candid animadversion of Dr. Scott for the small alteration I have made in my reading of this verse from what was published in the first edition.

i Jeconiah begat Salathiel.] I cannot take upon me certainly to determine whether Salathiel was the son of Jeconiah by descent or adoption. It is certain that Luke (chap. iii. 27.) derives Salathiel from David by Nathan, and not by Solomon, whose line might possibly fail in Jeconiah. And this would be most evidently congruous to Jerem. xxii. 30. where it is said that Jeconiah should be written childless, as we render it: But, as the dispersion of Jeconiah's seed is there threatened, and at least seven sons of his are reckoned up elsewhere, 1 Chron. iii. 17, 18, (supposing Assir, as the word signifies, to be only a kind of surname of Jeconiah the captive) a greater number than one could suppose so unhappy a prince would adopt in his imprisonment, I should rather think the word, translated childless in the fore-cited prophecy, signifies (as the Seventy suppose, who have translated it) εκκηρυχθον, naked, stripped, or rooted up; and the more so, because it seems harsh to suppose εγεννησε should signify only be adopted: Yet I own it is something strange that Salathiel, who on this supposition was a descendant of Solomon, should be adopted by Neri, a descendant of Nathan, a younger and much inferior begat Zerubbabel[k], that illustrious instrument of restoring and settling the Jewish commonwealth on their return from the captivity:

SECT. ix.

Mat. I. 13. And Zerubbabel begat Abiud[l]; and Abiud begat
14 Eliakim; and Eliakim begat Azor: And Azor begat Zadok; and Zadok begat Achim; and 15 Achim begat Eliud: And Eliud begat Eleazar; and Eleazar begat Matthan; and Matthan begat
16 Jacob: And this Jacob begat Joseph, who was the husband of Mary, that blessed virgin, of whom was born, by the immediate power of God, Jesus, who is commonly called Christ, as he was indeed God's Messiah, or anointed One; the great Sovereign and Prophet and High Priest of his Church, completely furnished for the discharge of all those offices by a most plentiful effusion of the Spirit which was given, not by measure, to him.

17 This is the genealogy of his reputed father so that we see, as it here stands, that all the generations, in the first interval or class of this illustrious family, from Abraham to David, when we may look upon it as in its rising state, are fourteen

Salathiel, and Salathiel begat Zorobabel;

13 And Zorobabel begat Abiud, and Abiud begat Eliakim, and Eliakim begat Azor;

14 And Azor begat Sadoc, and Sadoc begat Achim, and Achim begat Eliud;

15 And Eliud begat Eleazer, and Eleazer begat Matthan, and Matthan begat Jacob;

16 And Jacob begat Joseph the husband of Mary, of whom was born Jesus, who is called Christ.

17 So all the generations from Abraham to David are fourteen generations; and from David until the carrying away into Babylon are fourteen generations; inferior branch of David's family; or that it should be said by Jeremiah that none of Jeconiah's seed should rule any more in Judah, if Zerubbabel, their first ruler after the captivity, was at farthest but his great-grandson. On the whole, I submit so difficult a question to the determination of abler judges, and content myself with thus hinting at what I found most material on either side. If the two genealogies do not speak of different persons that were named alike, I should conjecture that Salathiel, the son of Neri, might marry the daughter of Jeconiah, and might possibly, on that account, be also adopted by him. The attentive reader will see that this hypothesis at least softens the difficulties inseparable from either of the former.

[k] Salathiel begat Zerubbabel.] This illustrious person, Zerubbabel, is so often said to have been the son of Salathiel, or Shealtiel, which is so nearly the same, (and accordingly the Syriac here reads Schaltiel) see Ezra iii. 2, 8. v. 2. Hag. i. 1, 12, 14. ii. 23. that I incline more and more to think, with Brennius, that the Zerubbabel mentioned, 1 Chron. iii. 17—19, as the son of Pedaiah the brother of Salathiel, was a different person from this. As the name Zerubbabel signifies a stranger in Babylon, it is no wonder that it should be given to several children born in the captivity.---If this solution be not allowed, I see not how the known difficulty here can be removed unless by acknowledging that the books of Chronicles (the author of which is unknown) may have suffered by the injuries of time, so that the present reading of some passages may be incorrect; which is very consistent with owning the plenary inspiration of those books. By allowing this we should fairly get rid of two parts in three of the seeming contradictions in the writings of the Old Testament, (I speak on an accurate review of them,) and should be free from the sad necessity of such evasive criticisms, as are more likely to pain a candid heart than to satisfy an attentive and penetrating mind. The omission of a word or two in a genealogical table, and sometimes the mistake of a letter or two in transcribing, especially with regard to names or numbers, occasions many inextricable difficulties where, in the original reading, all might be perfectly clear.

[l] Zerubbabel begat Abiud.] Rhesa, mentioned by Luke, chap. iii. ver. 27. was probably another son of Zerubbabel. Abiud might possibly be the same with Meshullam, whose name is mentioned in 1 Chron. iii. 12. or perhaps he and his descendants falling into obscurity, their names might be no where preserved but in this genealogy of Joseph's family, which the evangelist transcribed as he found it.

[m] They

rations; and from the carrying away into Babylon unto Christ are fourteen generations.

fourteen generations: and after these, in the next class, from David to the Babylonish captivity, when it was seated on the throne, and may be reckoned as in its flourishing state, we may compute them as amounting to the same number; and, to consider them as they are represented here, they may again be counted fourteen generations[m]: and, in like manner, in the last class, from the Babylonish captivity to Christ, when by degrees it sunk into obscurity, and manifestly was in its declining state, then also we may reckon them as fourteen generations.

SECT. IX.

Mat. I. 17.

LUKE III. 23.

And Jesus himself began to be about thirty years of age, being (as was supposed) the son of Joseph, which was the son of Heli,

24 Which

LUKE III. 23.

Luke III. 23.

But, though we have thus given the legal genealogy of Christ from Abraham, as derived from Joseph his reputed father, we shall yet add another that ascends to Adam; and this is the account which Luke hath given us in his gospel; where, after he had spoken of the baptism of Jesus when he was beginning [his public ministry,] and was about thirty years of age, he traces his descent in the line of Mary[n], whose father Heli adopting Joseph, whom he made his son-in-law, the descent of Joseph may on that account be reckoned from him, and so is in effect the same with that of Mary. Christ therefore, being born of Mary after her espousals, may be considered, upon this account, to be (as at that time he commonly was reckoned) the son of Joseph, who, by adoption, or rather by the marriage of his daughter, was the son of Heli[o], The son of Mat-

m They may be counted fourteen generations.] I express it with this latitude, as it is manifest that three persons are omitted in the second class between Jehoram and Uzziah, ver. 8. and it is only by counting them as here represented that they make fourteen generations. And if, according to the reading of the Bodleian, Jehoiakim be introduced in ver. 11, and considered as the last of this class, (which seems the better reading, as Jeconiah does not appear to have had any brethren,) Jeconiah will thus be reserved for the third class, which otherwise would want one person to complete the number.

n In the line of Mary.] I am aware that Mr. Le Clerc and many other learned men have thought that Joseph was begotten by Heli, and adopted by Jacob: but I much rather conclude that he was adopted by Heli, or rather taken by him for his son upon the marriage of his daughter, and that Heli was the father of Mary; because an ancient Jewish Rabbi expressly calls her the daughter of Heli: and chiefly, because else we have indeed no true genealogy of Christ at all, but only two different views of the line of Joseph his reputed father; which would by no means prove that Christ, who was only by adoption his son, was of the seed of Abraham and of the house of David. Yet the apostle speaks of it as evident that Christ was descended from Judah, Heb. vii. 14. in which, if this gospel were (as antiquity assures us) written by the direction of Paul, perhaps he may refer to this very table before us. (See Mr. Whiston's Harmony of the four Evangelists, Prop. xvi. p. 175, & seq.)

o Joseph, who by adoption, or rather by the marriage of his daughter, was the son of

SECT. ix.

Luke III. 24.

Matthat, the son of Levi, the son of Melchi, the son of Jannah, the son of Joseph. The son of Mattathias, the son of Amos, the son of Nahum, the son of Eli, the son of Naggia, The son of 25 Maath, the son of Mattathias, the son of Shemei, 26 the son of Joseph, the son of Judah, The son 27 of Johannah, the son of Rhesa, the son of Zerubbabel, the son of Salathiel, the son of Neri,[p] The 28 son of Melchi, the son of Addi, the son of Cosam, the son of Elmodam, the son of Er, The son 29 of Joses, the son of Eliezer, the son of Jorim, the son of Matthat, the son of Levi, The son of 30 Simeon, the son of Judah, the son of Joseph, the son of Jonan, the son of Eliakim, The son of 31 Meleah, the son of Mainan, the son of Mattathias, the son of Nathan, the son of that celebrated king of Israel, David, the man after God's own heart, The son of Jesse, the son of Obed, the 32 son of Boaz, the son of Salmon, the son of Naasson, The son of Aminadab, the son of Aram, 33 the son of Esrom, the son of Pharez, the son of 34 Judah, The son of Jacob, the son of Isaac, who was, according to the promise, the son of that honourable patriarch Abraham, the son of 35 Terah, the son of Nahor, The son of Serug, the son of Ragau, or Reu, the son of Peleg, the 36 son of Heber, the son of Salah, The son of Cainan,[q] the son of Arphaxad, the son of Shem, the

24 Which was the son of Matthat, which was the son of Levi, which was the son of Melchi, which was the son of Janna, which was the son of Joseph, 25 Which was the son of Mattathias, which was the son of Amos, which was the son of Naum, which was the son of Esli, which was the son of Nagge, 26 Which was the son of Maath, which was the son of Mattathias, which was the son of Semei, which was the son of Joseph, which was the son of Juda, 27 Which was the son of Joanna, which was the son of Rhesa, which was the son of Zorobabel, which was the son of Salathiel which was the son of Neri, 28 Which was the son of Melchi, which was the son of Addi, which was the son of Cosam, which was the son of Elmodam, which was the son of Er, 29 Which was the son of Jose, which was the son of Eliezer, which was the son of Jorim, which was the son of Matthat, which was the son of Levi, 30 Which was the son of Simeon, which was the son of Juda, which the son of Joseph, which was the son of Jonan, which was the son of Eliakim, 31 Which was the son of Melea, which was the son of Menan, which was the son of Mattatha, which was the son of Nathan, which was the son of David, 32 Which was the son of Jesse, which was the son of Obed, which was the son of Boaz, which was the son of Salmon, which was the son of Naasson, 33 Which was the son of Aminadab, which was the son of Aram, which was the son of Esrom, which was the son of Phares, which was the son of Juda, 34 Which was the son of Jacob, which was the son of Isaac, which was the son of Abraham, which was the son of Thara, which was the son of Nachor, 35 Which was the son of Saruch, which was the son of Ragau, which was the son of Phalec, which was the son of Heber, which was the son of Sala, 36 which was the son of Cainan, which was the son of Arphaxad, which was the son of of Heli.] It is necessary to take the words in this latitude, because the true father of Joseph appears to have been Jacob or James, the son of Matthan. See Matt. i. 15, 16.

[p] The son of Neri.] See the latter part of note [i], page 58.

[q] The son of Cainan.] There is no mention made of this Cainan in either of the genealogies that Moses gives us, Gen. x. 24; and xi. 12; but Salah is there said to be the son of Arphaxad. Cainan must therefore have been introduced here from the translation of the Seventy interpreters, who have inserted him in both these places in the same order as we find him here; and, as this translation was then commonly used and was more generally understood than the Hebrew, it is probable that some transcriber of this gospel added Cainan from that version, unless we suppose that Luke himself might choose, in writing this genealogy, to follow the Septuagint, as he appears to do in several other passages that he has quoted from the Old Testament. Nor is it, after all, a point of any consequence, as the design of the Evangelist was only to present us with the genealogy of Christ in its ascent to Adam, which is equally of Sem, which was the son of Noe, which was the son of Lamech, 37 Which was the son of Mathusala, which was the son of Enoch, which was the son of Jared, which was the son of Maleleel, which was the son of Cainan, 38 Which was the son of Enos, which was the son of Seth, which was the son of Adam, which was the son of God.

the son of Noah, with whom he was preserved in the ark, and it is well known that Noah was the son of Lamech. The son of Methusaleh, the son of Enoch, who was translated without dying, and was the son of Jared, the son of Mahalaleel, the son of Cainan. The son of Enos, the son of Seth, the son of Adam, who, being descended from no human parents, but formed by the immediate power of a Divine Creating Hand, might, with peculiar propriety, be called [the son] of God, in his original state, the heir of immortality and glory.

SECT. ix.

Luke iii. 37.

38

IMPROVEMENT.

When we survey any such series of generations, it is obvious to reflect how like the leaves of a tree, one passeth away and another cometh; yet the earth still abideth, and with it the goodness of the Lord, which runs on, from generation to generation, the common hope of parents and children.

Mat. i. 1. & seq.

Of those who formerly lived upon earth, and perhaps made the most conspicuous figure among the children of men, how many have there been whose names have perished with them! and how many of whom nothing but their names are remaining! Thus are we passing away, and thus shall we be shortly forgotten. Happy if, while we are forgotten of men, we are remembered by God, and our names are found written in the book of life! There they will make a much brighter appearance than in the records of fame, or than they would do even in such a catalogue of those who were related to Christ according to the flesh; whose memory is here preserved, when that of many, who were once the wonder and terror of the mighty in the land of the living, is lost in perpetual oblivion.

Mat. i. 18. & seq. Luke iii. 24. & seq.

We observe, among these ancestors of Christ, some that were Heathens, and others that, on different accounts, were of infamous characters; and perhaps it might be the design of Providence that we should learn from it, or at least should, on reading it, take occasion to reflect that persons of all nations, and even the chief of equally clear, whether we reckon Salah as the immediate descendant of Arphaxad, or whether we consider him as his grandson by Cainan.—And much less reason is there to object to the apparent difference there is between the names that Luke has given us and those we meet with of the same persons in the Old Testament: This is no more than what is usual when the same names are mentioned in a different language; nor will the Greek admit them to be so expressed as to agree exactly with the Hebrew. But to avoid confusion, I have rather chosen, both in the former genealogy and this, to give the names that are delivered in the Old Testament as they are written in the Hebrew, to which our language will admit us to come nearer than the Greek could do, and which must be allowed to be the more exact and truer method of pronouncing them. Compare Gen. v. 3, & seq. xi. 10—27. and 1 Chron. i. 1—27.

Mat. i. 3, 5, 6.

SECT. IX.

Mat. i. 3, 5, 6. Luke iii. ult.

of sinners amongst them, are encouraged to trust in him as their Saviour. To him therefore let us look even from the ends of the earth, yea from the depths of guilt and distress, and the consequence will be happy beyond all expression or conception.

Adam, though originally the son of God, lost that inheritance of life and glory, which, in consequence of such a relation, he might reasonably have expected; but the second Adam repairs the loss which we had sustained by the transgression of the first. We are now predestinated to the adoption of children by Jesus Christ, and raised by him to the hope of a fairer inheritance than the terrestrial Paradise. Let it be our daily labour to secure this invaluable blessing; that so, as we have borne the image of the earthly Adam, we may in due time bear the image of the heavenly, and at length attain to the perfect manifestation of the sons of God.

SECT. X.

Christ is born at Bethlehem, and his birth revealed by an angel to some shepherds in the neighbourhood of that town; and he is circumcised on the eighth day. Luke II. 1—21.

SECT. X.

Luke II. 1.

Luke II. 1.

NOW it came to pass in those days, or about the time in which John the Baptist was born and Christ conceived in the manner related above, that the Roman Emperor, Augustus Cæsar, published an edict, or decree, that all the land[a] of Judea, which was then united under one prince and governed by Herod, should be publicly enrolled; or that the number of its inhabitants, both male and female, with their families and estates, should be registered. This he ordered, as a token of his particular displeasure against Herod their king, and as an intimation that he intended quickly to lay them under a tax.

2 And here we may observe by the way, that this was the first enrolment of the Jews, and was committed to the care of Cyrenius, or, as the Latins write it, Quirinius, a Roman senator; who, being [afterwards] governor of Syria,[b] made a

Luke II. 1.

AND it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Cæsar Augustus, that all the world should be taxed.

2 (And this taxing was first made when Cyrenius was governor of Syria.

[a] All the land.] Though οικουμενη doth undoubtedly sometimes signify the whole world (Acts xvii. 31. Rom. x. 18. and Heb. i. 6,) and sometimes probably the Roman empire (as more especially in Rev. iii. 10. and xvi. 14.) see Elsner, in loc. yet I think the learned and ingenious Dr. Lardner hath fully proved that it is to be taken in a more limited sense both here and Acts xi. 28. as it plainly is, Luke xxi. 26. (See Lardn. Credib. of Gosp. Hist. Part I. Vol. I. page 542; and Vol. II. p. 574, &c. seq.) It is with peculiar propriety called the whole land, as it was soon after dismembered; and Nazareth, where Christ's parents dwelt, was in a different division from Bethlehem, as Dr. Lardner well observes.—That απογραφη signifies a public enrollment, Elsner, on this text, hath evidently shewn.

[b] And this was the first enrolment of Cyrenius,

a second enrolment or taxation, which was so famous in the Jewish history for the tumults that attended it. And all the inhabitants of Judea were obliged to obey the edict, and went each of them to his own native city, or the place where his paternal inheritance lay [c], to be enrolled: a circumstance wisely ordered by Providence to verify the truth of ancient prophecies and introduce the promised Messiah; as, by their coming to be thus registered among the subjects of the Roman empire, the subjection of the Jews to the Romans very remarkably appeared.

3 And all went to be taxed, every one into his own city.

And thus the parents of Christ were providentially brought to Bethlehem, the place where the

4 And Joseph also went up from Galilee, out

Cyrenius, afterwards governor of Syria. Αὕτη ἀπογραφὴ πρώτη ἐγένετο ἡγεμονεύοντος τῆς Συρίας Κυρηνίου.] The worthy person whom I mentioned above, Dr. Lardner, in his unequalled criticisms on this text, (Part I. Vol. II. page 718. & seq.) has given the reasons at large which determined me to prefer that literal version I have inserted. Our own is plainly mistaken, and is indeed hardly intelligible. The words might perhaps have been rendered, This enrolment was before Cyrenius was governor of Syria; which, to be sure is a true assertion, and may perhaps, after all, be vindicated; but I think the original expresses something more. Others have chosen to render it, And the taxation that was consequent upon this enrolment was first executed when Cyrenius was governor of Syria.—If none of those solutions proposed could be allowed (as I think, either of these justly may), it would be a thousand times more reasonable to suppose a word omitted by some early transcriber, (perhaps η διπλῆ, after ἐγένετο,) than to think that so accurate a writer as Luke, were he to be considered only as a common historian, should make such a gross mistake as to confound this enrolment, in the reign of Herod, with that taxation which happened several years after, on the banishment of his son Archelaus. A fact of this kind was too obvious, and, I may add, too mortifying to the whole Jewish nation to be so soon forgot; not to say that so strict a Pharisee as St. Paul, (who probably reviewed this gospel,) educated by Gamaliel, would be sure to remember it with some peculiar emotion. —Of the tumults that happened in the days of the taxing, which was afterwards made by Cyrenius, (when, on the banishment of Archelaus, Judea was reduced to the form of a province, and annexed to Syria under the government of Cyrenius,) in opposition to which a disturbance was raised by Judas of Galilee, see Joseph. Antiq. Jud. lib. xvii. in fin. lib. xviii. cap. 1. § 1. Bel. Jud. lib. ii. cap. 8. § 1. and Acts v. 37.

[c] Where his paternal inheritance lay.] Some have conjectured that Joseph might have a small estate here: but that is, at best, very uncertain; at least it is improbable that Jesus inherited it (Mat. viii. 20,) or that his mother enjoyed it during her widowhood. See John xix. 26, 27. —It is true, indeed, that had the original settlement of the divine law been duly regarded, estates in the land of promise would have been unalienable; and every male descended from Jacob, and not of the tribe of Levi, must have been born heir to a certain portion of land allotted to some of his ancestors when the division was first made; on which, however it might have been mortgaged, he must, if his father were dead, have entered at the next jubilee, if he lived to see it. But things were now fallen into confusion. The small remains of the ten tribes, who were brought back at all, were, after their return from the captivity, incorporated together in the neighbourhood of Judea, while strangers were in possession of large tracts of land once theirs; and the whole country of Samaria was in the hands of those whom the Jews looked upon as the vilest kind of Gentiles, that is, the Samaritans.—All that appears as to the circumstances now before us is, that every one was obliged to be enrolled at the place to which his family belonged; and the obedience of the Jews to this decree is a plain proof that they were now dependant on the Romans, and the sceptre was departing from Judah. See Lightfoot's Harmony on Luke ii. 1. and compare Gen. xlix. 10. and Numb. xxiv. 24.

SECT. X.

Luke II. 4.

the Messiah was to be born, without leaving any room to suspect them of artifice and design: for, being thus obliged by the emperor's authority, Joseph went up from Galilee, even out of the city of Nazareth, where he then dwelt, into the land of Judea, most properly so called, to the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, which was the town where his ancestors had formerly been settled: (for, notwithstanding Joseph was reduced so low as to follow the trade of a carpenter, yet he was originally of the family and royal household of David:)[d] It was to Bethlehem therefore 5 that he went up to be enrolled; and thither he took with him, by divine direction[e], Mary his espoused wife, who was now big with child, and very near the time of her delivery.

But the town was so crowded on this occasion, that they were obliged to lodge in the stable of a public house; though, in her present circumstances, it was so very inconvenient for her.
6 And so it was that, while they were there, either waiting for the proper officer who was to register the people, or staying till their own turn came, the days of her pregnancy were fulfilled, and the 7 time came that she should be delivered. And she brought forth her Son, even him that justly bears the character of the First Born[f]; that glorious and excellent Person, who was the First-born of every creature, and the Heir of all things. And she no sooner was delivered, but immediately she swathed him; being so miraculously strengthened by God, in this hour of extremity, as to be able to perform that office herself[g]; and, having no out of the city of Nazareth, into Judea, unto the city of David, which is called Bethlehem, (because he was of the house and lineage of David,)

5 To be taxed with Mary, his espoused wife, being great with child.

6 And so it was, that while they were there, the days were accomplished that she should be delivered:

7 And she brought forth her first-born Son, and wrapped him in swaddling-clothes, and d Of the family and royal household of David.] I have here rendered οἴκου family, and παλατια household; because I apprehend, with Grotius, that it may refer to the divisions of the tribes into families and households. Compare Numb. i. 18. & seq. and Josh. vii. 17, 18. In this sense of the words, after having told us that Joseph was of the house of David, it would have been very unnecessary to add he was also of his family; but it was not at all improper to say he was of his family and household too: for all the descendants of Eliab and his other brethren, if there were any such remaining, would have been of David's family, yet not of his household. If the word lineage only signified descendants, it would be exceeding proper to give Luke's sense; but, as I apprehend it includes collateral branches, I thought fit to change it.

e By divine direction.] One could hardly imagine he would otherwise have exposed her to the hazards of such a journey at so unseasonable a time; for, whatever the Emperor's commands were, such a case as Mary's must, to be sure, have been admitted as an excuse for her not complying with it.

f The First-born.] See before the paraphrase and note f on Mat. i. 25. Sect. 8.

g Being so miraculously strengthened, &c.] I had, in the first edition, here and in many other places, inserted the word probably in the paraphrase: but, on the whole, considering that in all such performances the author, and not the paraphrast, is supposed to speak, I judge it more proper here to remind my reader (as I have elsewhere intimated) that he is to take it for granted I do not pretend in this instance, and a great many others, to and laid him in a manger, because there was no room for them in the inn.

SECT. X.

Luke II. 7.

no other conveniency near, she laid him in a manger which belonged to one of the stalls there[h]; because (as we have just now said) there was no room for them in any of the chambers belonging to the inn.

8 And there were in the same country shepherds abiding in the field, keeping watch over their flock by night:

8 And there were some shepherds in that country who were then lying out in the field and watching, in their turns, over their flocks by night[i]; which it was necessary they should do, to guard against the wolves and other beasts of prey which were common there.

9 And lo, the angel of the Lord came upon them, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them; and they were sore afraid.

9 And, behold, on a sudden, an angel of the Lord came upon them, and appeared in a visible form, standing in the air over their heads; and their eyes were immediately directed to it by the glory of the Lord, which shone round about them with such incomparable lustre, as had in former ages been the usual symbol of the Divine Presence: And they were exceedingly terrified at so uncommon and so awful an appearance.

10 And the angel said unto them, Fear not; for behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people:

10 And, while they stood in silent amazement, the angel said unto them, in the mildest and most condescending manner, Be not affrighted, O ye shepherds! for the design of my appearance to you hath nothing terrible in it; but, on the contrary, behold, and take the most thankful notice of it, I bring you good news, and greet you with the tidings of great and universal joy, which shall be now occasioned, not only to you, but to all people in the whole Jewish nation, yea, and to all the human race.

11 For unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord.

11 For this very day, this welcome blessed day, there is born unto you,[k] and unto all nations, a Glorious Saviour, to speak confidently; but that the different character, which distinguishes the divine text from my fallible, though upright attempts to illustrate it, must guide him in determining what is certain, and what only probable, and perhaps, after all, very doubtful.

h A manger which belonged to one of the stalls there.] Though Heinsius has learnedly proved that φατνη sometimes signifies a stall, yet it is certain that more frequently it signifies a manger; and the manger was the most proper part of the stall in which the Infant could be laid. If (as tradition says) this stable was cut out of a rock, the coldness of it must, at least by night, have greatly added to its other inconveniences.

i Watching in their turns over their flock by night.] The original φυλασσοντες φυλακας της νυκτος, might more literally be rendered, keeping the watches of the night; which intimates their taking it by turns to watch, according to the usual divisions of the night. And as it is not probable that they exposed their flocks to the coldness of winter-nights in that climate where, as Dr. Shaw has shewn, they were so very unwholesome (see Shaw's Travels, p. 379), it may be strongly argued, from this circumstance, that those who have fixed upon December for the birth of Christ have been mistaken in the time of it.

k There is born unto you.] That one of the Bodleian manuscripts reads it, ημιν to us, is of very little weight, considering the consent of copies on the other side; and affords but a very slender support to Mr. Fleming's conjecture, that this was a glorified human spirit, perhaps that of Adam, all whose happy descendants might, he thinks, make up the chorus. (Fleming's Christology, vol. I. p. 80.) I should rather imagine, with Grotius, that this angel was Gabriel.

l Glory

SECT. X.

Saviour, who is even Christ the Lord, that Illustrious sovereign, whom you have so long been taught to expect, by the title and under the character of the MESSIAH: He is even now born in the neighbouring city of David his royal father; and I call you to offer him your earliest homage. Go, therefore, into the town without any farther delay, and inquire after him: for

Luke II. 11.

12 [this shall be] a sign unto you, by which you will easily know him: you will find him an infant in swaddling bands, lying in a manger belonging to one of the inns.

12 And this shall be a sign unto you; ye shall find the Babe wrapped in swaddling-clothes, lying in a manger.

13 And immediately, to confirm them in the belief of so strange a truth as that this illustrious Prince should be born in such mean circumstances as he had now described, there was seen with the angel that spake to them a great multitude of the celestial army praising God, and saying, in the most cheerful and harmonious accents,

13 And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host, praising God, and saying,

14 Glory be to God in the highest heavens, and let all the angelic legions resound his praises in the most exalted strains: for with the Redeemer's birth peace and all kinds of happiness come down to dwell on earth; yea, the overflowings of divine benevolence and favour are now exercised towards sinful men,[1] who, through this Saviour, become 14 Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good-will towards men.

[1] Glory to God in the highest; and peace on earth; benevolence and favour towards men.] I am well aware of the ambiguity of these words. I do not mean as to the reading: For though the Alexandrian, and other manuscripts, instead of ευδοκια, give it ευδοκιας, as if the angels were proclaiming peace to men of favour and good-will, or unto those who were the objects of the divine benevolence and complacency; (which is a reading that has been approved by many learned men, and in particular by Beza;) yet I think the authority of that is overborne by the more general consent of the most ancient manuscripts, as well as by the versions of the oldest date, and the quotations of the fathers in the most early ages, which almost universally oppose it. (See Mill and Grotius on the place.) But, taking the original as it stands, Δοξα εν υψιστοις Θεω, και επι γης ειρηνη, εν ανθρωποις ευδοκια, we must allow it to be capable of different senses.—Some chuse to render it Glory to God in the highest, (that is, in heaven,) and on earth; peace, yea favour, towards men: But then, I think, instead of εν υψιστοις, it rather would have been εν ουρανω; for so it is always usual to express, in heaven and upon earth. (Compare Mat. vi. 10. Luke xi. 2. 1 Cor. viii. 5. Eph. i. 10. iii. 15. Col. i. 16. 20. Rev. v. 3, 13.)—Others have given as the sense of it, that the good-will, or favour, which is now shewn to men, is the glory of God in the highest, and is the peace or happiness of those that dwell on earth: And this indeed is an important sense, and the original well enough will bear it. But thus to change the doxology into a kind of proverb or aphorism, seems to destroy much of its beauty.—I rather think that they are all to be considered as the words of a rejoicing acclamation, and that they strongly represent the piety and benevolence of these heavenly spirits, and their affectionate good wishes for the prosperity of the Messiah's kingdom. (Compare Mat. xxi. 9. Mark xi. 10. and especially Luke xix. 38.) The new translation that has been lately published, where it is rendered, to men on earth, felicity in the divine favour, does indeed express the sense of the two latter clauses, but by no means with equal ardour. The shouts of a multitude are generally broken into short sentences, and are commonly elliptic; which is the only cause of the ambiguity here. As this beauty could not be preserved in a paraphrase, I have repeated the words, after they had been explained.

become the objects of his complacential delight: Echo it back, O ye mortal abodes, to ours! "Glory to God in the highest! on earth "peace! benevolence and favour unto men!" SECT. X. Luke II. 14.

15 And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

And it came to pass that, as soon as the angels departed from them, and returned back into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Come let us go immediately to Bethlehem, and see this great thing which is done, even this wonderful and important event which the Lord hath so graciously made known unto us. And, accordingly, with one consent, they came in haste, before the night was over, leaving their flocks to the care of Providence; and, entering into the town, they followed the direction which the angel gave them, and quickly found Mary and Joseph, and the new-born Infant with them, just in the circumstance which had been described, lying in a manger. And, when they had viewed this scene of wonders and had attentively considered [it,] they humbly paid their dutiful respects unto their new-born Saviour; and having acquainted his parents with the marvellous vision they had seen, they immediately published abroad a full account of this remarkable occurrence, and gave a particular relation of the whole of that which had been told them, in so wonderful a way, concerning this Child. And, upon hearing this strange account there was a general surprise; and, though they were prevented, by the meanness of his birth, from shewing a due regard to one that made no better an appearance, yet all that heard [it] were astonished at those things which were related to them by the shepherds on this subject. But Mary in particular treasured up all these things, and carefully retained them in her memory; and though she did not blaze them abroad among the populace, or make any vain boast of such extraordinary favours and testimonies, yet she attentively regarded all these wonderful events, entering into the meaning [of them] in the secret reflections of her heart[m], and improving them all, as a further confirmation of what had been before revealed to her, and a foundation for the early acting of her faith and reverence towards her Divine Son.

15 And it came to pass, as the angels were gone away from them into heaven, the shepherds said one to another, Let us now go even unto Bethlehem, and see this thing which is come to pass, which the Lord hath made known unto us.

16 And they came with haste, and found Mary and Joseph, and the Babe lying in a manger.

17 And when they had seen it, they made known abroad the saying which was told them concerning this Child.

18 And all they that heard it wondered at those things which were told them by the shepherds.

19 But Mary kept all these things, and pondered them in her heart.

And

Entering into the meaning, &c.] I apprehend Elsner has abundantly vindicated this sense of the word συμβαλλοντα, in his note on this place.

SECT. X.

And the shepherds returned glorifying and praising God for all the things which they had heard and seen at Bethlehem,[n] so perfectly agreeable in every circumstance to the account they had received but just before, as it was told unto them by the angel; admiring the mercy of God in sending such a Saviour and his condescension in favouring them with such early discoveries of him.

Luke II. 20.

20 And the shepherds returned glorifying and praising God for all the things that they had heard and seen, as it was told unto them.

21 And when eight days from the birth of this Holy Infant were fulfilled, (that is, when the eighth day was come,) his pious parents failed not, according to the Mosaic law, under which they were placed, to circumcise the Child, that so, though he had not any corruptions of nature to mortify, which was in part represented by that institution, he might nevertheless, in a regular manner be initiated into the Jewish Church and thereby be engaged to the duties and intitled to the privileges of a son of Abraham, according to that covenant. And his name was called JESUS[o] that is, the Divine Saviour; a name by which the angel had called him before he was conceived in the womb of his virgin mother.

21 And when eight days were accomplished for the circumcising of the Child, his name was called JESUS, which was so named of the angel before he was conceived in the womb.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. 6, 7 With what humble amazement should we contemplate this first appearance of our Incarnate Redeemer! Surely all the angels of heaven might justly have admired his condescension in assuming such a nature as ours and wearing a mortal frame, though it had been attended with all the ornaments and splendors earth could have given it. Though, at his entrance into our low world, he had been born of an imperial family, placed under a canopy of velvet and gold, or laid to repose on pillows of down, all this had been deep abasement in the eyes of those who had beheld the glories of his celestial throne and the honours paid him by cherubims and seraphims: But, behold, the Son of God, and the Heir of all things, is not merely in the abodes of men, but in a place destined for beasts, and, while, wrapped in swaddling-clothes, is laid in a manger!

Yet,

[n] Which they had heard and seen at Bethlehem.] Joseph and Mary would, no doubt, upon such an occasion, give them an account of those particulars, which the sacred historians have recounted above, relating to the conception of this Divine Infant; and this interview must greatly confirm and comfort the minds of all concerned.

[o] His name was called Jesus.] Grotius thinks there might be an assembly of most of the remainders of David's family on this occasion; but surely, had there been many of them inhabitants of Bethlehem, their kinswoman would not, in such circumstances, have been reduced to the necessity of lodging in a stable.

Yet, O blessed Jesus, how much more venerable was that stable and manger, when graced with thy sacred presence, than the most magnificent palace, or most shining throne of earthly princes! How ill doth it become thy disciples to seek for themselves great things in this life, or to be proud of its pomp and grandeur! Give us, O God, the simplicity of children and make us willing to be conformed to the birth of thy Son as well as to his death! SECT. X. Luke II. 21.

Yet, mean as his birth might appear, his Heavenly Father did not leave him without witness. We see him, in this wonderful account that the Evangelist hath given us, surrounded with a brighter lustre than a court or a crown could have afforded. Angelic legions are employed as heralds to proclaim the new-born King. And to whom are they sent? To humble pious shepherds, diligently employed in the duties of their proper calling and watching by night for the security of their flocks. Who would not gladly have shared in their poverty and fatigue, to have heard with them these good tidings of great joy? 9 11 8 10

Let us observe with what delight these courtiers of heaven undertook the happy embassy to these lowly mortals. Let us with pleasure attend to the anthem of these benevolent spirits. Far from envying the favour that was done us, they ascribe glory to God for it, and take their part in the joy they give. Let this love of the whole heavenly host to us awaken our love to them and our longing for that blessed world where we and they shall surround our dearest Redeemer, not in such a form of abasement as that in which he here appeared, but clothed in that celestial lustre with which God hath rewarded the humiliations of the manger and the cross. 13, 14

In the mean time let our more intimate concern in this great salvation engage us more cordially to join with these blessed angels in their hallelujahs; ascribing glory to God in the highest for this peace on earth, this good-will towards men, the great fountain of our present tranquility and future hope! Above all, if Divine Grace hath conquered all the foolish prejudices of our hearts against Christ, and taught us with humble faith to apply to him, let us, with the shepherds, bless God for the things which have been shewn us, and make it our care to spread abroad the favour of his name, that others may join with us in paying their homage and their praises to him! 14 20 17

SECT.

SECT. XI.

The purification of Mary and her offering in the temple; where Christ is presented to God, and has a very memorable testimony given him by Simeon and Anna. Luke II. 22—39.

SECT. xi.

Luke II. 22.

LUKE II. 22.

AND, after Mary had been thus delivered of her son at Bethlehem, when the forty days appointed for her purification, [a] according to the time limited by the law of Moses, (Lev. xii. 2, 4.) were fulfilled, [b] Jesus was taken by his parents from the place where he was born, and, in obedience to the divine command, they brought him to Jerusalem, there to present him as a first-born 23 son before the Lord in the temple: According as it is written in the law of the Lord (Exod. xiii. 2. Numb. viii. 16, 17.) that "every first-born male shall be called holy to the Lord," and shall be treated as devoted in a peculiar manner to his service." Agreeably to this precept

LUKE II. 22.

AND when the days of her purification, according to the law of Moses, were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord.

23 (As it is written in the law of the Lord, Every male that openeth the womb shall be called holy to the Lord.)

[a] Her purification; καθαρισμος αυτης.] The Alexandrian, and some other manuscripts, read αυτων; and, as it must be owned that both mother and child, for a while after the birth, were looked upon as ceremonially unclean, it might not be improper (with Erasmus and some of the most considerable expositors) to admit this reading, and to render it their purification, as referring to them both. For, notwithstanding it is true that Christ had no moral impurity, from which he needed to be cleansed, yet we may well enough suppose him, as he bore our sins, to have submitted to this ordinance as well as circumcision: and as he came into the world, made of a woman, made under the law, he would be ready to comply with any institution of the law, that he might thus fulfil all righteousness. But as the law that is referred to in this place, speaks only of the woman, and of the sacrifice that was appointed to be offered for her purifying, I have retained the common reading, and have made no alteration in the version.

[b] The forty days—were fulfilled.] Mr. Whiston has supposed in his Harmony, (prop. xiv. p. 158, & seq.) that these forty days were not accomplished till their return from Egypt: But although this may give the easiest solution to ver. 39, it crowds so many events into that little space and so entirely depends on a precarious hypothesis, that Christ was born about a month before the death of Herod (which I think Mr. Manne has entirely overthrown, in his Dissertation on the birth of Christ, p. 42--45,) that it seems evident upon the whole that the purification preceded the flight into Egypt, as most Harmonizers have thought. But whether the purification was before or after the visit of the wise men is not so plain: I have placed it before, chiefly that I might not interrupt the thread of the story; and partly because the meanness of the virgin's sacrifice makes it probable she had not then received the presents that were offered by the wise men. Nevertheless, I acknowledge it very possible that the purification might happen during the interval of Herod's waiting for the return of the wise men; and that the holy family might go from Jerusalem to Egypt the very night after Jesus had been presented in the temple; as Garthwait intimates in his excellent Harmony (chap. xi. xii.) which is so accurately and judiciously composed, that, as far as I can judge, most of the faults in Le Clerc, Whiston, Wells, &c. may be corrected by it. It was first printed at Cambridge, 1634, and is almost entirely the same with that which was afterwards published under the name of Mr. Locke's Life of Christ.—— After all, I shall only observe that this is one of the many instances in which the order of the sacred story cannot be circumstantially determined with demonstrative evidence.

[c] They

SECT. XI.

precept they now went up to redeem him[c], at the price of five shekels, which was the sum appointed to be paid for every eldest son, without any regard to the condition of the family (compare Numb. xviii. 15, 16). And to offer a 24 sacrifice, according to what is enjoined in the law of the Lord, Lev. xii. 6, 8. where they, whose circumstances were so mean as that they could not conveniently afford a lamb, are ordered to bring a pair of turtle-doves, or two young pigeons; which offering suited best the virgin's rank in life, and she did not affect on this occasion to exceed it.

Luke II. 23.

24 And to offer a sacrifice according to that which is said in the law of the Lord, A pair of turtle-doves, or two young pigeons.

And behold, there was then at Jerusalem a 25 certain man, whose name was Simeon[d]; and he [was] one that was a singularly righteous and religious person, who was waiting, with many others at that time, for the coming of the Messiah, the great expected consolation of Israel[e]; and the Holy Spirit of prophecy was sometimes in an extraordinary manner upon him: And among 26 other things it was divinely revealed unto him by the Holy Spirit, that he should not die[f] before he had seen the Great Anointed of the Lord, and his eyes had beheld the promised Messiah.

25 And behold, there was a man in Jerusalem, whose name was Simeon; and the same man was just and devout, waiting for the consolation of Israel; and the Holy Ghost was upon him.

26 And it was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see death before he had seen the Lord's Christ.

And

c They went up to redeem him.] God having acquired a peculiar right to the first-born of Israel, by preserving them amidst the destruction brought on the first-born of the Egyptians, though he had accepted of the tribe of Levi as an equivalent, yet would have the memory of it preserved by this little acknowledgment of five shekels (or about twelve shillings and sixpence of our money), which was the price that every first-born child must be redeemed at; and in case of an omission here, it might reasonably have been expected that the child should be cut off by some judgment. The first-born therefore were redeemed by paying of this money, in such a sense as all the people were, when, at the time that they were numbered, each of them paid half a shekel as a ransom for their souls, that there might be no plague among them; as there might otherwise have been if that acknowledgment of the Divine Goodness had been omitted: Exod. xxx. 12---16. But that the five shekels demanded for the first-born were paid to redeem them from being sacrificed on the altar, is one of the most false and malicious insinuations that ever came even from the most inveterate enemy of revelation.

d Whose name was Simeon.] Had Simeon been, as some suppose, the president of the council, and father of the celebrated Gamaliel, St. Luke would probably have inserted so honourable a circumstance.

e The consolation of Israel.] This is a phrase that frequently is used, both by the ancient and modern Jews, for a description of the Messiah. The days of consolation is a common phrase among them, to signify the days of the Messiah: nor is there any thing more usual with them than to swear by their desire of seeing this consolation; as Dr. Lightfoot proves by several instances, Hor. Hebr. in loc. And it is easy to observe that the same way of speaking was made use of by the prophets, who often introduce the promise of the Messiah's coming, to comfort the people of God in their afflictions. Compare Isa. xlix. 13. li. 9. lxvi. 13. Jer. xxxi. 13. and Zech. i. 17.

f That he should not die.] Our translation, that he should not see death, is most literal; but I did not apprehend the antithesis, between seeing death, and seeing Christ, to be intended as at all material, and therefore did not retain the Hebraism.

SECT. XI.

Luke II. 27.

And he came under the secret, but powerful impulse of the Spirit, into the temple, just at the juncture of time when [his] parents brought in the child Jesus into the court of Israel there, that they might do for him according to the custom which the authority of the divine law had required and established in such cases. And when the pious Simeon had discovered him by his prophetic gift and saw that well-known prophecy accomplished, (Hag. ii. 7.) that the Desire of all nations should come into that second temple, he was transported at the sight of this desirable Child, and took him with a sacred rapture into his arms, and praised God, and said, with the highest elevations of devotion and joy,

Now, O, my Sovereign Lord and Master, I thankfully acknowledge that thou dismissest thy servant to the repose of the grave in peace[g]; and I can die with pleasure, since thou hast dealt with me according to the gracious engagements of thy word to me; For mine eyes have at length beheld him, whom thou hast appointed as the great instrument of thy long expected salvation;

Even that salvation, which thou hast prepared to set before the face of all people, as the glorious object of their faith and hope; Ordaining him to be a light for the illumination of the Gentiles, to reveal the way of life to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death, as well as giving him to be the consolation and the glory of thy people Israel, who have the honour of being peculiarly related to him.

And when they heard this glorious testimony given to the infant Jesus, Joseph and his mother were astonished at those things which were spoken of him by so eminent a prophet; which appeared to them so much the more remarkable when compared with the miraculous circumstances which had attended his conception and birth.

And Simeon, in the warmth of his devotion, blessed them both, praying affectionately for them, that the favour of God might continually attend them; and said to Mary his mother, Behold this [Child] of thine is appointed for an occasion of the fall and rising again of many in Israel, as he in fact shall be the means of bringing aggravated

27 And he came by the Spirit into the temple: and when the parents brought in the child Jesus, to do for him after the custom of the law,

28 Then took he him up in his arms, and blessed God, and said,

29 Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace according to thy word:

30 For mine eyes have seen thy salvation.

31 Which thou hast prepared before the face of all people;

32 A light to enlighten the Gentiles, and the glory of thy people Israel.

33 And Joseph and his mother marvelled at those things which were spoken of him.

34 And Simeon blessed them, and said unto Mary his mother, Behold this Child is set for the fall and rising again of many in Israel, and for a sign which shall be spoken against:

[g] Thou dismissest thy servant in peace.] There may perhaps be an allusion here to the custom of saying, especially to an inferior, when parting, Go in peace. See note [l], on Luke vii. 50. sect. lx.

[b] A mark

vated ruin upon some by their rejecting him, as well as of procuring salvation and recovery to others on their believing in him; and his appearance in the world shall be such as if he was intended and set up for a mark of contradiction and reproach[h], to be a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence to many, while he shall be to others for a sanctuary, (Isai. viii. 14.) Yea, with such cruel malice and indignity shall he be treated, that the time will come when a dart shall (as it were) pierce through thine own soul[i], and wound thee in the most sensible manner, when thou art witness to those agonies which shall penetrate his. But these strange revolutions shall be permitted and these mysterious scenes of Providence be opened, that the secret thoughts and reasonings of many hearts may be disclosed; or that the real characters of men may be discovered and the sincerity of those who are approved may be made manifest; while the hypocrisy and earthly-mindedness of those, who intend only their own secular advantage, under the specious pretence of waiting for the Messiah's kingdom, shall be exposed; who will be soon offended at the obscure form of his appearance and at the persecutions which shall attend him and his cause.

SECT. xi.

Luke II. 34.

35 (Yea, a sword shall pierce through thy own soul also;) that the thoughts of many hearts may be revealed.

35

36 And there was one Anna a prophetess, the daughter of Phanuel, of the tribe of Aser: she was of a great age, and had lived with a husband seven years from her virginity;

37 And she was a widow

And there was also [one] Anna a prophetess, the daughter of Phanuel, a person of some considerable note in the tribe of Asher. She was now very far advanced in years, having lived only seven years with a husband from the time of her virginity: And, as her husband died while she was very young, she had now been a widow about eighty-four years[k]; who, whatever estate

36

37

[h] A mark of contradiction and reproach.] The word σημειον seems here to be used for a mark or butt to shoot or dart at; which finely intimates the deliberate malice and hellish artifice with which the character and person of Christ was assaulted while he endured the contradiction of sinners against himself, Heb. xii. 3.

[i] A dart shall pierce through thine own soul.] Though ρομφαια seems often to signify a sword, as particularly, in Rev. i. 16. ii. 12, 16. vi. 8.) yet we are assured by Grotius it properly signifies a Thracian javelin. It may perhaps (as L'Enfant observes) be a beautiful allusion to the preceding figure, as if it had been told her, that the darts levelled at her son should be reflected from his breast to hers in such a manner as to wound her very heart. Whether it be rendered sword or dart it must undoubtedly refer to the part the holy virgin took in all the reproaches and persecutions which Jesus met with; but never was it so signally fulfilled as when she stood by the cross, and saw him at once so scornfully insulted and so cruelly murdered. See John xix. 25.

[k] Had now been a widow about eighty-four years.] I know that Grotius and many others interpret this of her whole age; but I think it most natural to suppose that the time of her marriage is opposed to that of her widowhood.

In

SECT. xi.

Luke II. 37.

estate she might have in the country, departed not from Jerusalem, but kept always so near the temple as to be able to resort thither at the hours of morning and evening sacrifice; serving [God] with frequent fastings and prayers in which this devout matron spent a considerable part of the widow of about fourscore and four years; which departed not from the temple, but served God with fastings and prayers night and day.

38 night as well as of the day[l]. And she coming in at that very time, which was the hour of prayer, joined with Simeon in what he had done, and publicly made her acknowledgments to the Lord[m], that is, to Jesus, who was now present in the temple; and afterwards spake concerning him to all those of her acquaintance in Jerusalem that were waiting, like her, for the promised redemption of Israel by the Messiah, of whose speedy appearance there was an earnest expectation raised among the pious and devout, as the appointed period of his coming now evidently approached[n].

38 And she coming in that instant gave thanks likewise unto the Lord, and spake of him to all them that looked for redemption in Jerusalem.

39 And the parents of Jesus, when they had performed all things according to the law of the Lord, departed from Jerusalem; and full of admiration at the glorious testimonies that were given to their Child, they some time afterwards returned to

39 And when they had performed all things according to the law

[l] In which she spent a considerable part of the night as well as of the day.] This is plainly the meaning of night and day, nor can the expression possibly signify more. Perhaps she might sometimes attend those anthems which the priests sung in the temple during the night-watches, Ps. cxxxiv. 1, 2. to which David may also allude, Psal. cxix. 62.

[m] Made her acknowledgments to the Lord, that is, to Jesus: Ανθωμολογειτο τω Κυριω.] The late English version renders it, She expressed her thanks to the Lord, and spake of Jesus; and it must be acknowledged there are in this very section two instances in which the relative pronoun refers to a remote, and not immediately preceding, substantive; ver. 22 and 27. But it is so evident, that Christ is often called the Lord by Luke, as well as by the other sacred writers, that I can see no necessity for giving this passage such a turn, contrary to all the ordinary rules of language.--- And if it be objected that the infant Jesus did not seem capable at that time of resenting her gratitude, as a rational agent, I answer that Anna might properly be said to make her acknowledgments to the Lord, if she addressed herself to the Child, as Simeon had done, confessing him to be the Messiah. The original phrase may have a reference to Simeon's speech, and might be intended to intimate that this of Anna was a kind of response, or counterpart to his. But it is also very probable that she, like Simeon, might also address some lofty hymn of praise to the God of Israel on this great occasion; and if any one think the word Lord is here put for Jehovah, though the former interpretation seems to me more just and natural, I shall not oppose it as an error of any importance.

[n] The period of his coming now evidently approached.] The sceptre now appeared to be departing from Judah, though it was not actually gone; Daniel's weeks were plainly near their period; and the revival of the spirit of prophecy, joined with the memorable occurrences relating to the birth of John the Baptist, and of Jesus, could not but encourage and quicken the expectation of pious persons at this time.

law of the Lord, they returned into Galilee, to their own city, Nazareth.

to Galilee[o], to their own city Nazareth[p], which was the place of their usual residence, and where (as will be seen hereafter) this Blessed Infant passed the days of his childhood and youth.

SECT. xi.

Luke II. 39.

IMPROVEMENT.

WHO can behold the pious Simeon thus welcoming death, whilst he embraced his Saviour, without wishing to pass over the intermediate moments of life to meet so peaceful a dissolution? May we, like him, approve ourselves the faithful servants of God; and then we may hope that, when our dismission comes, we shall share in his serenity and joy! Ver. 28 29

We may comfortably expect it, if our eyes are now opened to behold with wonder and delight the great salvation he has prepared for his people; and if our hearts, with our lips, are frequently praising him for this light which he hath given to lighten the Gentiles as well as to be the glory of his people Israel. 30 31 32

As such may Christ be universally owned and adored, both by Jews and Gentiles! In the mean time, while he is set up as a mark of contradiction and contempt, let us not be ashamed of him or of his words; but rather let those indignities which are offered to 34

o They afterwards returned to Galilee.] Luke has omitted the account that Matthew gives us of the visit of the wise men, and of the holy family's retiring into Egypt; and so has taken no notice of their returning any more to Bethlehem. But there is no sufficient reason to conclude from hence, that these occurrences were antecedent to the purification of Mary, and that the holy family immediately returned from Jerusalem to Nazareth. For we have many other instances of a like kind, where events are connected by Luke and the other Evangelists, which did not immediately follow each other; of which Luke xxiv. 50, is particularly memorable, as will be shewn in its proper place. I have expressed it therefore with some latitude, as it seems to me probable that upon leaving Jerusalem they returned to Bethlehem, where they were visited by the wise men; and which, as they had found it to be the place appointed for the birth of Christ, they might suppose also to be the place designed for his education and abode, and might not chuse to remove from thence till God had ordered them to do it. (See Lightfoot's Harmony, Matt. ii. init.) However, if they now returned to Nazareth, it is more than possible that Providence might bring them afterwards to Bethlehem, upon some occasion or other, that when the wise men came to inquire after Jesus they might find him in the place to which they were directed. See Mr. Manne's first Dissertation on the Birth of Christ, p. 41, 42, and compare note[n], on Matt. ii. 11. in the next section.

p To their own city Nazareth.] It hath been suggested to me by a very learned and ingenious writer, since the publication of the preceding note, that the parents of Christ carried him back from Jerusalem to Bethlehem after the purification, and lived there a year or more before the Magi came; Joseph probably thinking it his duty to settle there, from the persuasion he had, that this wonderful Child was the Messiah, and that the Messiah was to be educated, as well as born, at Bethlehem, David's city. From hence he removed to Egypt; and when he was directed to come back, Joseph appears to have designed to return with Jesus to Bethlehem, had not God commanded him to go to Nazareth, a place which he seems to have esteemed too contemptible to be the abode of so illustrious a person. And this gentleman thinks that when Nazareth is here called την πολιν αυτων, their own city, it intimates an attempt to settle elsewhere in a city that was not their own.

SECT. XI.

to him be as a sword to pierce through our own souls! Let us remember that the gospel, with all the difficulties which attend it, is the great touch-stone by which God will try the characters of all to whom it comes! May our ready acceptance of it, and our zealous adherence to that sacred cause, approve the humble sincerity with which we inquire into its evidence; that Christ may not be to us a stone of stumbling and a rock of offence, but rather the means of raising us to God and happiness, even to that redemption for which they that wait shall never be ashamed!

Ver. 35 38

Our circumstances in life are various: There are comparatively few who have such leisure for extraordinary devotion as was the privilege of the pious Anna: Where it is found, let it be valued and improved: But how great and how many soever our engagements and entanglements in life may be, let the care of our souls be still our chief concern. Let us be serving God in one sense or another, night and day; with prayers, pouring out our souls before him morning and evening; and at proper seasons adding fasting to prayer, and public solemnities to private retirements!

36 37

25 To conclude; let the example of these aged saints impress and animate those, whose hoary heads, like theirs, are a crown of glory, being found in the way of righteousness, (Prov. xvi. 31). Let those venerable lips, so soon to be silent in the grave, be now employed in shewing forth the praises of their Redeemer. Surely days should speak, and the multitude of years should teach, such wisdom. (Job xxxii. 7.) Such fruit may they produce in old age; and may they have the pleasure to see all these pious attempts most thankfully received by the rising generation, and most gratefully improved by them; that they may quit the world with the greater tranquility, in the view of leaving those behind them to whom Christ shall be as precious as he hath been to them, and who will be waiting for God's salvation, while they are gone to enjoy it! Amen.

SECT. XII.

The sages, or wise men, came from the east, under the guidance of a star, to enquire after Christ; and being directed unto Bethlehem, pay him their homage, and offer him their presents there.

MAT. II. 1.

SECT. XII.

NOW when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, in the

Mat II. 1.

Mat. II. 1.

NOW after Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea, even in the days of Herod the Great, who at the time of Christ's nativity was king of that country, there happened a memorable occurrence, which gave a great alarm to the Jews, and made the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem, made the æra of Christ's birth very remarkable among them. For behold, there were [certain] sages[a], that is, wise and learned men (who, on account of their applying themselves to the study of natural philosophy, were called Magi) that had observed a bright and unusual luminary in the heavens, which they were taught to understand as an intimation that a very Illustrious Person was then born in Judea, who was destined by God to that universal empire, the fame and expectation of which had spread so far in those parts: they therefore came from the east-country[b], where they dwelt, to Jerusalem, the capital of the Jewish kingdom; and there 2 they began the inquiry which had occasioned them to undertake so long a journey, saying to those who they thought might be most likely to inform them, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen a beautiful light, which we understand to be his star, in the east-country[c], of which we are natives; and therefore

SECT. xii.

Mat. II. 1.

2 Saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east, and are come to worship him.

[a] Certain sages.] It would be quite foreign to my purpose to enumerate the various conjectures of learned men relating to these Magi. I find not amongst them all so wild an hypothesis as that of Vander Hard, (New Memoirs of Lit. Vol. II. p. 62. & seq.) that they were learned Jews, who came from the colonies carried away by Shalmanezer and Nebuchadnezzar, and were ambassadors in the name of the whole body to pay their homage to the Messiah, and to congratulate their brethren on his birth. It is most probable they were Gentile Philosophers, who, by the Divine Influence on their minds, had been led to improve their knowledge of nature, as the means of leading them to that of the one living and true God; and it is not at all unreasonable to suppose that God had favoured them with some extraordinary revelations of himself, as he did Melchizedeck, Abimelech, Job and his friends, and some others who did not belong to the Abrahamic family, to which he never intended absolutely to confine his favours.—As to the title that is here given them, it is certain that the word Μαγοι was not appropriate in ancient times to such as practised wicked arts, but frequently was used to express philosophers, or men of learning; and those particularly that were curious in examining the works of nature and in observing the motions of the heavenly bodies, (compare Dan. ii. 2, 27. and v. 11. Septuag.) And indeed Magi is become a title so familiar to us, and is so far naturalized among us, that I was almost ready to retain it in my version, had I not feared it might excite in common readers something of the same idea with magicians, which always suggests a bad sense.

[b] Came from the east-country.] I do not venture to determine in the paraphrase, from what part of the east these philosophers came. Had they been (as Mr. Fleming supposes in his Christology, Vol. II. p. 392) a deputation from all the Magi in Persia, Media, Arabia and Chaldea, or had they been kings, as the Papists fancy, so grand a circumstance as either of these would in all probability have been expressly recorded. I rather think, with Grotius, that they came from Arabia, which is often called the east, (see Gen. xxv. 6, 18. Job i. 3. Judg. vi. 3. 1 Kings iv. 30. and Jer. xlix. 28), and was famous for gold, frankincense, and myrrh (compare ver. 11). And if so, their journey lay through a barren and scorching country, and they were obliged to pass through deserts infamous for robbery and murder, which much illustrated their piety and zeal.

[c] We have seen his star in the east-country.] There is no need of supposing with some of the fathers, that they knew the signification of this star, by comparing it with Baalam's prophecy, Numb. xxiv. 17. or Daniel's, Dan. ii. 44. and ix. 25. nor can we think, as Grotius seems to intimate, that they discovered it by the rules of their art.

SECT. xii.

fore we are come, in humble submission to the will of Providence, to prostrate ourselves before him[d], and to pay our homage to him.

Mat. II. 3. And king Herod, who was a prince of a very suspicious temper, and whose cruelties had rendered him exceedingly obnoxious to his subjects, when he heard [of this] inquiry of theirs, was very much troubled; and all Jerusalem was also in perplexity with him, fearing he should make it an occasion of renewing some of those tyrannical actions which had lately filled them with so much horror[e].

3 When Herod the king had heard these things he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.

4 And therefore, to secure his crown, which Herod was afraid might be in danger from this new-born King, when he had called a council and had assembled all the chief of the priests[f], and with them the scribes of the people, whose peculiar business it was to study and explain the scriptures, he inquired of them, where it was, according to the Jewish prophecies, that the long-
5 expected Messiah was to be born[g]. And they said unto him, with one consent, He is certainly to be born at Bethlehem in Judea; for so it is written
6 by the prophet Micah, chap. v. 2. "And thou Bethlehem Ephratah, in the land of Judah, inconsider-

4 And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born.

5 And they said unto him, In Bethlehem of Judea: for thus it is written by the prophet,

6 And thou, Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among art. It is much more probable that they learned it by a Divine Revelation, which it is plain that they were guided by in their return, as we see afterwards at ver. 12.

[d] To prostrate ourselves before him.] This I take to be generally the signification of προσκυνειν. It is a ceremony still used to eastern princes, and hath been of great antiquity. Compare Gen. xlii. 6. and xliii. 26, 28.

[e] Filled them with so much horror.] Besides that shocking instance of his cruelty which he had formerly given in the slaughter of their Sanhedrim, (Joseph. Antiq. lib. xiv. cap. 9. (al. 17. § 4.) & lib. xv. cap. 1. § 2.) his barbarous inhumanity was such, that he had put to death his beloved wife Mariamne by a public execution, (Antiq. lib. xv. cap. 7. (al. 11.) § 5.) and after this had caused Alexander and Aristobulus, the two sons he had by her, to be strangled in prison, on what appear to be no other than groundless suspicions. (Antiq. lib. xvi. cap. 11. (al. 16.) § 6.) These and many other instances of his cruelty are related at large by Josephus: and it was probably about this very time that he executed many of the Pharisees, on occasion of some predictions they had given out, that God was about to take away the kingdom from him; and likewise slew every one in his own family who adhered to those things that were said by the Pharisees. (Antiq. lib xvii. cap. 2. (al. 3.) § 4.) From whence it might be seen there was not any thing so barbarous and horrid which such a cruel tyrant was not capable of doing.

[f] All the chief of the priests.] All the chief priests must comprehend here, not only the high-priest for the time being, and his deputy, with those who formerly had borne that office, but also the heads of the twenty-four courses, as well as any other persons of peculiar eminence in the priesthood. In this sense Josephus uses the word. Antiq. lib. xx. cap. 8. (al. 6.) § 8. p. 973. Edit. Havercamp.

[g] Where the Messiah was to be born.] How strongly all this story implies a general expectation of the Messiah, I need not say. I would only observe that Herod seems to have believed that such a person was foretold; and, on the credit of the chief priests and scribes, that he was to be born in Bethlehem; and yet was, at the same time, contriving to destroy him; which was the height of impious madness as well as cruelty.

among the princes of Juda; for out of thee shall come a Governor that shall rule my people Israel.

inconsiderable as thou mayest now appear, yet art by no means the least[h] among the cities belonging to the princes or heads of thousands in Judah; for out of thee shall come forth a Great and Illustrious Ruler, who shall feed and govern my people Israel, most wisely and tenderly performing the office of their Great Shepherd."

SECT. xii.

Mat. II. 6.

7 Then Herod, when he had privily called the wise men, inquired of them diligently what time the star appeared.

Then Herod having secretly called the sages to 7 an audience, got exact information from them[i] about what time the star, which they had seen, and which proved the occasion of their journey, first appeared to them; that he might thereby make some conjecture concerning the age of the child to whose birth it referred. (Compare ver. 16.)

8 And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go, and search diligently for the young Child, and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also.

And after they had satisfied his curiosity and 8 had informed him of the observations they had made about this star, Herod communicated to them the answer he had received from the priests and scribes; and, sending them to Bethlehem, as the place where they might expect to see the new-born Prince, he said, Go, and make a very exact inquiry concerning the Child you are seeking; and when you have found him return hither directly, and inform me of it[k], that I also, who would permit no interests of mine to interfere with the decrees of heaven, may come with my [h] Art by no means the least.] When this, and several other quotations from the Old Testament which we find in the New, come to be compared with the original, and even with the Septuagint, it will plainly appear that the apostles did not always think it necessary exactly to transcribe the passages they cited, but sometimes contented themselves with giving the general sense in some little diversity of language, as Erasmus has well observed in his memorable note on this text. If the clause in Micah which we render, though thou be little, be translated, art thou small among the thousands of Judah? &c. it will solve the great difference which there seems to be between the prophet and the evangelist; and I think it is the easiest solution of it: for the mark of interrogation is not always expressed where the sense shews it must be implied. See the Hebrew of Job xli. 1, 2. 1 Kings xxi. 7. and Zech. viii. 6.—I do not urge the learned Dr. Pocock's solution, that the word ZEHIR signifies both little and great; which seems by no means so natural and just an account of the matter, though Veil on this place prefers it to all others.

[i] Got exact information from them.] That this is the signification of the word ακριβως, the learned Dr. Scott's note on this place hath abundantly convinced me; and to that I refer for the reason of giving this version of it here and in ver. 16.

[k] When you have found him, return---and inform me.] It is really an amazing thing that so suspicious and so artful a prince as Herod should put this important affair on so precarious a foot, when it would have been so easy, if he had not gone himself under a pretence of doing honour to these learned strangers, to have sent a guard of soldiers with them, who might, humanly speaking, without any difficulty, have slaughtered the Child and his parents on the spot. Perhaps he might be unwilling to commit such an act of cruelty in the presence of such sages, lest their report of it might have rendered him infamous abroad; or rather, we must refer it to a secret infatuation, with which God can, whenever he pleases, confound the most sagacious of mankind.

SECT. xii.

my family and court to pay my homage to him, to which I look upon myself as peculiarly obliged.

Mat. II. 9. And, having heard this charge from the king, they departed from Jerusalem without the least suspicion of his treacherous and cruel design: And behold, to confirm their faith in him to whom they were going, the very same star, or meteor[l], which they had seen in the east country, appeared to them again, and moved on before them in the air till it came down still nearer to the earth, and at length stood directly over [the 10 place] where the sacred Infant was. And when they saw the star, thus pointing out their way, and at length by its station over it marking the very house in which they were to find him, they rejoiced with a transport of joy [which was] exceeding great[m], to see themselves in so remarkable a manner under the Divine direction, and with such certainty conducted to the glorious Person whom they came to seek.

9 When they had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the star which they saw in the east went before them till it came and stood over where the young Child was.

10 When they saw the star they rejoiced with exceeding great joy.

11 And when they were come into the house[n] where Mary was lodged, being now something better accommodated than at the time of her delivery, they found the young child with Mary his mother; and, how different soever this appearance might be from what they had expected[o], they were not at 11 And when they were come into the house, they saw the young Child with Mary his mother, and fell down and worshipped him, and when they had opened their treasures,

[l] The star, or meteor.] I say meteor, because no star could point out not only a town, but a particular house. It is not at all strange Justin Martyr and other fathers should suppose it was a comet, considering how little astronomy was known in their days; but one would not have imagined Grotius should have gone so far as in the least to intimate such a suspicion.

[m] They rejoiced with a joy which was exceeding great.] The original phrase, εχαρησαν χαραν μεγαλην σφοδρα, is emphatical beyond any thing which I can think of in our language. They joyed a great joy very much, though very bad English, comes nearest to a literal version.

[n] When they were come into the house.] Mr. Bedford observes in his Chronology, p. 740, 741, that it is not expressly said that the sages came to Bethlehem: but from the series of the account that Matthew gives us, it seems so very plain that few have questioned it; and it is the less to be doubted, because if Christ (as that author supposes) had been now at Nazareth, he could hardly have been carried into Egypt without passing through Herod's dominions. But it is more difficult to determine whether, if the sages found him at Bethlehem, (as we have reason to conclude they did,) it was within a few weeks of his birth; or (as Mr. Manne supposes, p. 41.) about a year after, when they had spent some considerable time at Nazareth; and afterwards, on some unknown occasion, made a visit to Bethlehem, where they must have contracted some acquaintance. The latter supposition is undoubtedly favoured by Luke ii. 39. and Mat. ii. 16; unless we say that the star appeared about the time of Christ's conception. It also suits best with all the arguments brought to prove that Christ was born A. U. C. 747, or 749, and that Herod died A. U. C. 750, or 751, compared with the tradition of the holy family's spending two years in Egypt. (See Munster on Mat. ii. 14.) These reasons have a face of strong probability, but I cannot say they entirely convince me; and therefore in the paraphrase I have determined nothing either way. Compare note o and p, in the last section, on Luke ii. 39. p. 57.

[o] From what they had expected.] Perhaps they expected this great Prince would have sures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.

at all offended at its meanness; but, falling down on their faces before him, they paid him their homage: And, as it was customary in those countries to offer some present to any illustrious personage they came to visit[p], they opened their treasures, which they had brought along with them for this very purpose, and presented him with the choicest produce of their country, fine gold, and frankincense, and myrrh[q].

SECT. xii.

Mat. II. 11.

12 And, being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, they departed into their own country another way.

And, after this, they were preparing to go back to Jerusalem, as Herod had desired them; but God, who knew the barbarous intent of the king, interposed for the preservation of his Son and for their security and comfort. So, being divinely admonished in a dream that they should not go back to Herod, they returned into their own country another and more direct way[r], not at all solicitous as to the consequence of Herod's resentment. 12

IMPROVEMENT.

Let us observe, with pleasure, this farther honour which God did to his only begotten Son in ordering a new star to appear as the signal of his birth, and in calling these illustrious persons from afar to pay their early adorations to him. No doubt they thought such a discovery, as brought them to the feet of their infant Saviour[s], an ample recompence for all the fatigue and expence of such Ver. 2 have been born in the family of Herod; at least, we may be sure it was some surprise to them to find him accommodated only like a carpenter's child: but they wisely considered that such miraculous honours as the star gave him were far beyond any external circumstance, and therefore paid him their homage as readily as if they had found him in the richest palace. An amiable example of that humble ingenious temper which fits a man for the reception of the gospel.

p Customary in those countries to offer some present to any illustrious personage they came to visit.] That this was customary appears from many passages of the Old Testament. (Gen. xliii. 11—25. 1 Sam. ix. 7, 8. x. 27. 1 Kings x. 2. Psalm lxxii. 10. and Prov. xviii. 16.) And Maundrel, Chardin, and many other modern writers of the best credit, assure us the custom is yet retained. See also Ælian. Var. Hist. lib. i. cap. 31, 32, 33.

q Gold, frankincense, and myrrh.] This was a most seasonable providential assistance to furnish Joseph and Mary for so long and expensive a journey as that into Egypt; a country where they were entirely strangers, and yet were to abide there for some considerable time.

r Another and more direct way.] This seems to be intimated in the word ἀναχωρῆσαι, which might perhaps more literally have been rendered bent back their course. Herod in the mean-while waiting for their return they had time to get out of his reach before his passion rose, which might have been fatal to them.

s Such a discovery of their infant Saviour.] I take it for granted here that they had some divine intimation or human instruction, (which Joseph or Mary might indeed have given them,) that Christ was to save his people from their sins, and was Emmanuel, God with us. Surely God would not have guided them in this extraordinary manner merely to pay a transient compliment to Jesus. Their prostrations probably expressed religious adoration as well as civil respect: and it is not unlikely that their report might in due time make way for the reception of the gospel in the country such a journey. They were exceedingly transported when they saw the star. So let us rejoice in every thing which may be a means of leading our souls to Christ, and of disposing us to cast ourselves down before him with humility and self-resignation !

SECT. XII.

Ver. 10

Let us look upon this circumstance of the sacred story as a beautiful emblem of that more glorious state of the Christian church when the Gentiles shall come to its light, and sages and kings to the brightness of its rising ; when the abundance of the sea shall be converted to it, and the wealth of the Gentiles shall be consecrated to its honour. The multitude of camels shall cover it, the dromedaries of Midian and Ephah ; all they from Sheba shall come ; they shall bring gold and incense, and they shall shew forth the praises of the Lord. Isa. lx. 3, 5, 6.

6

How wonderful was the honour conferred upon so obscure a town as Bethlehem when it was made thus illustrious among the thousands of Judah ! Happy they who consecrate not only their gold and their other possessions, but also their souls and their bodies to their great Ruler, whose office it is to feed and govern the Israel of God : under whose conduct and care they shall receive blessings infinitely more valuable than all the treasures of the east or the west !

11

But oh, the fatal power of carnal influence on the heart ! This engaged Herod to receive the news of a Redeemer's birth with horror ; and with execrable cruelty and vile hypocrisy, to contrive his murder under the specious form of doing him homage. Vain and self-confounding artifice ! Let us rejoice in the thought, that there is no understanding, or wisdom, or counsel against the Lord : no scheme so artfully disguised that he cannot penetrate it, or so politically formed that he cannot with infinite ease confound it.

3

3

To what perplexity and grief might these sages have been brought had they been made even the innocent instruments of an assault on this Holy Child ! But God delivered them from such an alarm, and happily guided their return ; so that, through his care and favour, they carried home, in the tidings of the new-born Messiah, far richer treasures than they had left behind. Thus shall they, who in all their ways acknowledge God, by one method or another find that he will graciously direct their paths.

12

country from whence they came.—And if, as early antiquity reports, (Euseb. Eccles. His. lib. i. cap. 13,) and both Dr. Cave, (Lit. Hist. Vol. i. p. 2.) and the learned Dr. Grabe (Spicileg. Patr. Vol. I. p. 1—6.) seem to think some messages of extraordinary respect were afterwards sent from Abgarus, king of Edessa in Arabia, to our Lord Jesus Christ, (which might be fact, though the letters now remaining should be supposed spurious,) it is very possible the report of these sages, preserved by tradition (if they were then dead,) might add weight to that of Christ's miracles, (about thirty years after,) and dispose that prince to take the greater notice of him.

SECT.

SECT. XIII.

The flight into Egypt; the slaughter of the infants; and the settlement of the holy family at Nazareth after Herod's death. Mat. II. 13—23.

MAT. II. 13.

AND when they were departed, behold the angel of the Lord appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying, Arise, and take the young Child and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word; for Herod will seek the young Child to destroy him.

MAT. II. 13.

SECT. XIII. MAT. II. 13.

AND after the return of the wise men, when they had paid their homage unto Christ and were departed, behold, the angel of the Lord appeareth to Joseph in a dream, with a message from heaven, saying, Rise up without any delay, and take with thee the Infant and his mother, and flee directly into the land of Egypt[a], and continue there till I shall give thee notice to return; for Herod, alarmed by the extraordinary circumstances which have lately happened[b], is about to make a strict search after the young Child to destroy him, lest he in time should prove a formidable rival to his family.

14 When he arose, he took the young Child and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt:

And Joseph, rising from his bed, immediately 14 obeyed the heavenly vision; for he took the Infant and his mother by night, and withdrew, with as hasty a flight as their circumstances would allow, into the land of Egypt, near the borders of which Bethlehem lay.

15 And was there until the death of Herod; that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the

And they continued 15 there till after the death of Herod, which happened not till several months after[c]; that what was spoken of the Lord by the prophet Hosea, on another

[a] Flee into the land of Egypt.] This circumstance doth not at all agree with the conjecture of Grotius, that this vision might appear after their return to Nazareth; for then (as Le Clerc justly observes) it is much more probable that they would have been ordered to flee into Syria, which was much nearer to Nazareth than Egypt; to which they could not have passed from thence without going through the very heart of Herod's dominions, unless they had taken a very large circuit with great expence and danger. The great number of Jews which resided in Egypt would make their abode there so much the more comfortable.

[b] Alarmed by the extraordinary circumstances which have lately happened.] When the wise men had come so far to pay their homage to a new-born Prince, the several reports of what had lately happened, would, upon this occasion, be revived, and the behaviour of two such celebrated persons as Simeon and Anna, on the presentation of Christ in the temple, which might at first be only taken notice of by a few pious persons, would probably be now reported to Herod, and must add to the alarm which the inquiry of the sages gave him.

[c] Which happened not till several months after.] I pretend not to say exactly how many, but must content myself with referring the reader for the proof of this to Mr. Manne's most elaborate and elegant Dissertation on the Birth of Christ (p. 35—39), which advances very considerable arguments to prove that Christ was born in the spring, A. U. C. 747. Jul. Per. 4707, and that Herod died about the passover, A. U. C. 750. Jul. Per. 4710, probably towards the end of March; though, on further examination, I rather incline to place the birth of Christ in September or October, A. U. C. 749; and to conclude that Herod died in March, A. U. C. 751. See Dr. Lardner's Credib. Part I. Vol. II. p. 796—804—963, ad fin.

[d] Out

SECT. xiii.

other occasion, might thus, as it were, be fulfilled anew; and that in this appointment of the place where Christ should take up his abode, there might appear to be a manifest allusion to that saying, (Hos. xi. 1.) "Out of Egypt have I called my Son[d];" Christ being in a much higher and nobler sense the Son of God than Israel, of whom the words were originally spoken.

Mat. II. 15.

the prophet, saying, Out of Egypt have I called my Son.

16 Then Herod, seeing that he was deluded[e], and that a great affront (as he imagined) was designed him by the sages, as there was now no farther prospect of their returning to him, was exceedingly enraged; and, in order to make the destruction of this unknown Infant as sure as possible, he sent forth a band of murderers, and inhumanly slew all the male children[f] that were in

16 Then Herod, when he saw that he was mocked of the wise men, was exceeding wroth; and sent forth, and slew all the children that were in Bethlehem,

[d] Out of Egypt have I called my Son.] It is well known that, from the time of Julian at least, the enemies of Christianity have been cavilling at the application here made of a prophecy to Christ, which in its original sense seems to belong to the people of Israel. Learned men have laboured with great solicitude to prove it literally applicable to Christ.—Mr. Pierce's hypothesis (see in his Dissertation on this text, added to his paraphrase on Philippians, p. 103, 108.) that the prophet is pursuing two subjects together, and alternately treating of each, which must therefore be read interchangeably, one part referring to the people of Israel, and the other to Christ (as if it were designed by God that the prophecy of Christ's being called out of Egypt should be obscured by such a method) appears indeed to be very ingenious: But I fear, if such liberties were to be allowed, it would render the Scripture the most uncertain book in the world.—Bishop Chandler (in his Defence of Christianity, p. 294.) supposes that calling out of Egypt is a proverbial expression for being delivered from imminent danger; which might have been said to have its accomplishment in Christ's escape, though he had fled into Syria, Arabia, or any other country: But, with all due deference to so great a name, I must observe, that neither Isa. x. 26. Deut. xxviii. 68, or Zach. x. 11. seem sufficient to prove the use of such a phrase; and I apprehend that, if the use of such a proverb were proved, the passage before us would still seem a plainer reference to Hos. xi. 1. than to such a general form of speech; so that the difficulty would still remain.---I once thought the words KI NEHHAR ISRAEL DEAHEBU might be rendered and paraphrased after this manner: "Though Israel be a child, that is, wayward and troublesome like a little infant, yet I have loved him, and, in token of my tenderness to him, will call (Jesus) my Son out of Egypt; having there preserved him from the dangers which threatened his infancy, that he may at length accomplish my great intended salvation." I still think that this conjecture deserves some consideration, as much more probable than any other solution of this kind I have ever met with. But, on the whole, especially considering the context, I chuse to take them, as Grotius, Heinsius, and many of the best critics do, for a mere allusion; and the rather, as I am fully convinced that the next quotation, in ver. 17. must necessarily be taken in this sense.

[e] Seeing that he was deluded.] The word ενεπαιχθη, which properly signifies to be played with, well expresses the view in which the pride of Herod taught him to regard this action, as if it were intended to expose him to the derision of his subjects, and to treat him as a child, rather than a prince of so great experience and renown.

[f] Sent forth a band of murderers, and slew all the male-children.] A very ingenious and learned friend of mine has attempted to account for Josephus's silence as to this remarkable fact, by a conjecture, that instead of sending forth (as it was in the first edition) a detachment of soldiers, (of which, he justly urges, nothing is expressly said in the text) he might only send private orders to have the children taken off as secretly as possible; so that it might not make any public noise and come to the notice of the Jewish historian. But, in answer to this (not to insist upon the argument from Macrobius, Saturnal. lib. ii. cap. 4. that the Emperor Augustus had heard of it at Rome) I would observe that it in Bethlehem, and in all the confines of it, from their entrance upon the second year[g], and under: as that, according to the time of which he had got exact information from the sages, must include all that were born there since the appearance of the star.

Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under, according to the time which he had diligently inquired of the wise men.

SECT. xiii.

Mat. II. 16.

17 Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying,

And then, as this cruel execution extended itself to the neighbouring places, and in particular to Ramah, a town of Benjamin, which lay near Bethlehem, that remarkable saving was farther fulfilled which was spoken by Jeremiah the prophet (Jer. xxxi. 15.); for this was plainly an event to which those words might be applied with more literal propriety than to the captivity of the Jews in the time of Nebuchadnezzar, which they were originally intended to describe[h], when they were first delivered by the prophet,

17

it is certain nothing of such privacy in the dispatch of these children can be inferred from the word ανειλεν, since it is also used to express the crucifixion of our Lord, (Acts ii. 23. x. 39.) the stoning of Stephen, (Acts xxii. 20.) and the beheading of James the Apostle, (Acts xii. 2.) all which were public executions; as well as the intended assassination of Paul by a band of armed men. (Acts xxxiii. 15.) And if it be considered, on the one hand, how difficult it is privately to murder children under two years old, as they are hardly ever left alone; and on the other, how ill such a cautious and uncertain procedure would have agreed with the furious disposition of Herod and the haughty rage in which these orders were given, I believe few will incline to this hypothesis. As for the silence of Josephus, it is to be considered that Bethlehem was but a small place; and therefore, in a reign of so much cruelty, the slaughter of its infants might not be taken very much notice of. Josephus was not old enough to remember it himself; and if he did not find it in the Memoirs of Nicholas of Damascus (that flattering historian, of whom we know he made great use in compiling the life of Herod), he might be unwilling to introduce it, even if he were particularly acquainted with it; lest the occasion might have led him to mention what generally at least he is solicitous to decline, I mean Christian affairs. On the whole, if we compare contemporary historians of every age we shall find some material fact or another omitted by each of them; yet that silence of one is never urged as an argument against admitting the express testimony of the rest. See Dr. Lardner's Credib. Part I. Vol. II. book ii. chap. 2. § 1. p. 746. & seq.

[g] From their entrance upon the second year.] The reasons which determined me to render απο διετους thus, may be seen in Sir Norton Knatchbull's excellent note on this place. It is probable that Herod in his passion ordered the slaughter of the infants as soon as he perceived that he was disappointed in his expectation of the return of the wise men, lest otherwise the Child he was so jealous of might be removed; and as his cruelty extended even to those who had entered on the second year, which is expressly said to be according to the time of which he had got exact information from the sages, it must be natural to conclude from hence, that it was not till some considerable time after the birth of Christ that he was visited by the wise men, even though we should allow the first appearance of the star to have been (as some suppose) about the time of Christ's conception. Compare note n on Matt. ii. 11. For the version of ακριβοω, see note i on ver. 7.

[h] Which they were originally intended to describe.] It is very evident from the following clause, (Jer. xxxi. 17.) Thy children shall come again to their own border, that these lamented persons were not slain, but carried into captivity; and it is well known that Ramah was the place where they were assembled to be led away to Babylon. (Jer. xl. 1.) So that it is certain this can only be an allusion, as it is intimated in the paraphrase. And I look upon this as a sure argument, that a passage in scripture, whether prophetical, historical or poetical, may, in the language of the New Testament, be said to be fulfilled, when an event happens to which it may with great propriety be accommodated. See Dr. Sykes on the Truth of Christianity, chap. xiii. p. 217, & seq.

[i] Rachel,

SECT. xiii.

prophet, saying, " In Ramah there was a most doleful voice heard, lamentation and weeping and abundant mourning, as if Rachel, that tender mother, who was buried near this place[i], had risen out of her grave, and was bewailing her lost children, and refusing to be comforted, because they are not."

Mat. II. 18.

18 In Rama was there a voice heard, lamentation and weeping, and great mourning; Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not.

19 But after this, when Herod was dead[k], and an end put to all his cruelties, behold, an angel of the Lord again appeareth in a dream to Joseph, while he continued to sojourn in Egypt,

19 But when Herod was dead, behold, an angel of the Lord appeareth in a dream to Joseph in Egypt,

20 Saying, The way is now prepared for thy return from hence, and I am sent, according to the intimation that was given thee before, to bring thee notice of it: and therefore now arise and take the Infant and his mother, and go back to thine own abode in the land of Israel; for thou mayest safely do it, since they are dead who sought to destroy the young Child's life[l]

20 Saying, Arise and take the young Child and his mother, and go into the land of Israel; for they are dead which sought the young Child's life.

21 And Joseph had no sooner heard the message that was brought him by the angel, but he immediately arose, and, cheerfully confiding in the Divine protection, took the young Child and his mother, according to the command he had received, and came into the land of Israel.

21 And he arose, and took the young Child and his mother, and came into the land of Israel.

22 But when, upon his coming to the borders of it, he heard that Archelaus reigned over Judah in the room of his father Herod, knowing him to be the heir of his cruelty [m] as well as of his kingdom, he

22 But when he heard that Archelaus did reign in Judea, in the room of his father Herod, he was afraid to go thither; notwithstanding, being warned

[i] Rachel, who was buried near this place.] See Gen. xxxv. 19. and 1 Sam. x. 2.

[k] When Herod was dead.] It is well worth while to read the particular and affecting account which Josephus has given of the terrible death of this inhuman tyrant, whom God so remarkably made a terror to himself, as well as to all about him. (See Joseph. Antiq. lib. xvii. cap. 6. (al. 8. § 5. & Bell. Jud. lib. i. cap. 33. (al. 21. § 5, 6, 7. Eusebius thought it so great an illustration of the gospel history, that he has inserted it at large (Eccl. Hist. lib. i. cap. 8.) with a degree of exactness, which joins with many other instances of the like nature, to shew us how cheerfully we may depend upon the many invaluable extracts from a multitude of ancient books now lost, which he has given us both in his Ecclesiastical History and in his other writings, especially in his Præparatio Evangelica.

[l] They are dead who sought to destroy the young Child's life.] It is a very ingenious conjecture of Mr. Manne, that Antipater, the son of Herod, who, at the time when Christ was born, was heir-apparent to his crown, and was a prince so cruel and ambitious, that he had procured the death of his two elder brothers to clear his way to the succession, would very probably be an active counsellor and instrument in seeking the destruction of the new-born Jesus, and in advising to the slaughter of the infants. And, as this Antipater died but five days before Herod, both might be referred to in these words of the angel, They are dead, &c. See Manne's Dissert. p. 74, 75. and compare Joseph. Antiq. Jud. lib. xvi. cap. 8. (al. 11.) § 4. lib. xvii. cap. 1. & 8. (al. 10.) § 1. Edit. Havercamp.

[m] The heir of his cruelty.] Archelaus, in the very beginning of his reign, massacred three thousand Jews at once in the temple, and was afterwards banished, in the tenth year of his government, to Vienne in Gaul, by Augustus, on a complaint brought against him by the chief of the Jews for his various cruelties. See Joseph. Antiq. lib. xvii. cap. 9. (al. 11.) § 3. p. 851, & cap. 13. (al. 15.) § 2. p. 866.

[n] Galilee—

warned of God in a dream, he turned aside into the parts of Galilee:

he was afraid to go thither to settle, or so much as to take it in his way; but, being again divinely admonished in a dream, he withdrew into the region of Galilee, which was under the government of Herod Antipas[n], a prince of a milder character; and who was then on such hostile terms with Archelaus, that there was no danger of his giving them up to him. And he went 23

SECT. XIII.

Mat. II. 22.

23 And he came and dwelt in a city called Nazareth: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets, He shall be called a Nazarene.

and dwelt in a little city, on the confines of Zabulon and Issachar, which was called Nazareth, where he had formerly resided before he went to Bethlehem; and being thus returned to his own city, Jesus was there brought up and educated in a place so very contemptible among the Jews, that it was grown into a proverb with them, That no good thing could be expected from thence (John i. 46. vii. 52.) so that by this a way was further opened by the providence of God, that it might be fulfilled what had been spoken in effect by many of the prophets. "He shall be called a Nazaræan[o];" that is, he shall appear in mean and despicable circumstances, and be treated as the mark of public contempt and reproach.

IMPROVEMENT.

What is our fallen nature, that it can be capable of such enormities as we have now been surveying! Or what imaginable circumstances of grandeur and power can free the mind of an ambitious creature from servitude and misery! Who can behold Herod

Ver. 16

[n] Galilee—under the government of Herod Antipas.] Herod the Great divided his dominions by his last will, appointing Archelaus to succeed him as king of Judea, Herod Antipas to be Tetrarch of Galilee and Peræa, and Philip to be Tetarch of Trachonitis and the neighbouring countries. (Joseph. Antiq. lib. xvii. cap. 8. (al. 11.) § 1. But Herod Antipas endeavoured to supplant his brother Archelaus, when application was made to the Romans to confirm the will, and went to Rome, with a view of obtaining the kingdom, (which was left to him in a former will,) in which he was supported by the interest of the whole family who hated Archelaus, and thought his brother to be far more worthy of the kingdom; and, though he did not carry his point, the attempt was such as could not but widen the breach there was before between them, and left no room for any future correspondence. See Joseph. Antiq. lib. xvii. cap. 9. (al. 11.) § 4. & cap. 11. (al. 13.) § 4.

[o] He shall be called a Nazaræan.] If the solution given in the paraphrase be not allowed, I must acquiesce in Chrysostom's opinion, that the passage referred to is lost: For it is very unnatural to explain this text by Sampson's being appointed a Nazarite, Judges xiii. 5. or the Messiah's being spoken of as Netzer, the branch, Isai. xi. 1. or to account for it with Witsius, by God's being called Notzer, the preserver of men, Job vii. 20. See Wits. Meletem. Diss. § 16.) The joint sense of many scriptures is thus referred to, John vii. 38. and James iv. 5. And that the Messiah should be treated in a very contemptuous manner, was foretold by David, Psal. xxii. 6. & seq. lxix. 9. by Isaiah cha. lii. and liii. and by Zechariah, chap. xi. 12, 13.

SECT. XIII.

Herod under the agitation of such a barbarous rage, and not see the vanity even of royal dignity, when the man that sways the sceptre over others hath no rule over his own spirit? Surely none of the innocent victims of Herod's wrath felt so much from the sword of their barbarous murderers as the guilty mind of the tyrant from its own unnatural transports.

Mat. II. 21.

The indignation which arises in our minds on the view of so much wickedness, finds a secret satisfaction in this thought. But how grievous is it to reflect on what the parents of these poor babes felt while the sword that murdered their children in their very sight pierced through their own bowels? Happy, in comparison with these, were the wombs that never bare and the paps that never gave suck! Let parents remember how soon their dearest hopes may be turned into lamentation and learn to moderate their expectation from their infant offspring and check too fond a delight in them.

18

Let us all learn to be very thankful that we are not under the arbitrary power of a tyrant, whose sallies of distracted fury might spread desolation through houses and provinces. Let us not say, Where was the great Regent of the universe when such a horrible butchery was transacted? His all-wise counsels knew how to bring good out of all the evil of it. The agony of a few moments transmitted these oppressed innocents to peace and joy, while the impotent rage of Herod only heaped on his own head guilt, infamy and horror. He conceived mischief, and he brought forth vanity, (Job xv. 35:) and while he studied to prevent the establishment of the Messiah's kingdom, and set himself with impious rage against the Lord, and against his Anointed, He that sitteth in the heavens did laugh, yea, the Lord had him in derision. (Psalm ii. 2, 4.) That God, who discerns every secret purpose of his enemies, and foresees every intended assault, knows how, whenever he pleases, by a thought, by a dream, to baffle it.

The preservation of the holy child Jesus in Egypt may be considered as a figure of God's care over his church in its greatest danger. God doth not often, as he easily could, strike their persecutors with immediate destruction; but he provides a hiding-place for his people, and, by methods not less effectual, though less pompous, preserves his chosen seed from being swept away, even when the enemy comes in like a flood.

13

Egypt, that was once the seat of persecution and oppression to the Israel of God, is now a refuge to his Son: and thus all places will be to us what Divine Providence will be pleased to make them. When, like Joseph and Mary, we are cut off from the worship of his temple and perhaps removed into a strange land, he can be a little sanctuary to us and give us, in his gracious presence, a rich equivalent for all that we have lost.

14, 15

They

They continued here till he gave the signal for their departure. Let us, in like manner, remember that it is God's part to direct and ours to obey; nor can we be out of the way of safety and of comfort while we are following his directions, and steering our course by the intimations of his pleasure! SECT. XIII. Ver. 19

Jesus survived his persecutors, and returned into the land of Israel again; but such was his condescension, that he abode at Nazareth, which seems to have been alloted him as the most humble station. Let us never be unwilling to bear reproach for him, who from his infancy endured it for us; nor take offence at the meanness of his condition, whose removes were directed by angelic messengers, as immediate envoys from the God of heaven! 20 23

SECT. XIV.

Jesus, at the age of twelve years, comes up to the passover at Jerusalem, and there discourses with the doctors in the temple. Luke II. 40. to the end.

LUKE II. 40.

AND the Child grew, and waxed strong in Spirit, filled with wisdom: and the grace of God was upon him.

Luke II. 40.

SECT. XIV.

AND the child Jesus, being returned to Nazareth, was educated in that city under the care of Joseph and his mother, and there grew up, and became strong in Spirit, discovering early marks of a sublime and heavenly genius and visibly appearing to be filled with an uncommon portion and degree of wisdom; and it was plainly to be seen that the grace of God was eminently upon him; so that he made an extraordinary progress in knowledge and piety betimes and was thus looked upon as a distinguished favourite of heaven. (Compare Judg. xiii. 24, 25.) Luke II. 40.

41 Now his parents went to Jerusalem every year at the feast of the passover.

Now his pious parents went yearly to Jerusalem at the feast of the passover; as it was usual for those families to do that were remarkably religious, though only the adult males were by the law obliged to appear before the Lord on this occasion. (Compare 1 Sam. i. 3, 7, 21.) 41 42 And when he was twelve years old, they went up to Jerusalem, after the custom of the feast.

And when he was twelve years old, and so, according to the Jewish maxims, came under the yoke of the law [a], his parents, when they went up to Jerusalem, 42

[a] Came under the yoke of the law.] Though I am not satisfied of the truth of Grotius's assertion, that the Jewish children under this age were called KETANIM, or little ones, and afterwards NEKHARIM, or children, (since it is certain that the word NEKHAR is often used for those under that age; see 1 Sam. i. 24. Judg. xiii. 24. and Hos. xi. 1, 3.) yet I think the fact asserted in the paraphrase is generally allowed by learned men. See Wotton's Miscel. Vol. I. p. 320. and Lightf. Hor. Heb. in loc.

[b] Three

SECT. XIV.

Luke II. 42.

rusalem, according to the usual custom of the feast, thought it proper to take him with them. to celebrate that glorious deliverance which God had so many ages ago wrought for his people when he brought them out of Egypt, the memory of which was carefully to be transmitted to every succeeding generation. (Compare Exod. xii. 26, 27.)

43 And when they had finished all the religious solemnities to be observed in the days of unleavened bread, and were returning home, the child Jesus, charmed with the sacred entertainments of the temple, and eagerly desirous of improving in the knowledge of his Father's law, staid behind them in Jerusalem: and neither Jo-

44 seph nor his mother were aware [of it.] But though they saw he was not with them, yet knowing his sociable temper, they supposed he was somewhere in the company (as several families travelled together on such occasions): And they went a whole day's journey before they missed him; and then, in the evening, they sought for him amongst their kindred and acquaintance, who were their companions in the journey, and with

45 whom they concluded he had been. And, not finding him with them, they returned immediately, and came back to Jerusalem, seeking him every where with great concern, and ready to suspect that some hostile assault might have been made upon him.

46 And, three days after their setting out[b], they found him in an apartment of the temple, where the teachers of the law used to lecture upon it to the people; and where young persons in particular were examined and had a liberty to ask what questions they thought proper for their farther information[c]. Here was Jesus sitting in the midst of the doctors, whose profession it was to teach on these occasions; for he had placed himself among others at their feet[d], and was, with 43 And when they had fulfilled the days, as they returned, the child Jesus tarried behind in Jerusalem; and Joseph and his mother knew not of it.

44 But they supposing him to have been in the company, went a day's journey; and they sought him among their kinsfolk and among their acquaintance.

45 And when they found him not, they turned back again to Jerusalem, seeking him.

46 And it came to pass that, after three days, they found him in the temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them, and asking them questions.

b Three days after their setting out.] The first day was spent in their journey homeward, the second in their return to Jerusalem, and the third in searching after Christ there.---The word εγενετο, it came to pass, is a mere expletive; and, not imagining that the rules of the most faithful and exact translation would oblige me always to retain it, I have frequently omitted it.

c For their farther information.] All these things are so well illustrated and confirmed by Dr. Lightfoot, in his Hor. Heb. on this place, that I cannot but refer the reader thither. See also Drusius's excellent note on this place.

d Sitting——at their feet.] I have often thought it a great injury to the character of our Blessed Redeemer, to represent this story, whether in pictures or words, as if Christ, at this tender age, went up into the seats of the doctors, and there disputed with with all possible diligence, both attending to them, and asking them such questions as he judged proper for the further illustration of what they said.

47 And all that heard him were astonished at his understanding and answers.

47 And all who heard him, considering the tenderness of his age, were in a perfect transport of admiration[e] at his understanding, and at the penetration which he shewed, both in the questions he put to them, and also in the answers he returned to what they asked him.

48 And when they saw him, they were amazed: and his mother said unto him, Son, why hast thou thus dealt with us? behold, thy father and I have sought thee sorrowing.

48 And when he was discovered by his parents, and they saw him thus employed, they likewise were struck with wonder: and his mother said unto him, O my son, why hast thou dealt thus with us? behold, this is now the third day that thy father and I have sought thee, from place to place, with inexpressible anxiety and distress.

49 And he said unto them, How is it that ye sought me? wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?

49 And he said unto them, What is the cause that you have sought me with so much concern? and why is it, you were at such a loss where you should find me? Did ye not know that I ought to be at my Father's[f]? and that wherever I was, I should be so employed in his service as to be secure of his protection?

50 And they understood not the saying which he spake unto them.

And they did not perfectly understand the words which he spake unto them upon this occasion[g], as being expressed in something of a concise and ambiguous manner.

And

with them. Not one word is said of his disputing by the Evangelist, but only of his asking some questions and answering others, which was a very usual thing in these assemblies and indeed the very end of them. All was, no doubt, conducted with the utmost modesty and decorum. And if he were with others at the feet of these teachers (where learners generally sat, see Luke x. 39. and Acts xxii. 3.) he might be said to be in the midst of them, as they sat on benches of a semicircular form, raised above their auditors and disciples.

[e] Were in a transport of admiration.] Every learned reader must know that the word ἐξιστανῖο here, and ἐξεπλαγησαν in the next verse, are much more forcible than our translation of them, and much more literally rendered here.

[f] I ought to be at my Father's; ἐν τοις τȣ πατρός μȣ δεῖ εἶναί με.] There is a known ambiguity in the original. I have chosen with Grotius, Capellus, Fuller, &c. to follow the Syriac version of the words, where it is rendered in my Father's house, which it is certain they will well bear; and so Josephus puts ἐν τοις τȣ Διος for in Jupiter's temple; contra Apion. lib. i. § 18. p. 449. Havere. (Compare John xix. 27. Esther v. 10. vi. 12. vii. 9. Gr.) And indeed, though a general apprehension of his being well employed might be a reason (as it is intimated in the paraphrase) against their excessive anxiety, yet it could not (as the words in this connection seem to imply) have directed them where to find him. It is to be remembered this was the first visit Christ had ever made to the temple since he was a child in arms; and it is no wonder, therefore, that the delight he found there inclined him to prolong it.

[g] They did not perfectly understand the words that he spake unto them.] It is strange Grotius should think συνηκαν should here be rendered, They did not attentively consider what he said, when the very next verse assures us Mary kept all these sayings in her heart. The phrase only implies that there was something more in Christ's words than at first appeared. He conjectures there might be a reference to his being the Lord who was to come into his temple (Mal. iii. 1.) which, if there be, it is indeed very obscure. It seems more probable it may be an intimation that he had many other important visits to make to

SECT. XIV.

Luke II. 51.

And he went down into the country with them, and came to Nazareth; and there he did not assume any air of superiority on account of the extraordinary applause he had met with from the people who had heard him in the temple, but still continued subject to his parents, and respectful to them, as a most dutiful and obedient child. And his mother kept all these sayings and occurrences in her heart and often reflected very seriously upon them.

51 And he went down with them, and came to Nazareth, and was subject unto them: but his mother kept all these sayings in her heart.

52 And Jesus advanced considerably in wisdom, as well as in age and stature[h], and grew proportionably in favour both with God and men; his behaviour being not only remarkably religious, but so benevolent and obliging, as to gain the friendship and affection of all that were about him.

52 And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature, and in favour with God and men.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. 41, 42 LET us, who are heads of families, take occasion from the story before us to renew our resolutions, that we and our house will serve the Lord; and remember that it is a part of our duty, not only to God but to our domestics, to engage them with us in his public worship; the pleasures of which will surely be increased when we see them, and, especially our dear children, joining with us in attendance on our great common Father.

Let children view the example of the holy child Jesus with an humble desire to copy after it. Let them love the house and ordinances of God and thirst for the instructions of his good word. 43, 46 Let them think themselves happy if his servants in the ministry will bestow a part of their important time in those exercises which are especially suited for their instruction; and let them not only be careful to return the properest answers they can, but at convenient times, with modesty and respect, ask such questions as may be likely to improve them in knowledge and grace.

Let those children, whose genius is most promising and most 51 admired, learn from the blessed Jesus to behave themselves in an humble and submissive manner to all their elders and especially to their parents; for though he was the Lord of all, yet was he subject not only to Mary his real mother, but to Joseph, though only supposed to his Father's house; which evidently appears by the sequel of the history.

h In wisdom, as well as in age and stature.] It is well known that ἡλικια may signify either age or stature; but I think the latter is meant here, because the former was too apparent to need the mention. It seems a very just and important remark of Erasmus here, that all the endowments of the Man Christ Jesus were owing to the Divine beneficence, and that the Deity communicated itself in a gradual manner to that human nature which it had assumed.

Those

supposed to be his father. Such children may well hope that the grace of God will still be upon them; and, growing in wisdom as they do in stature, they will also advance in favour with God and men, and be the darlings of heaven as well as of earth. SECT. XIV. Ver. 40, 52

And, oh, that the greatest and wisest of us, those of the longest standing and of the most eminent stations in the church, might learn of this admirable and Divine Child; that, always remembering our relation to God, and ever intent on learning his will and promoting his glory, we might, with humble acquiescence, accommodate ourselves to all the disposals of his providence! How easily could he, who discovered such early marks of a sublime genius and a lively wit, have relished the most elegant delights of science and have eclipsed all the most celebrated poets, orators and philosophers of that learned and polite age! But he laid all those views aside, that he might pursue the duties of that humble rank of life which his heavenly Father's infinite wisdom had assigned him; and joined, as it would seem, to assist in maintaining himself and his parents too by the daily labour of his hands. Let us learn from hence, that it is the truest greatness of soul to know our own place and office, and to deny ourselves those amusements of the mind[i], as well as those gratifications of the senses, which are inconsistent with the proper services of our different relations and callings. 49 47 51

SECT. XV.

The opening of John the Baptist's ministry. Mark I. 1—6. Luke III. 1—6. Mat. III. 1—6.

MARK I. 1.

THE beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ the Son of God;

2 As it is written in the prophets, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

MARK I. 1.

THE beginning of the gospel-history of Jesus Christ, the Only-begotten Son of God, as it is recorded by the evangelist Mark, thus takes its rise from the first opening of John's ministry. It was this John that came under the character of the great forerunner of the Messiah; As it is written in the prophets, and particularly in Malachi (chap. iii. 1.) "Behold, I will send my messenger before thy face, O my Anointed Son, who shall prepare thy way before thee; and, as the SECT. XV. Mark I. 1. 2

[i] Those amusements of the mind.] I hope my younger brethren in the ministry will pardon me if I beseak their particular attention to this thought; lest, if the main part of their time be given to the curiosities of learning, and only a few fragments of it to their great work, the care of souls, they see cause in their last moments to adopt the words of dying Grotius, perhaps with much greater propriety than he could use them: Proh! vitam perdidi, operose nihil agendo:—Alas! I have thrown away life in doing nothing with a great deal of pains.

SECT. XV.

the harbinger appointed to proclaim thy coming, shall, with remarkable solemnity, make it the business of his ministry to introduce thy kingdom." So also it was prophesied concerning him by Isaiah (chap. xl. 3.) "There shall be heard the voice of one crying in the wilderness[a], and solemnly proclaiming to this purpose in the deserts of Judea, Prepare ye with readiness the way of the Lord, and make his paths straight and smooth by removing every thing which might prove an obstruction to his gracious appearance." These prophecies (as it will presently be seen) received a very signal and remarkable accomplishment in John, who, from his office, was surnamed the Baptist.

Mark I. 2.

3

3 The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

Luke III. 1.

Now this eminent person made his first public appearance in the fifteenth year of the reign of the emperor Tiberius Cæsar, (reckoning the beginning of his reign from the time when Augustus made him his colleague in the empire)[b], when Archelaus being banished, and his kingdom reduced into a Roman province, Pontius Pilate was governor, or procurator, of Judea; and, as the dominions of Herod the Great had been divided after his death[c], Herod Antipas, one of his sons, was tetrarch of Galilee, or governor of that fourth part of his dominions; and his brother Philip tetrarch of another fourth part, which was the region of Iturea and Trachonitis (the name now given to that tract of land on the other side Jordan which had formerly belonged to

LUKE III. 1. Now in the fifteenth year of the reign of Tiberius Cæsar, Pontius Pilate being governor of Judea, and Herod being tetrarch of Galilee, and his brother Philip tetrarch of Iturea, and of the region of Trachonitis, and Lysanias the tetrarch of Abilene, a The voice of one crying in the wilderness.] Most commentators have imagined these words originally to refer to the proclamation of deliverance from the Babylonish captivity: but there is no imaginable reason for supposing an immediate connection between the conclusion of the thirty-ninth chapter of Isaiah and the beginning of the fortieth; nor can I observe any thing in the process of this chapter which may not literally suit the evangelical sense here given it by Mark as well as Matthew and Luke.

b Reckoning from the time when Augustus made him his colleague in the empire.] Supposing Christ was born A. U. C. 747. (as in note c) it is absolutely necessary to interpret the words thus; because the fifteenth year of Tiberius, if reckoned from the death of Augustus, began in August, A. U. 781. and would thus be the thirty-fourth year of Christ's life, which is plainly inconsistent with Luke iii. 23. (See Manne's Dissert. p. 136—140.) But if the birth of Christ be placed (as seems most probable) in September, A. U. 749. and Tiberius was admitted to a part in the empire (three years before Augustus died) in August, 764. the fifteenth year of Tiberius on this computation began in August 778. And if John entered on his ministry in the spring following, A. U. 779. in the same year of Tiberius; and, after he had preached about twelve months, baptized Jesus in the spring 780. then Jesus at his baptism would be but thirty years of age, and some odd months, which perfectly agrees with what St. Luke says of his being at that time about thirty years old. See Dr. Lardner's Credib. Part I. Vol. II. p. 838, 839.

c Divided after his death.] See note n, on Mat. ii. 22.

d Lysanias

to the tribe of Manasseh): and Lysanias was tetrarch of Abilene[d], a fair city of Syria, whose territories reached even to Lebanon and Damascus, and were peopled with great numbers of Jews. In those days[e], while Annas and Caiaphas were high priests[f], the word of God, by prophetic inspiration, came unto John the Baptist[g], the son of Zacharias and Elizabeth, who had lived for several years retired in the wilderness of Judea. Compare Luke i. 80. p. 31.

2 Annas and Caiaphas being the high priests, the word of God [in those days] came unto John [the Baptist] the son of Zacharias, in the wilderness [of Judea.] [MAT. III. 1.]

3 And [MARK. John did baptize in the wilderness, and] came into all the country about Jordan, preaching the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins; [MAT. III. 1. MARK I. 4.]

And John, at the first opening of his ministry, did preach with great power, and baptize in the wilderness; and perceiving the people inclined to pay an attentive regard to his doctrine, he did not confine himself to that wilderness alone, but came into all the country about Jordan, and went a progress over it, from one place to another, on both sides the river, preaching every where, as he went along, the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins; earnestly exhorting men to repent of all the irregularities of their lives, and to be baptized in token of their sincere desire to be washed and cleansed from them; and assuring them at the same time that, if they attended on this institution in a truly penitent manner, they might consider it as a pledge and token of their being forgiven by God.

And

d Lysanias was tetrarch of Abilene.] Some have thought this Lysanias another son of Herod the Great; but it seems much more probable that he was descended from a prince of that name, who had been governor of that country several years before. See Joseph. Antiq. Jud. lib. xiv. cap. 13. (al. 23.) § 3. p. 722. Havercamp.

e In those days.] This is supplied from Mat. iii. 1. where it is proper to observe that the phrase εν ταις ημεραις εκειναις is used in a very extensive sense for that age of which he had spoken in the preceding words, though these events happened near thirty years after those recorded in the former chapter of that gospel. And the phrase is here used with the greater propriety, as John did indeed appear under his public character while Christ continued to dwell at Nazareth; which was the event that Matthew had last mentioned.

f While Annas and Caiaphas were high priests.] As it was not Caiaphas but Ishmael that immediately succeeded Annas or Ananus (Joseph. Antiq. Jud. lib. xviii. cap. 2. (al. 3.) § 2. p. 873.) I cannot suppose, as some have done, that Annas was high priest the former part of this year, and Caiaphas the latter; much less that Luke knew so little of the Jewish constitution as to suppose there could be two high priests properly so called. The easiest solution is, that one was the high priest, and the other his sagan or deputy; so that the title might, with a very pardonable liberty, be applied to both. See note [a] on John xviii. 13. Vol. II. sect. 184.

g The word of God came unto John the Baptist.] I think these words declare, as expressly as any words can, that John was called to his prophetic work in the fifteenth year of Tiberius; so that, if Mr. Manne's arguments prove (as he supposes they do) that Christ was crucified in that fifteenth year, then it will follow, that all the events, both of John's ministry and of our Lord's must be reduced within the compass of one year; which is, for reasons elsewhere given, utterly incredible. To conclude, that by the language which Luke here uses, he intends to express the time of Christ's death, though it did not happen in the same year, is doing the greatest violence imaginable to the whole passage. How much easier would it be to admit of a little more latitude in the interpre-

SECT. XV.

Mat. III. 2.

And while he was thus urging his exhortation, and saying, Repent ye, he pleaded with them a very new and important argument: For (said he, the long-expected kingdom of heaven is now approaching[h]; and God is about to appear, in an extraordinary manner, to erect that kingdom spoken of by Daniel (chap. ii. 44. and vii. 13, 14.) as the kingdom of the God of heaven, which he would set up and give to the Son of man; making it finally victorious over all other kingdoms. It is therefore (said the Baptist) of the highest importance that you should be the subjects of this kingdom; which, without a sincere and universal repentance, you cannot possibly be.

MAT. III. 2. And saying, Repent ye; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

Luke III. 4.

And upon this occasion he failed not to repeat and to insist upon that passage of scripture, (which has in part been just now mentioned,) making it evident that this was all exactly as it is written in the book of discourses and prophecies of the prophet Isaiah; for this indeed is he who was spoken of so expressly by that sacred writer (chap. xl. 3, 4, 5.) when he is saying, with a manifest reference to the Messiah's kingdom, "There shall be heard the voice of one crying aloud in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord with the most thankful readiness, and chearfully set yourselves to make his paths straight and plain, by removing every thing which might prove an obstruction when he comes on so gracious a design. Every valley shall therefore be filled up, and every mountain

LUKE III. 4. As it is written in the book of the words of Esaias the prophet [for this is he that was spoken of] saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. [MAT. III. 3.]

5 Every valley shall be filled, and every mountain and hill shall be brought low; and the terpretation of Dan. ix. 26, an aversion to which seems to have plunged that accurate and ingenious writer into a train of inextricable difficulties through all the latter part of his second essay.

h The kingdom of heaven is approaching.] Dr. Sykes, in his Essay on the Truth of the Christian Religion, chap. iii. has largely proved that this phrase refers to those texts in Daniel quoted in the paraphrase. It properly signifies the gospel dispensation, in which subjects were to be gathered to God by his Son, and a society to be formed, which was to subsist first in more imperfect circumstances on earth, but afterwards was to appear complete in the world of glory. In some places of scripture the phrase more particularly signifies the former, and denotes the state of it on earth (see Mat. xiii. throughout, especially ver. 41, 47, and Mat. xx. 1.) and sometimes it signifies only the state of glory (1 Cor. vi. 9. and xv. 50.) but it generally includes both. It is plain that the Jews understood it of a temporal monarchy which God would erect; the seat of which they supposed would be Jerusalem, which would become, instead of Rome, the capital of the world; and the expected Sovereign of this kingdom they learned from Daniel to call the Son of man; by which title they understood a very excellent person, who was the promised Messiah, the Christ, or the Anointed One of God. Both John the Baptist then and Christ took up this phrase, and used it as they found it, and gradually taught the Jews to affix right ideas to it, though it was a lesson they were remarkably unwilling to learn. This very demand of repentance shewed it was a spiritual kingdom; and that no wicked man, how polite or brave, how learned or renowned soever, could possibly be a genuine member of it. See my Sermons on Regeneration, Numb. IV. p. 106—117.

the crooked shall be made straight, and the rough ways shall be made smooth; tain and hill shall be brought down before him[i]; even the crooked roads shall be made into a straight way, and the rough places shall be laid smooth and level: for by the mighty power of his grace, which shall be now remarkably displayed, such a victorious way shall be made for his gospel, and it shall be propagated with such speed and success, that it shall seem as if the whole face of nature were miraculously changed; and mountains and valleys and forests and rocks were to spread themselves into a spacious plain before the messenger of it. And thus, not the land of Israel alone, but all flesh, or the whole human race, not excepting the remotest Gentile nations, shall see and admire the great salvation of God."

SECT. XV.

Luke III. 6.

6 And all flesh shall see the salvation of God.

6

MAT. III. 4. And the same John had his raiment of camel's hair, and a leathern girdle about his loins; and his meat was locusts and wild honey. [MARK. I. 6.]

Now, that this extraordinary message might meet with the greater regard, God was pleased to send it by a person on many accounts remarkable, and especially for the temperance and even the severity of his manner of living. For this John wore (as the ancient prophets used to do) a rough garment which was made of camel's hair, and so indeed was but a kind of sackcloth; and he had a leathern girdle about his waist (compare 2 Kings i. 8. Zech. xiii. 4. Rev. vi. 12. and xi. 3.) And as for his food, it was such as the wilderness afforded, which was frequently nothing but a large kind of locusts[k], which the law allowed

Mat. III. 4.

[i] Every mountain and hill shall be brought down before him.] Grotius has most elegantly illustrated the reference that appears so plainly in this passage to the custom of sending pioneers to level the way before princes when they are coming with numerous attendants: but, by the import of the language that the prophet uses, it is plainly to be seen that the main work is God's, though men are called to concur with him in it; which is every where the scheme of scripture, as it certainly is of sound reason. Compare Phil. ii. 12, 13.

[k] A large kind of locusts.] Though it may be allowed, on the authority of the accurate Sandys (see his valuable Travels, p. 183) and many others, that there is in these parts a shrub called the Locust-Tree, the buds of which something resemble asparagus; yet, notwithstanding all the pains Sir Norton Knatchbull has taken to prove it, I cannot imagine the word ἀκρίδες is here to be understood as referring to the product of it. It is certain the word in the Septuagint and elsewhere generally signifies the animal which we call a locust, or a large winged grashopper (see Rev. ix. 3, 7, 9.) which the law allowed the Jews to eat (Lev. xi. 21, 22.) and which Pliny assures us made a considerable part of the food of the Parthians and Ethiopians. (See Plin. Nat. Hist. lib. xi. cap. 29. and lib. vi. cap. 30.) The matter is excellently illustrated by the learned notes of Heinsius, Drusius and Elsner, on this place; but Erasmus is tediously prolix upon it, and, which is strange, he is very warm too. What need have we to keep a guard upon our spirits when so great and so good natured a man could be angry in a debate of so small importance!—I shall add only on this point, with respect to the use of locusts for food, what Dr. Shaw tells us, that, when sprinkled with salt and fried, they taste much like the river cray fish; who justly contends for this signification of the word ἀκρίδες in his excellent Travels, p. 258; where he also observes that, as the months of April and May are the time when these insects abound, it may probably allowed him to eat (Lev. xi. 21, 22,) and wild honey, often to be found in hollow trees or in the clefts of the rocks. (Compare 1 Sam. xiv. 26. Judg. xiv. 8. and Psal. lxxxi. 16.)

SECT. XV.

Mat. III. 4.

5 These uncommon circumstances of his public appearance concurred with the time of it to awaken in the people a great regard for his preaching: for their uneasiness under the Roman yoke, which then bore hard upon them, raised the most impatient desire of the Messiah's arrival; by whom they expected not only deliverance, but conquest and universal monarchy. They therefore attentively listened to this proclamation of his approach; so that the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and multitudes out of all the land of Judea, and all the region round about Jordan, went out to hear him, and were attentive 6 to him[1]. And great numbers of them were brought under very serious impressions by his faithful remonstrances, expostulations and warnings: and those that were awakened to repentance were all baptized by him in the river Jordan; expressing the convictions they were under by confessing their sins, and, by submitting to this rite, engaging themselves for the future to reformation and obedience.

5 Then went out to him [they of] Jerusalem, and all [the land of] Judea, and all the region round about Jordan [MARK I. 5.]

6 And were [all] baptized of him in [the river of] Jordan, confessing their sins. MARK I. 5.]

IMPROVEMENT.

Mark i. 1.

With what pleasure should we hear the gospel of Jesus Christ the Son of God! and with what reverence remember the dignity of his Divine nature amidst all the condescensions of his incarnate state!

Mat. iii. 2

It is surely matter of unspeakable thankfulness that the kingdom of heaven should be erected among men! that the great God should condescend so far as to take to himself a people from our mean and sinful world, and appoint his own Son to be the governor of that kingdom! How happy are we that it is preached among us and we are called into it! Let it be our great care that we be not only nominal but real members of it.

For this purpose let us remember and consider that, to become the subjects of this kingdom, we are to enter into it by the way probably be conjectured that John began his ministry about that season of the year; which might also seem more convenient for receiving, and especially, for baptizing so great a number of people, than winter could have been.

[1] Went out to him.] The novelty of a prophet's appearance in Israel, the family of John, the circumstances of his birth, and the extraordinary character he had, no doubt, maintained for strict and undissembled piety, all concurred with the causes mentioned in the paraphrase to draw such vast multitudes after him.

way of repentance; humbly confessing our sins, and resolutely forsaking them, if we do indeed desire to find mercy. SECT. XV.

Let us bless God, both for the promises of pardon and for the appointment of the seals of it, particularly of baptismal washing; always remembering the obligation it brings upon us to cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God. (2 Cor. vii. 1.) Luke III. 3.

And, being ourselves become members of Christ's kingdom, let us pray that it may be every where extended. May Divine Grace remove every obstruction, and make a free course for his gospel, that it may every where run and be glorified, so that all flesh may see the salvation of God! Ver. 4, 6

John, with this awful severity of manners and of doctrine, was sent before Christ to prepare his way. Let us learn to reflect how necessary it is that the law should thus introduce the gospel; and let all the terrors of Moses and Elias render the mild and blessed Redeemer so much the more welcome to our souls!

SECT. XVI.

John the Baptist addresses suitable admonitions to those that attended his ministry, and proclaims the approach of the Messiah. Mat. III. 7—12. Mark I. 7, 8. Luke III. 7—18.

MAT. III. 7.

BUT when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come? [LUKE I.I. 7]

MAT. III. 7.

SECT. XVI.

WHEN John opened his ministry there were two different sects among the Jews; that of the Pharisees, who were exceeding strict in ceremonial institutions and in the observation of human traditions; and that of the Sadducees, who, among other very obnoxious notions, denied the existence of spirits and a future state of rewards and punishments: yet some of both these sects, out of curiosity or popular custom, or for some other unknown reason, attended on the preaching of this holy man: And when he saw among the multitudes that came to be baptized by him, that many both of the Pharisees and Sadducees[a] were coming to receive his baptism[b], as he well knew the open profaneness of the one and the secret wickedness of the other, he Mat. III. 7.

[a] Pharisees and Sadducees.] The most authentic account of these sects may be seen in Joseph. Antiq. Jud. lib. xviii. cap. 1. (al. 2) & Bell. Jud. lib. ii. cap. 8. (al. 7) Havere. All writers of Jewish Antiquities describe them largely; but, I think on the whole, none better than Dr. Prideaux, Connect. Vol. II. p. 335—343.

[b] Coming to receive his baptism.] I express it in this manner, for though some understand the words επι το βαπτισμα αυτου, of their coming to oppose his baptism, I think the reasons for that interpretation not worth mentioning here, and refer my reader to Raphelius, who has given them a larger examination than they deserve. Annot. ex Xen. p. 7—11.

[c] O ye

SECT. XVI.

he did not flatter them at all in his address, but said unto them, as with some surprize, O ye abominable broods of vipers[c], crafty, malignant, mischievous creatures, who hath taught you to put on this form of humility and repentance and admonished you to flee from the wrath which is surely and speedily to come? What is it that hath moved you to it, when you Pharisees think yourselves so secure from it on account of the pretended sanctity of your lives, and you Sadducees imagine it to be no other than a mere fable and a dream? Let me exhort you therefore, if you design to be baptized by me, to make it your serious and resolute care to bring forth fruits worthy of repentance, and to act like those that are penitents indeed, forsaking as well as confessing your sins: And, if you neglect this, do not presumptuously think it will be to any purpose for you to say within yourselves, We have Abraham, for our father;[d] relying on your descent from that holy patriarch, and your being that seed of his with whom a peculiar covenant was made; for I solemnly say, and declare it unto you, as a certain and important truth, That God is able, of these very stones that are before your eyes[e], which he can animate and sanctify whenever he sees fit, to raise up those who, though not descended from human parents, shall be in a much nobler sense than you children to Abraham, as being made the heirs of his faith and obedience; and he would sooner work such a miracle as this than he would suffer his promise to fail, or admit you to the blessings of his approaching

Mat. III. 7.

8 Bring forth therefore fruits meet for [or worthy of [repentance: [LUKE III. 8.]

9 And think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father; for I say unto you, That God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham. [LUKE III. 8.]

[c] O ye broods of vipers.] Some think this is to be understood as if it had been said, Ye wicked children of wicked parents, but such a reflection on their parents is not necesssarily implied. The children of pious Eli are called sons of Belial, merely with reference to their own licentious characters as they knew not the Lord. See 1 Sam. ii. 12.—The word Γεννηματα may be used in the plural number in reference to the different sentiments, and, if I may be allowed the expression (familiar enough to the Jewish doctors,) the different families of these sects in question.

[d] We have Abraham for our father.] Dr. Whitby well shews how great the presumption of the Jews on this relation to Abraham was. Munster, on this text, quotes a remarkable passage from the Talmud, in which it is said, "That Abraham sits next the gates of hell, and doth not permit any wicked Israelite to go down into it." These Jews might perhaps pervert the promise in Jer. xxxi. 35, 36, to support this vain and dangerous confidence, in opposition to such a multitude of most express and awful threatenings; particularly Deut. xxxii. 19. & seq.

[e] Of these very stones that are before your eyes.] The many learned commentators who refer this to God's calling the Gentiles, supposing some of them to be present here, seem to lose all the beauty of the expression; which I have paraphrased at large, because I think few, if any, have set it in so strong a light as it will well bear. It is but a precarious conjecture that the stones here referred to were those set up in Gilgal. Josh. iv. 3, 20.

[f] Is

proaching kingdom, merely because you have the abused honour to descend from that peculiar favourite of heaven. SECT. XVI.

10 And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees; therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down and cast into the fire. [LUKE III.—9.

These are truths of constant concern, and now particularly seasonable; for the patience of God will not much longer endure so provoking a people. You think of national deliverance, but beware of national judgments; for I assure you that the hand of God is lifted up, and the axe of Divine Justice is even now, as it were, applied to the very root of the trees; and therefore every tree that doth not produce good fruit, (even every one that, while he professeth himself to be one of God's people, contradicts that profession by a life of wickedness, or by the neglect of vital and practical religion) is very certainly and quickly to be cut down[f] by death, and thrown into the fire of hell. Mat. III. 10.

LUKE III. 10. And the people asked him, saying, What shall we do then?

Upon this, many of the Pharisees and Sadducees, who expected to have been treated with greater respect, were so provoked that they turned their backs upon the prophet, and refused to be baptized. (Compare Luke vii. 29, 30. and Mat. xxi. 25.) But it was otherwise with the common people, who were alarmed by what he said, and the multitudes, who were more teachable, asked him, saying, What then shall we do, that we may be prepared for the kingdom of the Messiah, and may escape this dreadful condemnation and approaching wrath? Luke III. 10.

11 He answereth and saith unto them, He that hath two coats, let him impart to him that hath none; and he that hath meat, let him do likewise.

And he answereth and saith unto them, Be careful not only to observe the ceremonies of religion, but to attend to the great duties of justice and of charity too, which are incumbent upon you as well as on the great and rich; and he, for instance, that hath two coats, let him impart one of them to him that hath none; and he that hath plenty of food, let him do the like. 11 12 Then came also Publicans to be baptized, and said unto him, Master, what shall we do?

Then there came also some of the Publicans to be baptized: now these Publicans were a set of men whose office it was to collect the taxes which the Romans had imposed on the Jews, and to pay them to others who were called the chief 12

[f] Is very certainly and quickly to be cut down.] It is expressed, in the original, in the present tense; and it may be of some importance to observe here that, in scripture language that which is very sure and very near is spoken of as if it was already done. Thus Christ speaks of himself as if he was already in possession of his glory while he was here on earth, John xvii. 24. and sinners too are represented as condemned already, John iii. 18. and saints are spoken of as already glorified, Eph. ii. 6. and Heb. xii. 22, 23.

SECT. XVI.

Luke III. 12.

chief of the Publicans ; and these people, being generally persons of an infamous character, for their injustice and oppression, applied themselves to John under a strong conviction of their guilt, 13 and said unto him, Master what shall we do to testify the sincerity of our repentance ? And he said unto them, Though you are not absolutely required to quit your employment, take care that you exact nothing more than is enjoined you by your principals, whose servants you are in collecting the public money.

13 And he said unto them, Exact no more than that which is appointed you.

14 And the soldiers also applied themselves to him [g] on the same occasion, and in like manner asked him saying, And as for us, what shall we do? And he said unto them, Terrify no man [h] by a violent overbearing conduct, nor wrong [any] by false accusation, in order to get a liberty of living upon him at free quarters ; and be contented with your legal wages, or pay [i], not raising mutinies and seditions to get it increased.

14 And the soldiers likewise demanded of him, saying, And what shall we do? And he said unto them, Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely, and be content with your wages.

15 And, as the people were in great suspence, and all were reasoning in their hearts with much solicitude concerning John, debating the matter with themselves, whether he were the Messiah or

16 not, John answered all that put the question to him, in the most direct and positive manner, saying, I indeed baptize you with water, to engage you to the exercise of repentance, which, by submitting to that rite, you solemnly profess ; but there is one coming after me, even the Messiah himself, who is much more powerful and considerable than I can pretend to be (see John x. 41.) whose very shoes I am not worthy so much as to carry after him, [or] to stoop down and untie the latchet of [them], but should esteem it as an honour to perform the humblest office of menial

15 And as the people were in expectation, and all men mused in their hearts of John, whether he were the Christ or not ;

16 John answered, saying unto them all, I indeed baptize you with water [unto repentance] ; but one mightier than I cometh [after me, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear], the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to [MAR. stoop down and] unloose : he

[g] The soldiers applied themselves to him.] There is no reason to believe that these were Gentile soldiers. Grotius has excellently proved that the Jews in general did not scruple a military life ; and a multitude of passages from Josephus might be added to the same purpose : and though most of the soldiers in Judea, which was now a province, might be Romans, yet those belonging to Galilee might probably be Jews. Had these been Gentiles, John would surely have begun his instructions to them with urging the worship of the true God.

[h] Terrify no man.] The word διασεισητε properly signifies "to take a man by the "collar and shake him ;" and seems to have been used proverbially for that violent manner in which persons of this station of life are often ready to bully those about them whom they imagine their inferiors in strength and spirit ; though nothing is an argument of a meaner spirit, or more unworthy that true courage which constitutes so essential a part of a good military character.

[i] With your legal wages or pay.] The word οψωνιοις is well known to signify provision or food ; but, when applied to soldiers, it is generally used to signify the pay that was allotted for their subsistence. (Compare Rom. vi. 23. where it is rendered wages ; and 1 Cor. ix. 7. where we translate it charges.)

The

He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire: [MAT. III. 11. MARK I. 7, 8.]

menial service for him. And, if you are indeed his people, he shall baptize you with a most plentiful effusion of the Holy Spirit and with fire; causing his Spirit to descend upon his followers in the appearance of a flame of fire, to represent its operating on the heart like fire, to kindle pious and devout affections and to purify and enliven the souls of believers. (Compare Acts i. 5. and ii. 3.) SECT. XVI. LUKE III. 16.

17 Whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and will gather the wheat into his garner; but the chaff he will burn with fire unquenchable. [MAT. III. 12.]

But you are to remember this is an awful, as well as an amiable Person, whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly winnow and cleanse his church, which is (as it were) his threshing floor, and at present is covered with a mixture of wheat and chaff: for such will be the nature of the doctrine he shall teach as will effectually discover what is the real disposition of the hearts of men and perfectly distinguish between the hypocritical and the sincere. And happy will it be for those that stand the trial; for he will carefully gather them, as the wheat into his granary, and lay them up in heaven as his peculiar treasure: but as for the chaff which is found among them, as for those empty vain professors that are now mingled with his people, he will then treat them as men do the sweepings and the refuse of the floor, and burn them up as worthless and unprofitable trash; and I faithfully warn you that it will be with unquenchable fire[k]: let this excite you therefore to escape so terrible a doom. (Compare Isa. xli. 16. Jer. xv. 7. and Ezek. xxii. 15.) 17 k The chaff he will burn with unquenchable fire.] There is in what the Baptist here declares, an evident allusion to the custom of burning the chaff after winnowing, that it might not be blown back again, and so be mingled with the wheat: and, though it may in part refer to the calamities to come upon the Jewish nation for rejecting Christ (as Bishop Chandler has observed in his Defence of Christianity, p. 85), yet it seems chiefly to intend the final destruction of all sinners in hell, which alone is properly opposed to the gathering the wheat into the garner, (compare Mat. xiii. 40, 41, 42): and howsoever it be certain that the word ἄχυρον in Greek authors does generally signify all that is left of the corn when the grain is separated, including the straw (see Raphel. Annot. ex Xen. in loc. and Gen. xxiv. 25—32, Septuag.) yet I apprehend that in this place it must be equivalent to χνοῦς, and signify chaff as distinguished from straw; since one can hardly imagine either that any thing so useful as straw would be made the symbol of these worthless reprobates, or that it would be represented as burnt up.—As to the phrase of burning the chaff with unquenchable fire, Mr. Horberry has observed, with his usual accuracy of judgment, (Inquiry into the Duration of Future Punishment, Chap. i. No. 1, 2) that it is absolutely inconsistent with all views of the restoration of the wicked; and that, however the phrase of being consumed like chaff might seem to favour the doctrine of their annihilation (which nevertheless it is certain no punishment of mind or body can of itself effect), the epithet of unquenchable given to this fire is so far from proving it, that it cannot, by any easy and just interpretation, be reconciled with it.

Such

SECT. XVI.

Such was in general the tendency and purport of John's preaching: And, offering many other exhortations to them to the same effect, he published to the people these glad tidings[1] of the Messiah's approach and endeavoured to prepare them to receive him in a proper manner; as will be more particularly shewn hereafter. (See John i. 15, & seq. and iii. 28, & seq.)

Luke III. 18.

18 And many other things in his exhortation preached he unto the people.

IMPROVEMENT.

Mat. iii. 7.

WHAT an excellent pattern of ministerial service does John exhibit in the passage before us! Blessed is that gospel preacher who, like him, seeks not his own ease and pleasure and indulges not too luxurious and sensual inclinations, but chearfully accommodates himself to the state and circumstances which Providence hath assigned him, as infinitely more intent on the success of his ministry than on any little interest of his own that can interfere with it!—Happy the man who, imitating the impartiality of this faithful servant of God, giveth to every one his portion of meat in due season and abhors the thoughts of flattering men in their vices, or buoying them up with delusive hopes in their birth and profession, while they are destitute of real and vital religion!

Luke iii. 10—14.

Mat. iii. 9.

May this plain and awakening address be felt by every soul that hears it! And, in particular, let the children of religious parents, let those that enjoy the most eminent privileges and that make even the strictest profession, weigh themselves in this balance of the sanctuary, lest they be found wanting in the awful decisive day. And if the warnings of the gospel have alarmed our hearts, and put us upon fleeing from the wrath to come, oh, let the terrors of the Lord engage us not only to confess but to forsake our sins, and to bring forth fruits meet for repentance!

Ver. 8.

Let all, to whom the gospel message comes, most attentively and seriously consider in what alarming circumstances of danger and extremity impenitent sinners are here represented. The gospel is the last dispensation we must ever expect; the axe is at the root of the unfruitful tree, and it must ere long be cut down and burnt, be its branches ever so diffusive and its leaves ever so green.

10

Luke iii. 17.

Christ hath a fan in his hand to winnow us as well as the Jews, O that we may stand the trial! And O that, as his wheat, we may be laid up in the store-house of heaven when that day cometh which shall burn as an oven, and when all that do wickedly shall be consumed as stubble and be burnt up as chaff! (Mal. iv. 1.)

And

1 Published these glad tidings.] Ευηγγελιζετο has plainly this import; and as it was a very imperfect intimation, rather than a full discovery of the gospel that was given by the Baptist, it does not seem so proper here to render it by preaching the gospel, though the word has often that signification; see Mat. xi. 5. Luke iv. 18. and Acts viii. 4, &c.

a This

And to conclude: that we may be prepared for that final trial, let us be earnest in our applications to our gracious Redeemer, that as we are baptized with water in his name, he would also baptize us with the Holy Ghost and with fire; that, by the operations of his Holy Spirit on our cold and stupid hearts, he would enkindle and quicken that Divine life, that sacred love, that flaming, yet well-governed zeal for his glory, which distinguishes the true Christian from the hypocritical professor, and is indeed the seal of God set upon the heart to mark it for eternal happiness. SECT. XVI. Ver. 16

SECT. XVII.

The testimony John the Baptist gave to Christ is taken notice of by John the Evangelist, and his own testimony added to confirm it. John I. 15—18.

John I. 15.

JOHN bare witness of him, and cried, saying, This was he of whom I spake, He that cometh after me is preferred before me, for he was before me:

John I. 15.

AS the Messiah now was shortly to appear, and the time just at hand in which he was to enter on his public ministry, the way (as we have seen) was opened for his coming by John the Baptist's being sent to preach the doctrine of repentance: and when the people came in crowds from every part to hear him, John bore his testimony of him in a public declaration of the dignity of his person and of the great design for which he was to come; which, though it was at first expressed in general terms, yet did he afterwards apply it in particular to Jesus of Nazareth, pointing him out to be the person he had spoken of; and, with an earnestness that suited the importance of this grand occasion, he openly proclaimed him to be the promised Messiah, and cried, saying, This is the person that I told you of; and this is he of whom I said before[a], (Mat. iii. 11.) He that cometh after me, as to the SECT. XVII. John I. 15.

[a] This was he of whom I said.] This probably might happen at the time when Jesus made his first appearance among those that came to be baptized by John; when at his offering to receive his baptism; though John before had been a stranger to him, and knew him not by any personal acquaintance with him, yet, by some powerful impression on his mind, he presently discerned that this was he whom he before had taught the people to expect and of whose person he had given them so high a character. For it was plainly from his knowledge of him that John at first would have declined baptizing him, as an honour of which he looked upon himself to be unworthy. Nor is it to be doubted, but that when he first knew the person, of whose appearance he had raised such expectations by his preaching, he would immediately be ready to acquaint his hearers that this was he who was intended by him; which they themselves might have been ready to conclude, from the uncommon veneration and respect with which the Baptist treated him who had been always used to treat men with the greatest plainness. And upon this account it may be proper that this testimony of him should be introduced (as I have placed it here) before the particular account that the other evangelists have given of his baptism. Compare Mat. iii. 14. and John i. 27—30.

[b] He

SECT. XVII.

the time of his appearance in the world and of his entrance on the stage of public life, is upon all accounts superior to me, and is deservedly preferred before me; for, though indeed as to his human birth he is younger than me, and did not come into the world till a little after me, yet, in a much more noble and exalted kind of being he existed long before me[b], or even before the production of any creature whatsoever.

John I. 15.

16 And I John the apostle, who had the honour of being numbered among his most intimate friends would, with pleasure, in my own name, and that of my brethren, add my testimony to that of the Baptist[c], as I and they have the greatest reason to do: for of his overflowing fulness have we all received whatever we possess, as men, as Christians, or as apostles; and he hath given us even grace upon grace[d], a rich abundance and variety of favours, which will ever make his name most dear and precious to our souls.

16 And of his fulness have all we received, and grace for grace.

17 For the law was given by Moses, and we own it an honour to our nation to have received it, and to that holy man to have been the messenger of it; yet to the sinner it is a dispensation of death, and passes an awful sentence of condemnation upon him: [but] the Redeemer whom we celebrate is worthy of much more affectionate regards; for grace and truth came by Jesus Christ[e], who gives us an ample declaration of pardon

17 For the law was given by Moses, but grace and truth came by Jesus Christ.

[b] He existed long before me; πρωτός μου ἦν.] This must undoubtedly refer to that state of glory in which Christ existed before his incarnation, of which the Baptist speaks so plainly, Jo. iii. 31. as abundantly to justify the paraphrase (compare note b on John i. 30. sect. 21.) As for the preceding clause, ἔμπροσθέν μου γέγονεν, which we render, is preferred before me, I think Erasmus truly expresses the sense of it in supposing it to refer to those distinguishing honours which had been paid to Christ in his infancy, by prophets, sages and angels too, which nothing that had yet occurred in the life of John could by any means equal.

[c] I add my testimony to that of the Baptist.] It is most evident that what is said here in this verse, as Chrysostom justly observes, must be considered as the words of the evangelist. John the Baptist had never yet mentioned the name of Jesus; and the expression we all shews it could not be his words; for those to whom he addressed himself do not appear to have received grace from Christ. The last French version, with great propriety, includes ver. 15 in a parenthesis, and so connects this 16th verse with the 14th;—as if it had been said, He dwelt among us—full of grace and truth;—and of his fulness have we all received.

[d] Grace upon grace.] This seems the most easy sense of χάριν ἀντὶ χάριτος, as ἀντ' ἀνιαυσίας is grief upon grief. (Theogn. v. 344.) Compare Ecclus. xxvi. 15—17. and see Blackwall's Sacred Classics, Vol. I. p. 164. Next to this I should prefer Grotius's interpretation, who would render it grace of mere grace: that is, the freest grace imaginable.

[e] Came by Jesus Christ.] I cannot lay so much stress on the word ἐγένετο here, as opposed to ἐδόθη, as to suppose it, with Erasmus, to imply, that whereas Moses was only the messenger of the law, Christ was the original of the grace and truth he brought into the world by the gospel; since all that is intended by ἐγένετο is nothing more than that it was, or that it came, by Jesus pardon and an abundant effusion of the Spirit, those substantial blessings of which the Mosaic dispensation was but a shadow. His gospel therefore should be received with the most cheerful consent; for no man hath ever seen God, nor indeed can see him, as he is an incorporeal and therefore an invisible Being; but the Only-Begotten Son, who is always in the bosom of the Father[f], and ever favoured with the most endearing and intimate converse with him, He hath revealed and made him known in a much clearer manner than he was before, by those discoveries of his nature and will which may have the most powerful tendency to form us to virtue and happiness.

SECT. XVII.

John. 1. 18.

18 No man hath seen God at any time; the Only-Begotten Son, which is in the bosom of the Father, he hath declared him.

IMPROVEMENT.

HAPPY are they that (like this beloved apostle), when they hear the praises of Christ uttered by others, can echo back the testimony from their own experience, as having themselves received of his fulness! May an abundance of grace be communicated from him to us! We are not straitened in him; oh, may we not be straitened in ourselves; but daily renewing our application to him as our Living Head, may vital influences be continually imparted to our souls from him! Ver. 16

With pleasure let us compare the dispensation of Jesus with that of Moses, and observe the excellency of its superior grace and of its brighter truth: but let us remember, as a necessary consequence of this, that if the despisers of Moses's law died without mercy, they shall be thought worthy of a much sorer punishment and a more aggravated condemnation who tread under foot the Son of God. (Heb. x. 28, 29.) 17

May we ever regard him as the Only-Begotten of the Father; and, since he hath condescended so far as to come down from his very bosom to instruct us in his nature and will, let us with all humility receive his dictates and earnestly pray that, under his revelations and teachings, we may so know God as faithfully to serve him now and, at length, eternally to enjoy him. 18

SECT.

Jesus Christ, according to the sense in which the word is often used in other places; and ἐκεῖνος here is used of Christ as well as of Moses: so that both are represented as messengers, though of very different dispensations.

[f] In the bosom of the Father.] Critics generally agree this is one of the places in which εἰς is put for ἐν; but had it here been rendered near his Father's bosom, it might as well have answered the design of the original, and would, I think, have been as expressive of that intimate converse and entire friendship which the phrase implies.—Elsner here cites a passage from Plato concerning the regard due to the authority of a Son of God when speaking of his Father; and it is indeed surprisingly apposite. Elsn. Observ. Vol. I. p. 296.

a When

SECT. XVIII.

Christ is baptized by John, and the holy Spirit descends upon him in a visible form. Mark I. 9—11. Mat. III. 13. to the end; Luke III. 21—23.

MARK I. 9.

SECT. XVIII.

Mark I. 9.

AND it came to pass in those days, when great numbers of all ranks and professions among the Jewish people were baptized[a], that Jesus came from the town of Nazareth in Galilee[b], where he had lived for many years in a retired manner with his parents, to the river Jordan; and applied himself to John, that he might be baptized by him[c]: and was accordingly baptized by John in Jordan, near Bethabara; (see John I. 28. sect. 20.)

14 Now the providence of God had so ordered it, to prevent all appearance of a combination between them, that John was personally a stranger to Christ. (John i. 33.) But nevertheless, as soon as he saw him, he received a secret intimation from above that this was the Messiah upon whom the Spirit should visibly descend; (see the note on John i. 33. sect. 21.) And, upon this account, such was the modesty of John that he was ready to decline the service, and would have

MARK I. 9.

AND it came to pass in those days [LUKE, when all the people were baptized] that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee [unto John, to be baptized of him] and was baptized of John in Jordan. [MAT. III. 13. LUKE III. 21.

MAT. III. 14. But John forbade him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me?

a When all the people were baptized.] John continued baptizing so long after this, that it is very evident the word all must be taken with the restriction used in the paraphrase, as it is oftentimes in other places.

b Jesus came from Nazareth in Galilee.] The learned Dr. Thomas Jackson, in his elaborate examination of this context (see his works, vol. II. p. 515—519), supposes that John the Baptist, inquiring into and hearing the name of Jesus, and the place from whence he came, and comparing it in his own mind with that celebrated prophecy, Isa. xi. 1, 2. concluded that this Jesus, or Divine Saviour, as the word may signify (see noted on Mat. i. 21. p. 52.) coming from Nazareth, the town of Rods, as the etymology of that name imports, was the rod out of the stem of Jesse, upon whom the Spirit should descend, and rest like a dove on a branch. And thus he would reconcile John's address to Christ as so extraordinary a person, Mat. iii. 14, with his declaring (John i. 31, 33.) that he knew him not before: but this seems a very precarious solution, considering how possible it might be that in so large a place as Nazareth there might be several persons of the name of Jesus or Joshua, so very common among the Jews. It appears therefore much more reasonable to have recourse to the solution given in the paraphrase and noted on the last cited text, sect. 21. that he had a secret intimation given him who it was that came to be baptized by him; and all that this very ingenious writer has said to shew the various marks by which John might know Christ, without supposing such a particular revelation as is there suggested, does but confirm me the more in the necessity of admitting it.

c That he might be baptized by him.] By this he intended to do an honour to John's ministry, and to conform himself to what he appointed to his followers: for which last reason it was that he drank likewise of the sacramental cup. And this we may consider as a plain argument that baptism may be administered to those who are not capable of all the purposes for which it was designed. See Dr. Whitby's note on Mat. iii. 16.

d The

SECT. XVIII.

Mat. III. 14.

have hindered him from doing what he proposed; and accordingly said unto him, Thou art so much my superior, that I have need to be baptized by thee with that far nobler baptism which thou art to administer! and dost thou come to me on such an occasion as this? I am confounded at the thought, and cannot but consider it as too high an honour for me. And Jesus, replying, 15 said unto him, Though it be really as thou sayest, yet do not go about to hinder me, but permit [it] now; for, however unable thou mayest be at present to enter into the particular reasons of it, yet, in submission to the Divine appointments, it is decent for us thus to comply with all the duties of religion, and in this manner it becomes us to fulfil all righteousness: and upon this account, as it is a part of my duty to attend this institution, it is therefore a part of thine to administer it. Then, as John knew that it became him not to debate the matter any farther, he permitted him to be baptized.

15 And Jesus answering, said unto him, Suffer it to be so now; for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness. Then he suffered him.

And after Jesus was baptized, as soon as he 16 ascended out of the water to the bank of Jordan, behold, the heavens were immediately opened [d] unto him, and in a wondrous way appeared as if they had been rent asunder directly over his head: and at that very instant, as he was looking up, and praying [e] in a devout and holy rapture; and as John was also fixing his eyes upon this wonderful sight, he saw the Spirit of God, [f] in a corporeal form [g], as a glorious and splendid appearance of fire, descending with a hovering motion

16 And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him [LUKE, being baptized, and praying,] and he saw the Spirit of God descending [LUKE, in a bodily shape] like a dove, and lighting upon him. [MARK I. 10. LUKE III. 21, 22.]

[d] The heavens were immediately opened.] I think it plain (as Grotius and Blackwall have observed) that what is here intended is to intimate, that directly on his coming up out of the water the heavens were opened: for it must certainly appear to be a circumstance of small importance, and of very little use, for the evangelist to say that Jesus went up straightway out of the water after he was baptized; but, if we take it in the other way, it very fitly introduces the remarkable account of what directly followed it. There seems to be such a transposition of the word ευθυς, Mark i. 29. and xi. 2. See Blackwall's Sacred Classics, Vol. I. p. 89.

[e] As he was praying.] It is observable that all the three voices from heaven, by which the Father bore witness to Christ, were pronounced while he was praying, or very quickly after it. Compare Luke ix. 29.—35. and John xii. 28.

[f] He saw the Spirit of God.] There is no question to be made but that this wondrous sight was seen by both of them: for Mark has so expressed it as plainly to refer the seeing it to Christ; and John the Baptist has in another place assured us that he saw it, and took particular notice of it as the sign he was directed to observe as the distinguishing and certain characteristic of the Messiah. John i. 32—34. And I have therefore so expressed it in the paraphrase, as not directly to confine the sight of it to either.

[g] In a corporeal form.] This is the exact English of σωματικω ειδει; a phrase, which might with propriety have been used, though there had not been (as most understand it) any appearance in the shape of the animal here mentioned, but only a lambent flame falling from heaven with a hovering dove-like motion, which Dr. Scott (in his Christian Life, Vol. III, p. 66) supposes to have been all. Dr. Owen and Grotius motion like a dove, and coming upon him; as a visible token of those secret operations of that Blessed Spirit on his mind, by which, according to the intimations God had given in his word, he was anointed in a peculiar manner and abundantly fitted for his public work. (Compare Psal. xlv. 7, and Isa. lxi. 1.)

SECT. XVIII.

Mat. III. 16.

22 And, as a farther testimony of the Divine regard to Christ and of the glorious dignity of his person, this was attended with a very memorable event: for, behold, a loud and awful voice came out of heaven, when it was thus opened, which said, Thou art my beloved Son[h], in thee I am well pleased; that is, I perfectly approve thy character, and acquiesce in thee as the Great Mediator, through whom I will shew myself favourable unto sinful creatures. (Compare Isai. xlii. 1.)

LUKE III. 22. And [lo] a voice came from heaven, which said, Thou art my beloved Son, in thee I am well pleased. [MAT. III. 17. MARK I. 11.]

23 And Jesus at that time, when he received the baptism of John, and was beginning the public exercise of [his ministry,] was about thirty years old[i]; at which time he chose to quit his retirement, being then in the full vigour of nature, and having attained the age in which the priests used to begin their ministrations in the temple. (Compare Numb. iv. 3—47; and 1 Chron. xxiii. 3.)

23 And Jesus himself began to be about thirty years of age.

IMPROVE-

Grotius think it was a bright flame in the shape of a dove; and Justin Martyr (who adds, that all Jordan shone with the reflection of the light) says, that it was εν ειδει περιστερας; and Jerom calls it φασμα ορνιθος, the appearance of a dove. Both these phrases are much more determinate than the original; but I chuse to leave this, and many other things, in the same latitude as I find them.

h Thou art my beloved Son.] Both Mark and Luke express it thus; which inclines me to follow those copies of Matthew which agree with them, rather than the more common reading there, This is my beloved Son. Ευδοκησα properly expresses an entire acquiescence in him.

i And Jesus, when beginning [his ministry] was about thirty years old.] Of the age of Jesus at this time, see note b on Luke iii. 1. p. 94.—I can recollect no sufficient authority to justify our translators in rendering ην ωσει ετων τριακοντα αρχομενος, began to be about thirty years of age, or was now entering on his thirtieth year. To express that sense it should have been ην αρχομενος ετων, &c. as Epiphanius, probably by a mistake, has quoted it.—The learned author of the Vindication of the beginning of Matthew's and Luke's gospel, extremely dissatisfied with all the common versions and explications of these words, would render them, And Jesus was obedient, or living in subjection [to his parents] about thirty years; and produces several passages from approved Greek writers, in which αρχομενος signifies subject. But in all those places it is used in some connection or opposition which determines the sense; and therefore none of them are instances parallel to this. Luke evidently uses αρχομενων chap. xxi. 28. in the sense we suppose it to have here; and since he had before expressed our Lord's subjection to his parents by the word υποτασσομενος, chap. ii. 51, there is great reason to believe he would have used the same here, had he intended to give us the same idea. And indeed, if αρχομενος be allowed to have the signification which this accurate critic (for such he undoubtedly is) contends for here, since there is nothing in the text to limit it, the phrase would intimate he was subject to none after this time; an assertion which I should think both groundless and dangerous.—This clause of Luke has been already mentioned in another place where it was only inserted (out of its proper order) to complete the sentence: see sect. 9.

IMPROVEMENT.

Let our Lord's submitting himself to baptism, teach us a holy exactness and care in the observance of those positive institutions which owe their obligations merely to a Divine command; for thus it also becometh us to fulfil all righteousness; lest by breaking one of the least of Christ's commandments, and teaching others to do it, we become unworthy of a part in the kingdom of heaven. (Mat. v. 19.) SECT. XVIII. Luke III. 23 Mat. III 15

Jesus had no sin to confess or wash away, yet he was baptized; and God owned that ordinance so far as to make it the season of pouring forth the Spirit upon him. And where can we expect this sacred effusion, but in a conscientious and humble attendance on Divine appointments? 16

Let us remember in how distinguishing a sense Jesus is the Christ, the anointed of God, to whom the Father hath not given the Spirit by measure, but hath poured it out upon him in the most abundant degree. Let us trace the workings of this Spirit in Jesus, not only as a Spirit of miraculous power, but of the richest grace and holiness; earnestly praying that this holy unction may, from Christ our head, descend upon our souls! May his enlivening Spirit kindle its sacred flame there with such vigour that many waters may not be able to quench it, nor floods of temptation and corruption to drown it. Mark I. 10

Behold God's beloved Son, in whom he is well pleased! As such let us honour and love him; and, as such, let our souls acquiesce in him, as, in every respect, such a Saviour as our wishes might have asked and our necessities required. Luke III. 22

With what amazement should we reflect upon it that the blessed Jesus, though so early ripened for the most extensive services, should live in retirement even till his thirtieth year! That he deferred his ministry so long should teach us not to thrust ourselves forward to public stations till we are qualified for them, and plainly discover a Divine call: that he deferred it no longer should be an engagement to us to avoid unnecessary delays, and to give God the prime and vigour of our life. 23

Our Great Master attained not, as it seems, to the conclusion of his thirty-fifth year, if he so much as entered upon it; yet what glorious achievements did he accomplish within those narrow limits of time! Happy that servant who with any proportionable zeal dispatches the great business of life! so much the more happy if his sun go down at noon; for the space that is taken from the labours of time will be added to the rewards of eternity.

SECT. XIX.

Christ's victory over the temptations of Satan in the wilderness.
Luke IV. 1—13. Mat. IV. 1—11. Mark I. 12, 13.

Luke IV. 1.

SECT. XIX.

Luke IV. 1.

THEN Jesus, being full of the Holy Spirit, with which he had been just anointed in so extraordinary a manner, returned from Jordan, where he had been baptized; and immediately after this was led by the strong impulse of that Spirit on his mind into that desolate and solitary place the wilderness[a]; that he might there be exercised and tempted by the most violent assaults of the devil; and, by conquering him, might afford an illustrious example of heroic virtue, and lay a foundation for the encouragement and support of his people in their future combats with that malignant adversary.

LUKE IV. 1. AND Jesus being full of the Holy Ghost, returned from Jordan, and [MARK, immediately] was led by the Spirit [MARK, the Spirit driveth him] into the wilderness [to be tempted of the devil.] [MAT. iv. 1. MARK i. 12.]

Mark I. 13. And he was there in the wilderness forty days: and during that time he was tempted by Satan; and also was surrounded with a variety of the most savage and voracious kinds of wild beasts; but they were so overawed by his presence that (as in the case of Daniel when in the den of lions, Dan. vi. 22) none of them offered him the least injury[b]: and in all those days he did eat nothing at all.

MARK i. 13. And he was there in the wilderness forty days, tempted of Satan; and was with the wild beasts, [and in those days he did eat nothing.] LUKE iv. 2.

Mat. IV. 2. And when he had thus fasted forty days and forty nights, as Moses the giver of the law, (Exod.

MAT. iv. 2. And when he had fasted forty days and forty nights, a Into the wilderness.] Christ probably intended this as a devout retirement, to which he found himself strongly inclined, that might give vent to those sacred passions which the late grand occurrences of the descent of the Spirit upon him and the miraculous attestation of a voice from heaven, had such a tendency to inspire. It seems a very groundless conjecture of Mr. Fleming (in his Christology, vol. ii. p. 315) that he was carried through the air to mount Sinai. Mr. Maundrel's is much more probable, that it might be the wilderness near Jordan; which, as he, who travelled through it, assures us, is a miserable and horrid place, consisting of high barren mountains, so that it looks as if nature had suffered some violent convulsions there. (See Maundrel's Travels, p. 78.) This is the scene of the parable of the good Samaritan. (Luke x. 30.) Our Lord probably was assaulted in the northern part of it, near the sea of Galilee, because he is said here to be returning or going back to Nazareth, from whence he came to be baptized: Mark i. p. 108.

b None of them offered him the least injury.] It is strange that any should think he was during this time hunted by the wild beasts: this is the more improbable, as such a hurry would have been inconsistent with the design of God in leading him thither; which was, that he might be assaulted by Satan, at first probably by secret suggestions, the horror of which would be increased by such a gloomy place. The angels might be the instruments of intimidating the beasts. Could Dr. Lightfoot have proved what he asserts, that this happened in October or November, the cold would have been, as he suggests, an additional circumstance of affliction to our Lord: but it seems rather to have been in the beginning of Summer; see note b, on Luke iii. 1. p. 94. and note k, on Mat. iii. 4. p. 97.

c The

nights, he was afterwards an hungered, [LUKE iv. 2.]

(Exod. xxxiv. 28.) and Elias the great restorer of it, had done before him, (1 Kings xix. 8.) having been thus far miraculously borne above the appetites of nature, at length he felt them and was very hungry; but was entirely unprovided with any proper food.

3 And when the tempter came to him, he said, If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread. [LUKE iv. 3.]

And just at that time the tempter coming to him[c] in a visible form (putting on a human appearance, as one that desired to inquire farther into the evidences of his mission) said, If thou art the Son of God, in such an extraordinary manner as thou hast been declared to be, and art indeed the promised Messiah, who is expected under that character[d], command that these stones become loaves [of bread] to relieve thy hunger; for in such a circumstance it will undoubtedly be done. 3

4 But [Jesus] answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. [LUKE iv. 4.]

But Jesus answered, and said unto him, It is written in the sacred volume, (Deut. viii. 3.) "Man shall not live by bread only, but by every word proceeding out of the mouth of God, or by whatever he shall appoint for the preservation of his life." He can therefore support me without bread, as he fed the Israelites in the wilderness[e]; and, on the other hand, even bread itself, if these stones were turned into it, could not nourish me without his blessing; which I could not expect, were I to attempt a miracle of this kind merely in compliance with thy suggestions, without any intimation of my Father's will. 4

5 Then the devil taketh him up into [Jerusalem] the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple; [LUKE iv. 9.]

Then, as the devil found it was in vain that he had tempted Christ to a distrust of Providence, he was for trying to persuade him to presumption: and to this end he taketh him along with him[f] to Jerusalem, which, being the place where God dwelt in so distinguished a manner, was commonly called the Holy City[g]; and there he setteth 5 c The tempter coming to him.] Our translation, which in its rendering of these words is not so literal as the version I have given, seems to intimate, what is not any where asserted in the sacred story, that this was the first time the tempter came unto him; a circumstance which can hardly be supposed.

d The promised Messiah, who is expected under that character.] That the Jews supposed the Messiah would be in a very extraordinary manner the Son of God, appears from comparing Mat. xiv. 33. xvi. 16. xxvi. 63. John i. 34, 49, xi. 27. xx. 31. and Acts viii. 37.

e As he fed the Israelites in the wilderness.] It is to this the passage that is quoted here hath a plain reference, as it stands in the Old Testament.

f Taketh him along with him.] This is the exact English of παραλαμβανει. (See Elsner. Observ. in loc.) But whether he did or did not transport him through the air, cannot, I think, be determined from this passage.

g The holy city.] This is a phrase that frequently, and very properly, is used to express Jerusalem. (Compare Neh. xi. 1. Isa. lii. 1. Dan. ix. 24. and Mat. xxvii. 53. The heathen writers, in like manner, often

SECT. XIX.

Mat. IV. 6.

teth him on one of the battlements of the temple[h], which in some parts of it, and particularly over the porch, was so exceeding high that one could hardly bear to look down from it[i]. And as he stood upon the brink of this high precipice, the tempter saith unto him, If thou art indeed the Son of God, cast thyself down courageously from hence, and mingle with those that are assembled for the worship of God in yonder court. The sight of such a miracle will undeniably convince them of the truth of thy pretensions; and thou canst have no room to doubt of thy safety; for thou well knowest it is written, (Psal. xci. 11, 12.) "He shall give his angels a charge concerning thee, to keep thee[k]; and they shall bear thee up in their hands, lest thou shouldest by any accident dash thy foot against a stone." And surely the Son of God may depend upon a promise which seems common to all his saints.

6 And saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down [from hence] for it is written, He shall give his angels charge concerning thee [to keep thee] and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone, [LUKE iv. 9, 10, 11.]

7 And Jesus answering, said unto him, It is also written, to prevent the ungrateful abuse of such gracious promises as these, (Deut. vi. 16.) "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God;" by demanding farther evidence of what is already made sufficiently plain[l], as my relation to God is, by the miraculous and glorious testimony he hath so lately given me.

7 [And] Jesus [answering] said unto him, It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God. [LUKE iv. 12.]

8 Again, the devil being resolved once more to attack him by the most dangerous temptation he could devise, taketh him up into a mountain in those parts, which was exceeding high; and from thence, in a moment of time, sheweth him, in an artful visionary representation, all the most magnificent kingdoms of the world, and all the luxury, and often call those cities holy in which any of their deities were supposed to hold their special residence and from whence their oracles were delivered. (See Elsner. Observ. Vol. i. p. 17, 18.

8 Again, the devil taketh him up to an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them, [in a moment of time.]—[LUKE iv. 5.]

h One of the battlements of the temple.] Though pinnacle agrees very well with the etymology of the Greek word, yet, according to its use among us, it leads the English reader to imagine that he stood on the point of a spire. The truth is, the roof of the temple was flat, and had a kind of balustrade round it (see Deut. xxii. 8.) and somewhere on the edge of this battlement we may suppose that Satan placed Christ in his attacking him with this temptation.

i Hardly bear to look down from it.] Josephus gives us this account of it, Antiq. Jud. lib. xv. cap. 11. (al. 14.) § 5. p. 781. Edit. Havercamp.

k A charge concerning thee, to keep thee.] Many (after Jerom) have observed that Satan made his advantage of quoting scripture merely by scraps, leaving out those words, in all thy ways. The cause of truth, and sometimes of common sense, hath suffered a great deal by those who have followed his example.

l By demanding farther evidence of what is already made sufficiently plain.] That this is the purport of the phrase tempting God, is easy to be seen from comparing Exod. xvii. 2, 7. Numb. xiv. 22. Psal. lxxviii. 18. and Psal. cvi 14. See Limborch. Theol. lib. v. cap. 22. § 16.

SECT. xix.

and pomp, and glory of them; displaying to his view one of the finest prospects that the most pleasurable and triumphant scenes could furnish out.[m] And, with the most egregious impudence and falsehood, the devil said unto him, All this extensive power [and] all these splendid things, will I give thee, and all the glory of them, which thou hast now before thee; (for it is all delivered to me[n], who am the prince of this world, and I give it to whom I please:) And great as the gift is, I am so charmed with that wisdom and magnanimity which I have now observed in thee[o], that I propose to give it thee upon the easiest terms thou canst imagine; for all that I desire is that thou shouldest pay me homage for it: if therefore thou wilt but fall down and worship me, upon thy making this little acknowledgment to me, all these things shall be thine.

Luke IV. 6.

Luke IV. 6. And the devil said unto him, All this power [All these things] will I give thee, and the glory of them; for that is delivered unto me, and to whomsoever I will, I give it. [Mat. IV. 9.]

7 If thou therefore wilt [fall down and] worship me, all shall be thine. [Mat. IV. 9.]

Then Jesus, moved with indignation at so blasphemous and horrid a suggestion, answered and said unto him, with becoming resentment and abhorrence, Get thee hence, Satan[p], and begone out of my sight, for I will no longer endure thee near me: for it is written, as a fundamental precept of the law, (Deut. vi. 13.) "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve." It would therefore be unlawful thus to worship thee, who art no other than a mere creature, even though thou wast indeed

8 And Jesus answered and said unto him, [Get thee hence] Get thee behind me, Satan, for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve, [Mat. IV. 10.]

[m] One of the finest prospects that the most pleasurable and triumphant scenes could furnish out.] As Christ was probably attacked with this temptation upon some mountain in the wilderness, this beautiful and taking prospect that was represented to him, being set off by the horror of the place he was in, would in such a contrast appear peculiarly charming: see note a, p. 112.

[n] For it is all delivered to me.] Grotius has well observed that this contains a vile insinuation that God had done what none that truly understands the nature of God and the creature can suppose possible, namely, that he had parted with the government of the world out of his own hands. And we may add to this, that in the text which Christ has quoted there is enough to overthrow that notion; since God's appropriating to himself the worship of all his creatures, plainly implies his universal empire and dominion over all, and the regard he has to the religious adoration and obedience of all the subjects of his kingdom.—It is remarkable that, among other things which several heathen writers learnt of the primitive Christians, this was one; to represent evil spirits as tempting men from their duty by views of worldly riches and grandeur; over which, Porphyry in particular says, they often would pretend to much more power than they really have. See Elsner. Observ. Vol. I, p. 18, 19.

[o] I am so charmed with that—which I have now observed in thee.] This seems the most plausible view in which the temptation could be introduced.—It is plain from the next verse that this was the last temptation; but Luke makes it the second: whence it evidently appears that Luke did not confine himself exactly to observe the order of time in his story; a remark of vast importance for settling the Harmony. See note g on Luke i. 3. p. 22.

[p] Get thee hence, Satan.] The word ὑπαγε plainly expresses his authority over Satan, as well as his detestation of so vile a suggestion.

[q] The

SECT. XIX.

deed his deputy on earth ; and how much more then must it be so, as thou art in reality the great avowed enemy of God and man[q]? for such, under all thy disguise, I well know thee to be.

Luke IV. 13.

And when the devil had ended all the temptation we have given an account of, being so baffled and confounded as not to be able to present any others which seemed more likely to succeed, he departed from him for a season ; yet secretly meditating some future assault. (Compare John xiv. 30)

13 And when the devil had ended all the temptation, he departed from him for a season.

And, then the devil having left him, behold, a detachment of angels came and waited upon him[r], furnishing him with proper supplies for his hunger, and congratulating so illustrious a victory over the prince of darkness.

MAT. IV. 11. Then the devil leaveth him ; and behold, angels came and ministered unto him. [MARK I.—13.]

IMPROVEMENT.

Mat. IV. 1, & seq.

WHO can read this account without amazement, when he compares the insolence and malice of the prince of darkness with the condescension and grace of the Son of God !

What was it that animated and emboldened Satan to undertake such a work ? Was it the easy victory he had obtained over the first Adam in Paradise ? or was it the remembrance of his own fall, from whence he arrogantly concluded that no heart could stand against the temptations of pride and ambition ? Could he, who afterwards proclaimed Christ to be the Son of the Most High God, and had perhaps but lately heard him owned as such by a voice from heaven, make any doubt of his Divinity ? Or, if he actually believed it, could he expect to vanquish him ? We may rather conclude that he did not expect it ; but, mad with rage and despair, he was determined at least to worry that Lamb of God which he knew he could not devour ; and to vex with his hellish suggestions

q The great avowed enemy of God and man.] This odious character is intimated in the name Satan, which our Lord gives him, by which he made it to appear he knew him, however he might seek to be disguised. If we suppose him now to have worn the form of an angel of light (as 2 Cor. xi. 14,) it will make both this and the former temptation look more plausible: for thus he might pretend, in the former, to take the charge of Christ in his fall, as one of his celestial guards ; and in this, to resign him a province which God had committed to his administration and care. And this may be consistent with supposing that he first appeared as a man (it may be, as a hungry traveller who pretended to ask the miracle of turning stones into loaves for his own supply), for angels under the Old Testament had often worn a human form, Compare Gen. xviii. 2. xix. 1. 10, 16. Josh. v. 13, 14. Judg. vi. 11, 12. and xiii. 3, 8, 10.

r Angels came and waited upon him.] The word διακονειν does often signify to wait at table ; see Mat. vii. 15. Luke xvii. 8. xxii. 27. and John xiii. 2.—As one celestial spirit might have been abundantly sufficient for the relief of our Lord's necessities, it is reasonable to suppose that the appearance of a number of them upon this occasion was to do him the more illustrious honour after this horrible combat with Satan, to which, for wise and gracious reasons, he was pleased to condescend.

suggestions, that innocent and holy soul which he knew he could never seduce. Wretched degeneracy! How art thou fallen, O, Lucifer, son of the morning! to be thus eagerly driving on thine own repulse and disgrace! SECT. XIX. Mat. IV. 1.

But, on the other hand, how highly are we obliged to our Great Deliverer, who hath brought forth meat out of the eater, and sweetness out of the strong? who can sufficiently adore thy condescension, O blessed Jesus! who wouldst permit thyself to be thus assaulted and led from place to place by an infernal spirit, whom thou couldst in a moment have remanded back to hell to be bound in chains of darkness and overwhelmed with flaming ruin! Ver. 5—8

The apostle tells us why he permitted this: it was that, having himself suffered, being tempted, he might by this experience that he had of Satan's subtilty, and of the strength of his temptations, contract an additional tenderness and be the more inclined, as well as better able, to succour us when we are tempted. (Heb. ii. 18.) Let this embolden us to come unto the throne of grace, to obtain mercy, and find grace to help in the time of need. (Heb. iv. 16.)

Let us remember and imitate the conduct of the Great Captain of our Salvation; and, like him, let us learn to resist Satan, that he may flee from us. Like Christ, let us maintain such an humble dependance on the Divine blessing as never to venture out of the way of it, be the necessity ever so urgent: nor let us ever expose ourselves to unnecessary danger, in expectation of extraordinary deliverance. Like him let us learn to overcome the world, and to despise all its pomps and vanities when offered at the price of our innocence. Ver. 3, 6, 8, 9

To furnish us for such a combat, let us take the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God. Let us not only make ourselves familiarly acquainted with the words of scripture, but let us study to enter into the true design and meaning of it; that so, if Satan should attempt to draw his artillery from thence, we may be able to guard against that most dangerous stratagem, and to answer perverted passages of holy writ by others more justly applied. 4, 7, 10, 6

Once more; when the suggestions of Satan grow most horrible, let us not conclude that we are utterly abandoned by God, because we are proved by such a trial; since Christ himself was tempted even to worship the infernal tyrant. But in such cases let us resolutely repel the solicitation, rather than parley with it, and say in imitation of our Lord's example, and with a dependance on his grace, Get thee behind me, Satan. 9

If our conflict be thus maintained, the struggle will ere long be over; and angels, who are now the spectators of the combat, will at length congratulate our victory. T 10, 11

SECT.

SECT. XX.

John the Baptist being examined by the great men among the Jews acknowledges that he was not the Christ; and refers them to one among them whom he confesses to be vastly his superior. John I. 19—28.

JOHN I. 19.

SECT. XX.

John I. 19.

WE have already taken notice of the honourable testimonies that were given by John in a more general way to the Messiah in his discourses to the people, before Jesus was baptized. We shall proceed to others that were more particular, which followed after that event; and this which we shall now produce is the testimony of John, when the sanhedrim or grand council of the Jews at Jerusalem sent some who were reckoned among the most venerable and holy men of the nation, even some of the priests and Levites, to inquire of him, saying, Tell us plainly who art thou that drawest such a crowd of people after thee, and pretendest to something so uncommon?

JOHN I. 19.

AND this is the record of John, when the Jews sent priests and Levites from Jerusalem, to ask him, Who art thou?

20 And John, according to the natural plainness of his temper, presently replied to their inquiry; and with the utmost freedom he most readily acknowledged, and did not at all affect either to deny or to disguise his real character; but in the strongest terms he solemnly protested[a], I am not the Messiah, nor would I in the least pretend to arrogate to myself the honours which are due to none but him.

20 And he confessed, and denied not; but confessed, I am not the Christ.

21 And, upon this, they farther asked him, What art thou then, if thou art not the promised Messiah? Art thou the celebrated Elijah[b], come down from that abode in heaven to which he was miraculously translated (2 Kings ii. 11.) to introduce the great and terrible day of the Lord? (Mal. iv. 5.) And in reply to this he said, with the same plainness as before, Though it is true that I am come in the spirit and power of Elijah, yet a Solemnly protested.] The word ωμολογησεν is the same which is rendered acknowledged in the former clause; but being thus repeated, its signification seems to be heightened, especially by its opposition to ουκ ηρνησατο, he denied not.

21 And they asked him, What then? Art thou Elias? And he saith, I am not. Art thou that prophet? And he answered, No.

b Art thou the celebrated Elijah?] It is plain by this question, that they were strangers to the parentage of John the Baptist. And with regard to the reply he makes to this inquiry, there is no scruple to be made, but that the Baptist might justly deny that he was Elijah, as he indeed was not that prophet, though he came in his spirit. See Luke i. 17. p. 33.

c Art

SECT. XX.

yet I am not he. And they again inquired of him, Art thou a prophet of the former generation raised from the dead? And he directly answered, No.

John I. 21.

22 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? that we may give an answer to them that sent us: What sayest thou of thyself?

Now as it only was in negatives that he had hitherto replied, they said unto him therefore yet once more, Tell us then plainly who art thou? that we may in a more direct and satisfactory manner give an answer to them that sent us: What dost thou say concerning thyself? And, that they might not be mistaken in his character, and might be wholly left without excuse if they regarded not the end for which he came, he said, I am (what I have frequently before declared myself to be) the voice of one crying here in the wilderness[d], and saying, Make the way of the Lord clear and straight, by removing every obstruction; for he is now appearing for such gracious purposes as demand the most cheerful reception; as Isaiah the prophet said, in a passage which you cannot but be acquainted with. (Isa. xl. 3)

22

23 He said, I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness, Make straight the way of the Lord; as said the prophet Esaias.

23

24 And they which were sent, were of the Pharisees:

Now the messengers that came on this errand were of the sect of the Pharisees; who, as on the one hand they professed a great regard for the prophets, and believed their existence in a future state, so on the other hand they strenuously opposed

24

[c] Art thou a prophet of the former generation raised from the dead?] It is necessary that this question should be understood with such a limitation, because John the Baptist was really a very illustrious prophet, as we may plainly see from what is said by Christ himself, Matth. xi. 9. And this interpretation (which is largely vindicated by Castalio) seems much preferable to that of Theophylact and Erasmus, who, because of the article ο προφητης, would render it as we do, that prophet; concluding without any proof, that the Jews understood Deut. xviii. 18, not of the Messiah himself, but of some prophet of considerable note, who was to introduce him: and Grotius has supposed the question that they offer to refer to Jeremiah, of whose return to life there was a mighty rumour that prevailed among the Jews. (Compare Matth. xvi. 14.) But I can see no reason to restrain it to a particular prophet; and since (as Limborch well observes in his dispute with Orobio the Jew) that text in Deuteronomy was the clearest and strongest in all the Mosaic writings to enforce the necessity of submitting to the Messiah, it is probable John would have corrected so great a mistake if they had put the question to him upon this presumption. The best French versions render it as I have done: and indeed it seems to me that the word prophet, in the evangelists, generally signifies one of those holy men who were the messengers of God to Israel of old; which especially appears from Mark vi. 15. where to be a prophet, and to be as one of the prophets, are spoken of as distinct, which they could not be but on this interpretation: and if the alternative η be left out, and it be read as it is in some manuscripts and printed copies, He is a prophet like one of the prophets, there will be a foundation for the same remark, and one of the prophets must signify one of the ancient prophets.

[d] I am the voice of one crying in the wilderness.] The late Archbishop of Cambray beautifully illustrates the humility of this reply, as if this illustrious prophet had said, "Far from being the Messiah, or Elias or one of the old prophets, I am nothing but a voice; a sound that, as soon as it has expressed the thought of which it is the sign, dies into air, and is known no more." See Fenel. Oeuvres Philos. Vol. II. p. 193.

SECT. XX.

opposed any innovations in religion which were not warranted by the tradition of the elders.

John I. 24. And therefore, upon hearing this account that John the Baptist gave them of himself, they asked him again, and said unto him with some warmth, Why then dost thou take upon thee thus to baptize[e] all that appear to be awakened by thy preaching, in token of the forgiveness of their sins; since, by thine own confession, thou art neither the Messiah, nor Elijah, nor even a prophet of lower rank raised from the dead?

25 And they asked him, and said unto him, Why baptizest thou then, if thou be not that Christ, nor Elias, neither that prophet?

26 And John answered them, by repeating the testimony he had formerly borne to the people (Luke iii. 16. p. 102), saying, I indeed baptize you with water; but there is one that for some time has stood in the midst of you, and is now coming to be daily conversant among you, whom as yet you know not to be so eminent a person, who will administer a much more noble baptism, attended with such miraculous effects as will abundantly justify mine. And this is he that cometh after me, as to the time of his appearance in the world, whom yet I have declared to have existed long before me; and who is therefore upon all accounts deservedly preferred before me, as being one, whose glorious dignity is such as that I freely own him to be vastly my superior; of whom I am not worthy to be employed in any office as his menial servant, not even to unloose the latchet of his shoe, or to untie the string with which his sandals are bound on.

26 John answered them, saying, I baptize with water; but there standeth one among you whom ye know not;

27 He it is who, coming after me, is preferred before me, whose shoes' latchet I am not worthy to unloose.

28 These things passed on the other side Jordan, at a place called Bethabara, or the house of passage; which lay near that part of the river which was miraculously dried up that the Israelites under the command of Joshua might pass over into Canaan (See Josh. iii. 16. and Judges xii. 6.) which was the place where John was now baptizing.

28 These things were done in Bethabara beyond Jordan, where John was baptizing.

IMPROVE-

e Why then dost thou take upon thee thus to baptize?] It is not to be certainly determined from this text whether the baptism of proselytes was then in use among the Jews or not. The words indeed will make a very strong and well adapted sense, should they be understood, as if it had been said, Why is it then that thou dost institute such a new rite as this? But surely too, they will be very proper in the other sense, if we should take them to imply, Why is it then that thou dost take upon thee, without any commission from the sanhedrim, to administer baptism? and that, not only (as is usual) unto those who before this were heathens, but even to the Jews? And this (for reasons which it would not be proper here to enter upon at large) I take to be the more probable sense, and so suppose John's use of this ceremony in such a manner to be a strong intimation that Jews, as well as Gentiles, must become proselytes to the new dispensation that was then opening to the world; and

IMPROVEMENT.

How remarkably were the words of our blessed Redeemer fulfilled in John, He that humbleth himself shall be exalted! (Luke xviii. 14.) He declined assuming the name of any of the servants of God among the prophets; and yet our Lord bore testimony to him as of a higher rank than any of the prophets, than whom there was none greater among those that had in a natural way been born of women. (Luke vii. 28.) SECT. XX. Ver. 20, 21

Did John, this great and illustrious saint, speak of himself as unworthy to untie even the sandals of Christ; what reverence then do we owe him? and what reason have we to admire his condescension, that he should honour us, who are so much more unworthy, with the title of his servants? 27

Let not any, the most distinguished of that happy number, wonder if they be unknown by the world, and perhaps too, slighted and despised; since it appears that even Jesus himself, not only at his first appearance stood unknown among the Jews, but afterwards was rejected by them, when his claim was solemnly entered and his miracles most publicly wrought. 26

Vain, and worse than vain, was this message and inquiry which when answered, was so soon overlooked and forgot. May Divine grace teach us to inquire as those that are in earnest in our search! and then shall we know to saving purposes, if we thus follow on to know the Lord. (Hos. vi. 3.) 19, &c.

SECT. XXI.

John the Baptist bears a repeated testimony to Jesus as the Lamb of God; which proves an occasion of introducing some of his disciples into an acquaintance with him. John I. 29—42.

John I. 29.

THE next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.

John I. 29.

THE next day, after John had returned this answer to the priests and Levites who were sent to inquire into his character and mission, he seeth Jesus (who was now returned from his temptation in the desart coming towards him; and says to them that were near him, Behold, with the strictest attention and regard, that innocent and holy Person, who may properly be called the Lamb of God; as it is he that is the great SECT. XXI. John I. 29.

and howsoever holy they imagined themselves to be, yet they all stood in absolute need of being washed from their sins; as he before had most emphatically declared, Mat. iii. 8, 9. p. 100.

a The

SECT. XXI.

great atoning sacrifice, of which the lambs, that by Divine command are daily offered in the temple, were intended to be types; which expiates and takes away the sin[a] of the whole world, and is set forth to be a propitiation, not only for the Jews, for whom alone the sacrifices of the law were offered, but for the Gentiles too, that through his name whosoever believeth in him may receive remission of sins. And I now point him out, and tell you, This is he of whom I formerly have said, That after me there comes a man who is to be preferred abundantly before me, as being one that is incomparably greater and more excellent than I; for he existed long before me[b]. (Compare John i. 15, 27. p. 105, 120.) And, till the time of his appearance in a public way, I was a stranger to him, and did not personally know him; for it was ordered so by Providence that, notwithstanding the relation which there was between us, we were not brought up in any intimacy of acquaintance with each other[c]; yet in the general I was aware of his intended approach; and it was chiefly for this end, with a particular regard to him, that I came (as you see) baptizing with water, that he might thus

John I. 29.

30 This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man, which is preferred before me; for he was before me:

31 And I knew him not; but that he should be made manifest to Israel, therefore I am come baptizing with water.

[a] The Lamb of God, which expiates and takes away sin.] It is well observed by the author of that excellent treatise, called Christ the Mediator, that this is the only sense in which a lamb can be said to take away sin. Many suppose this refers to the paschal lamb; but that was not in its chief intention so much an expiatory, as an eucharistical sacrifice. Grotius strangely enervates the force of this text, by chusing to explain it of that reformation of the lives of men, to which Christ did not only press them by the doctrine that he taught, but gave them an example of it in his death, redeeming them (as it is said) from their vain conversation with his own precious blood. (1 Pet. i. 18, 19.) Whereas there is not any thing more evident, than that the great design for which he died, was to atone for sin, and to exempt us from the punishment that our iniquities deserved; that, having put away sin by the sacrifice of himself we might have redemption through his blood, even the forgiveness of our sins. Compare Heb. ix. 26, 28. Eph. i. 7. and Col. i. 14.

[b] For he existed before me.] Dr. Hammond abundantly vindicates this interpretation. Had πρωτος here, as in some other places, signified chief, εστι, not ην, would have been joined with it, and John the Baptist would have said he is, and not he was my chief, which would apparently have been a very flat tautology, instead of a reason; whereas Christ's having existed before John, though he was born after him, was a most convincing proof that he was a very extraordinary person, and was the strongest reason that could well have been assigned to shew that he was worthy of their superior regard. Compare note [b] on John i. 15. p. 106.

[c] We were not brought up in any intimacy of acquaintance with each other.] This was very surprising, considering how nearly related they were to each other, and how remarkable the conception and birth of both of them had been, as well as what frequent interviews they might have had at the yearly feasts at Jerusalem. There seems to have been a particular hand of Providence in thus preventing that acquaintance that might otherwise have grown up to an intimacy and tenderness of friendship, which in the eyes of a prejudiced and censorious world might have rendered John's testimony to Christ something suspected. It is probable that both Zacharias and Elizabeth died while John was very young; and then he might soon forget Jesus, though he had seen him in his infancy.

SECT. XXI.

thus he more remarkably made manifest to Israel, and might be introduced with greater solemnity.

John 1.32.

32 And John bare record, saying, I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him:

And John proceeded at the same time, while Jesus was before him, and bore his testimony to him, saying, 'This must be certainly the Son of God; for I declare, that when he was baptized I plainly saw the Holy Spirit, in a surprising token of his presence, descending, with a hovering motion like a dove, from heaven, and it abode upon him.

33 And I knew him not; but he that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost.

And that you may not suspect any confederacy between us, I repeat the assurance which I but just now gave you, that I did not personally know him: but as he was approaching to me, I had a secret intimation given me[d] that it was he whom I should see to be distinguished by this sign; for he that sent me to baptize with water, as an earnest of that nobler baptism which is now soon to be expected, even that God whose messenger I am, he said unto me by an unquestionable revelation, 'This is the sign that I will give thee, that upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending in a corporeal and miraculous appearance, and remaining upon him, this is he that baptizeth with the Holy Spirit.

34 And I saw and bare record, that this is the Son of God.

And I saw this sign with my own eyes; and upon this convincing evidence it is that I have testified already, and still go on to testify, that this is really the Son of God, who is come into the world in a human form to accomplish the great work of redemption and salvation; who is therefore most reverently and affectionately to be received by us, as we regard his Father's protection and favour.

35 Again the next day after, John stood, and two of his disciples:

Again it came to pass on the next day, that John was standing near the same place, and two of his disciples at that time were with him[e]:

36 And looking upon Jesus as he walked, he saith, Behold the Lamb of God.

And looking stedfastly at Jesus[f], as he was walking at some little distance, he takes occasion to repeat his former declaration, and says to his disciples, that he might lead them to a due regard to Christ, Behold the Lamb of God, whom I before

[d] I had a secret intimation given me.] The supposition of this, which is so perfectly agreeable to John's prophetic character, easily reconciles this text with John's respectful speech to Christ when he came to be baptized (Mat. iii. 14. p. 108), as Jansenius, and before him, Chrysostom, observed.

[e] Two of his disciples were with him.] It plainly appears by ver. 40, that Andrew was one of these; and perhaps John, the beloved apostle, might be the other; who being the penman of this gospel, does frequently conceal his name. Compare John xiii. 23. and xx. 2.

[f] Looking stedfastly on Jesus.] This seems the most exact signification of the word ἐμβλέψας, and I have thus translated it again in ver. 42.

SECT. xxi.

I before have represented as the great expiatory sacrifice for the sins of men.

John i. 37. And when the two disciples that were with him heard him speak such high and honourable things of Christ, they took such notice of it that they immediately went on and followed Jesus, who was then returning to a lodging which he had

38 at a small distance from that place g. And Jesus turning back, and seeing them intent on following and coming after [him,] says to them, not to discountenance and turn them back, but to encourage and invite them to a free converse with him, What do you seek? and what may be the business that you have with me? And they said to him, with the greatest reverence and respect, Rabbi, (which being translated from the Syriac, which was the language that was then spoken by the Jews, is the same with master,) may we have leave to ask thee where dost thou dwell? for we are desirous of making thee a visit, that we may enter into some conversation with thee, which would not be so proper or convenient in this public way. And, pleased to 39 hear of the inquiry they made, he says unto them, Come with me now, and see where it is I lodge; for you shall both be welcome to attend me home. And they most readily complied with his kind invitation, and came and saw where he dwelt, taking particular notice of the place; and they went in and continued with him all the remainder of that day; it being then about the tenth hour, or four in the afternoon; so that they had an opportunity of spending the whole evening in conversation with him abundantly to their delight and satisfaction.

40 Now Andrew, the brother of Simon Peter, who will make so considerable a figure in this history, was one of the two disciples that heard John [speak of Jesus] in the manner we have before

41 related, and followed him. And so exceedingly was he transported with the pleasure that he found in his acquaintance with him, that he was ready to impart the joyful news to others, to whom he knew it would be welcome; and hastening

37 And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus.

38 Then Jesus turned and saw them following, and saith unto them, What seek ye? They said unto him, Rabbi, (which is to say, being interpreted, Master,) where dwellest thou?

39 He saith unto them, Come and see. They came and saw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day; for it was about the tenth hour.

40 One of the two which heard John speak, and followed him, was Andrew, Simon Peter's brother.

41 He first findeth his

g A lodging at a small distance from that place.] As Jesus was a person who had no attendants, and was a stranger in this country, we may conclude that he had only some obscure and private lodging here; which must have been at no great distance from the place where John baptized, as may be gathered from his appearing there from day to day. And by this means he did an honour to John's ministry, and had an opportunity of receiving his testimony.

his own brother Simon, and saith unto him, We have found the Messias, (which is, being interpreted, the Christ.)

tening to communicate it to his friends, as the most acceptable tidings he could bring them, he first findeth his own brother Simon[h], and tells him with the greatest joy, We certainly have found the promised Messiah; (which being translated from the Hebrew or the Syriac tongue, is the Christ, or the Anointed One.)

SECT. XXI.

John I. 41.

42 And he brought him to Jesus: and when Jesus beheld him, he said, Thou art Simon the son of Jona; thou shalt be called Cephas (which is, by interpretation, a stone.)

And, that his brother Simon might be satisfied of the truth of what he told him, he brought him unto Jesus: and Jesus looking stedfastly upon him, as if he had read in his countenance the traces of his character and of his future service in the church, said, at his coming to him, Thou art Simon the son of Jonas[i]; and thou shalt also be called Cephas; (which in the Greek may be expressed by Peter, and signifies a rock;) a name well adapted to his character upon account of that resolute and patient firmness with which he should maintain the cause of the gospel; and which also expressed the use which should afterwards be made of him, as he should prove in subordination to Christ one of the great foundations of the church.

42

IMPROVEMENT.

Let our faith daily behold Jesus under the character of the Lamb of God, a Lamb indeed without blemish and without spot; by whose precious blood we are redeemed, as by an infinitely more valuable ransom than silver and gold. (1 Pet. i. 18, 19.) As such let us humbly apply to him to take away our sins, and rejoice that (as the apostle John elsewhere expresses it) he is the propitiation, not for our sins only, but also for the sins of the whole world; all ages and nations being interested in the benefit of his atonement. (1 John ii. 2.)

Ver. 29

Let

h He first findeth his own brother Simon.] This is a much more literal translation of ευρισκει ουτος πρωτος αδελφον τον ιδιον Σιμωνα, than that of the new translation in 1727, which renders it, The first that he found, or happened to meet with, was Peter.— He may perhaps be called his own brother to distinguish him from some other that belonged to the family, who possibly might be his brother-in-law, or was related to him only in half blood. Peter was so remarkable a person that it might be proper to tell us who was the first means of bringing him acquainted with Christ; and if John was the other disciple that is here referred to, he might mean this as an humble intimation that Andrew's zeal was in this respect greater than his own. We may observe here by the way, that Peter was not the first of Christ's disciples, (in which the Papists would have been ready to have gloried), but that another was the means of bringing him to an acquaintance with Jesus.

i Thou art Simon.] Some have thought that Christ intended an allusion here to his name Simon, which may signify a hearer, intimating the candour and impartiality with which he was willing to hear Christ's instructions; (see Dr. Clark's note.) But I did not express this in the paraphrase, because it is not certain. Perhaps our Lord only meant to shew that, though he had never seen him before, he knew his name and his family. Compare ver. 48, and John iv. 16, 19.

SECT. XXI.

Let us consider him as anointed by the Holy Spirit, and as baptizing his church with it; and learn, after the example of John the Baptist, to bear our testimony to him again and again, with continued steadiness and growing zeal.

Ver. 33 & seq.

Our satisfaction in him, as the great and only Saviour, will surely grow in proportion to our acquaintance with him. If Divine grace hath discovered him to us, and taught us to repose the confidence of our souls upon him, let us, like Andrew in the passage before us, be concerned to make him known to others; and especially to lead our nearest relatives and our most intimate friends into that acquaintance with him which is so absolutely necessary to their eternal happiness!

39

41

Let the condescending readiness with which our blessed Redeemer accepted and even invited the visit of these two disciples, engage every preacher of righteousness most willingly to give his private as well as his public labours and his time (valuable as that treasure is) to the service of those who are seriously affected with the concerns of their souls, and are inquiring after the way to salvation. We are sufficiently honoured, if, by any means, and by all, we may be instrumental in promoting that cause which employed the daily labours of God's incarnate Son, and at length cost him his very blood!

39

SECT. XXII.

The calling of Philip, and the interview of Christ with Nathaniel. John I. 43, to the end.

JOHN I. 43.

SECT. XXII.

John I. 43.

THE next day after he had met with Peter, Jesus determined to depart from thence[a] to Galilee, and there to enter on his public ministry; and at his coming thither he findeth Philip, whom he intended for one of his most intimate companions, and says unto him, Follow me; which, being secretly influenced by his grace[b], he

JOHN I. 43.

THE day following Jesus would go forth into Galilee, and findeth Philip, and saith unto him, Follow me.

a Determined to depart from thence: ηθελησεν εξελθειν.] The force of the word θελω seems to be something greater than our translation expresses; and there are several other texts which may suggest the same remark. (Compare Mat. xiv. 5. xix. 17. xx. 14. Luke iv. 6. xxiii. 20. John iii. 8. v. 21, 40. vii. 17. viii. 44. xvii. 24. xxi. 22. and 2 Tim. iii. 12.) Perhaps it may here intimate that our Lord on this occasion broke through the importunity of some who would rather have persuaded him to continue at Bethabara for the advantage of farther testimonies from the Baptist, or to have gone to Jerusalem, where they might imagine that his ministry would have been opened more honourably than in Galilee. Compare John vii. 3, 4.

b Being secretly influenced by his grace.] When we consider how suddenly some of Christ's disciples left their stated employments to follow him (according as we read Mat. iv. 18—22. Luke v. 27, 28. and xix. 5, 6.) it seems reasonable to allow some singular kind of impression on their mind (as he accordingly did. Now Philip was an inhabitant of Bethsaida, which was a town of Galilee on the sea of Tiberias, and was also the city of Andrew and Peter, who have already been particularly mentioned: and by his calling these disciples he gave an intimation of his purpose of making some longer stay in that country.

SECT. XXII.

John I. 44.

44 Now Philip was of Bethsaida, the city of Andrew and Peter.

45 Philip findeth Nathaniel, and saith unto him, We have found him of whom Moses in the law and the prophets did write, Jesus of Nazareth, the son of Joseph.

And Philip, after he was thus become a follower of Christ, findeth his pious friend Nathaniel, who was also of Galilee, and lived in a town of it which was called Cana (John xxi. 2.) and says unto him, We have found him who has so long been earnestly expected by us, even that illustrious and extraordinary Person whom Moses gave us an account of in the law, and whom the prophets also have described[c] in such a strong and lively manner; and with the greatest joy I am come to tell thee I know him who he is, [even] Jesus the son of Joseph, who comes from Nazareth, and is undoubtedly the promised Messiah. 45

46 And Nathaniel said unto him, Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? Philip saith unto him, Come and see.

And when Nathaniel heard that he was one of Nazareth, his prejudice against the place was such that he was ready to conclude that Philip was mistaken; and he therefore said unto him, Can any good thing at all, and especially any such great and glorious blessing as this, come out of a place so infamous as Nazareth[d]? And Philip says unto him, Do not suffer yourself to be borne away by a vain popular prejudice, but come and see; converse with him yourself, and you will soon be satisfied. 46

47 Jesus saw Nathaniel coming to him, and saith of him, Behold an Israelite indeed, in whom is no guile.

Now when Jesus saw Nathaniel coming towards him, (though there was no personal acquaintance between them) at the first sight of him he presently discerns what was his real character, and says concerning him, so loud that he might easily hear it, Behold here cometh one [that is] truly an Israelite (compare Rev. iii. 9. 47

(as there was in the calling of Elisha, 1 Kings xix. 19---21.) which though for the present it superseded the necessity of arguments, yet did not exclude their attending to that afterwards which might be necessary to defend their conduct to others.

c Whom Moses—and the prophets have described: ων εγραψε Μωσης και οι προφηται] This is a very literal translation; for γραφω frequently is used in the same sense elsewhere, and in particular is justly rendered thus, Rom. x. 5. (Compare Josh. xviii. 9. Judg. viii. 14. and Ezra vii. 22. Septuag.)

d A place so infamous as Nazareth.] As Nathaniel was a native of Galilee, it appears from hence that the Galilæans themselves had but an ill opinion of Nazareth, as worse than the rest of that country; and indeed, by the figure its inhabitants make in the evangelists, they seem to have deserved it. See Luke iv. 16, 28, 29. and Mat. xiii. 54, & seq.

SECT. XXII.

John I. 47.

9. and John viii. 39.) a person that indeed deserves the honourable title of one of God's people, and is worthy of his descent from Jacob his pious ancestor, as being a plain and upright man in whom there is no deceit either towards God or man. (See Gen. xxv. 27.)

48 Nathaniel, perfectly surprised at such an unexpected testimony, presently says, with all the natural frankness of his temper, to him, Whence dost thou know me, or how canst thou at once thus undertake to answer for the most secret part of a stranger's character? Jesus replied, and said unto him, I am not so entirely a stranger to thy character as thou art ready to suppose, nor do I take it merely from uncertain report; for before Philip called thee, I saw thee when thou wast alone under the fig-tree[e]; and as I was present in Spirit to observe what passed in that secret retirement, I know how well thou deservest the testimony which I have now borne to thine integrity.

48 Nathaniel saith unto him, Whence knowest thou me? Jesus answered and said unto him, Before that Philip called thee, when thou wast under the fig-tree, I saw thee.

49 Nathaniel was so struck with this express reference to what he knew none could be witness to but God and his own conscience, that all his prejudices were at once removed; and he immediately replied to Christ, and says, with all that openness and candour that was so natural to him, Rabbi, from this one circumstance I cannot but believe all that my friend hath told me concerning thee; and therefore I not only honour thee as a wise and holy teacher, but am convinced that thou art the Son of God; yea, that thou art the promised Messiah, whom we so earnestly have been expecting as the King of Israel; for surely such Divine knowledge can be lodged in no meaner person[f].

49 Nathaniel answered and said unto him, Rabbi, thou art the Son of God, thou art the King of Israel.

And

[e] When thou wast under the fig-tree.] I see no reason at all to think, with Heinsius, that the conviction produced by these words in the mind of Nathaniel proceeded from the allusion he perceived them to bear to Zech. iii. 10. In that day ye shall call every man his neighbour, under the vine, and under the fig-tree. It was Christ's saying that he saw him there that struck his mind in so powerful a manner; and it is very probable that he was then employed in some secret devout meditations. See Dr. Evans's Christian Temper, Vol. II. p. 343.

[f] Such Divine knowledge can be lodged in no meaner person.] Just thus the woman of Samaria argued, John iv. 29. Come see a man which told me all things that ever I did; is not this the Christ? which plainly intimates that they supposed the Messiah would be endowed with the most perfect knowledge, and have the gift of prophecy in the highest degree. There was a great deal of courage in Nathaniel's making such a declaration, if it was before a mixed company: for Christ's assuming the title of the Son of God was afterwards interpreted to be no less than blasphemy. John x. 36. and xix. 7.

[g] Verily,

50 Jesus answered and said unto him, Because I said unto thee, I saw thee under the fig-tree, believest thou? thou shalt see greater things than these.

51 And he saith unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Hereafter you shall see heaven open, and the angels of God ascending and descending upon the Son of man.

SECT. XXII.

John i. 50.

And Jesus upon this replied and said unto him, Dost thou believe me to be the promised Messiah, and the Son of God, merely because I told thee that I saw thee under the fig-tree? Thou, who discoverest so honest and teachable a temper, shalt see much greater things than these to prove it. And he accordingly proceeds and says, not 51 only unto him, but unto all that were then present with him, Verily, verily, I say unto you[g], and solemnly declare it as a most certain truth, to be regarded with the most diligent attention, and received as coming from the mouth of one who is truth itself, That from this time you shall see such a surprising train of miracles[h] wrought by me in the whole course of my succeeding ministry, that it shall seem as if heaven was opened, and all the angels of God were continually (as they appeared in vision to Jacob, Gen. xxviii. 12.) ascending and descending[i] [to wait] upon the Son of man, and to receive and execute his orders: and thus you will be furnished with a most convincing proof that, humble as the form of my present appearance is[k], I am indeed the [g] Verily, verily, I say unto you: αμην αμην, λεγω υμιν.] There is no doubt but that these words are to be taken for a solemn affirmation; in which it is observable that John has constantly repeated the amen, while it is only mentioned once by the other evangelists. And this we may suppose him to have done, either to excite the greater attention, or in a more emphatical and stronger manner to assert the truth, not only of the thing affirmed, but of the person that affirms it. For as amen in Hebrew signifies truth, Isa. lxv. 16, so Christ, as being the true and faithful witness, is called the Amen. Rev. iii. 14. This repeated asseveration therefore may be considered as an intimation to us, not only that the saying unto which it is prefixed is true, but that we should regard it as proceeding from the true and faithful Witness. See Dr. Lightfoot's Harmony, and Hor. Heb. in loc.

[h] From this time you shall see a train of miracles.] Accordingly within three days one glorious miracle was performed by Christ at Cana of Galilee; which being the town to which Nathaniel belonged, there is great reason to believe he was present with the rest of Christ's disciples at it. Compare John ii. 2, 11. sect. 23.

[i] The angels of God ascending and descending.] If Nathaniel was, as some have thought, the person afterwards called Bartholomew, and made an apostle (see Lightfoot's Hor. Heb. on Matth. x. 3.) he must regard the vision of angels attending Christ's ascension as a glorious accomplishment of these words, as his final appearance at the day of judgment, when the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, will yet more eminently be. Compare Matth. xxvi. 64. where απ' αρτι so plainly signifies hereafter, that I much question whether it might not justly have been rendered so here; but where I am dubious, I always chuse the more extensive sense, in which (as here) the more limited is generally comprehended.

[k] Humble as the form of my present appearance is.] Though it be very true, as Dr. Sykes has excellently proved at large, that the phrase Son of man does generally refer to the glorious kingdom over which Christ was to preside, according to the prophecies of Daniel, yet I think it equally evident that it is originally used in the Old Testament in a sense that carries something of humiliation in it. See Job xxv. 6. Psal. viii. 4. cxliv. 3. Isa. li. 12. and especially Psal. lxii. 9. where we justly translate BENEI ADAM, men of low degree. A multitude of texts, as well as this before us, appear with great advantage when this remark is attended to; though Le Clerc cannot by any means be vindicated in confining his interpretation so entirely to this latter view.

SECT. XII.

the illustrious Person foretold under that title, and am intended for that glorious throne, around which the highest angels shall account it their honour to appear as humble attendants, when the whole world shall be convened before it.

John 1. 51.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. 46 How cautiously should we guard against popular prejudices, which possessed so honest a heart as that of Nathaniel, and led him to suspect that the blessed Jesus himself was an impostor, and that no good could be expected from him because he had been brought up at Nazareth! But his integrity prevailed over that foolish bias, and laid him open to the conviction of evidence, which a candid inquirer will always be glad to admit, even when it brings the most unexpected discovery.

47 How amiable is the character here given of Nathaniel! An Israelite indeed, in whom there is no guile! May the attainment of so excellent a character, and a resemblance to him in it, be the daily aim and emulation of all who have the honour to be called into the Israel of God!

48 A constant intercouse with God in secret devotion will be a happy expression of one branch of this sincerity, and an effectual means of promoting the rest. Let it therefore be our care that the eye of him that seeth in secret may often behold us in religious retirement, pouring out our souls before God, and humbly consecrating them to his service. The day will come when those scenes of duty which were most cautiously concealed shall be commemorated with public honour; and when he who now discerns them, and is a constant witness to the most private exercises of the closet, will reward them openly. (Matth. vi. 6.)

51 Happy were those who saw the miracles performed by the Son of man while he was here on earth! and happy those favourite spirits of heaven which were ascending and descending as ministers of his to do his pleasure! But in some degree yet happier are they who, having not seen, have believed; John xx. 29. As their faith is peculiarly acceptable, it shall ere long be turned into sight. They shall behold much greater things than ever were seen below, and more extraordinary manifestations of his glory than they can now conceive; and, being brought with all his people to surround his throne, shall join in those nobler services which attendant angels render him above.

SECT.

SECT. XXIII.

Christ attends a marriage feast at Cana in Galilee, and miraculously changes water into wine. John II. 1—11.

John II. 1.

AND the third day there was a marriage in Cana of Galilee; and the mother of Jesus was there.

John II. 1.

NOW the third day after Christ's coming into Galilee, and discoursing there with Nathaniel in the manner we have related above, there was a marriage at Cana, a town in Galilee,[a] which originally belonged to the tribe of Asher (Josh. xix. 28,) and Mary the mother of Jesus was there;[b] it being the marriage of a near relation or an intimate friend of hers. And Jesus, and those of his disciples that were with him, (namely the two disciples that had followed him from the banks of Jordan, with Peter, Philip, and Nathaniel,) being known to be in the neighbourhood, were invited to the marriage: and Jesus, not affecting the austerities which became the character and ministry of John the Baptist, freely accepted of the invitation, and favoured them with his instructive presence.

SECT. XIII. John II. 1.

2 And both Jesus was called, and his disciples, to the marriage.

2

3 And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus saith unto him, They have no wine.

Now, as it was known that Jesus would be present at the feast, this, in conjunction with the events which had lately arisen, occasioned a greater resort of company than was expected; and when the wine provided for the entertainment of the guests fell short, the mother of Jesus, who either had seen some of his miracles in private, or received from him some hint of his intention now[c], thought proper to inform him of it, a Cana, a town in Galilee.] It lay toward the southern part of the land of Asher (Josh. xix. 28.) and might be called Cana in Galilee, to distinguish it from another town of that name in Cœlosyria mentioned by Josephus. Antiq. Judg. lib. xv. cap. 5. (al. 6.) sect. 1. p. 751. Havercamp.

3

b The mother of Jesus was there.] Some have supposed this marriage to be celebrated at the house of Cleopas or Alpheus, whose wife was sister to the mother of our Lord, (John xix. 25,) and one of whose sons was Simon the Cananite, whom some have thought to be so called from his being an inhabitant of this Cana. (Mark iii. 18.) And this may be considered as the more probable, as Mary was not only present at the feast, but was concerned about supplying them with wine; and when the feast was over, we are told at ver. 12. that Jesus was attended, at his leaving Cana, not only with his own disciples, but with his brethren, or his nearest kinsmen, who probably came thither as relations, to be present at the marriage.---As Mary here is spoken of alone, it may be reasonable to conclude that Joseph was now dead, and that he lived not to the time when Jesus entered on his public ministry, especially as he is no where mentioned in the gospel afterwards. See Dr. Lightfoot's Harmony, in loc.

c Either had seen some of his miracles in private, or received some hint, &c.] Without supposing the one or the other of these, one can hardly imagine why she should thus apply to him on this occasion. For she could scarce suppose he had money to buy any large quantity; nor would it have been so proper to have done it if he had, lest it should have been interpreted as an affront to the bridegoom. But the supply that she expected it, and says unto him, Son, dost thou observe they have no wine to carry on the feast?

SECT. XXIII.

John II. 4.

But Jesus, not approving it, that she should take upon her to direct him in the exercise of his miraculous power, says freely to her, with an air of serious rebuke, and in a plainness of language suited to the simplicity of those ages and countries, O woman[d], what hast thou to do with me[e], thus to direct me how and when my miracles are to be wrought? Let me now say it once for all, this is a thing that does not lie within thy proper sphere; and in particular, for what is now proposed, my time of doing it is not yet come;[f] but it is best to wait a little longer, and leave it to my conduct to determine when it will be the fittest and the most convenient season for me to interpose.

4 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, what have I to do with thee? mine hour is not yet come.

5 In this his mother readily acquiesced, as conscious to herself that she had been over hasty in the proposal; but yet, as she inferred from his answer that he intended them some extraordinary expected from him was by his working of a miracle; and it is plain that, notwithstanding the rebuke she justly met with, yet she had still a view to this by her direction to the servants afterwards, ver. 5. to do whatever he should order them.

5 His mother saith unto the servants, Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it.

d O woman.] We have no reason to conclude that there was any rudeness in his addressing to his mother thus. For though indeed it is a manner of expression that is very unusual among us, to call a person woman, when we are speaking to her, if she be one to whom we think that any respect is due; yet some of the politest writers of antiquity make the most well-bred, and accomplished princes use it in their addressing unto ladies of the highest quality; and even servants too are sometimes represented as speaking to their mistresses in the same language. There are some instances of this referred to in Blackwall's Sacred Classicks, Vol. I. p. 206. to which many more might easily be added.

e What hast thou to do with me?] Some have thought, τι εμοι και σοι, might be rendered, What is that to me and thee? "What does it signify to us, or what concern is it of ours, if they want wine?" But Jesus was of so benevolent a temper, and Mary seems to be so far concerned as a relation, that it does not in this sense appear to be so proper a reply. It seems rather to be intended as a rebuke to Mary; and it was surely expedient she should know that Jesus was not upon such occasions to be directed by her. And nothing is more evident than that the phrase in other places has the meaning that our version gives it. See Matth. viii. 29. and Judges xi. 12. 2 Sam. xvi. 10. 1 Kings xvii. 18. 2 Kings iii. 13. and ix. 19. Septuag.

f My time is not yet come.] Some are for adding a note of interrogation here (as Gregory Nyssen does) and so would render it, is not my time yet come? As if he had said, "Am I not old enough to know when to work miracles? and now that I have entered on my public ministry, is it not time that I should be exempt from thine authority, and should be left to govern my own actions without any direction." But I conceive the sense in which it is generally taken to be more natural and easy: and I would rather chuse to understand it of the time when he intended to perform this miracle, for which the proper moment, though very near, was not yet quite come; than to refer it in a more general way to the time of his doing miracles in public, or more particularly to restrain it to the time of his sufferings, which Christ indeed has elsewhere called his hour, and which Mr. L'Enfant supposes him here to intimate that he would not anticipate by provoking the Jews too soon; for thus it would have implied a denial of his mother's request, which it is plain from ver. 5. she did not apprehend, and which the event shews that Christ did not design.

g Was

SECT. XXIII.

dinary supply, she says unto the servants, with some degree of authority, as being in part concerned in managing the feast, Whatever he shall order you, see that you carefully do it; for he may have reasons for it beyond what you imagine. John II. 5.

6 And there were set there six water-pots of stone, after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins a-piece.

Now there were set there, near the room in which the feast was kept, six water-pots or jars of stone, from whence the water might be taken that was made use of by the guests to wash their hands and feet, and that was necessary for the washing of the cups and other vessels that were used at table, according to the Jewish custom of purifying, which in some instances was grown to such a superstitious nicety[g] as to require a considerable quantity of water to be ready upon such occasions: these jars were therefore of a considerable bigness, containing each of them two or three measures[h]. And Jesus chusing, for wise reasons, to make use of these[i] rather than the vessels in which the wine had before been contained, after some convenient pause, that the failing of the wine might be the more observed, goes to the servants that were waiting, and says to them, Fill up those jars with water. And they filled them up to the very brim. And, having presently transformed the water by his Divine power into excellent wine, he says unto them, Now draw some of it out, and carry it to the president

6

7 Jesus saith unto them, Fill the water-pots with water. And they filled them up to the brim.

7

8 And he saith unto them, Draw out now, and bear unto the governor of the feast. And they bare it.

8

g Was grown to such a superstitious nicety.] Besides the purifications that were appointed by the law of God, there was a multitude of others that were then practised in compliance with the tradition of the elders. Compare Mark vii. 3, 4. and see Godwin's Moses and Aaron, lib. iii. cap. 11. § 4.

h Two or three measures.] The measures of the ancients are so very uncertain, that it is hardly possible to determine the exact content of these vessels. Some have computed them to contain about two or three hogsheads; and it is rendered so in our translation as to make them contain above a hundred gallons. But it is hardly probable the vessels were so large; and as the word μετρητας signifies no more than measures, it is much better we should leave it as we find it, unless the quantity could be determined with more certainty. It seems most probable that, as the Jewish bath was the most common measure that was used in liquids, this is the quantity designed where measures are expressed without any limitation. And as the Jewish bath is reckoned to contain four gallons and a half, the content of these vessels, if they are computed only at two measures each, will amount to no less than fifty-four gallons, which may be reckoned a sufficient quantity. See Dr. Lightfoot's Harmony, in loc. and Godwin's Moses and Aaron, lib. vi. cap. 9. ad fin.

i Chusing to make use of these.] Jesus might rather chuse to make use of these large vessels, thus to add to the dignity of the miracle by the liberal quantity of wine produced; which we have no reason to believe was all drank that day. If the feast, as was usual, lasted several days (Gen. xxix. 27, 28. and Judg. xiv. 12—17.) a considerable expence might by this means be saved, and an equivalent given for the additional charge of entertaining so many of his disciples. Not to say that this would prevent any suspicion that the tincture or taste of the water might be derived from any remainder of wine in the vessels; for indeed the goodness of the wine thus made would be sufficient to obviate such a thought.

SECT. xxiii.

sident of the feast. And, in obedience to the orders Jesus gave them, they carried [it] to him.

John II. 9.

Now when the president of the feast had tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it came (though the servants that drew the water very well knew), observing that it had a finer flavour than any they had drank before, the president of the feast calls for the bridegroom, at whose expence he reckoned that this wine had been provided, And says unto him, thou hast acted to-day in a very uncommon manner, for every man that makes a feast first sets out the good wine, and when they have drank plentifully[k], so that their taste is not so delicate as before, then brings out that which is worse; [but] thou hast kept the good wine until now, and towards the conclusion of the feast surprisest us with what is much better than we have yet tasted. This naturally gave the bridegroom an opportunity of declaring that he knew nothing of this new supply; which occasioned an examination of the servants, and so a discovery of what Christ had done in it.

9 When the ruler of the feast had tasted the water that was made wine, and knew not whence it was: (but the servants which drew the water knew;) the governor of the feast called the bridegroom,

10 And saith unto him, Every man at the beginning doth set forth good wine; and when men have well drunk, then that which is worse; but thou hast kept the good wine until now.

This was the beginning of his public miracles[l], which Jesus wrought (as we have now related) in Cana of Galilee, and thereby manifested his glory; and that in such an illustrious manner that his disciples believed on him more stedfastly than before, as the fact was so certain and so remarkable.

11 This beginning of miracles did Jesus in Cana of Galilee, and manifested forth his glory; and his disciples believed on him.

IMPROVE-

k When they have drank plentifully.] Though μεθυειν often signifies to drink to excess, yet it would be very unjust and absurd to suppose that it implies here that these guests had already transgressed the rules of temperance. None can seriously imagine the evangelist so destitute of common sense as to represent Christ as displaying his glory by miraculously furnishing the company with wine to prolong a drunken revel. It is much more reasonable to conclude that it signifies here (as it does in Gen. xliii. 34. Cant. v. 1. and Hag. i. 6. Septuag.) only to drink so freely as innocently to exhilarate the spirits. And even this perhaps might only be the case of some of them, and particularly not of those who, drawn by a desire to converse with Jesus, might be but lately come in.

l This beginning of his public miracles.] This interpretation seems much preferable to that of Grotius, who only supposes that this was the first miracle wrought at Cana, another being afterwards mentioned (John iv. 46. sect. 31), for it is plain there must have been a long series of miracles wrought here to justify such a manner of speaking, which doth not at all appear to have been the case. It rather seems to be here represented only as the first of his public miracles; for it seems probable that the necessities of the family might sometimes have engaged him to have done something miraculous for its relief in private. See note c, p. 131.

IMPROVEMENT.

SECT. XXIII.

WE have here the first of Christ's public miracles, which we find was not wrought till about his thirtieth year. How much sooner could he have glorified himself, and amazed the world by the display of his Divine power? But he waited his Father's call, and the delay added at length to the lustre of his works.

It was performed to grace a nuptial solemnity: and who doth Ver. not see that it was, in effect, a testimony borne to the honour and 1 purity of that happy state on which so much of the comfort of the present generation and the existence of the future regularly depends?

How happy were these guests while Jesus was among them! and 2 how condescending did he appear in making one on the occasion! His social and obliging temper should sweeten ours, and be a lesson to his followers that they avoid every thing sour and morose, and do not censure others for innocent liberties at proper seasons of festivity and joy.

If his mother met with so just a rebuke for attempting to direct 3, 4 his administrations in the days of his flesh, how absurd is it for any to address her as if she had a right to command him on the throne of his glory? And how indecent for us to direct his supreme wisdom as to the time and manner in which he shall appear for us in any of the exigencies of life?

Her submission and faith manifested on this occasion are truly 5 amiable: and with this we have surely reason to admire the benignity and generosity of Christ in this miracle before us; who consulted the pleasure and entertainment as well as the necessity of his followers; and by this abundant supply amply repaid any extraordinary expence which he might have occasioned to the family.

How easily could he, who thus turned water into wine, have 7, 8 transformed every entertainment of a common table into the greatest delicacies, and have regaled himself daily with royal dainties? But, far superior to such animal gratifications, he chose the severities of a much plainer life. Blessed Jesus! who can say whether thou art greater in what thou didst or in what thou didst not do? May none of us thy followers be too intent on indulging our taste or any of our other senses; but, pursuing those intellectual and devotional pleasures which were thy meat and thy drink 10 on earth, may we wait for that good wine which thou reservest for thy people to the last, and for those richer dainties with which thou wilt feast those who shall drink it with thee in thy Father's kingdom! (Mat. xxvi. 29.)

SECT. XXIV.

Our Lord celebrates the first passover of his public ministry at Jerusalem: and vindicates the outer court of the temple from the profanation of those that bought and sold there. John II. 12, to the end.

SECT. XXIV.

John II. 12.

JOHN II. 12.

NOW, after Jesus had attended at this marriage, where he miraculously turned the water into wine, he and his mother, and his brethren (or his near relations) and his disciples, who were now ready to attend him wheresoever he should go, went down from Cana to Capernaum, a city that lay near the north part of the sea of Galilee, on the south border of the land of Naphtali: and at this time the stay they made was but short,

13 for they continued there not many days. And the reason of their leaving it so soon was that the passover of the Jews drew near[a], when it was ordered by the law of Moses that all the males should appear before the Lord (Exod. xxiii. 17. and Deut. xvi. 16.) and therefore Jesus, who maintained a religious regard to the ceremonial as well as the moral part of the law, went up to Jerusalem to worship at the temple.

14 And, at his coming thither, he found, in the outer court and cloysters of the temple, those that, under

JOHN II. 12.

AFTER this, he went down to Capernaum, he and his mother, and his brethren, and his disciples; and they continued there not many days.

13 And the Jews' passover was at hand, and Jesus went up to Jerusalem,

14 And found in the temple those that sold oxen,

[a] The passover of the Jews drew near.] As the evangelists have not expressly determined the number of passovers which happened between the baptism and death of Christ, or during the course of his public ministry, so it is well known that learned men have been much divided in their opinions about them. By far the greater part have supposed there were four; reckoning this the first; the feast mentioned, John v. 1, the second; the passover spoken of, John vi. 4, as the third; and that, at which Christ suffered, the fourth. But there are others of a different opinion. The celebrated Sir Isaac Newton reckons five; the first, this which is now before us; the second, according to him, happened four months after Christ's discourse with the woman of Samaria, John iv. 35. the third, a few days before the story of the disciples rubbing the ears of corn, Luke vi. 1. the fourth, a little after the feeding of the five thousand; and the last, at the time of our Lord's crucifixion. The reasons for this the reader will find at large in Sir Isaac Newton's Observat. on Proph. Part I. chap. 11. and the most considerable of them will be touched upon in their proper places.—Mr. Manne has with great learning and ingenuity attempted to revive a long exploded notion, that Christ's ministry continued but sixteen months; (see Manne's second Dissertation, p. 146, & seq.) so that there were but two passovers during the whole course of it. Mr. Whiston's reasoning against this hypothesis, in the sixth of his late dissertations, appears to me unanswerable. For he there shews that, if this was true, Christ must have travelled on an average near ten miles a day during the course of his ministry. Besides, the transpositions in scripture which this would introduce, seem very unwarrantable and dangerous; and, among other difficulties, it is none of the least that Mr. Manne is obliged to suppose that Christ only purged the temple at his last passover, and consequently that St. John has misplaced this story; though ver. 24, of this chapter, and ver. 22, 23, 24, of the next (sect. 27,) afford such strong arguments to the contrary. Compare note e and note m of this section.

SECT. XXIV.

John II. 14.

oxen, and sheep, and doves, and the changers of money sitting:

under a pretence of accommodating such as came to worship there with proper sacrifices, sold oxen, and sheep and doves [b]; and he also saw there the money-changers sitting at their tables, who, for a certain profit, changed any foreign coin into that which was current, and larger pieces of money into half shekels, which were on some occasions to be paid into the sacred treasury. (Exod. xxx. 15.) Now, at the sight of this, Jesus was moved with a just indignation to think that so sacred a place, honoured with such peculiar tokens of the Divine presence, should be profaned in this audacious manner, and so great an affront be put on the devout Gentiles, in whose court this market was kept; and therefore, having made a whip of the small cords (with which they were used to tie the beasts to some rings fixed in the pavement for that purpose) he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep, and the oxen, which they had brought into it; and he also poured out the money of the exchangers, and overturned the tables at which they were sitting. And he said to them that sold doves, Take all these things away from hence directly; [and] do not, for shame, make my Father's house, by such scandalous practices as these, an house of public traffic, and turn it to a common market-place or exchange. Now, by his saying this, he openly proclaimed that God was his Father [c], and made such a declaration

15 And when he had made a scourge of small cords, he drove them all out of the temple, and the sheep, and the oxen; and poured out the changer's money, and overthrew the tables;

16 And said unto them that sold doves, Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise.

15 16

[b] Sold oxen, and sheep, and doves.] There must have been a grand market for these animals at such times; for Josephus tells us that no less than 256,500 victims were offered at one passover; see Joseph. de Bell. Jud. lib. vi. cap. 9. (al. vii. 17. § 3. p. 399.) Edit. Havercamp.

[c] He openly proclaimed that God was his Father.] The most considerable argument which Mr. Manne has brought to prove that this expulsion of the merchants from the temple happened only in our Lord's last passover, and consequently that it is here transposed, is, that such an open declaration that the Temple was his Father's house would have put him too much into the power of his enemies, and would have been inconsistent with the prudent reserve which Christ kept on this head (see Manne's Dissert. p. 179, 180, and compare Locke's Reasonableness of Christianity, p. 91, & seq.) as well as with the reflection of his brethren; John vii. 3, & seq. the notes on which place in sect. 98. may be consulted here.)—But, in reply to this objection, I would beg leave to observe, (1.) That for Jesus to call the temple his Father's house did not amount to an express declaration that he was the Messiah; since the Jews in general spake of God as their Father, John viii. 41. (See John x. 24, 25. with the note there, sect. 134.) And (2.) That though, in the circumstances that here attended it, there was an oblique intimation of something extraordinary, it might not be so dangerous now as afterwards; because our Lord not having opened the spiritual nature of his kingdom, or as yet rendered himself obnoxious to the Pharisees by such just invectives as he afterwards used, they who expected the Messiah to appear about this time and longed for his appearance, might be inclinable for a while to wait the issue of Christ's pretensions, and so much the rather, as he now wrought some wonderful miracles. (Compare ver. 23, and chap iii. 2.) Accordingly we find in the beginning of the next chapter one of the chief among the Pharisees comes privately to confer with Christ in a very respectable manner. It seems necessary to acquiesce in these solutions, because the conference which declaration of his Divine mission as could not but be greatly observed by the multitude. And his disciples, when they saw so meek a person in such an unusual transport of just displeasure, remembered that it was written of David [d], in words which well expressed the character of Christ on this occasion, (Psal. lxix. 9.) "The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up;" as if it were said, A regard for the honour of thy sanctuary, like a secret flame glowing in my bosom, preys upon my spirits and would have consumed me, had I not given it vent.

SECT. XXIV.

John II. 17.

17 And his disciples remembered that it was written, The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up.

18 A fact so public and remarkable as this could not but immediately come to the knowledge of the priests and rulers of the Jews [e], whose supreme council sate in a magnificent chamber belonging to the temple [f]: some of them therefore when they heard of it, answered and said unto him, By what authority dost thou thus take upon thee to reform what is amiss here, and what sign dost thou shew us, seeing that thou dost these things, to prove thy having a Divine commission, since it is certain thou hast none from 19 the government? Jesus answered and said unto them, You shall not want convincing evidence that I have an authority far superior to what man can give me; for if you demolish this temple, I promise and assure you I will raise it up again 20 in three days [g]. The Jews then said unto him, in proud derision and contempt of what they did not understand, This temple hath been no less

18 Then answered the Jews and said unto him, What sign shewest thou unto us, seeing that thou doest these things?

19 Jesus answered and said unto them, Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up.

20 Then said the Jews, Forty and six years was this temple in which refers to the miracles wrought at this feast is expressly said to have been before John the Baptist was imprisoned. Compare John iii. 22—24. sect. 27.

d Remembered that it was written of David.] That these words were originally spoken of David, and not of Christ, is plain from the fifth verse of the lxixth Psalm; O God, thou knewest my foolishness, and my sins are not hid from thee; which cannot be applied to Christ. Abundance of other scriptures are quoted, with such a beautiful accommodation as this.

e Rulers of the Jews.] It seems most probable that the Jews here mentioned were rulers, because we know that the great assembly of Jewish rulers (that is, the sanhedrim) sat in the temple, and that the chief of them often attended public worship there. This action of Christ (in driving out the buyers and sellers) must undoubtedly come to their knowledge; and as their office would seem to authorize them to call him to an account, we are sure their prejudices against him would incline them to do it.

f A magnificent chamber belonging to the temple.] This fine rotundo was called, from its beautiful pavement, Lishcath-Haggazith, and stood on the wall of the temple, part of it within and part of it without its sacred precincts. See Calmet's Dictionary at the word Sanhedrim; Lightfoot's Description of the Temple, chap. 9. and Witsii Miscell. Sacr. lib. i. Diss. iii. § 66.

g Demolish this temple, and I will raise it up in three days.] It is most evident that Christ intended nothing more in these words than the paraphrase expresses, and did not mean to command them to demolish the temple; though his enemies indeed did, some years after, misrepresent this saying, as if he had intimated a purpose of doing it himself. Compare Mark xiv. 58. sect. 185.

This

in building, and wilt thou rear it up in three days?

less than six and forty years building[h], (for it is now so long since Herod began to repair it) and notwithstanding many thousand men have been employed upon it, it is not yet entirely finished; and wilt thou undertake to raise it up in three days? None certainly will be foolish enough to pull it down to try the experiment. But they were quite mistaken in the sense of what he said; for what they understood him to have spoken of the temple at Jerusalem, he spake of the much more sacred temple of his own body, in which the Deity dwelt in a far nobler manner than in their holy place (Col. ii. 9.) and he might give some intimation of it in the gesture that he used in speaking. When therefore he was risen from the dead, just on the third day after his crucifixion, his disciples remembered that he had said this to them; and they yet more firmly believed the scripture in all its prophecies concerning the Messiah's kingdom, and their faith in him was confirmed by the word which Jesus had spoken: for such a wonderful event as the resurrection of Christ, considered in its connection with this solemn prediction[i], justly appeared as the fullest conceivable proof of his Divine mission.

And while he was at the passover in Jerusalem, on the feast-day, many of the Jews who were then present there, seeing the miracles which he wrought,

SECT. XXIV.

John II. 20.

21 But he spake of the temple of his body.

21

22 When therefore he was risen from the dead, his disciples remembered that he had said this unto them: and they believed the scripture, and the word which Jesus had said.

22

23 Now when he was in Jerusalem at the passover, in the feast

23

h This temple hath been six and forty years building.] Mr. Whiston (in his View of the Harmony, p. 143.) would render it, Forty and six years hath this temple been built: but, as it would have been absurd to argue from the time since the temple was built to the time it would require to rebuild it, this sense must certainly be wrong; and Dr. Lightfoot has well shewn that the word ωκοδομηθη may signify (as we render it) it hath been so long building. Hor. Hebr. in loc.—Mr. Fleming's calculation (in his Christology, Vol. II p. 366--371.) to prove that the second temple was forty-six years building, is not only very precarious, but also very unnecessary; for the words refer to the time since Herod began to rebuild it, which he first proposed to the people in the eighteenth year of his reign (Joseph. Antiq. Jud. lib. xv. cap. 11. (al. 14.) § 1. Havercamp); and though he finished what he proposed in eight or nine years, it seems (as Dr. Lightfoot and Dr. Lardner have judiciously observed) that the Jews still went on improving and adorning it: for long after this, under the government of Florus (about the year of Christ 65), Josephus speaks of the temple's being finished, and the workmen dismissed: so that it seems they were at work upon it all the time of Christ's ministry and life. (Compare John viii. 59. sect. 105. John x. 31. sect. 134. and see Joseph. Antiq. Jud. lib. xx. cap. 9. (al. 8.) § 7. p. 978. and Lardner's Credib. Part. I. Vol. I. p. 534---539. and Vol. II. p. 856---860.) Now, as the eighteenth year of Herod's reign from the death of Antigonus began some time in A. U. C. 734. and his proposal to rebuild the temple might then be made to the Jews at the feast of tabernacles, it will from thence be but a few months more than forty-six years to the passover, A. U. 781. Or, since a year or more might probably be spent in preparing for the work before he actually began it, it may thus be brought down to A. U. 782 or 783, which is the lowest time to which this passover can be referred.

i The resurrection of Christ considered in its connection with this solemn prediction.] This important thought is set in a very strong light by Dr. Jenkins, in his Reasonableness of Christianity. Vol. I. p. 25, 26.

k Seeing

SECT. XXIV.

John II. 24.

wrought [k], believed in him [l], and were inwardly persuaded that he was the Messiah: But Jesus did not care to trust himself to them [m], so far as to acknowledge it expressly that he was actually the promised Messiah; and, by confessing who he was, to put himself into their power, because 25 he knew them all, And had no need that any one should testify or tell him any thing of the character of any man, though ever so much a stranger to him: for he himself, by an immediate and unerring penetration, knew what was in the heart of every man; and consequently knew that those people had such gross notions of the Messiah's kingdom, that there was no room for him to confide in them, or to expect them to be faithful to him.

feast day, many believed in his name, when they saw the miracles which he did.

24 But Jesus did not commit himself unto them, because he knew all men, 25 And needed not that any should testify of man: for he knew what was in man.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. How powerful is the love of this world, when it could engage 14 even the priests and the Pharisees to let out the temple itself for a market-place! though a professed zeal for the honour of it made so great a part of the righteousness of which they boasted before 15, 16 God. But our Lord beheld the scene with just indignation; as that displeasure is indeed just, which arises from a sense of dishonour done to God and contempt poured on the institutions of his worship. Happy shall we be in the warmest emotions of zeal which do not transport us beyond the rules of prudence and love, and make us forget those stations in life which require the same principles to shew themselves in widely different effects!

Methinks the state of the temple, when these traders had erected their seats and their stalls in it, and turned the courts of God's house 16 into a market, is too just an emblem of the state of our hearts when we appear in the sanctuary distracted with worldly cares to the neglect of that one thing needful, which then demands our most attentive regards. Would to God that in this sense our Father's house were not often made a house of merchandize! Let us pray that Jesus, by his good Spirit, would assert it to himself, and drive out those intruders which break in upon our truest enjoyments, in proportion to that degree in which they intrench on our devotion!

After

k Seeing the miracles which he wrought.] These words, as also those in John iii. 2. and iv. 45. plainly refer to some miracles wrought by Christ, the particulars of which are not transmitted to us.

l Believed in him.] It is in the original, believed in his name; a Hebraism, which it did not seem necessary to retain. Nothing is more common than to put the name of a person for the person himself. Compare John i. 12. xx. 31. Psal. lxxv. 1. Acts i. 15. and Rev. iii. 4.

m Did not trust himself to them.] I look upon this as a demonstration that the passover here spoken of was not that at which Christ suffered; for then there had been no need of such a precaution, and indeed no room for it.

After a thousand proofs of his Divine mission, the Jews were wicked and desperate enough, with sacrilegious hands to destroy the temple of Christ's body: but let us be thankful for the undoubted evidence we have, that, as an everlasting monument of his power and truth, he raised it again in three days! SECT. XXIV. John II. 23.

Happy will it be for us if we cordially believe a gospel so gloriously attested; but most vain will that belief be which doth not penetrate and influence the heart. Let us remember that we have to do with him, that formed our nature and is most intimately acquainted with all its recesses. He knows what is in man: may he see nothing in us which shall not be thoroughly agreeable to the profession we make of being his faithful disciples! 23, 25

To conclude; let us learn, from the caution which Jesus used, not rashly to put ourselves and our usefulness into the power of others; but to study a wise and happy medium between that universal prejudice and suspicion, which, while it wrongs the best and the most worthy characters, would deprive us of all the pleasures of an intimate friendship and that undistinguishing easiness and openness of temper which might make us the property of every hypocritical pretender to kindness and respect. 24

SECT. XXV.

The former part of our Lord's conference with Nicodemus, in which he states the nature and necessity of regeneration. John III. 1—10.

John III. 1.

THERE was a man of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews:

JOHN III. 1.

NOW, while our Lord was thus attending at Jerusalem to keep the passover, there was a certain man of the sect of the Pharisees whose name was Nicodemus, a magistrate of the Jews, and a member of the great sanhedrim, (John vii. 50,) who being alarmed, as many of his brethren were, and filled with wonder at the miracles that Jesus wrought, made him a visit in person, that he might more distinctly be informed of the nature of his doctrine and of the true intent and purpose of his coming. But, lest any offence should be taken at his conversing openly with him, he secretly came to Jesus by night, in order to a private conference with him at his own lodgings; and with the greatest reverence and respect, he said unto him, in his own name as well as in the name of several of his brethren, Rabbi[a], the SECT. XXV. John III. 1. 2

2 The same came to Jesus by night, and said unto him, Rabbi, we know that thou art a teacher come from God; for no man can do these miracles that thou doest, except God be with him.

[a] Said unto him, Rabbi.] This title cannot but appear very remarkable, as given by a person of so great dignity to one, who, with regard to his education and rank in secular

SECT. XXV.

John III. 1.

the wonders thou hast done have been related to us; and, having seriously considered the account that has been given us, we know and cannot but allow that thou art a teacher come with a commission from God: for we are thoroughly convinced that none can ever do these wondrous miracles that are in all respects so beneficial and Divine, which we perceive thou doest, unless he be invested with a power from on high, and God himself be with him in an extraordinary manner. (See John ix. 30, 33.) I am come therefore to desire a more particular account [b] from thine own mouth, both of the doctrine which thou teachest and of the kingdom which thou declarest God is about to erect.

3 Jesus, knowing the prejudices he laboured under both as a Jew and a Pharisee, judged it necessary immediately to acquaint him with the absolute necessity of a thorough change, by Divine grace, both in heart and life; a change so great as might appear like coming into a new world, and would bring the greatest and most learned men to the simplicity of little children. (Compare Mat. xviii. 3.) He therefore answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, and declare it with the utmost solemnity as a truth of the highest importance, That whatever great privileges any may inherit by his natural birth, or how exact and strict soever he may be in ceremonial observances, unless a man be born again [c] he cannot possibly see the kingdom secular life, made so low an appearance as our blessed Lord did.

3 Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.

[b] I am come to desire a more particular account, &c.] Our Lord's answer intimates that he either expressly made, or secretly intended such an inquiry; and it is impossible to enter into the beauty of this discourse without considering it in this view. Our Lord touches on the following grand points, in which it was of the utmost importance that Nicodemus and his brethren should be informed—That no external profession, nor any ceremonial observances or privileges of birth, could entitle any to the blessings of the Messiah's kingdom;---that an entire change of heart and life was necessary to that purpose;---that this must be accomplished by a Divine influence on the mind;---that mankind was in a state of condemnation and misery;---that the free mercy of God had given his Son to deliver them from it, and to raise them to a blessed immortality, which was the great design and purpose of his coming; that all mankind, that is, Gentiles as well as Jews, were to share in the benefits of his undertaking;---that they were to be procured by his being lifted up on the cross, and to be received by faith in him;---but that if they rejected him there was no other remedy, and their eternal aggravated condemnation would be the certain consequence of it.—Our Lord might enlarge more copiously on these heads: which it might be the more proper to do, as some of them were directly contrary to the notions commonly entertained by the Jews concerning the Messiah's kingdom.

[c] Unless a man be born again; εαν μη τις γεννηθη ανωθεν.] Some would render ανωθεν, from above; but it is plain that Nicodemus did not take it so; for he thought that, without entering a second time into his mother's womb, there was no being born in the manner Christ spoke of, ανωθεν, that is, again.—What is added at ver.

kingdom of God in such a manner as to secure an interest in its invaluable blessings. SER. XXV.

4 Nicodemus saith unto him, How can a man be born when he is old? Can he enter the second time into his mother's womb and be born?

Now, as this form of speech was figurative and concise, Nicodemus did not understand what it meant; and therefore says unto him, How can a man be born again when he is old, as I am now am? Can he possibly enter a second time into his mother's womb and so be born over again? It would be perfectly absurd to think that thou intendest this should be taken in a literal sense; and I confess I am at a loss to know what figurative interpretation is to be put upon it. John III. 4.

5 Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water, and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

Then Jesus, to explain his former meaning, 5 answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, and again repeat it, That unless a man be born of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God; or, in plain terms, whosoever would become a regular member of it, he must not only be baptized, but as ever he desires to share in its spiritual and eternal blessings, he must experience the renewing and sanctifying influences of the Holy Spirit on his soul, to cleanse it from the power of corruption and to animate it to a Divine and spiritual life. For were it possible 6 for a man to be born again, in the literal sense that you have mentioned, by entering a second time into his mother's womb, such a second birth would do no more to qualify him for the kingdom of God than the first: for that which is born of the flesh, is only flesh; and what proceeds and is produced from parents that are sinful and corrupt, is sinful and corrupt as they are [d]; but that which is born of the Spirit is formed to a resemblance of that blessed Spirit whose office it is to infuse a Divine life into the soul.

6 That which is born of the flesh, is flesh; and that which is born of the Spirit, is spirit.

Wonder,

ver. 5, explains what was before undetermined as to the original of this birth. Dr. Owen with great propriety observes, "That if regeneration here mean only reformation of life, our Lord, instead of making any new discovery, has only thrown a great deal of obscurity on what was before plain and obvious, and known not only to the Jews but the wiser heathens. And indeed (says he immediately after) this is the main article in dispute between many. Some think all things in scripture are expressed in condescension to our capacities, so that there is still to be conceived in many of them an inexpressible grandeur; while, on the other hand, others suppose that, under the pomp and grandeur of the most hyperbolical expressions, things of a low and ordinary sense are to be understood." See Dr. Owen on the Spirit, p. 175.—For the full import of the phrases used in this verse see my Sermons on Regeneration, No. IV. and V.

[d] Is sinful and corrupt as they are,] The many passages in which flesh is put for a corrupt degenerate nature, enslaved to animal appetites and pursuits, seemed to me to justify this interpretation: and would to God fact and experience did not so plainly vindicate it! (Compare Gen. vi. 3. Rom. viii. 8. Gal. v. 17—24. and Jude ver. 23.) Indeed it seems to me impossible to clear up either the beauty of the antithesis, or even the truth of the assertion, on any other interpretation.

SECT. XXV.

John III. 7

Wonder not, therefore, that I said unto thee, and have declared it as a truth that you are all concerned in, That you yourselves, even though you are Jews and Pharisees and rulers of the people, yet must be born again; since the degeneracy of the human nature is of so universal an extent as to be common to you all. Nor have you any cause to be surprised if there be some things in this doctrine of regeneration which are of an obscure and unsearchable nature; for even in the natural world, many things are so:

7 Marvel not that I said unto thee, Ye must be born again.

8 The wind, for instance, bloweth where it will, sometimes one way and sometimes another and is not subject to the direction or command of man; and though thou hearest the sound thereof, and feelest its sensible and powerful effects, yet thou canst not exactly tell from whence it cometh, and whither it goeth; for whatever general principles may be laid down concerning it, when you come to account for its particular variations, the greatest philosophers often find themselves at a loss; and in like manner so it is with every one that is born of the Spirit: and you are so far from being capable of accounting for it, that it is easy to be seen there is a sovereign freedom in that Divine agency, which makes it oftentimes impossible to say why it is imparted to one rather than to another; and there is a secret in the manner of its operation on the mind, which it is neither necessary to know nor possible to explain.

8 The wind bloweth where it listeth, and thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh and whither it goeth; so is every one that is born of the Spirit.

9 But Nicodemus, who had been accustomed to the pomp and ceremony of an external religion, answered and said unto him, How can these things be? for, after all this explication, I am still at a loss to understand what this being born of the Spirit means, and therefore cannot conceive how it should be so absolutely necessary.

9 Nicodemus answered and said unto him, How can these things be?

10 Jesus then answered and said unto him, How Nicodemus! art thou a teacher of Israel, of so distinguished a rank and character, and dost thou not know these things! [e] when so much is every where 10 Jesus answered and said unto him, Art thou a master of Israel, and knowest not these things?

e Art thou a teacher of Israel, and dost thou not know these things?] Could it be proved that the Jewish Rabbis, so early as Christ's time, called a baptized person one born again, or born of water, that would strongly illustrate the passage before us. But though Dr. Claget and Mr. Locke, and after them Dr. Clarke, give the words this turn, the fact did not appear to me so evident as to allow of my inserting it in the paraphrase. —However it is strange to me that any should doubt whether proselytes were admitted into the Jewish church by baptism, that is, by washing; when it is plain from express passages in the Jewish law, that no Jew who had lived like a Gentile for one single day could be restored to the communion of their church without it. Compare Numb. xix. 19, 20. and many other precepts where said in the scripture of the purifying and quickening operations of the Divine Spirit on men's hearts? (Compare Jer. xxxi. 33, 34. and Ezek. xxxvi. 26, 27.) It is high time thou shouldest be better informed concerning them.

SECT. XXV.

IMPROVEMENT.

He that hath ears to hear, let him hear with attention what the blessed Redeemer said on this great occasion. It is surely a matter of universal concern: for who would not desire to enter into the kingdom of God? to be an acceptable member of Christ's church now, and an heir of glory beyond the grave?—But how is this blessing to be expected and secured? Thus saith the Lord himself, Ver. 3
Unless a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.—Let us remember therefore that it is not enough that a new name be given us, or that a new profession be assumed; it is not enough that we are descended from the most pious ancestors, that we have been externally devoted to God by the early seal of his covenant, or that we openly have made a solemn and express profession of our own faith and obedience, and have been born of baptismal water in our riper years! There must be a new nature implanted, a new creation formed in our souls by the almighty energy of the eternal Spirit, or it had been better for us that we had never been born at all.

That which is born of the flesh is flesh; and as we all proceed 6 from a corrupt original, we do not more evidently bear the image of the earthly Adam in the infirmities of a mortal body than in the degeneracy of a corrupt mind. Oh, let us earnestly entreat that, being born of the sanctifying influences of the Spirit, we may 8 bear the image of the heavenly! And to these influences let us with all humility and thankfulness be ready to yield up our souls, as remembering that they are of a free and sovereign nature, like the wind that bloweth where it will, and does not stay for the command of the children of men.

Let none of us indulge a vain and useless curiosity with respect 7, 8 to the manner of the Spirit's operations, or wonder that we meet with some things that are secret and unknown in matters of a spiritual nature, when we see daily there are so many things unknown in the common appearances of the natural world, and indeed so few that we can perfectly understand.

May the pride of a falsely pretended reason be subdued to the 10 authority of faith! And more especially, may such as are teachers in precepts relating to ceremonial pollutions; by which the Jews were rendered incapable of appearing before God in the tabernacle or temple, till they were washed either by bathing or sprinkling.

SECT. XXV. in Israel, or who are designed for that important office, take their instructions with all humility from this teacher sent from God! For it must surely be not only their calamity, but that too of the church in general, if its guides continue ignorant of those sublime and spiritual truths which Christ came down from heaven to reveal, or are so biassed by the carnal reasonings of a depraved mind as to be indisposed and backward to receive them.

SECT. XXVI.

The latter part of our Lord's conference with Nicodemus, in which he opens the design of his coming into the world, and shews the absolute necessity of faith in him. John III. 11—21.

JOHN III. 11.

SECT. XXVI. JESUS, pursuing his discourse with Nicodemus, said, I find that you are stumbled at this doctrine of regeneration which I have now been opening to you: but howsoever it may still appear John III. 11 to be obscure and strange, yet labour to subdue the prejudices that arise against it; for, verily, verily, I say unto thee, That in the doctrine we have now delivered we speak nothing but what we certainly know[a], and testify no other than that which we have seen[b], and can declare upon the surest grounds to be a most important truth, and to be perfectly agreeable to what we have received in commission from God himself; and yet the disposition of the Jewish rulers and people is generally such, that ye receive not our testimony, and are likely still to reject it: For these 12 things which I have already told you are but the

JOHN III. 11.

VERILY, verily, I say unto thee, We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen; and ye receive not our witness.

12 If I have told you a We speak what we know.] Some have supposed that, as Christ speaks here in the plural number, he may refer not only to the doctrine that was delivered by himself, but to the testimony that was given to the truth of it by John the Baptist, and to the preaching also of his own disciples, who all concurred in testifying the same things; the certainty of which they were assured of by the teachings of the Spirit, and by their own experience, while it was known to Christ by his omniscience, and by the intimate acquaintance that he had with all the councils of the Father.—And others have supposed that he includes here, with himself the Father and the Spirit, who are expressly spoken of in other passages as bearing witness to the truth of what he said, and as agreeing with him in the testimony that he gave. (Compare John viii. 18. xiv. 20—26. and 1 John v. 6—8.)—But there is no necessity we should suppose him to refer to any other than himself; since nothing is more useful than for a person of authority to speak of himself in the plural number, as Christ may be observed to have done elsewhere (Mark iv. 30.) and in the next verse he appears to have restrained it to himself, where he says only in the singular number, If I have told you earthly things, &c. See Lightfoot's Harmony in loc.

b And testify that which we have seen.] Christ seems here to allude to what was mentioned in the law as qualifying a man to be a witness, that he was able to declare of what he testified, that he had seen or known it. (Levit. v. 1.) And as he therefore had a clear perception, and a certain knowledge of the truth of what he said, there was the highest reason to receive his testimony, and to regard him as a true and faithful witness.

sect. xxvi.

John II. 12.

the first principles to make way for what is yet more marvellous. Now, if I hitherto have told you things which have been capable of being represented to you in a familiar way, and being illustrated by obvious and well-known similitudes; so that by reason of their plainness, and of the frequent references to them in the Old Testament, they may be called earthly things; and ye believed not even these: how then would you believe if I should yet go on to tell you other doctrines which are not capable of being thus explained; and which indeed are so much more mysterious and sublime that, in comparison of what has been already told you, they may be called heavenly things?[c] (Compare Heb. vi. 1, 2. Psal. ciii. 11. and Isa. lv. 9.) Yet even these you will have no just reason to suspect, when you consider whence they come, and who it is that reveals them to you: for no one ever has ascended up to heaven to search into the secret counsels and to obtain an intimate and perfect knowledge of the truths of God[d]; unless, as you will see hereafter, he has done it who is really descended from heaven; [even] the Son of man who is in heaven, as there is the place of his stated abode, whither he shortly will return, and as he now is present there by his Divine nature, which fills both heaven and earth.

you earthly things, and ye believe not, how shall ye believe if I tell you of heavenly things?

13 And no man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of man which is in heaven.

13

14 And as Moses lifted

And now I mention the Son of man, let me rectify that grand mistake of yours concerning his kingdom, which otherwise may be attended with such fatal consequences. You expect to see him raised on a magnificent throne, and not only

14

[c] Heavenly things.] This has been understood by some, of the sublime and heavenly doctrines that were afterwards revealed,—of the eternal generation of the Son, and of the fulness of the Godhead dwelling in him bodily,—and of those other mysteries of godliness that are above the reach of human reason, and cannot be illustrated by earthly things; (see Lightfoot's Harmony in loc.) Though it would rather seem that our Lord does more immediately refer to the doctrines which he mentions in the remaining part of his discourse to Nicodemus, —of his descent from heaven to instruct us in the things of God, and be united to the human nature here below, while by his divine nature he still continued to be present above,—of the design for which he came into the world to be lifted up upon the cross, that he might save us from our sins;—of everlasting life and happiness to be obtained by faith in his death;—and of the condemnation of all those that should reject him: which may be counted as the deep things of God, which he reveals unto us by his Spirit, and which the natural man who disregards that spirit, receiveth not, for they are foolishness unto him; neither can he know them, because they are spiritually discerned; 1 Cor. ii. 10—14.

[d] Ascended up to heaven to search into — the truths of God.] The phrase of ascending into heaven is plainly used in this sense, Deut. xxx. 12. Rom. x. 6. and Prov. xxx. 4.—As for the turn here given to the particle ει μη, see the note on John xvii. 12. sect. clxxix.

only breaking off the yoke from the Jewish SECT. XXVI. nation, but leading them on to conquer and destroy the Gentiles: but I must assure you that John III. 14. as Moses lifted up the brasen serpent on a pole in the wilderness, to heal those that were dying by the venom of the fiery serpents there (see Numb. xxi. 8, 9.) so also must the Son of man be first lifted up on a cross (compare John viii. 28. xii. 32, 34.) and then publicly exhibited in the preaching of the gospel, that sinners may by him receive a far more noble and important cure[e]:

lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up:

15 Even that whoever believeth on him may not perish, as all in their natural state would otherwise do[f], but may obtain so perfect a recovery as cer-
16 tainly to have eternal life. For this is indeed the summary of that important message which I bring to the children of men, that God so loved the world[g], apostate and miserable as it was; yea, to such an amazing and unutterable degree did he love it that he gave even his only-begotten Son from his embraces, that whoever believeth on him, whatever be the nation he belongs to, or whatever his guilt be, he may not perish under the sentence of Divine justice, but may have 17 everlasting life and glory. For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world, and to execute that vengeance upon them which their guilt might have taught them to fear; nor did he send him to destroy the Gentile nations, as your Jewish prejudices are ready to represent it; but that the world of mankind, whether Jews or Gentiles, might be saved by him, even all without exception who will listen to the overtures of his gospel. And therefore, on the one hand, he that believeth on him, how great soever

15 That whosoever believeth in him, should not perish, but have eternal life.

16 For God so loved the world that he gave his only-begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.

17 For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved.

18 He that believeth on him is not condemned:

e A far more noble and important cure.] The grand point of similitude here is in the manner of performing the cure, that is, by believing regards to something lifted up for that purpose by a Divine appointment. It would be blasphemy to run a parallel between Christ and that which gave us the deadly wound: and to talk, as Grotius and Dr. Clarke here do, of the resemblance between him and the image of the serpent, as he was made in the likeness of sinful flesh, seems in this connection to be foreign to the purpose.

f As all in their natural state would otherwise do.] This is strongly implied here, and yet more strongly in ver. 18, where all that do not believe are said to be condemned already: and till men enter deeply into this important truth, the gospel may indeed be their amusement, but I see not how it is like to be their joy or their cure.

g God so loved the world.] It is not only a very arbitrary criticism by which Erasmus makes these the words of the evangelist rather than of Christ, but if it were admitted, it would destroy much of the beauty and energy of that awful admonition which our Lord gives to Nicodemus, and by him to his brethren, in this his first entrance on his ministry. No doubt, many of them attended him to learn the result of this conference, which to the best of his understanding we may conclude he honestly reported: and it is sad to think what an aggravation it was of the unbelief and impenitence of that grand council who afterwards treated Christ with so much contempt and malignity.

demned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only-begotten Son of God.

ever his sins may have been, and however unpardonable according to the tenor of the Mosaic law, yet shall not be finally condemned, but shall obtain a complete pardon: and on the other hand, he that believeth not, whatever his external profession and privileges may be, is condemned already, remaining under the sentence of his former guilt, yea, and subjecting himself by his refusal of the only remedy to greater and more aggravated woe; because he hath not believed in the illustrious name[h] of the only-begotten Son of God, though expressly revealed to him on so glorious and important an occasion.

19 And this is the condemnation, that light is come into the world, and men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil.

Now, through the great perverseness of mankind, I certainly foresee that this will be the case with multitudes: for this is the great condemnation, the crime that fills up the measure of men's iniquities and proves the surest cause of their final and speedy ruin, that a Divine light is come into the world, and yet men have loved darkness rather than light, and have chosen to remain ignorant rather than to submit themselves to the teachings of this heavenly revelation; and the reason is plainly this, because their deeds were evil, and they have not virtue enough to resolve on a thorough reformation. 19 20 For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved.

For every one who is conscious to himself that he doeth evil, and will persist in his wickedness, hateth the light, as the cause of anguish and shame to his guilty mind; and he cometh not to the light, lest his actions should be reproved by it, and so his character exposed and his conscience disquieted, (Compare Eph. v. 13.) 20 21 But he that doeth truth cometh to the light, that his deeds may be made manifest that they are wrought in God.

But he that practises truth[i] and virtue, sincerely endeavouring to adjust his actions according to the eternal law of righteousness, or the nature and obligation of things, comes to the light with confidence and pleasure, and takes all opportunities of improving his knowledge, that his actions may be made manifest 21

h Believed in the illustrious name.] Though the name of a person be often put for the person himself, yet I think it is farther intimated in that expression, that the person spoken of is great and magnificent; and therefore it is generally used to express either God the Father or our Lord Jesus Christ.

i He that practises truth: ο ποιων την αληθειαν.] This phrase often occurs as the character of a good man: (compare Psal. cxix. 30. Isa. xxvi. 2. 1 Pet. i. 22. 1 John i. 6. and 2 John, ver. 4.) And it is used with great propriety, since there is as really a truth or falsehood in actions as in words: as Mr. Wollaston in particular has shewn at large; see Relig. of Nature chap. i.—Of the same kind is the phrase ποιειν ψευδος, used more than once by St. John, perhaps in a beautiful opposition to this before us; and should it be rendered practiseth a lie, that opposition would be more apparent; see Rev. xxi. 27. xxii. 15.

SECT. XXVI.

fest as in open day; knowing it will appear that they are wrought in God[k], that is, that they are agreeable to the Divine nature and will, and the consequence of that union of soul with him, which is the highest dignity and happiness of a rational creature. Be it therefore known unto you all, that this gospel which I preach is the great touchstone of men's true characters; and, as nothing but a corruption of heart can oppose it, so I faithfully warn you that, if you reject it, it is at the peril of your souls.

John III. 21.

This was the purport of our Lord's discourse with Nicodemus; and it appears by some following circumstances of the story, that it made a deep and lasting impression on his mind. See John vii. 50. and xix. 39.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. 13 How happy is it for us that, since none of the children of men ever ascended up into heaven to learn the mysteries of Divine knowledge there, the only-begotten Son of God has been pleased to 11 come down from thence that he might instruct us! He spake what he knew, and testified what he had seen: Oh that men were so wise as to receive his testimony, be the discoveries ever so new or the doctrines ever so sublime!

Let us with peculiar pleasure attend unto that abstract of the gospel which he exhibited in this profitable and comprehensive discourse with Nicodemus.—It presents to our view Christ, and him crucified. It opens the treasures of Divine beneficence and 16 compassion, and shews us the Father of mercies so loving a world, which he might justly have abhorred and destroyed, as to give his only-begotten Son to be a ransom for it.

14 Let us behold him lifted up on the cross as the great attractive to whom all were to be drawn! In him shall we find the Divine cure for our souls, infected as they are with the poison of sin, if we behold him not merely with a curious but a believing eye. Whatever our wounds be, if in the exercise of faith we look to him, we shall not die of them; but it is owing to our own obstinacy and impenitence if we yet perish.

He might justly have appeared in a different form for the con- 17 demnation of sinners, rather than their salvation. The Son of God might [k] That they are wrought in God: εν Θεω ειργασμενα.] Grotius thinks that εν is here used for κατα, and that it only signifies agreeable to the Divine nature: this is certainly comprehended, but it is not all it expresses. His instance of the like use of the particle in 1 Cor. vii. 39. seems insufficient; for to marry εν τω Κυριω in the Lord, signifies there the marrying one who is in Christ, that is a Christian.

a At might have come into an apostate world armed with thunderbolts of flaming vengeance to punish the violation of his Father's law; but his hands are filled with eternal blessings. SECT. XXVI. Ver. 19

As we love our own souls, let us apply to him in time for this salvation. Let us dread the aggravated condemnation of those who, when light is come into the world, prefer darkness to it, and obstinately shut their eyes against it, though it be the dawnings of an eternal day.

May integrity and uprightness preserve us! (Psal. xxv. 21.) And, conscious of a real desire to govern ourselves according to the light we have, may we chearfully lay ourselves in the way of more; that in the last awful day, when the sentence of Divine wrath shall be executed on all the servants of sin, and their character shall stand disclosed in the most odious colours, ours may shine out beautiful and fair, and the good deeds that we have done, being now wrought in God, may then not only be accepted and applauded, but through the grace of the Redeemer abundantly rewarded by him! 20, 21

SECT. XXVII.

John the Baptist's last testimony to Christ on occasion of a dispute concerning his baptism, and that administered by our Lord's disciples. John III. 22, to the end.

JOHN III. 22.

AFTER these things, came Jesus and his disciples into the land of Judea, and there he tarried with them, and baptized.

JOHN III. 22.

AFTER these things, Jesus and his disciples came from Jerusalem, where they had kept the passover together, into a part of the land of Judea, at some distance from the capital city; and there he continued with them, and by their ministry, though not in his own person, baptized. (See John iv. 2.) SECT. XXVII. John III. 22.

23 And John also was baptizing in Enon, near to Salim, because there was much water there: and they came and were baptized.

And John was also at that time baptizing at Enon, which was a place near Salim, a town on the west side of Jordan; and he particularly chose that place because there was a great quantity of water there[a], which made it very convenient for his purpose: and they came from all 23 parts, a At Enon,---because there was a great quantity of water there.] It is exceeding difficult to determine the true situation of this place, about which geographical writers are not at all agreed. We may conclude however from ver. 26, that it was on the west side of Jordan, as Bethabara, where John had baptized before, was on the other side. But nothing surely can be more evident than that πολλα ὑδατα many waters, signifies a large quantity of water, it being sometimes used for the Euphrates, Jer. li. 13. Septuag. To which I suppose there may also be an allusion, Rev xvii. 1. Compare Ezek. xliii. 2. and Rev. i. 15. xiv. 2. xix. 6. where the voice of many waters does plainly signify the roaring of a high sea.

SECT. XXVII.

parts, and were baptized by him. For the reader will observe that John the Baptist was not yet thrown into prison[b]; as he was a few months after, by the injustice of Herod, in whose territories that place lay.

John III. 24

24 For John was not yet cast into prison.

25 And there was about this time a warm dispute between [some] of the disciples of John and a [certain] Jew[c], who had been baptized by Christ, about this right of purifying, or baptism, which was administered in different parts by these two Divine teachers; for notwithstanding their commissions and administrations were so harmonious, yet some, through ignorance and weakness, were ready to oppose them to each other.

25 Then there arose a question between some of John's disciples and the Jews about purifying.

26 And such was the concern of John's disciples upon this occasion, that they came to John, and said unto him, Rabbi, we are solicitous for thy honour in the present conjuncture of affairs: for he that was lately with thee on the other side Jordan, and to whom thou gavest such an honourable testimony there, behold, he now baptizeth, and people from all parts, yea even such as have before received thy baptism, come unto him; which, as we fear, may cause thy baptism to be neglected and tend to the injury of thy character, since some are already making very invidious comparisons between him and thee.

26 And they came unto John, and said unto him, Rabbi, he that was with thee beyond Jordan, to whom thou barest witness, behold, the same baptizeth, and all men come to him.

27 But John replied to his disciples, with an humility and integrity agreeable to the rest of his character, and said, in order to convince them farther of the superior honours due to the blessed Jesus, Do not give way to such vain partiality and fondness for me: for a man can indeed receive, and therefore ought to assume nothing to himself, unless it be given him from heaven; but we are just what God is pleased to make us, and must stand in that rank which his infinite wisdom

27 John answered and said, A man can receive nothing, except it be given him from heaven.

b John was not yet thrown into prison.] I think it probable from hence, as well as from tradition, and many other passages in this gospel itself, that St. John wrote it as a supplement to the rest. For he speaks of the Baptist's imprisonment as a thing generally known, and yet says nothing of his martyrdom, though he had given so large an account of his ministry. We cannot suppose he would have omitted so material a fact, had he not known that the other evangelists had recorded it at large; as will be seen in the next section, and in sect. lxxvii.

c A certain Jew.] The many copies which read it thus, as well as the authority of the Syriac version, and the citations of some of the fathers, determine me to prefer this reading, which I think gives rather an easier sense; as a single Jew might most properly be opposed to John's disciples, who were Jews themselves; and as a considerable part of the nation had entered themselves into that number, at least so far as receiving his baptism was a token of it.

d You

SECT. XXVII.

John III. 28.

28 Ye yourselves bear me witness that I said, I am not the Christ, but that I am sent before him.

dom has seen fit to assign us. Nor have you any reason to be surprised at the report you bring me, or to imagine I shall regard it as a matter of complaint: for you yourselves, in what you now have said, bear witness to me[d], and cannot but remember, that, even from the very first of my appearance, I expressly said and was on all occasions ready to repeat it, that I am not the Christ; but that I am sent as a harbinger before him; and therefore am so far from being in any opposite and separate interest, that his success is my greatest joy. It is the bridegroom 29 only that hath the bride; and it is his peculiar right to enjoy her as his own: but as for the intimate friend of the bridegroom, who standeth near him, and heareth him express his delight and complacency in her[e], he is so far from envying and repining at it, that, if he really deserves the name of a friend, he rather rejoices with exceeding great joy on account of the bridegroom's voice. Such therefore is the friendship and the high regard I have for Jesus, that this that you have told me is my joy: which is so far from being at all impaired, that it is heightened and completed on this happy occasion, which you should rather have been ready to congratulate than to have made it matter of complaint.

29 He that hath the bride is the bridegroom: but the friend of the bridegroom, which standeth and heareth him, rejoiceth greatly because of the bridegroom's voice: this my joy therefore is fulfilled.

30 He must increase, but I must decrease.

I know that as to him he daily must increase, 30 and, like the growing moon, appear continually more and more glorious; but I must gradually wane and decline till I entirely disappear from hence: (for the end of my ministry is now in a great measure answered, and therefore I quickly expect to be dismissed from it.) And it is fit 31 it should be so: for he that cometh from above, as Jesus did, is far above all the children of men, and so undoubtedly is above me; while, on the other

31 He that cometh from above, is above all: he that is of the earth, is earthly, and speaketh

d You yourselves bear witness to me: αυτοι υμεις μοι μαρτυρειτε.] There seems to be an intimation in these words, that what they themselves had just been saying was a sufficient proof of what the Baptist was going to declare; for they had described Jesus by the character of him to whom John had borne witness.

e Heareth him express his delight and complacency in her.] Some have supposed that this alludes to a peculiar ceremony attending the marriages among the Jews; which the reader may find in Dr. Hammond in loc. and Selden. Uxor. Heb. lib. ii. cap. 16. But perhaps it may be a more general reference to any of the natural expressions of joy on such an occasion.—I pretend not to determine how far Bishop Patrick may be right, in supposing "that this is an allusion to the cabalistic doctrine, that Tipheret, the Great Adam, or the Messiah, is married to Malcuth, the congregation of Israel, as the terrestrial Adam was to Eve." See his Preface to Canticles, § 4.

f He

SECT. XXVII.

John III. 31.

other hand, he that originally was of the earth [f], being born like me in a natural way, is still of the earth, mean and imperfect, and can never hope, by any refinements and improvements, to equal what is heavenly and Divine; but what he says will correspond with his original, and, being earthly in his rise, he speaketh of the earth; the subjects of his discourse are comparatively low, or howsoever noble and sublime they be, there is a mixture of infirmity and weakness in his way of treating them: whereas he who originally cometh from heaven, and who has shewn so wonderful a condescension in his visiting this lower world, is still, in the midst of all his voluntary abasement, incomparably above all that dwell upon earth, not only in the dignity and glory of his person, but in the spiritual and heavenly nature of his doctrine. And I declare it to you with the greatest confidence, that what he hath seen and heard, or what he knows to the utmost degree of certainty, that does he testify and publish to the world; and I exceedingly lament it, that, notwithstanding all that eagerness of curiosity with which the multitudes are flocking now about him, yet no man cordially receives his testimony; and among all that hear him there are very few who are duly affected with what he delivers, and yield as they ought to its Divine evidence and importance. But he who hath indeed received his testimony acts a most wise and happy part and hath, as it were, set his seal [to it] that God is true; acknowledging his hand in these credentials given to his Son, and his veracity in sending him thus furnished to fulfil his ancient promises to his people. For he whom God hath sent into the world as the promised Messiah, speaketh the words of God, and all that he reveals should be regarded as Divine oracles: for God giveth not the powers and the inspiration of his Spirit [to him] by measure, under such limitations and with such interruptions as he gives it to his other messengers [g]; but it dwells in him by 31 speaketh of the earth; he that cometh from heaven, is above all.

32 And what he hath seen and heard, that he testifieth: and no man receiveth his testimony.

33 He that hath received his testimony, hath set to his seal, that God is true.

34 For he whom God hath sent speaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him.

[f] He that was of the earth.] To render ὁ ὢν ἐκ τῆς γῆς thus, prevents the appearance of a tautology in the following words, ἐκ τῆς γῆς ἐστι, which would otherwise seem unavoidable.

[g] Under such limitations and with such interruptions as he gives it to his other messengers.] With what limitations and interruptions the extraordinary gifts of the Spirit were given, even to the greatest of the children of men, we shall have repeated occasion to observe in the process of this work.

SECT. XXVII.

by a constant presence, and operates by a perpetual energy. For the Almighty Father loveth the Son incomparably beyond the most faithful of his servants; and hath not only established him as the great Teacher of his church, but hath given the government of all things into his hand, that he may be regarded as the universal Lord. John III. 35.

35 The Father loveth the Son, and hath given all things into his hand.

So that instead of repining at his growing glories, you should rather be solicitous to secure an interest in his favour: for this is the substance and this the end of my whole testimony[h], that he who believeth on the Son, hath a sure title to eternal life, and hath already the beginnings of it wrought in his soul; but he that is disobedient to the Son[i], and obstinately persists in his unbelief and impenitence, shall not see and enjoy that life; but, on the contrary, is so far from it, that the wrath of God, and the unpardoned aggravated guilt of all his sins, abideth even now upon him, and will quickly sink him into final condemnation and ruin. 36

36 He that believeth on the Son hath everlasting life; and he that believeth not the Son, shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him.

Thus did that holy man John the Baptist conclude those testimonies to Christ which are recorded in the gospel, and was quickly after imprisoned by Herod the tetrarch; as the course of this history will presently shew.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. 26

IT is indeed too true that the spirit which naturally dwelleth in us all lusteth to envy (Jam. iv. 5.) and it is far from being a low attainment in religion to look with complacency and thankfulness on the superior abilities and acceptance of others, especially of those who once appeared in an inferior rank. But for the cure of this unreasonable and restless passion, so contrary to the true spirit of the gospel, let us remember that a man can receive nothing at all except it be given him from heaven. It is God that makes one man to differ from another; and surely nothing 27 can

h This is the substance, and this the end of my whole testimony.] Erasmus here destroys (as he had done before at ver. 16.) the beauty of this discourse by supposing that the latter part of it is to be considered as the reflection and attestation of the evangelist, upon occasion of the testimony that was given by the Baptist; though he seems himself at a loss to fix the clause at which this supposed change of the person speaking begins.

i He that is disobedient to the Son.] I think it is of great importance to preserve a difference in the translation, correspondent to that in the original, between ὁ πιστευων εις τον υιον, and ὁ απειθων τω υιω; because the latter phrase explains the former, and shews that the faith to which the promise of life is annexed is an effectual principle of sincere and unreserved obedience; and it is impossible to make one part of scripture consistent with another, unless this be taken into our idea of saving faith; as I have shewn at large in the first of my Sermons on Salvation by Grace through Faith.

SECT. XXVII.

can be more unreasonable than that, when we ourselves have received all from his bounty, our eye should be evil because he is good. (Mat. xx. 15.)

Ver.

29 If we are indeed the friends of Christ, we shall rejoice to see his interest advance, and especially to see souls espoused to him as the great Bridegroom of the church, whoever are the instruments of promoting so happy a work. Would to God that in this sense all the Lord's people were even as the greatest of the prophets, or as the very chief of the apostles! (Numb. xi. 29.)

30 But if indeed they were so, yet, like those brightest luminaries of the church, they must in time have their change and their wane. If God does not darken their glories by a sudden eclipse, yet they who are now, like the Baptist, burning and shining lights, must like him gradually decrease, while others are increasing about them; as they, in their turns, grew up amidst the decays of the former generation. Let us know how to set as well as to rise; and let it comfort our declining days to trace in those that are like to succeed us in our work the openings of yet greater usefulness. So shall we grow in our meetness for that world where all the righteous shall shine forth together, as the sun, in the kingdom of their Father, in a bright resemblance of him with whom there is no variableness nor shadow of turning.

33 As the surest means of guiding us to that happy world, let us make it our great care, by receiving the testimony of Christ, to set our seal to the truth of God, engaged in his cause.—With how much pleasure should we do it, and with what joy should we reflect that the Father so loveth the Son that he has not only given 34, 35 him the rich and unmeasureable communications of the Spirit, but has committed also into his hand the reins of government! Let his faithful servants remember it with joy, and cheerfully commit their concerns to him who is made head over all things for the benefit of his church, (Eph. i. 22.)

And to conclude; let it engage us to see the sincerity of our faith in him and subjection to him; since it is not a light matter, but our life, even the very life of our souls. May God awaken those on whom his wrath now abideth to a sense of their danger; and may he strengthen in each of our souls that faith which is the pledge of a happy immortality!

SECT. XXVIII.

John the Baptist is imprisoned by Herod. Luke III. 19—20. Mark VI. 17—20. Mat. XIV. 3—5.

LUKE III. 19.

SECT. XXVIII.

THUS John went on to prosecute the great design of his appearance, and to prepare the way

LUKE III. 19.

BUT Herod the tetrarch being reproved proved by him, for Herodias' [sake] his brother Philip's wife; [Mark, for he had married her] and for all the evils which Herod had done. [Mat. XIV. 3. Mark VI. 17.]

Luke III. 19.

way for the reception of Jesus: but much about this time it pleased God to permit the course of his ministry to be interrupted, and his life itself to be quickly after brought to its period. For Herod Antipas, the tetrarch of Galilee, having out of curiosity sent for him to his court, this holy man thought it his duty to admonish him in regard to the public scandals of his life and reign. Now Herod being thus plainly and faithfully reproved by him, both on account of Herodias his brother Philip's wife, (for, to the infamy and scandal of his character, he had ungenerously taken her from her husband, and publicly married her[a] in contempt of all laws human and divine,[b] and also for all the other evils that Herod had done, which were many and great, that haughty prince was so exasperated, that, instead of falling under the admonition, he meditated revenge: And though for the present he dismissed him[c] it was not long before he prosecuted his design, and added yet this act of wickedness to all [the rest] of his enormous crimes, that he confined and shut up John in prison. For Herod himself[d] sent officers after him, and seized John, who had returned to prosecute his ministry in a place which lay within the territories of Galilee; and having thus got him into his power, he bound him with chains[e], and

sect. xxviii.

Luke III. 19.

20. Added yet this above all, that he shut up John in prison.

20

Mark VI. 17. For Herod himself had sent forth and laid hold upon John, and bound him [and put him] in prison.

Mark VI. 17.

[a] On account of Herodias.—for he had married her.] Josephus gives us an account of this incestous marriage, which proved the occasion of the Baptist's imprisonment and death, (Antiq. lib. xviii. cap. 5. (al. 7.) § 1, 4, Havercamp.) from whence it appears that this Herodias was daughter to Aristobulus, one of the sons of Herod the Great, and consequently was niece both to Philip her former husband, and to Herod Antipas the tetrarch, her latter. By Philip, whom Josephus also calls Herod (as princes had often several names) she had one daughter whose name was Salome, (ibid. p. 885.) who probably was the young lady afterwards mentioned, sect. lxxvii. as instructed by her mother to ask the head of John the Baptist. And that historian informs us that Herod the tetrarch, to make way for his marriage, with Herodias, divorced his former wife, the daughter of Aretas; which made this commerce a kind of double adultery, and was the occasion of a war between those two princes in which Herod's forces were defeated.

[b] In contempt of all laws human and divine.] The only case in which the law allowed of marrying one who had been a brother's wife was, when the brother died childless, (Lev. xviii. 16. xx. 21. and Deut. xxv. 5,) whereas in this instance Philip was yet living and had a daughter by Herodias. It was also in violation of all the rites of hospitality that Herod, while a guest in his brother's house, seduced his wife; as Josephus expressly observes, Antiq. lib. xviii. cap. 5. § 1. p. 885.

[c] Though for the present he dismissed him.] Else there would have been no need for his sending to seize him, as we are presently told he did.

[d] Herod himself.] There seems to be a peculiar emphasis in this expression, which probably may be designed to intimate that his seizing John was not merely the effect of Herodias's solicitations, but of his own resentment.—The place where he seized him might probably be Enon, where John had lately baptized, and where he again might return to his work: and if so, Enon must have been in Herod's jurisdiction. Compare note a on John iii. 23. p. 151.

[e] Bound him with chains.] It is plain from Matthew's manner of expressing this, and put him in prison; though his confinement there was not so close but that his disciples were sometimes suffered to converse with him; (compare Mat. xi. 2, 4. and Luke vii. 19, 20. sect. lvii.

SECT. xxviii.

prison. [MAT. XIV. 3.]

Mark VI. 17.

18 And though he might assign other political reasons to excuse his conduct, as if his growing popularity rendered him dangerous to the state[f], yet the true reason for which he did it was this, that John had treated him with such a freedom as he knew not how to bear, and had told Herod to his very face, It is not lawful for thee that thou shouldest take upon thee as thou doest to have thy brother's wife, nor canst thou ever have any solid peace of conscience while

18. For John had said unto Herod, It is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife. [MAT. XIV. 4.]

19 thou continuest to retain her. And for this cause Herodias also was yet more furiously incensed against him, and with an unrelenting cruelty still hung upon him[g]; and not contented with what he suffered in his imprisonment, would fain have put him to death, but she could

19. Therefore Herodias had a quarrel against him, and would have killed him, but she could not.

20 not immediately compass that design: For Herod, notwithstanding all his resentment, still reverenced John[h] in his heart; knowing that he was a righteous and holy man, of which the fidelity of his reproofs was a very convincing evidence. And therefore calling him to frequent audiences, he heard him discourse with attention[i] and pleasure; and was so far influenced by it that he did many things according to his exhortations[k].

20. For Herod feared John, knowing that he was a just man and an holy, and observed him; and when he heard him, he did many things, and heard him gladly.

But

that he bound him, and put him in prison, that chains were added to his confinement, as usual in such cases; (compare Acts xii. 6, and xxviii. 20.) so that those versions which consider εδησεν as an expletive, lose part of the sense.

[f] Dangerous to the state.] Josephus expressly says that Herod was afraid the authority of so great a man should occasion a revolt among his subjects; and that he thought it better to take him off, than to venture the danger of such a revolution as he might have occasioned; Antiq. lib. xviii. cap. 5. § 2. p. 884. He there adds that he first confined him in the castle of Machæris.

[g] Herodias hung upon him.] This seems to me the import of the phrase ενειχεν αυτω, which is with peculiar propriety applied to a dog's fastening his teeth into his prey, and holding it down. See De Dieu in loc. and compare Luke xi. 53.— There seems an opposition seldom remarked between this and ver. 17. Herod himself seized him, but Herodias went still further.—Josephus gives a very bad character of this Herodias, and assures us that her ambitious and envious spirit was at last the cause of Herod's ruin and her own. Antiq. lib. xviii. cap. 7. (al. 9.)

[h] Reverenced John, εφοβειτο.] The same word is justly so translated, Eph. v. 33. and there are many other passages where it has the same sense. See Luke xii. 5, and Rev. xi. 18. xiv. 7.

[i] Heard him with attention.] So I chuse to render συνετηρει αυτον, rather than preserved, or protected him, (compare Luke ii. 19. Gr.) though I know that the word sometimes signifies to preserve. (Mat. ix. 17.) Our English version of this passage appears to be improper; and I hope the little transposition I have made here will be forgiven, since it makes not the least alteration in the sense, and suits best with the genius of our language. Such little liberties elsewhere seem not so considerable as to need a more particular apology.

[k] Did many things.] Grotius would have it

MAT. XIV. 5. And when he would have put him to death, he feared the multitude, because they counted him as a prophet.

But as John was still pressing him to dismiss Herodias, and telling him the insufficiency of any other reformation while he continued his infamous commerce with her; and she in the mean time wearied Herod with her importunity; when he at length was so far wrought upon that he would gladly have consented to put him to death, he was so apprehensive of the consequences of it that he durst not do it, since he feared the multitude; because he knew that they respected John, and looked upon him as a prophet[1], and he did not think it safe to provoke such a factious people by an action so extremely unpopular. SECT. XXVIII. Mat. XIV. 5.

IMPROVEMENT.

WHAT dangerous things are grandeur and power, if Divine grace does not secure the hearts of those who possess them! How unhappy are they whose fatal prerogative it is to be able to oppress with impunity, and to render it hazardous even to reprove them! Luke III. 19, 20.

John well deserved the veneration and esteem of Herod when he thus took the freedom to perform this dangerous office of friendship, and to manifest a fidelity so seldom to be found in courts, and indeed so often wanting elsewhere. A wise prince would have courted his friendship, and sought his advice; but he is at length rewarded with imprisonment and death. Mark VI. 18.

This good man was taken from his work, and laid aside in the midst of his days and his usefulness; but he calmly acquiesced in the disposals of Providence, and no doubt carried along with him to his prison incomparably more happiness than his persecutors could find on the throne. Mark VI. 17.

In this confinement the prophet was not forgotten; but as if Herod had studied to increase his own torment, he must be sent for again and again to discourse before him. That he reverenced a man of such approved integrity, none can wonder: but while he would not be entirely reformed by his remonstrances, that he should hear him with pleasure, and do many things, is very surprising. Delusive pleasure! unprofitable reformation! while, whatsoever instances he gave of his regarding him, Herodias was yet retained. May divine grace preserve us from such fatal parti- 20 it rendered, that he had heard him formerly with pleasure, and had done many things; supposing this refers to what had passed before his imprisonment: but such a change doth not appear necessary, as the paraphrase plainly shews.

[1] Looked upon him as a prophet.] Accordingly Josephus says (in the place quoted above in note f) that the Jews in general looked on the succeeding calamities of Herod's reign as a judgment from God for his injustice to this holy man.

SECT. XXVIII.

partiality! since, did we keep the whole law, and offend allowedly but in one point, we should become guilty of all; Jam. ii. 10.

We cannot wonder if a reformation thus insincere and partial was but short lived, and was followed at length by a grosser apostacy. More bitter than death is the woman whose heart is snares and nets, and her hands bands; (Eccles. vii. 26.) To what may not the artifices of such an abandoned creature work up the wretch that is entangled with her charms! Such was the influence of Herodias over him, that at her instigation, Herod is prevailed upon to seek the death of that righteous and holy man, whose virtues he revered, and whose preaching he had attended with pleasure.

Mat. XIV. 5. But the fear of the people restrained him, though he was destitute of the fear of God, and had not any generous regard to men. Thus does God govern the world, and thus does he protect his church, by often making it the interest even of the worst of men to forbear those injuries and cruelties which the malignity of their natures might otherwise dictate. Let us courageously commit the keeping of our souls to him in well-doing, as firmly believing, that, whatever hazards we may be exposed to, the wrath of man shall on the whole be found to praise him, and the remainder of that wrath shall he restrain! Psal. lxxvi. 10.

SECT. XXIX.

Christ going from Judea to Galilee meets with a woman of Samaria, and enters into a conference with her, in which he discovers himself to her as the Messiah. John IV. 1—26.

JOHN IV. 1.

SECT. XXIX.

John IV. 1. THE testimony which the Baptist had given to Christ, together with the miracles he himself had wrought at Jerusalem during the passover (see John ii. 23. and iii. 2.) impressed the minds of the people to such a degree, that, during his long abode in those parts, vast numbers were continually flocking around him; which gave great umbrage to the Jewish rulers. When therefore the Lord knew that the Pharisees, whose interest in the sanhedrim was so considerable, had heard with great concern what began to be so much talked of abroad, that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John the Baptist him-
2 self had done[a]; (Though indeed Jesus himself, for

JOHN IV. 1.

WHEN therefore the Lord knew how the Pharisees had heard that Jesus made and baptized more disciples than John,

2 (Though Jesus him-

[a] More disciples than John the Baptist himself had done.] I am not certain whether this happened before John's imprisonment or after; but if I had been sure it hap-himself baptized not, but his disciples,)

3 He left Judea and departed again into Galilee.

4 And he must needs go through Samaria.

5 Then cometh he to a city of Samaria, which is called Sychar, near to the parcel of ground that Jacob gave to his son Joseph.

6 Now Jacob's well was there. Jesus therefore being wearied with his journey, sat thus on the well; and it was about the sixth hour.

for wise reasons, did not chuse to baptize any with his own hands[b], but left some of his disciples to do it in the name of a Messiah shortly to be manifested;) In order to avoid both their envy and their curiosity, he left Judea, after having continued there about eight months[c] and departed again into Galilee, his former abode, where the influence and power of the council were not so great.

SECT. XXIX.

John IV. 3.

Now, unless he would have taken such a circuit through Judea and the neighbouring parts as in his present circumstances was very inconvenient, he was obliged to go through the country of Samaria. He cometh therefore, in his way, to a city of Samaria, originally called Sichem, but now, especially by the Jews, Sichar; which name they used as a term of reproach[d], intimating thereby that it was the seat of drunkards (see Isa. xxviii. 1.) and it was near that piece of ground which Jacob (having purchased it of the children of Hamor, Gen. xxxiii. 19.) by a particular grant gave to Joseph his beloved Son; (compare Gen. xlviii. 22. and Josh. xxiv. 32.) And there was a well belonging to it, called Jacob's well; it having been used by him and his family while they dwelt in these parts; (see Gen. xxxiii. 18. xxxv. 4.) Now Jesus, being wearied with his journey, sate down immediately happened before, I should still have thought it proper to add the account of that event (as I have done in the preceding section) immediately after his last testimony, though some other facts might possibly intervene: but if (which seems most probable) Mat. iv. 12. and Mark i. 14. (sect. xxxi. init.) refer to this journey, they both in plain words assert it was after John's imprisonment.—I cannot forbear saying it is astonishing that a person of Mr. Whiston's learning and sagacity should place all these events before the baptism and temptation of Christ. Were his arguments to confirm his eighth proposition far more specious than they are, they would never solve or balance the flagrant absurdity of making John declare (John i. 32, 34) that he saw the Spirit descending on Christ above a year before it did so descend; yet this ingenious writer has forgotten himself so far as to represent the matter in this contradictory view; (see Whiston's Harmony, p. 135—139, and p. 227 compared with p. 242.) The interpretation given above of Mat. iii. 14. and Luke iii. 21. (p. 108, 109.) may solve some of the chief arguments on which he builds this singular hypothesis.

4 5 6

[b] Jesus himself did not chuse to baptize any with his own hands.] This might be partly to avoid importunate inquiries whether he was the Messiah, and partly to prevent those prejudices which might have arisen against the more perfect form of baptism afterwards instituted, if any had received this less perfect baptism from Christ himself.

[c] After having continued there about eight months.] This appears from ver. 35, for harvest began quickly after the passover; Lev. xxiii. 10, 15. Christ therefore staid in Judea from one passover till within four months of the other; that is near eight months; so that this journey into Galilee must be made near the middle of winter, probably about the beginning of our December. See Sir Isaac Newton on Prophecy, p. 147, 148.

[d] A term of reproach.] It is remarkable as Mr. L'Enfant observes, that Sichar in the Syriac language signifies a drunkard and a liar.

[e] Sate

SECT. XXIX.

ately[e] by the side of the well; [and] it was then about the sixth hour, or just high noon; so that the heat joined with the fatigue of the journey to increase both his thirst and faintness[f].

John IV. 6.

7 And at this very juncture of time there comes a certain woman of Samaria to draw water: and Jesus (on purpose to introduce a discourse by which he graciously intended her conversion and salvation) says unto her, I desire you would 8 give me [some water] to drink. For his disciples were not near to assist him, but were gone to the neighbouring city to buy food.

7 There cometh a woman of Samaria to draw water; Jesus saith unto her, Give me drink.

8 For his disciples were gone away into the city to buy meat.

9 Then says the woman of Samaria to him, How is it that thou who art, as appears by thy habit and dialect, a Jew, askest drink of me, who am a woman of Samaria? for the reader must observe that the Jews have no friendly intercourse with the Samaritans[g], nor so much as care to receive any favour from them, looking upon them as an impure and accursed nation.

9 Then saith the woman of Samaria unto him, How is it, that thou being a Jew, askest drink of me, which am a woman of Samaria? for the Jews have no dealings with the Samaritans.

10 Jesus, to convince her that he was not under the power of such common prejudices, and to awaken her farther inquiries, answered and said unto her, If thou hadst known the great gift of God which he is now bestowing upon the children of men by his Son, and who it is that says unto thee, Give me to drink, thou wouldest not only have complied with his request, but wouldst ere this time surely have asked him[h], and he, without ob-

10 Jesus answered and said unto her, If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink, thou wouldest have asked of him, and he would have given thee living water.

e Sate down immediately.] Ἐκαθέζετο οὕτως, that is, weary as he was, says Dr. Whitby. I think Mr. Blackwall has not sufficiently proved that οὕτως sometimes signifies therefore, or for this cause, though he has attempted it in his Sacred Classics, Vol. I. p. 143, 144. The particle seems to have much the sense I have here given it, Acts xx. 11, and may often be rendered accordingly, upon that, or after which; see Acts vii. 8. xvii. 33, xxvii. 44. and John viii. 59. Compare Elsner Observ. Vol. I. p. 303.

f The heat joined with the fatigue, &c.] It is well known that in the latitude in which Jerusalem lies, the weather sometimes in December is exceeding hot at noon, even on days when the cold has been very severe in the morning.

g The Jews have no friendly intercourse with the Samaritans.] This must be the import of συγχρῶνται here; for it is evident from ver. 8. that the Jews had some dealings with them. It has been frequently observed that many causes concurred to occasion this inveterate hatred of the Jews to the Samaritans; such as—not only their foreign extract, and the early mixture of superstition and idolatry in their religion (2 Kings xvii. 24—33—41), but also the injurious manner in which they treated the Jews after their return from the captivity (Ezra iv. 1—6. Neh. vi. 1—14)—and especially their building a temple on mount Gerizim, which they made the centre of their worship in opposition to that at Jerusalem; Joseph. Antiq. lib. xi. cap. 8.—And perhaps nothing contributed more to expose them to the contempt and abhorrence of the Jews than that infamous offer they made to Antiochus of dedicating that temple to Jupiter, and admitting the rites of his idolatrous worship, at a time when the Jews were suffering the utmost extremities in defence of their religion; see Joseph. Antiq. lib. xii. cap. 5. (al. 7.) § 5. Havercamp.—The reader may find several passages in Whitby and Lightfoot's Hor. Heb. in loc. that express the mutual aversion of the two nations to each other.

h Thou wouldst surely have asked him.] This seems exactly to express the force of the phrase, σὺ ἂν ᾔτησας αὐτόν.

i He

SECT. XXIX.

John IV. 10.

objecting to thee on account of the people to whom thou belongest, would readily have given thee living water[i], far better than what thou art now drawing. By which our Lord intimated his ability and readiness to communicate those influences of God's Holy Spirit which afford the noblest refreshment to the soul, and therefore are often described by water.

11 The woman saith unto him, Sir, thou hast nothing to draw with, and the well is deep: from whence then hast thou that living water?

But the woman, who understood him only in a common sense, of fresh spring water, says to him with greater respect than before (as being struck both with the piety and kindness of his former reply), Sir, thou hast no bucket[k], nor any thing else to draw with, and the well before thee, which is the only spring hereabouts, is very deep; whence hast thou then this living water of which thou speakest? or what is the extraordinary supply which thou declarest may be had from thee? 11 12 Art thou greater than our father Jacob which gave us the well, and drank thereof himself, and his children, and his cattle?

Art thou greater and wiser than our father Jacob who gave us this well, leaving it to his descendants as a legacy of importance; and while he lived, he drank of it himself, with his children and his cattle, as the best water in these parts? 12

13 Jesus answered and said unto her, Whosoever drinketh of this water shall thirst again:

Jesus answered and said unto her, Whoever drinketh of this water, how much soever it may be esteemed, though it refresh the body for a little while, will quickly thirst again: 13

14 But whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him shall be in him

But he that drinketh of the water which I shall give him, will find it so reviving to the soul that he will never thirst[l], or be in danger any more of perishing for want; but the water which I shall give 14

[i] He would have given thee living water.] It is certain that the phrase, living water, does in many good authors signify spring water, or running water, in opposition to that which stagnates and so quickly grows not only flat, or, as we commonly express it, dead, but at length corrupt; (see Elsn. in loc. and compare Gen. xxvi 19. Lev. xiv. 6. Jer. ii. 13.) Yet, as our Lord elsewhere in a remarkable passage recorded by this evangelist (John vi. 51.) calls himself Living Bread, because by feeding upon him life is to be obtained, it seemed convenient literally to adhere to the original in this version; though I own it is very probable this woman understood our Lord of some fine spring water which flowed so easily as not to need the pains of drawing, and was, on this account at least, preferable to that of Jacob's well. And our Lord's reply, ver. 13, 14. shews that the simile would hold in that respect.

[k] Thou hast no bucket.] This, as it is the most material instrument for drawing water, answers the Greek αντλημα better than any single English word I recollect. And we find afterwards, upon the woman's returning in haste to the city, that she left her water-pot or pail behind her, ver. 28, which was the vessel she had brought to draw with. —Mr. Maundrell tells us that the well now shewn as Jacob's is thirty-five yards deep: Maund. Journey to Jerus. p. 63.

[l] Will never thirst.] Some would render ου μη διψηση εις τον αιωνα, shall not thirst for ever: but not to urge how much this spoils the antithesis, the expression used John vi. 35. ου μη διψηση πωποτε, is not liable to any such ambiguity. The force and truth of our Lord's assertion seems to lie in this, that the most impatient and restless desires of the soul being satisfied, when it is fixed on God as its supreme happiness, other thirst was not worth being mentioned; see John viii. 51, 52. sect. 105. John xi. 26. sect. 140. with the notes on those places; and John xiii. 10. sect. clxix.

SECT. XXIX.

John IV. 14.

give him will be a never failing source for his supply and will be in him as a fountain of water that will continually be springing up and flowing on to everlasting life: for that which I shall communicate to him will bring him to everlasting composure and satisfaction of mind now, and will be the earnest and principle of eternal happiness.

him a well of water springing up into everlasting life.

15 The woman, still ignorant of his spiritual meaning, and understanding him only of natural water, says unto him, Sir, I claim thy promise, and desire thou wouldest give me this extraordinary water, that I may not thirst any more, nor have the trouble to come hither daily to draw it, as I now do.

15 The woman saith unto him, Sir, give me this water that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw.

16 Jesus perceiving her ignorance, and willing to discover himself to her in a manner that might more immediately touch her conscience, says unto her, Go home, and call thy husband to me, and then come hither again.

16 Jesus saith unto her, Go, call thy husband, and come hither.

17 The woman, sensible of the way in which she lived, and thinking to conceal her shame, answered and said, I have no husband. Jesus says to her, Thou hast answered well, in that thou hast said, I have no husband: For I know that thou hast had five husbands, and that he whom thou hast now with thee, as thou hast never been lawfully married to him, is not thy husband[m]: in this respect thou hast spoken truly and properly.

17 The woman answered and said, I have no husband; Jesus said unto her, Thou hast well said, I have no husband:

18 For thou hast had five husbands, and he whom thou now hast, is not thy husband: in that saidst thou truly.

19 The woman, surprised at such an extraordinary instance of his knowledge, (yet desirous at the same time to turn off the discourse from a subject so much to her confusion,) says to him, Sir, I perceive, by thy discovering the circumstances of my life so truly, though I am a perfect stranger to thee, that thou art a prophet; and therefore I would gladly take this opportunity of being informed concerning that great question which divides the Jewish and Samaritan nations[n].

19 The woman saith unto him, Sir, I perceive that thou art a prophet.

It

[m] Is not thy husband.] This can imply no less than that she was not married to the man she lived with now at all; for Christ seems to allow the other five to have been husbands, though her separation from some of the former, and her marriage with the rest, had been unlawful; which quite overthrows that argument which Jerom would draw from hence against the lawfulness of marrying more than once. See Heinsius in loc.

[n] That great question which divides the Jewish and Samaritan nations.] It is well known, and necessary to be recollected here, that Sanballat, by the permission of Alexander the Great, had built a temple upon mount Gerizim for Manasseh his son-in-law, who, for marrying Sanballat's daughter, was expelled from the priesthood, and from Jerusalem; (see Neh. xiii. 28. and Joseph. Antiq. lib. xi. cap. 8.) This was the place where the Samaritans used to worship in opposition to Jerusalem; and it was so near Sichem, the scene of this story

SECT. XXIV.

John IV. 20

20 Our fathers worshipped in this mountain; and ye say, that in Jerusalem is the place where men ought to worship.

It is well known from the Mosaic writings that our fathers worshipped on this mountain[o], which we think a circumstance of considerable weight in our favour; whereas you Jews say that the temple at Jerusalem is the great place where we should all present our sacrifices unto God, and ought to attend upon the duties of his worship, and whither all the tribes are to resort three times a year. I would beg therefore to be informed by thee in this important case, which of the two I should believe, and which is really the place most acceptable unto God.

21 Jesus saith unto her, Woman, believe me, The hour cometh, when ye shall neither in this mountain, nor yet at Jerusalem, worship the Father.

In answer to this case of conscience, Jesus says 21 to her, Woman, believe me, and attend to what I say, The hour is now coming, when this controversy shall be entirely over, and neither on this mountain, nor at Jerusalem, shall ye worship the Father in the same manner as you now do; for God is going now to introduce such a pure and spiritual dispensation as will remove all manner of distinctions as to the place in which he would be worshipped, and supersede the ceremonies practised here or there. But as to this dispute 22 which has so long been carried on between the Jews and you, it is apparent, on the principles of the Mosaic religion, that you Samaritans are in a gross mistake; and with respect not only to the place, but in a great measure to the object also, and the manner of your services, you worship you know not what: whereas we Jews are much better instructed in these things, and know whom, and on what authority, we worship; for truly the salvation God has promised to his people is to arise from the Jews, and the way of obtaining it is with the greatest advantage to be learnt among them. Nevertheless, as I said before, I assure 23 you again, the hour approaches, and now is just arrived, when the true and acceptable worshippers shall worship the great Father of all, not with these external rites on which you lay so much stress, 22 Ye worship ye know not what: we know what we worship; for salvation is of the Jews.

23 But the hour cometh, and now is, when the true worshippers shall worship the Father in spirit and story, that a man's voice might be heard from the one to the other; Judg. ix. 7.

o Our fathers worshipped on this mountain.] As the Samaritans pretended to deduce their genealogy from Jacob, so it is evident that this refers to Abraham and to Jacob, who erected altars in this place, (Gen. xii. 6, 7. and xxxiii. 18, 20.) and possibly to the whole congregation, who were directed, when they came into the land of Canaan, to put the blessing upon mount Gerizim, Deut. xi. 29. And though Hyrcanus the son of Simon, who succeeded his father as high priest and prince of the Jews, had long ago destroyed the temple which Sanballat built here, (Joseph. Antiq. lib. xiii. cap. 9. [al. 17.] § 1.) yet it is plain that the Samaritans still resorted thither, having, no doubt, rebuilt it, though probably in a meaner manner.

SECT. XXIX.

John IV. 23.

stress, but in spirit and in truth [p], or in a more devotional and rational manner, to which these corporeal and typical ordinances must soon give way; for the Father seeketh such to worship him, as that kind of homage is most suited to his own nature, as well as peculiarly delightful and useful to the pious mind. For God is himself a pure Spirit; and therefore they that worship him, ought to worship him in spirit and in truth: and as some degree of spirituality and sincerity is necessary under every dispensation, you need not wonder, if at length he set aside those external rites, which were never principally regarded by him.

and in truth: for the Father seeketh such to worship him.

24 God is a Spirit; and they that worship him, must worship him in spirit and in truth.

25 The woman saith unto him, I know that the Messiah, who is called Christ, is coming, and will soon appear; [and] when he is actually come, he will undoubtedly teach us all these sublime truths at which you have been hinting, and whatever other things it is necessary for us to know [q].

25 The woman saith unto him, I know that Messias cometh, which is called Christ: when he is come, he will tell us all things.

26 Upon her mentioning this, as Jesus was not apprehensive of those inconveniencies here which might have attended such an open acknowledgment among the Jews [r], he plainly and directly tells her in so many words, I that am now speaking to thee, am he: a declaration which, no doubt, she heard with great amazement; but before she could answer him, the disciples appeared, which for the present put an end to the conference.

26 Jesus saith unto her, I that speak unto thee, am he.

IMPROVE-

p Worship the Father in spirit and in truth.] Truth is elsewhere opposed to types and ceremonies, John i. 14, 17. Heb. viii. 2. ix. 24. This important sentiment, as likewise what is said in ver. 24, is well illustrated by many fine quotations from ancient writers by Grotius in loc. And all that know any thing of that learned commentator, know that he has a thousand rich collections of this kind which do a great honour to scripture by illustrating its superior beauties; but it would be quite foreign to the design of this work either to transcribe such collections, or to attempt any supplement to them.

q Teach us all things it is necessary for us to know.] This (as well as ver. 29, 42) plainly proves both that the Samaritans expected the Messiah, and that they concluded he would be a prophet.

r Not apprehensive of those inconveniencies here which might have attended such an open acknowledgment among the Jews.] That Christ was very cautious of acknowledging himself to be the promised Messiah, in his conversing with the Jews, is very apparent (compare Mat. xvi. 20. Mark viii. 29, 30. Luke xxii. 67. and John x. 24.) and the reason was, that the Jews had such notions of the temporal kingdom of the Messiah, that they would have construed an open declaration of himself under that character as a claim to the throne of David; in consequence of which many would have taken up arms in the cause (John vi. 15), and others would have accused him to the Roman governor as a rebel against Cæsar (Luke xx. 20), as they afterwards did, Luke xxiii. 2.—This Mr. Locke has stated at large in his Reasonableness of Christianity, p. 59—77. Yet I think there was a nicety in Christ's conduct beyond what is there represented: for our Lord in effect declared the thing while he declined that particular title; and in a multitude of places represents himself as the Son of man, and the Son of God, which were both equivalent phrases, and generally understood

IMPROVEMENT.

CONDESCENDING and compassionate Redeemer! who would thus graciously converse with a Samaritan, with a woman of an infamous reputation too, from whom, on various accounts, a haughty Pharisee would have turned away in proud disdain! and could forget his thirst, pressing as that appetite is, that he might instruct and lead her to the waters of life! SECT. XXIX. Ver. 6, 9

Gracious gift of God to the children of men! how noble and how lasting a delight does it administer! Let it be our language, Lord, evermore give us this living water! Oh, pour out this enlivening spirit on us, which alone can allay the thirst of our souls, and give us that lasting satisfaction which we in vain would seek from these broken cisterns, from these precarious streams; till at length the fountain springs up in Paradise, and flows on to life everlasting! 10 15 13 14

May this good spirit anticipate those immortal delights to our souls by leading us into that spirituality of worship which the nature of God demands, and which the gospel dispensation is so eminently calculated to promote! Let it be inscribed on our hearts that God is a Spirit; and let it teach us to worship him in spirit and in truth. Such worshippers the Father seeks; such may he ever find in us! 23 24

May all intemperate zeal for matters of doubtful disputation, all sentiments of bigotry and severity against our brethren, be happily swallowed up in this infinitely greater concern! and while others contend about places and forms of worship, may we pour out our hearts before him, and feel the love of God and man shed abroad in them by his Spirit given unto us! (Rom. v. 5.) 20, 21

SECT. XXX.

Christ's discourse with his disciples at Jacob's well: his visit to the Samaritans, and their regards to him. John IV. 27—42.

JOHN IV. 27.

AND upon this came his disciples, and marvelled that he talked with the woman; yet

JOHN IV. 27.

THUS expressly did Jesus declare to the woman of Samaria that he was the Messiah; and immediately upon this, his disciples (who, as was said before, were gone into the city to buy food) came to this well, where Jesus had appointed SECT. XXX. John IV. 27 understood by the Jews, though a Roman would not so easily have entered into the force of them. Accordingly we find this interpretation was in fact given to them. John vii. 31—41. and ix. 22.

SECT. XXX.

pointed them to meet him; and they wondered that he was thus talking in so friendly a manner with the woman[a], whom they knew to be one of that nation so peculiarly obnoxious to the Jews. But though it gave them some uneasiness, yet they had such a reverence for him, that none of them said, What dost thou seek from this Samaritan? or why dost thou talk with her?

yet no man said, What seekest thou? or, Why talkest thou with her?

John IV. 27.

28 Then the woman, seeing other company coming up to interrupt the discourse, immediately left her water-pot, or pail, behind her, as her thoughts were taken up with matters of far greater importance; and went away in haste to the neighbouring city, and says to the men of her

28 The woman then left her water-pot, and went her way into the city, and saith to the men,

29 acquaintance there, Come directly to Jacob's well, and you may there see a wonderful man, who has told me in a manner all that ever I did, even some of the most secret circumstances of my past life: is not this the expected Messiah? I assure you it seems exceeding probable to me that he is; and he himself has told me so in so many words.

29 Come, see a man which told me all things that ever I did: is not this the Christ?

30 They therefore, struck with so great a name, in concurrence with so strange an event, went in great numbers out of the city, and came to him, who still continued where the woman left him.

30 Then they went out of the city, and came unto him.

31 In the mean time the disciples intreated him to refresh himself, saying, Rabbi, eat of the 32 provisions we have brought thee[b]. But he, referring to the conversation he had lately had with the woman, and to the preparation making for the conversion of the Samaritans, said unto them with an air of great satisfaction, I have meat to eat that ye know not of, which gives me a much better entertainment than you can bring 33 me. The disciples therefore, not understanding his 31 In the mean while his disciples prayed him, saying, Master, eat.

32 But he said unto them, I have meat to eat that ye know not of.

33 Therefore said the

[a] With the woman, μετα γυναικος.] As the article is wanting, the Prussian Testament, and many others, render it with a woman; and Dr. Lightfoot, in his note on this place, has produced a great many unaccountable, and, some of them, very stupid passages from the Talmud and other Rabbinical writers, to prove that it was reckoned scandalous for a man of distinction to talk publicly with a woman; (see Lightfoot's Hor. Heb. in loc.) But the disciples surely knew that Jacob and Moses and others of their greatest and holiest prophets had done it; and some of them in circumstances remarkably resembling this, in which the woman came to draw water; compare Gen. xxix. 9—12. Exod. ii. 15—17. (See also 1 Sam. ix. 11—14.) It is plain the wonder here was that he talked with a Samaritan.—As for the omission of the article, see note b on John i. 1. p. 24, and the end of note d in this section, on John iv. 36.

[b] Eat of the provisions we have brought thee.] Their bringing back the provisions to him here makes it probable that he did not intend, had it not been on this occasion, to have gone into the town; and so (as was said in the paraphrase, ver. 27.) ordered his disciples to meet him at this place, which was undoubtedly well known to travellers.

[c] There

the disciples one to another, Hath any man brought him ought to eat?

34 Jesus saith unto them, My meat is to do the will of him that sent me, and to finish his work.

35 Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh harvest? behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look on the fields; for they are white already to harvest.

36 And he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal: that his words in that spiritual sense in which he intended them, said one to another with some surprise, considering where he was, Has any one been with him in our absence, and brought him any [food] to eat here? Jesus, who knew the loss they were at to understand his meaning, says, to explain it to them, My most refreshing and delightful food is to do the will of him that sent me into the world, and to finish his work as fast as possible, in the conversion of souls and in the propagation of his kingdom; and I with pleasure can assure you, that it is now going on successfully. Do not you say, that there are yet four months, and harvest cometh[c]? Nay but behold, I say unto you, Lift up your eyes even now, and survey the fields round about you; for they are already laden with a plentiful crop, and appear white unto the harvest: alluding to the disposition of the people in general, and more particularly to the multitude of Samaritans, who, struck with the report of the woman, were coming to inquire after him as the Messiah; and unto whom he pointed and directed them to look, as being then within their view.

And he yet farther added, It is your happiness to be employed in such a work as this; for he that faithfully reaps the harvest of which I now speak, receiveth far more valuable wages than men can give, and has the great additional satisfaction of thinking that he gathers in the fruit unto eternal life[d]: so that, on this account, both he that

SECT. XXX.

John IV. 33, 34, 35, 36

c There are yet four months, and harvest cometh.] Dr. Whitby and Grotius, and many others, understand this as if our Lord had said, "It is a proverbial expression, for the encouragement of husbandmen, that there are but four months between seed-time and harvest." And the author of the late English translation therefore renders it, (in his paraphrastic manner) You commonly say, T'other four months, and the harvest will come. But I cannot acquiesce in this interpretation: (1.) Because none of the learned writers mentioned above, nor Dr. Lightfoot, who is large on this text, could produce any such proverb. (2.) Because indeed there could be no foundation for it, since the distance between seed-time and harvest must differ according to the different kinds of grain in question. And (3.) Because if there had been such a proverb, it would have been improper to apply it here; since our Lord was not speaking of the period of time between the prophets' sowing and the apostles' reaping (to which four months has no analogy); but only means to tell them, that though they reckoned yet four months to the earthly harvest, the spiritual harvest was now ripe. So that I chuse, as Sir Isaac Newton does, to take the words in their plainest sense, as an intimation that it was then four months to the beginning of harvest; see note c on ver. 3. p. 161. And I take this passage to be of very great importance for settling the chronology of Christ's ministry.

d Gathers in the fruit unto eternal life.] I apprehend our Lord's thought here to have been more comprehensive than commentators have been aware of. He seems to compare the case of a Christian minister to that of a considerate reaper, who is supported in his fatigue, not only by a regard to his own wages, but to the advantage which the public receives by the harvest he gathers in. This the expression συναγει καρπον that sows and he that reaps may rejoice together; and those souls to whose salvation they have in different ways contributed, will be to both a crown of honour and objects of everlasting complacency and delight.

SECT. XXX.

that both he that soweth and he that reapeth may rejoice together.

John IV. 36.

37 For in this sense it may be justly said, that herein is that proverbial saying remarkably true, One soweth and another reapeth; for after he has sown his field, it often happens that a man dies before he gathers in the harvest, and so leaves it to another who enjoys the advantage of his pains.

37 And herein is that saying true, One soweth, and another reapeth.

38 And thus it is that I have sent you forth to reap the fruit of that on which you have not laboured either to till or sow the ground; the prophets, and other holy men of former ages, having toiled as it were to cultivate the field, and thereby made your work a great deal easier than it would otherwise have been. So that the success of my preaching this day in your absence is an emblem of what God has wisely ordered in the course of his Providence: others have laboured, and you are entered into the field on which their labour has been carefully employed[e]. Let this engage you therefore to apply yourselves in earnest to your work with a becoming spirit and a ready cheerfulness.

38 I sent you to reap that whereon ye bestowed no labour: other men laboured, and ye are entered into their labours.

39 Now when the woman had informed the people of the discourse which she had had with Jesus, many of the Samaritans from that city believed on him, as some extraordinary person, by reason of that saying of the woman, who testified concerning him, He told me all that ever I did.

39 And many of the Samaritans of that city believed on him, for the saying of the woman, which testified, He told me all that ever I did.

40 When therefore the Samaritans had heard the wonderful account the woman gave of Jesus, and were come with her to the well to see him, they were so taken with the manner of his deportment and the strain of his discourses, that they entreated him to tarry with them for some time, as being desirous of a farther acquaintance with him and of receiving farther benefit from his instructions: and, ready to lay hold of every opportunity of doing good, he went with them to their city, and 40 So when the Samaritans were come unto him, they besought him that he would tarry with them: and he abode there two days.

41 continued there two days[f]. And there were many more

41 And many more believed, καρπον εις ζωην αιωνιον seems plainly to import, and so is nearly parallel to Jam. v. 20, and suggests a most forcible consideration to diligence and zeal.—Καρπον here seems to be put for τον καρπον, the fruit, that is, the souls he gathers in.

[e] The field on which their labour has been employed.] This seems the signification of κοπον here, as Grotius well proves. Compare 2 Cor. x. 15.

[f] Continued there two days.] This was a proper medium between entirely neglecting them and giving them so much of his time and company as would have broken in upon the design of his journey into Galilee, or might have given umbrage to the Jews.

believed, because of his own word :

42 And said unto the woman, Now we believe, not because of thy saying ; for we have heard him ourselves, and know that this is indeed the Christ, the Saviour of the world.

more who in this time believed on him[g], on account of his own discourse, which they might also see confirmed by some extraordinary works. And they said to the woman, Now we believe, and that not merely nor yet chiefly on account of what thou hast spoken of him ; for we ourselves have heard him teach, and have examined his credentials ; and, by the most convincing evidence, we know that this is really the Christ, the Saviour of the world[h], even the expected Messiah, and are determined to regard him as such.

SECT. XXX.

John IV. 42.

IMPROVEMENT.

LET us behold with pleasure the glorious example of our blessed Redeemer, and learn to imitate his zeal. It was his meat and drink to pursue his Father's work, to glorify God, and to do good to souls : and ought it not to be ours? Let us bless God for every opportunity of applying to it and every field of service, which Providence opens to us. Ver. 34

Let gospel ministers especially be thankful for all that hath been done to introduce their services, not only by the ministrations of the prophets under the Old Testament, but the apostles also under the New, and by succeeding servants of Christ in every age of the church. In this sense, with regard to us, is that proverb true, One soweth and another reapeth. We have entered into the labours of others : may others in time enter into ours ! May the work be delivered over from one faithful hand to another and be carried on by each with growing zeal and success ! Blessed time, when all the workmen shall meet and join their songs ; and each of the souls gathered into eternal life shall be, to all concerned in their conversion or edification, an ornament of glory and a source of pleasure ! 38 37 36

Surely, if we know Christ ourselves, we shall, like this woman of Samaria, be solicitous to communicate the knowledge to others, and shall sometimes forget our little worldly interests to attend to this 29 28

[g] Many more believed on him.] This was the more extraordinary, as they not only had a national prejudice against him as a Jew, but, living near mount Gerizim, had a particular interest in maintaining the usual worship there, which must be very advantageous to the neighbourhood. Perhaps on this they would no longer worship there, which might irritate the rest of the Samaritans, and might in part provoke the ill usage that Christ afterwards met with in this country. Luke ix. 52, 53.

[h] The Saviour of the world.] They might probably collect from what was prophesied by Jacob of the Messiah, Gen xlix. 10. To him shall the gathering of the people be, that the Gentile nations were to receive some benefit by the Messiah's coming, and one way or another to be subjected to him ; and Christ's discourse might confirm that apprehension : but there is no reason at all to believe they perfectly understood the doctrine of the calling of the idolatrous Gentiles, which was so long a mystery even to the apostles themselves.

SECT. XXX. this vast superior care. May we believe in him, not merely on the report and testimony of others, but on our own experience; that having tasted that the Lord is gracious, we may bear a more lively and effectual testimony to him!

Ver. 41, 42

Let us watchfully observe the leadings of Providence, and whatever our own schemes may have been, let us still adjust our conduct by the intimations of present duty; and, especially where we have reason to believe that God is by his Spirit beginning to work on men's hearts, let us be ambitious of being workers together with him. A word spoken in such a season is remarkably good, and it is a great part of Christian and ministerial prudence to observe and improve those tender times.

40

SECT. XXXI.

Christ comes from Samaria into Galilee; and while at Cana, cures a nobleman's son, who lay at the point of death in Capernaum, Mark I. 14, 15. Mat. IV. 12. John IV. 43, to the end.

MARK I. 14.

SECT. XXXI. NOW after John was cast into prison, and Jesus had heard [of it] in Judea, where he then was, he withdrew from thence [and] came into Galilee[a] (as was said before, John iv. 3. sect. 29,) being willing to take the advantage of those impressions which the ministry of John might have made on the minds of the people there, who had so signal an esteem for him; an esteem which would be heightened rather than abated by the injurious things which they saw him suffer. Jesus came therefore into that country[b], preaching the good news of the kingdom of God, which was speedily to be erected by the Messiah, whom God had appointed to raise and govern it: And saying, Behold the time fixed by the ancient prophets is now fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is near; see to it therefore, that you cordially repent of all your sins and believe the

Mark I. 14.

MARK I. 14. NOW after that John was put in prison, [when Jesus had heard that—he departed and] came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God; MAT. IV. 12.

15 And saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel.

[a] After John was cast into prison, Jesus withdrew and came into Galilee.] It is strange that Mr. Whiston and some others should represent it as an argument against the order we have followed here, that it would have been imprudent and inconvenient for Christ to have gone immediately into Herod's territories, just after he had seized John; when two of the evangelists assured us this was the very reason of his journey. The cause of John's imprisonment was particular; and the reasons assigned in the paraphrase seem considerable, besides that already mentioned, John iv. 1—3 See note a, p. 160.

[b] Jesus came therefore into that country.] Mr. Le Clerc supposes (in his Harmony, p. 75.) that Jesus went from Sichar directly to Nazareth, and that this visit which he made to Cana (at ver. 46) was some time after he was expelled from Nazareth, and had dwelt at Capernaum. But that he took a circuit elsewhere before he went to Nazareth, is certain from John iv. 43, 44. compared with Luke iv. 14—16. And though we cannot positively say whether the gospel, which I publish to you, that you may secure an interest in the blessings of it.

SECT. XXXI.

John IV. 43. Now after two days he departed thence, [that is, from Sichar,] and went into Galilee.

And having been prevailed upon (as we have seen before) to stop at Sichar in his way, after he had continued there two days with the Samaritans, he departed from thence, and went (as has been just now said) into Galilee. And he chose to make a journey through a considerable part of it before he returned to Nazareth, that the reputation he gained elsewhere might be some balance to those prejudices which the inhabitants of that place would naturally entertain against him: for Jesus himself testified, that a prophet has no honour in his own country;[c] where those that knew him in his childhood and youth can hardly be persuaded to look upon him with the reverence due to a messenger from God.

John IV. 43.

44 For Jesus himself testified, that a prophet hath no honour in his own country.

45 Then when he was come into Galilee, the Galileans received him, having seen all the things that he did at Jerusalem, at the feast: for they also went unto the feast.

When therefore he came into Galilee, the Galileans received and entertained him with a great deal of pleasure (compare Luke iv. 14, 15,) for many of them had been witnesses to his surprising miracles having seen all the wonderful things that he did at Jerusalem during the feast of the passover (for they also came to the feast,) and they had now an expectation of seeing some of them renewed. Jesus, therefore, encouraged by this readiness of theirs to attend his ministry, pursued his journey till he came again to Cana of Galilee, which was the place where he before had made the water wine.

46 So Jesus came again into Cana of Galilee, where he made the water wine.

And there was a certain nobleman, whose son was sick at Capernaum:

And while he stayed at Cana, there was a certain nobleman belonging to king Herod's court,[d] whose son was dangerously ill at Capernaum; [Who] whether the visit to Cana was made in this first journey, or in the other, which is mentioned afterwards, (Luke iv. 44. Mat. iv. 23. and Mark i. 38, 39, sect. 36,) yet I have introduced it here, because John mentions it immediately after his coming from Sichar; and it has been a maxim with me in this work to take all the stories and discourses in the order they lie, if there be not (from other evangelists) a plain reason for transposing them.

47 When

[c] For Jesus himself testified that a prophet has no honour in his own country.] There is no manner of occasion here to render γαρ, although; for it is plain that this is spoken as the reason why he rather chose to travel into those parts of Galilee, and not to go directly to Nazareth; which is particularly called his own country, in distinction from Galilee, and even from Capernaum, Luke iv. 23.

[d] A certain nobleman belonging to king Herod's court.] Though Herod was only tetrarch of Galilee, yet was he commonly distinguished by the title of king (see Mat. xiv. 9. and Mark vi. 14. sect. 77,) and as Capernaum lay in his dominions, it is probable that this was one belonging to his court, who was a nobleman of some distinction. For this is properly the signification of βασιλικος, which the Syriac and Arabic versions render a minister, or servant of the king; and many have conjectured that the person who is here spoken of was Chuza, Herod's steward, whose wife is thought to have been converted on this occasion, and became afterwards an attendant on Christ. Luke viii. 3.

SECT. XXXI.

John IV. 46.

[Who] when he heard that Jesus was come out of Judea into Galilee, went in person at least a day's journey[e] cross the country to him, and earnestly entreated him that he would come down to Capernaum and cure his son, for he was given over by the physicians, and seemed just ready to die. Jesus said therefore unto him and them that 48 were about him, I perceive that, though the Samaritans shewed so great a regard to my word and the report of my miracles, unless you see with your own eyes some remarkable and repeated signs and wonders, you will not believe; thereby justly reproving him and them for that mixture of suspicion and slowness of faith which he 49 discerned in their minds[f]. The nobleman, weak as his faith was, determined nevertheless to urge the matter to the utmost; and therefore, without any explication or apology on that head, says to him, Sir, I beseech thee to come down before my child die; for the case is so extreme that a delay may be attended with the most fatal 50 consequences. Upon which, Jesus, to shew that it was not necessary for him to go in person to accomplish the cure, says to him, Go thy way home, for I assure thee that thy son is living, and at this instant, while I am speaking to thee, is recovered from his illness. And the man, though he had never seen or heard of a parallel case,[g] believed the word that Jesus spoke unto him, and went away without any farther importunity.

51 Now the day after he had taken his leave of Jesus, as he was going down to Capernaum, some of his servants met him on the road, eager to bring him such acceptable news, and told [him,] saying, Thy son who was so dangerously ill is now 52 recovered. And therefore, to compare it with the account that Jesus gave, he presently inquired 47 When he heard that Jesus was come out of Judea into Galilee, he went unto him and besought him, that he would come down and heal his son; for he was at the point of death.

48 Then said Jesus unto him, Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe, 49 The nobleman saith unto him, Sir, come down ere my child die.

50 Jesus saith unto him, Go thy way; thy son liveth. And the man believed the word that Jesus had spoken unto him, and he went his way.

51 And as he was now going down, his servants met him, and told him, saying, Thy son liveth.

52 Then inquired he of them the hour when he began to amend:

[e] At least a day's journey.] This may be very fairly inferred from ver. 52, as well as from the accounts the best geographers give of the situation of Cana and Capernaum.

[f] Reproving him and them for that mixture of suspicion, &c.] It is necessary to suppose some such reference to illustrate the justice of this reproof; for in the general it was very reasonable to expect that Christ should work miracles in proof of his Divine mission, as he himself does plainly intimate elsewhere; see John xv. 24. Who can tell but the very person now applying to him might have made some such declaration, that he would never believe such things till he saw them with his own eyes? Christ might mean by this reflection to humble him, and to shew him a specimen of his extraordinary knowledge as well as power.

[g] Though he had never seen or heard of a parallel case.] It is plain he had heard of Christ's miracles, but this is the first recorded, in which he cured the patient at a distance, and probably was hitherto, in this respect, unequalled.

mend: and they said unto him, Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him.

ed of them what was the hour when he began to mend: and they said unto him, Yesterday at the seventh hour, or at one in the afternoon, the fever left him at once, and he grew well on a sudden. The father therefore knew that [it was] at the very hour in which Jesus said to him, Thy son is recovered: and when he came to reflect on the astonishing circumstances of the case, he and his whole family believed that the person, by whom so convincing and beneficent a miracle was wrought, must be, not only as before supposed, some great prophet, but even the Messiah himself.

SECT. XXIX.

John IV. 50.

53 So the father knew that it was at the same hour in the which Jesus said unto him, Thy son liveth: and himself believed, and his whole house.

53

54 This is again the second miracle that Jesus did when he was come out of Judea into Galilee.

This is again the second miracle which Jesus performed at Cana; and he wrought it when he came out of Judea into Galilee; a circumstance in which it agreed with the former[h].

54

IMPROVEMENT.

How unreasonable are the passions and prejudices of mankind, and this in particular, that a prophet should have no honour in his own country! One would have imagined that Jesus at least, free as he was from all the follies of childhood and youth, should have been an exception; nay, indeed, that he should have been peculiarly honoured there, where his early wisdom and piety could not but be observed.

John iv. 44.

Our Lord however intended them a visit, even at Nazareth; and it is the duty of his ministers to bear their testimony, whether men will hear or whether they will forbear. Yet should they learn of their Great Master to study as much as they can to obviate those prejudices, which might prevent their usefulness, and should use the most prudent and gentle methods to vanquish them.

Such was this beneficial miracle of our Lord; which may afford us many particulars worthy of our notice. With what affection and zeal does this tender parent apply to Christ on the sickness of his child! Let us not be less importunate when soliciting spiritual blessings in behalf of our dear offspring: and so much the rather as their lives are so precarious, and we know not how soon these lovely flowers may be cut down, and all farther petitions for them be for ever superseded.

47

49

Our Lord, while at a distance from the patient, wrought and 50, 51

[h] A circumstance in which it agreed with the former.] Compare John i. 43. and ii. 1. That the words must be taken with such a limitation, evidently appears from what John had before said of the many miracles which Christ had already wrought elsewhere; see John ii. 23. and iii. 2.

2 In

SECT. XXXI.

perfected the cure. And has he not still the same Divine power, though he does not exert it in the same miraculous way? Let not his bodily absence abate our faith, while praying for others or for ourselves.

53 Salvation now came to this house, and blessings infinitely more valuable, than noble blood, or ample possessions, or royal favour, or recovered health could give; for the cure wrought on the body of one was a means of producing faith in the hearts of all. Blessed Jesus! thy power was no less employed in the latter than in the former. Oh may that power work in such a manner on our souls as that we all may be disposed cordially to receive thee and cheerfully to venture our eternal all upon thee! May we and our houses concur in so wise and happy a resolution: and not insisting upon 48 evidence beyond what thy gracious wisdom has thought fit to give us, may we candidly receive the light we have, and faithfully improve it so as to be at length entitled to the blessedness of those who have not seen and yet have believed! (John xx. 29.)

SECT. XXXII.

Christ preaching at Nazareth is at first admired, but immediately after rejected: the people there making an attempt upon his life, he leaves them and comes to Capernaum. Luke IV. 14—30.

LUKE IV. 14.

SECT. XXXII.

IT has already been observed that after John the Baptist was imprisoned and Jesus was acquainted with it, he left Judea and returned into Galilee; and from what follows it will be plainly seen that he went thither under the guidance and in the power of the Spirit;[a] for as a mighty impulse on his own mind determined him to undertake the journey, so an amazing Divine energy attended his progress through it; and his renown was spread abroad as soon as he arrived in Galilee, and went 15 through all the neighbouring region. And, ready to embrace all opportunities that offered to instruct the people, he went from place to place, and taught in their synagogues with universal admiration and applause[b].
16 And having thus prepared his way, he came at

Luke IV. 14.

Luke IV. 14.

AND Jesus returned in the power of the Spirit into Galilee, and there went out a fame of him through all the region round about.

15 And he taught in their synagogues, being glorified of all.

16. And he came to Nazareth, a In the power of the Spirit.] It seems a very wild thought of Mr. Fleming's that this intimates, Christ was transported through the air hither, after his temptation in the wilderness; see Flem. Christol. Vol. II. p. 315.

b With universal applause, δοξαζομενος υπο παντων.] Our translation, which has rendered it being glorified in all, is indeed more literal: but to glorify a preacher is an uncommon phrase in English; and that I have used, is so plainly equivalent to the other in signification, that I hope it may be allowed as very just.

c Being

Nazareth, where he had been brought up: and, as his custom was, he went into the synagogue on the sabbath-day, and stood up for to read.

SECT. XXXII.

Luke IV. 14.

at length to Nazareth, where it has been observed before, Mat. ii. 23, and Luke ii. 51, that he was educated; and according to his custom, which he constantly observed there and elsewhere, he entered into the synagogue on the sabbath-day: and out of regard to the high reputation he had lately gained, being desired by the ruler of it to officiate[c], he stood up to read the scriptures, which made a constant part of their public worship; see (Acts xv. 21.)

17 And there was delivered unto him the book of the prophet Esaias: And when he had opened the book, he found the place where it was written,

18 The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor, he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised,

19. To preach the acceptable

17 And the book of Isaiah the prophet was delivered to him, a paragraph of the law having been read before; and unrolling the volume of the book[d] he found that place of it (Isa. lxi. 1, 2, 3.) where it was written to this effect;[e] "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me in an abundant 18 degree, for the important purpose to which he hath anointed me[f], and solemnly set me apart; and important indeed it is, [for] he hath sent me to preach good news to the poor and afflicted[g], to heal those whose hearts are broken with sorrow, to proclaim free dismission to wretched captives, even the recovery of sight to them that are blind in prison; [and] to set those at liberty who are bruised with the heavy load of their fetters[h]: In a word, to proclaim, as 19 by c Being desired by the ruler of it to officiate.] One cannot but be amazed at the ignorance of Suidas, in arguing from hence that Christ was a priest. It is well known that any man of gravity and reputation might, at the request of the ruler, officiate on such occasions; compare Acts xiii. 15.

d Unrolling the volume of the book.] So αναλιξας properly signifies; and I chuse to retain it, that the form of the books then used may be thus recollected: they were, as the copies of the Old Testament in the Jewish synagogues now are, long scrolls of parchment, that were rolled upon two sticks. The reader may see an excellent account of them in Mr. Jer. Jones's Vindication of St. Matthew's Gospel, chap. xv. p. 151—170. And this form of their books shews, in the most convincing manner, how improbable such transpositions are, as those learned harmonizers, Mr. Whiston and Mr. Manne, make the foundation of their respective hypotheses.

e It was written to this effect.] It is evident that the quotation, as it stands here, does neither exactly agree with the Hebrew nor the Septuagint. The many old copies in which that clause, ιασασθαι τας συντετριμμενας την καρδιαν, to heal the broken-hearted, is wanting, has inclined many learned critics, with Grotius, to suppose it added from the Hebrew; but one would rather conclude that Christ read the passage as it was, and that these words might accidentally be dropped by some early transcriber.

f For the purpose to which he hath anointed me: ου ενεκεν εχρισε με.] It is very difficult to explain the connection of the two clauses in this passage, if we render ου ενεκεν either because, or therefore; and I cannot recollect that it ever signifies because. But the translation I propose seems to remove the difficulty; see Acts xix. 32.

g Poor and afflicted.] Grotius well observes that it is probable some copies might read HHANJIM, the poor, instead of HHANAWIM, the meek, which is the word made use of in Isaiah. And as to that clause of restoring sight to the blind, which is omitted in Isaiah, I am not able to determine whether our Lord in his discourse borrowed this clause from Isa. xlii. 7. by way of illustration; or whether (as Dr. Prideaux supposes in his Connection, Vol II. p. 547.) it was taken from some Chaldee Targum which is now lost.

h Sight to them that are blind, and to set those at liberty who are bruised.] It is beautifully by the sound of a trumpet, that welcome year of the Lord[i], which the year of jubilee, pleasing and grateful as it is, can but imperfectly represent, though debts are then forgiven and slaves released and inheritances restored to their original owners."

SECT. XXXII.

Luke IV. 18.

acceptable year of the Lord.

20 And having rolled up the book, which was a long scroll of parchment, he delivered it to the servant of the synagogue whose proper office it was to take care of it; and then, according to the custom of the Jewish rabbis, sat down to preach (see Mat. v. 1. xxiii. 2, 3. xxvi. 55. and John viii 2,) and the eyes of all in the synagogue were attentively fixed upon him, as they were very curious to know what he would say on a scripture which seemed so plainly to refer to the Messiah[k].

20. And he closed the book, and he gave it again to the minister, and sat down; and the eyes of all them that were in the synagogue were fastened on him.

21 And he began to speak at large from this excellent and suitable passage; and the main tendency and purport of his discourse was to say to them, To-day this scripture I have now been reading is remarkably fulfilled in your hearing; for I am the person foretold under this character, and sent with such ample powers to fulfil these purposes of the Divine mercy.

21 And he began to say unto them, This day is this scripture fulfilled in your ears.

22 And, strong as their prejudices were against him, they all (by their very countenances (see Job xxix. 11) bore their testimony to him as a most excellent preacher, and were astonished at those graceful as well as comfortable words[l] which pro-

22 And all bare him witness, and wondered at the gracious words which proceeded out of his mouth. And they said, Is not this Joseph's son?

tifully observed by the judicious Mr. Cradock in his excellent book on the Evangelists, that the former clause seems an allusion to the wretched state of those prisoners who, according to the inhuman custom still retained in the eastern countries, had their eyes put out: and with regard to such as these, this Great Deliverer is represented as restoring them, a work far beyond all human power. See Cradock's Harm. p. 69.—I take them to be the same with those who are spoken of in the next clause as bruised with the weight of their fetters; for it is plain that even blind captives were sometimes loaded with them; as was the case with Samson, Judges xvi. 21. and with Zedekiah, 2 Kings xxv. 7.

i That welcome year of the Lord.] It is strange that any ancient or modern writers should argue from hence that Christ's ministry, lasted but one year, or a little more. One might as well plead, from 2 Cor. vi. 2. that the day of salvation included but one natural day.—Here is a plain allusion to the Jubilee; compare Lev. xxv. 9, 10. and Psal. lxxxix. 15.

k A scripture which seemed so plainly to refer to the Messiah.] Though many commentators of note apply Isa. lxi. 1. to the good news of the dismission of the Jews from Babylon, I refer it to the impartial reader to judge, whether it be not much more probable that ver. 4, 5, 6. (where the prophet speaks of repairing the waste cities, planting vineyards, &c.) may be either meant in a spiritual sense, or literally predict the temporal prosperity of the church after the conversion of the Jews, than that Christ should mistake the true sense of the text, or build his argument on a mere allusion; see Dr. Sykes's Vindication of Christianity, p. 259, and Jeffery's True Grounds, p. 120.

l Astonished at those graceful words.] The phrase in the original λογοις της χαριτος, literally signifies words of grace; which, it is probable, may refer to the agreeable manner of Christ's discourse, as well as to proceeded out of his mouth; so that they could not forbear saying to each other, even while he spoke, Is not this he that was brought up among us, the son of Joseph the carpenter? And if it be, how is it possible that a man of so mean an education should be able to discourse thus excellently well?

SECT. XXXII.

Luke IV. 22.

23 And he said unto them, Ye will surely say unto me this proverb, Physician heal thyself; whatsoever we have heard done in Capernaum, do also here in thy country.

23 And he said to them farther, You will undoubtedly say to me in the words of that common proverb, Physician, cure thyself; [and] for the satisfaction of thy own relations and neighbours, if thou art really so extraordinary a person, do also here at home, in thine own country, those miraculous works which, as we have heard, were done at Capernaum, and elsewhere[m]. But to expose the vanity of this suggestion, he went on,

24 And he said, Verily, I say unto you, No prophet is accepted in his own country.

24 and said, Verily I say unto you, that no prophet is acceptable in his own country (compare John iv. 44, page 180,) and therefore I know that you who have been acquainted with me from my infancy will, through envy and prejudice, refuse me an opportunity of working such miracles, and would indeed be still as obstinate and unbelieving as before, if you should see them. But

25 And I tell you of a truth, Many widows were in Israel in the days of Elias, when the heaven was shut up three years and six months

25 let it be remembered by you that God sometimes punishes men for this unreasonable temper, by directing his prophets to confer those favours on strangers, of which their countrymen and neighbours have rendered themselves so unworthy. For the matter of it: and as they could not but take notice of the majesty and grace with which he spoke, so it must naturally fill them with astonishment, considering the meanness of his birth and education; see Elsner, in loc.

m At Capernaum, and elsewhere.] It is strange that Dr. Clarke and many others should lay so much stress as they do on this, as an argument to prove that this visit to Nazareth was made after that to Capernaum, in which those miracles were wrought which are recorded, Mark i. 21—34. and Luke iv. 33—41. (sect. xxxv. xxxvi.) when Luke himself so plainly says that he came down from Nazareth to Capernaum, and then gives an account of those miracles (Luke iv. 30, & seq.) and Matthew also introduces the history of them with saying (Mat. iv. 13.) that leaving Nazareth he came and dwelt at Capernaum. —We are expressly told by John that Jesus after the miracle which he wrought at Cana in Galilee, went with his mother and his brethren and disciples to Capernaum, and continued some time, though not very long there (John ii. 12. sect. xxiv.) and it is very possible he might visit it again in his passing through Galilee (John iv. 43, 44. sect. xxxi.) which if he did after the cure wrought on the nobleman's son there, (which undoubtedly preceded this visit to Nazareth,) he would certainly meet with some extraordinary regard, as the cure was performed at a distance, and many other miracles might then be wrought there: so that this passage may refer to these and other miracles not particularly recorded by Luke; as we have seen before that John refers to others (John ii. 23. and iii. 2.) which neither he himself had mentioned, nor indeed any of the rest of the evangelists. —If it be asked why Christ did not perform such miracles here as elsewhere? we answer—that this whole discourse is intended to prove that God might dispense these extraordinary favours as he pleased;—and they do not appear to have brought their sick to him, and seem to have suspected his power (compare Mat. xiii. 58. and Mark vi. 5. sect. lxxiii.) a suspicion, the unreasonableness of which was greatly aggravated by the credible report of what he had done in the neighbourhood, and by the knowledge they had of his early piety and exemplary behaviour.

SECT. XXXII.

Luke IV. 25.

For this I tell you as a certain truth, which well deserves your consideration, That there were many poor widows in Israel in the days of Elijah, when the heaven was, as it were, shut up for three years and six months [n], so that there was no rain, and a great famine prevailed in all the land: And yet Elijah was sent to none of them with a 26 miraculous supply of meal and oil, but to a widow woman at Sarepta, [a city] of the Gentiles, in the country of Sidon. (1 Kings xvii. 9.) And 27 there were also many lepers in Israel in the time of Elisha the prophet; yet none of them was miraculously cleansed, but that singular favour was bestowed on Naaman the Syrian [o], a Gentile, and one of a hostile nation. (2 Kings v. 14.) Presume not therefore on your being my countrymen and neighbours, so as on that account to reject my message, lest you provoke God to send those blessings to strangers, and even to Gentiles, of which such infidelity and ingratitude would render you unworthy.

months, when great famine was throughout all the land:

26 But unto none of them was Elias sent, save unto Sarepta, a city of Sidon, unto a woman that was a widow.

27 And many lepers were in Israel in the time of Eliseus the prophet; and none of them was cleansed, saving Naaman the Syrian.

Nothing could be more disagreeable to them 28 than such an intimation and all that were in the synagogue, when they heard these things, were filled with the most outrageous fury: And 29 rising up at once, in a tumultuous manner, without any reverence to the place or day, or any sense of justice or common humanity, they violently cast him out of the synagogue, and out of the city too; and brought him to the very brow of the mountain on which their city was built, that they might cast him down headlong, and dash him 30 to pieces. But Jesus, when he had permitted their madness to go thus far, confounded their sight in such a miraculous manner, that he passed through the midst of them unknown [p], and went away

28 And all they in the synagogue, when they heard these things, were filled with wrath, 29 And rose up, and thrust him out of the city, and led him unto the brow of the hill (whereon their city was built,) that they might cast him down headlong.

30 But he passing through the midst of them, went his way.

n The heaven was shut up for three years and six months.] This is again asserted by the apostle James (chap. v. 17.) either as grounded on our Lord's authority here, or as a circumstance establis'ed by tradition; for in both places it is spoken of as a thing well known: nor can we doubt but the account is very exact, though the particular time is not determined in the Old Testament, nor is it certainly deducible from it.—Lightfoot and others have observed that there is somewhat here remarkable in this circumstance of time, as it agrees with the continuance of Christ's public ministry; that as Elijah shut up heaven by his prayers, so that it rained not on the earth for the space of three years and six months, so from the baptism to the death of Christ the heavens were opened for the like space of time, and his doctrine dropped as the rain, and his speech distilled as the dew. (Deut. xxxii. 2.) See Lightfoot's Harmony, and Grotius, in loc.

o None of them was cleansed but Naaman the Syrian.] Of the force of the particle εἰ μὴ here, and in some other remarkable places, see the note on John xvii. 12. sec. clxxix.

p Passed through the midst of them, unknown.] Whether the miracle lay in rendering himself entirely invisible, or in putting on some other form, or in affecting their eyes or minds in such a manner that they should not know him, we cannot certainly determine; but it seems evident that there was something miraculous in the case. Compare John viii. 59. Luke xxiv. 16. and 2 Kings vi. 18—20.

away to the neighbouring city of Capernaum, where he abode for some time. SECT. XXXII.

Luke IV. 27.

IMPROVEMENT.

WE see that it was the custom of our blessed Saviour to frequent the synagogues every sabbath-day: how well therefore does it become his servants to be constant in their attendance on public ordinances, especially since those of the gospel are in many respects so much nobler than any which the Mosaic institution would admit!

In the synagogues the scriptures were constantly read; and it is 17 matter of pleasing reflection that, in all ages of the Christian church, the reading them hath usually been made a part of the service in most of its solemn assemblies. Let it still be so with us for this reason, among others, that so glorious a testimony to the genuineness of scripture may not be impaired in our hands, but transmitted to those that shall arise after us.

And surely the Old Testament, as well as the New, deserves our attentive perusal; in which, if we are not strangely negligent, or strangely prejudiced, we must often meet with remarkable prophecies of Christ shining with a pleasing lustre, like lights in a Ver.
dark place, (2 Pet. i. 19.) How amiable a view of him is given 18, 19 in that which he now opened! Let us seriously attend to it. It is a moving representation that is here made of the deplorable state in which the gospel finds us! The helpless prisoners of Divine justice, the wretched captives of Satan, stripped and wounded, the eyes of our understanding blinded, and the powers of our souls enfeebled; and, as it were, bruised with those chains which prejudice and vice have fastened upon them! But in these miserable circumstances Jesus appears to open the doors of our prison, to strike off our fetters, and even to restore our sight. He comes to enrich our impoverished souls, and to preach a far better jubilee than Moses could proclaim; the free forgiveness of all our sins and the recovery of an inheritance of eternal glory. Surely it should be to us a most acceptable time. Blessed are the people that know this joyful sound; they shall walk, O Lord, in the light of thy countenance! (Psal. lxxxix. 15.)

In some sense this instructive and comfortable scripture is this 21, 22 day fulfilled in our ears likewise. Let us also bear our testimony to the gracious words of this welcome messenger whom God hath 20 anointed for such happy purposes!

One would have imagined that while the eyes of his auditors were fixed upon him, their souls should have drank in his doctrine as the thirsty earth sucks up the rain, and that every heart should have have been open to embrace him. But, O blessed Jesus, while thou art preaching these glad tidings of great joy, what a return dost thou find! Thou art ungratefully rejected, thou art impiously assaulted; and had their rage and malice been able to prevail, the joyful sound would have died into empty air as soon as it began, and this thy first sermon at Nazareth had been thy last.

SECT. XXXII.

Ver. 28, 29

Thus disdainfully art thou still rejected by multitudes who still hear the same message echoing from thy word. And is there not a malignity in the hearts of sinners which might lead those of our own days to the outrageous wickedness of these Nazarenes, were their opportunities the same, rather than they would bow their stubborn hearts to the obedience of faith? But while they are crucifying thee afresh by their sins, and putting thee to open shame, may we honour thee as the Son of God, the Saviour of men; and labour by the ardour of our love and the steadiness of our obedience, in some measure to balance the ingratitude of those who, while they are opposing thee, are destroying themselves!

SECT. XXXIII.

Christ goes to Capernaum, and teaches in the synagogue there with great acceptance; and calls Peter and Andrew, and James and John, to a more stated attendance upon him. Mat. IV. 13—22. Luke IV. 31, 32. Mark I. 16—20.

MAT. IV. 13.

SECT. XXXIII.

AND Jesus leaving Nazareth, from whence he was expelled and driven out in the ungrateful manner that was before described, came and dwelt for a while at Capernaum, which was a considerable city of Galilee, that lay on the sea-coast, even on the northern shore of the lake of Gennesareth, in the confines of Zebulon and Naphtali; and from thence he made several small excursions to visit the neighbouring places. And this was ordered by a special Divine Providence, that what was said by the prophet Isaiah (chap. ix. 1, 2.) might be fulfilled[a], When speaking of the land of Zebulon, and the land of Naphtali, by the way of the sea, and the country about those parts of Jordan[b], which is called by the general

Mat. IV. 13.

14

15

MAT. IV. 13. AND leaving Nazareth, he came and dwelt in Capernaum, [a city of Galilee] which is upon the sea-coast, in the borders of Zabulon and Nephthalim: [LUKE iv. 31.]

14 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying,

15 The land of Zabulon, and the land of Nephthalim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, Galilee of the Gentiles:

a That what was said by the prophet Isaiah might be fulfilled.] The common translation is word for word correspondent to the original: but the sense, as it stands here, is so entirely the same, that I was unwilling to spoil the structure of the paraphrase by crowding in the word saying; nor do I think such an exactness necessary in order to render a version perfectly faithful.

b About those parts of Jordan.] That περαν sometimes has this signification will appear by comparing Josh. xii. 1, 7. and Numb. xxxii. 19. Septuag.

c Galilee

general name of Galilee of the Gentiles[e] (because so many Gentiles were early settled there, and had filled it with a variety of superstitions), he says, "That though God had once made these nations vile, yet he would hereafter render them glorious[d]; since even there, by the settlement and preaching of the Messiah among them, The people that sat in darknesss saw (that is, should surely see) a great and glorious light, to disperse that ignorance and vice which before clouded them; and even to them that sat miserable and helpless in the dark region and gloomy shadow of death itself, in the most melancholy and the most dangerous condition, light has remarkably sprung up[e] to cheer their hearts, and guide them into the ways of peace and happiness."

Mat. IV. 15.

16 The people which sat in darkness saw great light; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death light is sprung up.

16

17 From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

And from that time of his departure into Galilee[f], Jesus began to preach in all the places that he came to in a more public manner, and to say, Repent, and turn unto the Lord, for he is now fulfilling his ancient promises, and the kingdom

17

e Galilee of the Gentiles.] The learned Drusius has given a large account of the reason of this name, and concludes it was the upper Galilee in the land of Naphtali, whereas the lower lay in Zebulon, and Capernaum was situated on the confines of both. Grotius traces the name up to Gen. xiv. 1. but most commentators refer it to 1 Kings ix. 11—13, supposing that Solomon's giving a tract of land here to Hiram occasioned it to be filled with foreigners, and to be peopled with a mixture of Phœnicians, Egyptians and Arabians; according to the account that Strabo gives, Geograph. lib. xvi. p. 523.

d Though God had made them vile, yet he would hereafter render them glorious.] I follow Mr. Mede's just and beautiful version and interpretation of Isa. ix. 1. See Mede's Works, p. 101, 102. and Jeffery's Review, p. 125, 126. where that interpretation is both vindicated and improved: and I see no reason to doubt that it is originally meant of the illumination and honour these afflicted countries should receive by the presence and preaching of Christ.

e Light has sprung up.] The Heathen writers represented the arrival of some great public benefactor in a place as a new light sprung up in the midst of darkness; see Elsner, Observ. Vol. I. p. 19.

f From that time of his departure into Galilee.] It is but just before that Matthew speaks of Christ's departure into Galilee (ver. 12.) and it is much more probable that he refers in general to this, than to the time of his leaving Nazareth (which he has mentioned in ver. 13), as it is evident from Luke iv. 14, 15, and John iv. 43—45, that Christ began to preach in the synagogues of Galilee before he went to Nazareth. And thus I might have introduced this text as parallel to Mark i. 15. but that I would avoid as much as possible breaking the thread of the narration; compare notes b and c in sect. xxxi. p. 172, 173. The attentive reader will easily perceive that I suppose our Lord made only one tour about Galilee in the four or five last months preceding his second passover, of which Matthew gives a general account below, Mat. iv. 23—25. sect. xxxvi. Nor can I see that Sir Isaac Newton had any just reason to conclude it a second circuit quite distinct from the former. It is true indeed that our Lord is said, Mat. iv. 13. after leaving Nazareth, to have come and dwelt at Capernaum; but if that should be allowed to imply his making this the place of his more stated residence so as to call it his home, it is evidently intimated that he did not stay long in it at first; and shortly after it is spoken of only as one of the cities in which he was sent to preach, Mark i. 38. Nor can I find that, after he began to preach, he ever continued long in any one place.

SECT. XXXIII.

kingdom of heaven is at hand[g]. And this was the doctrine which he was teaching them during the time of his abode at Capernaum, and this he made the subject of his preaching in their synagogue on the sabbath days; not being discouraged by the ill usage that he met with at Nazareth upon his preaching of the same doctrine there. And they were powerfully struck[h] and very much affected with his doctrine; for his word was attended with an air of authority and majesty, which incomparably exceeded that low and servile manner of preaching which the Scribes and Pharisees commonly used in retailing their precarious traditions and insipid comments to the people.

Luke IV. 31. And [he] taught them on the sabbath-days.

32 And they were astonished at his doctrine; for his word was with power.

Mark I. 16. And it was about this time that, as Jesus was walking by the sea of Galilee, he saw two brethren, that have been already mentioned[i], Simon, who was also called Peter, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea; for by their occupation they were fishers. And after some circumstances, an account of which will presently be given (sect. xxxiv.) Jesus said to them, Come after me, and from henceforth attend me constantly in the course of my ministry, and I will make you to become fishers of men, and give you such abundant success in your ministry, that the number of souls converted by you shall be greater than that of the fish you have been used to catch. And they, being struck with a very wonderful miracle[k], the particulars of which will Mark I. 16. Now as [Jesus] walked by the sea of Galilee, he saw [two brethren,] Simon [called Peter] and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea; (for they were fishers:) [Mat. iv. 18.]

17 And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men. [Mat. iv. 19.]

18 And straightway they

[g] The kingdom of heaven is at hand.] See note [h] on Mat. iii. 2. p. 96.

[h] Powerfully struck.] See Luke ii. 47, 48, note [e] p. 91.

[i] Two brethren, that have been already mentioned.] John gives us an account (chap. i. 40—42, sect. xxi.) that Andrew and Simon had before been called to the knowledge of Christ upon the banks of Jordan, and that the name of Peter had been then given to Simon: and it is probable that, from their first acquaintance with him, they followed Jesus for some time, and went with him to Cana and Capernaum (John ii. 2, 12. sect. xxiii. xxiv.) and afterwards to Jerusalem (John ii. 13, 17. sect. xxiv.) and tarried with him while he continued in Judea. (John iii. 22, sect. xxvii.) But when the Pharisees grew jealous of the number of his followers, and Herod was offended at the popularity of John, we may suppose that Jesus at his return to Galilee might think it prudent to dismiss his disciples for a time, till he himself had gone about from place to place to preach the gospel, and had informed the people more particularly of the character of his person and the nature of his doctrine: or possibly they might leave him at the time when the Samaritans prevailed upon him to go with them to their city. (John iv. 40, sect. xxx.) for after this we read no more of his disciples being with him, till he now found them at the sea of Galilee. For they no sooner were gone home but they returned again to their old employment, and continued in it till they were now taken off from any further regard to their worldly business, and were particularly called by Christ to a constant and stated attendance upon him: see Lightfoot's Harmony on Luke v. 3.

[k] Being struck with a very wonderful miracle.] The account of this miracle (which is recorded by Luke, chap. v. 1—11.) I shall consider in the next section, and they forsook their nets and followed him.—[MAT. iv. 20.]

19 And when he had gone a little further thence, he saw [other two brethren] James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, who also were in the ship [with Zebedee their father] mending their nets. [MAT. iv. 21.]

20 And straightway he called them: and they [immediately] left their father Zebedee in the ship with the hired servants, and went after him. [MAT. iv. 21, 22.]

will presently be related, immediately forsook their nets, though the fishing trade was all they had to depend upon in life, and followed him. SECT. XXXIII.

And going a little way from thence he saw two other brethren, James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother; and they were in a ship by the sea side, with Zebedee their father, employed in mending their nets, which had been broken by the vast draught of fishes they had taken just before. And he immediately applied to them as he had done before to Peter and Andrew, and called them to follow him: and they no sooner had received his orders, but presently they left their father Zebedee with the hired servants in the ship; and, in consequence of the secret energy which attended that call, they joined with Peter and Andrew, and with the greatest cheerfulness and readiness went after him, being determined to continue with him as his stated attendants: and they were all afterwards honoured with extraordinary favours from their Master; especially John, who was his bosom friend and came to be called, by way of eminence, The disciple whom Jesus loved. Mark 1. 19. 20

IMPROVEMENT.

SUCH was the zeal and courage of our blessed Redeemer, that he no sooner had been persecuted and assaulted at Nazareth, but he went and preached in the synagogue at Capernaum. Thus may all the opposition that we meet with in the course of our duty, animate, rather than overbear, our resolution in performing it! Luke iv. 31.

How

and shall there give my reasons, in note a, for supposing it happened at this time, and was not, as Mr. Whiston would have it, the occasion of another call to these disciples. But I would here observe, that besides him, some who agree with me in this particular, yet, out of regard to the supposed regularity of St. Luke's narration, place this call of the four disciples after the ejection of the devil, and the cure of Peter's mother-in-law at Capernaum, and Christ's travels through Galilee, which are recorded, Mat. viii. 14, 15. iv. 23—25. and Mark i. 21—39. (Sect. XXXV. XXXVI.) See Cradock, Le Clerc, Wells, Clarke and L'Enfant, in their Harmonies. But they seem to have forgot that St. Mark expressly asserts (chap. i. 21.) that after the calling of these four disciples they went into Capernaum, and straightway on the ensuing sabbath he entered into the synagogue, and there cast out the devil, &c. and then (ver. 29.) forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon and Andrew with James and John, and Simon's mother was cured.—Now it seems one of the most important rules for settling the harmony of the evangelists, that where any one of them has expressly asserted that he follows the order of time, we should, in regard to him, transpose others who do not assert equal exactness in that particular; (see Jones's Vindication of Matthew, p. 111, 112.) This is the case here; and therefore I have here transposed not only Luke, but also Matthew, who uses notes of time much more frequently, and seems to me in the main more exact in the series of his story than Luke.

a We

SECT. XXXIII.

How happy was the land of Zebulon and Naphtali in the visits of such a guest! And may we not add too, how happy is our own land in being visited by the everlasting gospel, which is now much more clearly discovered to us than it was to these coasts while Christ began to open his ministry among their inhabitants.

Mat. IV. 15.

In us is this prophecy of Isaiah eminently fulfilled: We but a few ages ago sat in darkness; and behold we see a great light. Our country, amidst all the advantages of its soil and situation, was, in a spiritual sense, the region and the shadow of death; but the Sun of Righteousness is risen upon us, nor do we only behold his rising beams, but his meridian lustre. May we not be so ungrateful as obstinately to shut our eyes against it, lest the valley of vision and Emanuel's land, should on the whole prove to us the land of destruction and the valley of death itself!

16

That this may never be our case, let us diligently attend to this Divine Teacher, who speaks with such authority, and whose words are so weighty and powerful. May we feel the energy and authority of them! May they call us off from every undue attachment to the business or the pleasures of life! And if he should ever see fit to try us, as he did these his servants, with a command to forsake our nearest relations and our earthly all, for his service, let us do it with pleasure; remembering on the one hand, that he who loves father or mother, wife or children, houses or lands, more than Christ, is not worthy of him; and on the other hand, that he who abandons these engagements for his sake, shall receive an hundred fold now in this time, and, in the world to come, life everlasting. (Mat. x. 37, and Mark x. 29, 30.)

Luke iv. 32.

Mark i. 17.

SECT. XXXIV.

St. Luke gives a more particular account of a miraculous draught of fishes, by which Peter and his three partners were prevailed upon statedly to follow Christ. Luke V. 1.—11.

SECT. XXXIV.

Luke v. 1.

LUKE V. 1.

THE calling of those four celebrated apostles, Peter and Andrew and James and John, was briefly related above; but considering the important part which most of them bear in the following history, we shall here give a more particular account of it.[a] Now it came to pass, that while

LUKE V. 1.

AND it came to pass, that as the people pressed upon him to hear the word of God, he stood by the lake of Gennesareth,

[a] We shall here give a more particular account of it.] Mr. Whiston (in his Harmony, p. 251 and 254) supposes, with some others, that this is a distinct story from that of the calling of these disciples, which we have in the preceding section, and that they were then called only to an occasional, but now to a stated attendance on Christ. But I could not acquiesce in this for the following reasons: (1) There are many leading circumstances the same in the narrations of both; as, for instance, while Jesus continued to reside at Capernaum, when the multitude pressed upon him with eagerness to hear the word of God; as he stood by the lake of Gennesareth, [b] on the banks of which he had been walking, (Mark i. 16, sect. xxxiii.)

SECT. XXXIV. Luke V. 1.

2 And saw two ships standing by the lake; but the fishermen were gone out of them, and were washing their nets.

2 He saw two little vessels standing by the side of the lake, but with no person in them; for the fishermen, after the labour of a very unsuccesful night, were gone out of them, and were washing their nets in the sea as they stood on the shore.

3 And he entered into one of the ships, which was Simon's, and prayed him that he would thrust out a little from the land; and he sat down and taught the people out of the ship.

3 And entering into one of the vessels, which belonged to Simon Peter, with whom as well as with his brother Andrew [c]; we have already seen that he had formed some acquaintance on the banks of Jordan, [d] while John was baptizing there, (John i. 37—42. sect. xxi.) he desired him that he would put out a little way from land, that he might thus avoid the crowd, and at the same time be more conveniently heard; and at a proper distance he sat down, and taught the multitude out of the vessel.

4 Now when he had left stance, that Peter, Andrew, James and John, left their ships, their nets, and their father; or, as Luke expresses it, left all, to follow Christ, on his promise that he would make them fishers of men. (2.) There is no circumstance of the story we have now before us which may not be reconciled with the other; as the attentive reader will perceive by my paraphrase, especially on ver. 11. where (as in many other cases) I have chosen in a few words to suggest the solution of seeming inconsistencies, rather than to state the difficulties and answers at large. (3.) If this interpretation be not allowed, then neither Matthew nor Mark have given us any account of Christ's calling these four illustrious persons and intimate friends of Matthew to a stated attendance on him. And (4.) There seems no reason to believe that these four disciples forsook Christ again within a few days, or even a few hours, after that call which Matthew and Mark have recorded. Yet this Mr. Whiston must suppose; for it is plain Christ left Capernaum and proceeded on his progress the very next day after those cures which so directly followed that call of these disciples which is related by those two evangelists; see note k on Mark i. 18, p. 184. and compare Mark i. 35—39. and Luke iv 42—44. sect. xxxvi.

[b] The lake of Gennesareth.] This is the same with what is elsewhere called the sea of Galilee, (Mark i. 16.) and the sea of Tiberias, (John vi. 1,) being distinguished by these names, as it was situated on the borders of Galilee, and the city of Tiberias lay on the western shore of it. And for its other name Gennesareth, as Herod had a palace near Tiberias, there were delightful gardens on the banks of it, which possibly might be the reason of this name, which some would have to be derived from GENEI SARUM, the gardens of princes; though others rather think it to be only a corruption of the word Cinnereth, or Cinneroth, which is the name by which the sea was called in the Old Testament, (Numb. xxxiv. 11. and Josh. xii. 3.)—It was a large collection of waters, through which the river Jordan passed, and was continually supplying it with a fresh quantity of water. Josephus tells us it was an hundred and forty furlongs long, and forty broad: (Joseph. de Bell. Jud. lib. iii. cap. 10. (al. 18.) § 7, p. 257. Havercamp.) And it was usual with the Jews to call such places seas where there was such a large extent of water, see Lightfoot's Harmony, and Drusius in loc.

[c] His brother Andrew.] The name of Andrew is omitted by St. Luke in the relation that he gives us of this story; but it is plain from the account of it that we have just now had from Matthew and Mark in the foregoing section, that Andrew was then present with Simon, and that they both were called at the same time.

[d] He had formed some acquaintance on the banks of Jordan.] See note i on Mat. iv. 18 p. 184.

SECT. XXXIV.

Luke V. 1.

And when he had made an end of speaking to the people, he said to Simon, Put out yet farther into the deep water, and then let down your nets into the lake for a draught of fishes. And Simon answering, said unto him, Master, we have been labouring all night and have caught nothing, nevertheless I will let down the net, and make another trial at thy word, both in obedience to it, and in dependance on it. And accordingly when they had done it, they enclosed a great multitude of fishes; so that their net brake in several places as they were drawing them up. And they beckoned to their partners James and John who were at some distance from them in the other vessel, to come and assist them; and they came and filled both the vessels, so that they were overloaden, and drew so much water that they seemed ready to sink.

Now Simon Peter seeing [this] fell down before the knees of Jesus in amazement, and, covered with confusion, said, Lord, what am I, that thou shouldest come into my vessel to me? let me entreat thee now to go out from me: for I am such a sinful man, O Lord, [e] that I am utterly unworthy to receive and entertain thee, nor dare I to continue in the presence of so great and holy a prophet. For this amazing proof that Jesus had now given of his power was such that astonishment seized him and all that were with him on account of the vast draught of fishes which they had taken: And in like manner also James and John, the sons of Zebedee, who were partners in the trade with Simon, were struck with wonder and amazement at the sight of this surprising miracle. And Jesus said to Simon, Do not fear; for, instead of doing thee any harm, I from this time design to employ thee in much nobler work, in which I will give thee such happy success that thou shalt captivate men [f], in greater left speaking, he said unto Simon, Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught.

5 And Simon answering, said unto him, Master, we have toiled all the night, and have taken nothing; nevertheless, at thy word I will let down the net.

6 And when they had this done, they enclosed a great multitude of fishes, and their net brake.

7 And they beckoned unto their partners which were in the other ship, that they should come and help them. And they came, and filled both the ships so that they began to sink.

8 When Simon Peter saw it he fell down at Jesus' knees, saying, Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord.

9 For he was astonished, and all that were with him, at the draught of the fishes which they had taken:

10 And so was also James and John, the sons of Zebedee, which were partners with Simon. And Jesus said unto Simon, Fear not; from henceforth thou shalt catch men.

[e] Go out from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord.] Peter could not but conclude there was some peculiar presence of God with a person who could perform such a miracle: and a consciousness of sin made him afraid to appear in the presence of such a one; lest some infirmity or offence should expose him to some more than ordinary punishment. Compare Jud. vi. 22. xiii. 22. and 1 Kings xvii. 18.——It is also well known that the ancients thought it improper and unsafe (where it could be avoided) for good men to be in the same ship with persons of an infamous character; nor would the heathens sometimes permit the very images of their deities to be carried in the vessel with such, or even with those concerning whom there was any strong suspicion. See Elsner, Observ. Vol. I. p. 202, 203.

[f] Thou shalt captivate men.] This is the exact English of ζωγρων, which is so translated, 2 Tim. ii. 26. To catch implies something more of artifice than the word carries in it, or the occasion seems to require.

greater abundance than those fishes which thou now hast caught. SECT. XXXIV.

11 And when they had brought their ships to land, they forsook all and followed him.

And when they had brought their vessels to land, they, (that is, first, Peter and Andrew, and presently after them, James and John, who were mending their broken nets with Zebedee their father) upon Christ's repeating the call, left their vessels and nets, with the fish they had taken, even all they had in the world, and followed him; being now determined to attend statedly upon his ministry, that they might thus be fitted for the great work in which he intended to employ them. Luke V. 11.

IMPROVEMENT.

How wonderful a choice does Jesus make of those who were to be the chief ministers in his kingdom! Surely the same Divine power which prevailed on these honest fishermen to leave their little all, to follow him, could with equal ease have subdued the hearts of the greatest and wisest of the nation, and have engaged them to have attended him in all his progress through the country, with the exactest observance and the humblest reverence: but he chose rather to preserve the humble form in which he at first appeared, that thus he might answer the schemes of Providence, and by the weak things of the world confound them that are mighty, (1 Cor. i. 27.) Ver. 11

Yet we may observe that he does not go to call them that stood all the day idle; but, on the contrary, confers this honour upon honest industry; on them that had been toiling all the night in the proper duties of their station and profession in life. Let us pursue our business with vigilance and resolution; assuring ourselves that, however mean it be, Christ will graciously accept us in it; and let us fix our dependance on his blessing, as absolutely necessary to our success. 4, 5

These pious fishermen let down their nets at Christ's word, and it was not in vain. How vast was that power which brought such a multitude of fishes into it! but how much greater and more apparently Divine was the energy which, by the ministration of one of these illiterate men, converted at once a much greater number of souls, and turned the despisers and murderers of Christ into his adorers! (See Acts ii. 41.) 6

Blessed Jesus, we would humbly bow ourselves before thee as the Lord of nature and of grace; and instead of saying with Peter, Depart from us, for we are sinful men, we would rather say, "Lord, for that very reason, while we own ourselves most unworthy of thy presence, we most importunately entreat it: Come unto me, O Lord, Ver. 6

SECT. XXXIV.

O Lord, for I am a sinful man, and if thou stand at a distance from me, I perish! Come, and recover my heart from the tyranny of sin; come, and possess and fix it for thyself!"

Ver. 9, 10 That secret power which these good men felt on their souls while the words of Christ were sounding in their ears would be to them a token for good as to the success of their ministry upon others. Surely we cannot wish any thing of greater importance for the edification of the church, than that the persons who are employed in its public offices may themselves experimentally know the power of Divine grace, and be brought to a determination to follow Christ whithersoever he goeth, before they undertake to invite and persuade others to do it.

SECT. XXXV.

Christ entering into Capernaum, teaches in the synagogue, and casts out a devil; and coming into Peter's house, cures his mother-in-law of a fever. Mark I. 21—31. Mat. VIII. 14, 15. Luke IV. 33—39.

MARK I. 21.

SECT. XXXV.

Mark 1. 21

WHEN our Lord had thus called Peter and Andrew, and James and John, they all left the side of the lake, and entered with him into the city of Capernaum; and immediately on the sabbath-day[a], going, according to his custom, into the synagogue, he taught [them] the important truths which he was in so extraordinary a manner commissioned to vindicate, or to reveal.

22 And they were again struck with amazement[b] at the sublimity and excellency of his doctrine, for he was continually teaching them in such a manner as one who had an immediate authority from God to dictate to them; and not as the scribes, their established teachers, who dealt in precarious traditions and fanciful allegories; the amusement of light minds, but utterly unfit

MARK I. 21.

AND they went into Capernaum, and straightway on the sabbath-day he entered into the synagogue and taught:

22 And they were astonished at his doctrine; for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.

[a] And immediately on the sabbath-day.] It is in the original τοις σαββασιν, in the plural number; and it is frequently expressed in the same manner where it is plainly to be understood of a particular day, as Mat. xii. 1. xxviii. 1. Acts xiii. 14. and elsewhere. There is no doubt, but it is spoken here of the next sabbath, and probably of the very next day after his coming back with his disciples to Capernaum; see note on Mark i. 18. p. 184.

[b] They were again struck with amazement.] It has already been observed that they were thus amazed at his first coming to preach among them (Luke iv. 32. sect. xxxiii.) and there seems also to have been something in the discourses, as well as in the miracles of this last sabbath that he spent among them at this time, which raised their wonder, and affected them in a peculiar manner; as appears from the multitude of sick people which were brought to him that evening; see Mark i. 32, 33. Luke iv. 40. and Mat. viii. 16. in the next section.

[c] The

SECT. XXXV.

fit to alarm the conscience and to captivate the heart.

LUKE IV. 33. And in [their] synagogue there was a man which had a spirit of an unclean devil; and cried out with a loud voice, [MARK I. 23.]

And there was in their synagogue a man that had the spirit of an unclean demon[c], or fallen angel, possessing him, by which he was miserably distorted and agitated; and he, either compelled to bear an unwilling testimony to Christ, or desirous by malicious praises to bring him into suspicion as a confederate with those infernal spirits, cried out with a loud voice. Luke IV. 33.

34 Saying, Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? Art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art; the Holy One of God. [MARK I. 24.]

Saying, 34 in the name of the rest, Let us alone; what hast thou to do with us, O Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us, by driving us out of our abodes on earth to the regions of darkness? I well know thee, and, under all the disadvantages of thy present appearance, can sufficiently discern who thou art; and therefore dread thee as the Holy One of God, whom he hath sanctified and sent into the world for the destruction of my kingdom in it; but take notice that I do not begin the quarrel by offering thee any injury or affront.

35 And Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And when the devil had thrown him in the midst, [and torn him] he [cried with a loud voice, and] came out of him, and hurt him not. [MARK I. 25, 26.]

But Jesus, scorning praises from so impure a 35 mouth, rebuked him, saying, Be silent, and come out of him: and, upon this, the demon having thrown him violently from his seat into the midst of the assembly, [and] having terribly convulsed him[d], cried with a loud voice [and] came out of him; but was so restrained by the Divine power and mercy that he did him no farther harm[e]; and the man immediately recovered, and was perfectly well.

And

[c] The spirit of an unclean demon.] It is well known that a late learned and ingenious writer hath revived the notion long since maintained by Mr. Joseph Mede and Dr. Bekker, that these supposed demoniacs were only lunatics or epileptics: but on the most impartial perusal of what has passed between him and his learned antagonists, I am fully convinced that there is no sufficient reason for departing from the received interpretation; and I should think this story alone a convincing proof on the side of it. It is most incredible that an evangelist should have been left to ascribe this man's disorder to the spirit of an unclean demon, if it were only lunacy or the falling sickness; or that a physician of common sense should speak of it as a memorable circumstance that such a distemper did not hurt a man by leaving him: see ver. 35. —I retain the word demon, as the epithet unclean seems to have little force when joined with devil, being necessarily implied in it.

[d] Having terribly convulsed him.] This seems to be the proper meaning of the word σπαραξαν that is used by Mark here, which signifies to shake or move with violence; and to this purpose Grotius has observed that σπαραγμος is sometimes used to signify a convulsion. And it is much more natural to understand it thus than to suppose the devil to have torn him, (according to the common translation) which leads the reader to imagine that he grievously wounded him, when Luke expressly says that he hurt him not.

[e] Did him no farther harm.] This is probably the sense of μηδεν βλαψαν αυτον; for while the convulsion continued it must have given some pain, and might have been attended with lasting disorder, had not the restraining and healing power of Christ prevented.

SECT. XXXV.

Mark I. 27. And they were all exceedingly amazed at so miraculous a cure, so that they inquired of each other, and said, What an extraordinary event is this? [and] what a new and unexampled doctrine is this? for behold, he does not only distinguish himself by his incomparable manner of teaching, but with majestic authority, and efficacious power, he commandeth even the unclean spirits, and they instantly obey him, and come out of the possessed, shewing thereby that they are subject to him. 28 And his fame was so raised by this signal miracle, that it went forth immediately through all the region of Galilee, and made way for his reception in the progress he afterwards took into every place of the neighbouring country. 29 And presently after this miraculous cure, Jesus going out of the synagogue with his disciples, they came, with James and John in their company, into the house of Simon and Andrew, who 30 being brothers, did then live together: And Simon's wife's mother was dangerously ill, and kept her bed[f], of a violent fever; and having seen the miracle which he had wrought but just before in the synagogue, they presently tell him of her, and entreated him that he would be pleased to 31 interpose for her recovery. And coming into the room where she lay, and standing near her, he took her by the hand, and raised her up in her bed; and with an air of majesty rebuked the fever[g], and immediately the fever left her at once; and she was instantly restored to such a degree of strength that she arose and waited upon them; being so far from needing the assistance of others, as she had done before, that she became capable of taking her part in the business of the family.

MARK I. 27. And they were all amazed, insomuch that they questioned among themselves, saying, What thing is this? what new doctrine is this? for with authority [and power] commandeth he even the unclean spirits, and they do obey him [and come out.] [LUKE IV. 36.]

28 And immediately his fame spread abroad throughout all the region round about Galilee, [into every place of the country round about.] [LUKE IV. 37.]

29 And forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John.

30 But Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a [great] fever, and anon they tell him of her, [and besought him for her.] [LUKE IV. 38.]

31 And he came [and stood over her,] and took her by the hand, and lifted her up, [and rebuked the fever;] and immediately the fever left her, and she [arose, and] ministered unto them. [LUKE IV. 39.—MAT. VIII. 14, 15.]

IMPROVEMENT.

Mark I. 27. JUSTLY may we join our astonishment with that of the inhabitants of Capernaum, and say, What manner of teaching is this? and with what regard should it be received, when the devils themselves, and the most desperate diseases, are thus apparently subject to him who uses it?

We

[f] Kept her bed.] This seems the proper meaning of the word κατεκειτο.

[g] Rebuked the fever.] There could be no inconvenience in the evangelist's using this phrase, more than in saying, he rebuked the wind and sea (see Mat. viii. 26.) for it is hardly to be thought the Jews would imagine the fever a real person; but it was quite otherwise as to their notion of demons.

[h] The

SECT. XXXV.

We see the malice of Satan in possessing and tormenting the bodies of men. God then permitted it, to render Christ's triumph over him so much the more illustrious, and the appearance of that great Deliverer so much the more welcome[b]. Such diabolical operations as these are now restrained; and it is matter of great thankfulness that they are. But would to God that malignant enemy did not, in a yet more fatal manner, possess the souls of men and work in the children of disobedience! Yet there can the power of Jesus prevail, to bind the strong man and spoil his goods.

Luke IV. 32.

Wisely did Christ silence the suspicious praises of an unclean spirit; and vain is all the hope which men build merely on those orthodox professions of the most important truths, in which Satan himself could vie with them.

34, 35

Christ, returning from the synagogue, finds the mother-in-law of Peter detained from the solemn assemblies, a prisoner at home under an afflictive providence, which that circumstance of confinement probably rendered yet more afflictive to her. But the mercy which the evening brought with it was a rich equivalent for all the sorrows of the day. Jesus, their welcome guest, appears as the great Physician both of soul and body; a touch of his hand assuages the tumult in her veins, and at his voice the distemper leaves her. Surely, as the great Lord in the kingdom of Providence, he performs those cures which are now wrought by natural means, and is to be owned in them. Must not each of us

Mark I. 29, 30

31

[b] The appearance of that great Deliverer so much the more welcome.] It would be very foolish to imagine that God suffered these unhappy persons to be possessed merely that Christ might have the honour of curing them: but it is to be considered that the view under which Christ is most frequently represented is as the great antagonist to the prince of darkness, and the gospel has its foundation in the victory which Satan has gained over mankind; compare Gen. iii. 15. Mat. xii. 28, 29. 1 John iii. 8. Heb. ii. 14. and Rom. xvi. 20. (as also Mat. vi. 13. John xvii. 15. Eph. vi. 16, and 1 John ii. 13, 14. iii. 12. v. 18, 19. in all which places ο πονηρος seems to signify the wicked one, that is, the devil, whose powerful influence over men is intimated or expressed in each of them:) and it appears from Wisd. ii. 24, that the Jews before Christ's time had something of this notion, and considered the wicked in general as taking part with the devil: the words are, Through envy of the devil came death into the world, and they that do hold of his side do find it. The inspired texts above shew that the expression is just; and it was certainly on this account a most wise and gracious dispensation to permit the devil about this time to give some unusual proofs of his existence, power and malice, in thus attacking men's bodies; which would naturally convince them what a dangerous enemy he was to their souls, and what need they had of the patronage of Christ; as the sensible victory of Christ in these dispossessions would be a proof and specimen of that illustrious and complete triumph over him and his confederate powers in which our Lord's mediatorial kingdom is to end. No kind of miracles therefore could be more fit to attest his mission, and to promote his interest among men; and hence it is that hardly any are more frequently and circumstantially described.—This seems a sufficient answer to the difficulty proposed by Mr. Mede (see his Works, p. 28), and a clear proof that we shall do no service to Christianity by endeavouring to disapprove the reality of these possessions, or by dropping the mention of the infernal powers in our preaching, how fashionable soever such omissions may grow.

SECT. XXXV.

us thankfully acknowledge how often he hath rebuked fevers and other distempers by the skill of physicians, and the efficacy of medicines; so that they have departed from us perhaps when we esteemed them desperate, and had received the sentence of death in ourselves.

Luke IV. 39.

Luke IV. 39.

Let us learn to imitate the pious gratitude of this good woman, who, when recovered, immediately arose and ministered unto Christ. Thus let it be our care that those lives which are spared by his goodness, and that strength which is renewed by his power, may be faithfully and affectionately devoted to his service.

SECT. XXXVI.

Christ having performed several cures on the evening of the sabbath-day, retires early the next morning to his devotions; and declining a longer abode at Capernaum, takes a circuit about Galilee, preaching and working miracles. Mark I. 32—39. Luke IV. 40. to the end. Mat. VIII. 16, 17. and IV. 23. to the end.

MARK I. 32.

SECT. XXXVI.

THE remainder of the day Jesus spent in Peter's house; and in the evening, when the sun was set, and consequently the sabbath was ended[a], they brought unto him on their beds and couches, which they scrupled before to carry[b], all that were ill, and many that were possessed with devils: Yea, all that had any persons in their houses sick of various distempers, brought them unto him for relief; and he sent none of them away with a denial, but with a sovereign authority cast out the [evil] spirits with a word; and treating those that were diseased in the most gracious and compassionate manner, he laid his hands on every one of them, and healed all that were sick, without the use of any means, how inveterate and desperate soever their distemper was: That thus it might appear to be accomplished in some measure which was spoken of him in a more noble and important sense by the prophet Isaiah[c], saying (chap. liii. 4), "He himself

Mark I. 32

Luke IV. 40

Mat. VIII. 17

MARK I. 32.

AND at even, when the sun did set, they brought unto him all that were diseased, and [many] that were possessed with devils. [MAT. VIII. 16.—— LUKE IV. 40.]

LUKE IV. 40. All they that had any sick with divers diseases, brought them unto him: and he [cast out the spirits with his word, and laid] his hands on every one of them, and healed [all that were sick.] [MAT. VIII. 16.—MARK I. 34.—]

MAT. VIII. 17. That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, a When the sabbath was ended.] It is well known that the Jews reckoned their day from evening to evening, and that the sabbath began and ended at sun-set. See Lev. xxiii. 32.

b Which they scrupled before to carry.] We have a memorable instance of this scruple in John v. 10—16. sect. xlvi.

c In a more noble and important sense by the prophet Isaiah.] It seems evident that Isaiah, in the place here referred to speaks of the sufferings which Christ endured for us; for on account of these only could he be esteemed (as it is added in the end of the verse) stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. So that the evangelist has only introduced phet, saying, Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses.

self graciously took our infirmities upon him, SECT. XXXVI.
and with incredible labour, self-denial and compassion, bore [away] the burden of our diseases,[d] and happily delivered us from those miseries which our corruption and depravity had introduced." Mat. VIII. 17

MARK I. 33. And all the city was gathered together at the door.

And this occasioned such a concourse of people, that in a manner the whole city of Capernaum, was gathered together at the door of the house in which Jesus was; some coming as humble petitioners for themselves or their friends, and others as curious spectators of the surprising miracles he wrought. Mark I. 33.

LUKE IV. 41. And devils also came out, of many, crying out, and saying, Thou art Christ the Son of God. And he rebuking them, suffered them not to speak; for they knew that he was Christ. [MARK I. 34.]

And there were devils also that came out of many, crying out with great violence (as that before had done which had been cast out by him in the synagogue, and saying, as that other did, We know thee who thou art, the promised Messiah and the Son of God. But he severely chid them, and did not suffer them to speak these things so frequently and largely as they would otherwise have done: for they well knew that he was the Messiah; but as wise reasons made him, in his own discourses, often to decline the opportunities he had of expressly avowing that title and character, so they engaged him in a much stronger manner to be more particularly cautious with respect to evil spirits, of receiving it from them.[e] Luke IV. 41.

MARK I. 35. And in the morning, rising up a great while before day [when it was day] he introduced it as an allusion to those words, as being capable of the sense here given in themselves; though we are certainly to understand them in a more exalted sense when we consider them in their connection. Or if they should be understood by any as if it had been said, "Though he miraculously cured our diseases, yet he was thus ungratefully censured;" it must be then allowed on this less natural interpretation, that Peter uses them allusively when he applies them to the crucifixion of Christ, as he evidently does, 1 Pet. ii. 24. Such instances are frequent in the sacred writers; and they are elegancies and beauties rather than imperfections. Had it been argued from this text that the Messiah must have healed the sick, there had been then indeed some room for an objection.

Thus was it that the day was spent in preaching and the evening in working miracles: and after all this labour and fatigue, Jesus allowed himself but a very short repose; for in the morning Mark I. 35.

[d] Bore away the burden of our diseases.] Grotius has well observed the emphasis of the word ἐβάστασεν which signifies to carry a heavy load, (Rom. xv. 1. Gal. vi. 2,) and so does well express the indefatigable labours of Christ, spending the evening in healing the sick, probably with many intermingled discourses, after he had employed the day in preaching. I have endeavoured to suggest this idea in the paraphrase.

[e] Cautious of receiving it from them.] It is probable that if it was not by mere constraint that these evil spirits made this confession, it was (as was hinted before on Luke iv. 33, p. 191.) with an artful design to bring our Lord into suspicion as acting in confederacy with them: and the perverse Pharisees might perhaps lay hold of this occasion of fixing on Christ that impious and senseless calumny, that he did not cast out devils but by Beelzebub the prince of the devils, Mat. xii. 24.

[f] In

SECT. XXXVI.

ing he rose before it was light,[f] and as the day was coming on, he went out of the house where he had lodged, to avoid the concourse of the Mark I. 35. people or any interruption from the family, and privately departed to a desert place in the neighbourhood; and there prayed to his heavenly Father in secret, pouring out his soul in the most copious and affectionate manner.

he went out, and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed.—[LUKE IV. 42.]

36 And when the day was something advanced and crowds of people came to inquire after him, Simon Peter, and they that were with him, (who have been already mentioned as his partners and companions,) guessing where Jesus was, went 37 out and followed after him. And when they had found him at his private devotions, they said unto him, Master, the providence of God calls thee now to more public service; for all the people of the city are assembled yonder and are seeking after thee[g].

36 And Simon, and they that were with him, followed after him.

37 And when they had found him, they said unto him, All men seek for thee.

Luke IV. 42. And what they said was immediately confirmed; for the multitudes sought after him with so much diligence, that they traced the steps of Peter and his companions, and, while they were speaking, came even to the place in which they had found him; and they would fain have detained him awhile, and pleaded in a very importunate manner that he should not depart from them.

LUKE IV. 42. And the people sought him and came unto him, and stayed him, that he should not depart from them.

Mark I. 38. But they could not prevail: and he said to them that were his constant attendants, Let us go directly into the neighbouring towns, that I may preach there also, without returning back to Capernaum at present; for, though we have many friends and well-wishers there, I must by all means preach the kingdom of God to other cities also; as for that purpose I am sent into the world

MARK I. 38. And he said unto them, Let us go into the next towns, that I may preach there also; for [I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also; for therefore am I sent] therefore came I forth. [LUKE IV. 43.]

[f] In the morning—before it was light: πρωι εννυχον λιαν.] This does sufficiently express the sense of the original: for εννυχον λιαν does properly signify, when the night was very far advanced, or when it was yet deep night; and either of these interpretations, in this connection, implies that the dawning of the day was near at hand. And thus it may be easily reconciled with Luke; for γενομενης ημερας, which the common translation, renders, when it was day, might as well have been rendered as the day was coming on: for γενομενης may be understood (as Grotius has observed) not only as expressive of the time that is already come, but as implying what is near at hand, or what is forming now, and ready to approach; (compare John xiii. 2, and the note there, sect. clxix.)—Some have indeed maintained that different facts are referred to in the texts of Mark and Luke before us; the former referring to Christ's rising, the latter to his going out: but it seems that Mark connects his going out so immediately with his rising, that no stress can be laid on such a distinction.

[g] All the people are seeking after thee] It is very likely that Peter, and they that were with him, warm as they were with the expectations of a temporal kingdom, might think this a very favourable opportunity of increasing Christ's popularity, on which those hopes were built.

h Con-

SECT. XXXVI.

Mat. IV. 23.

world by my Father, with the most extensive designs of usefulness, [and] therefore I came forth from his more immediate presence.

And thus Jesus took a circuit with his disciples through all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, wherever he had an opportunity, and preaching the good news of the kingdom which God was about to erect; and he confirmed and illustrated what he said [h], by casting out devils, and healing every disease, and every malady of the people among whom he came.

MAT. IV. 23. And Jesus went about all Galilee [and cast out devils] teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness, and all manner of disease among the people. [MARK I. 39. LUKE IV. 44.

24 And his fame went throughout all Syria; and they brought unto him all sick people, that were taken with divers diseases and torments; and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatic, and those that had the palsy; and he healed them.

25 And there followed him great multitudes of people from Galilee, and from Decapolis, and from Jerusalem, and from Judea, and from beyond Jordan.

24 And his fame went through all the neighbouring country of Syria; and they brought to him from thence, as well as from nearer places, all, that is, great numbers of sick people [i], that were seized with a variety of distempers and most tormenting and incurable pains, even demoniacs, and lunatics, and paralytics [k]; and he healed them, not excepting those whose cases were the most deplorable and helpless. And these miraculous 25 cures, together with his excellent manner of preaching, rendered him so popular, that great multitudes of people followed him from all the towns of Galilee, and from the region of Decapolis [l], and even from Jerusalem [m], and the rest of Judea [n], and all [the country] about Jordan [n], both on its eastern and western banks.

IMPROVE-

[h] Confirmed and illustrated what he said.] It is justly and beautifully observed by the author of a late Discourse on the Miracles of Christ, that they were not only a proof, but a specimen of the power he claimed as the Messiah. Thus his giving sight to the blind illustrated his power of enlightening the prejudiced minds of men; his healing their bodies shewed how able he was to heal their souls, and was a specimen of his authority to forgive sin, as it was in part an actual removal of its punishment; his casting out devils, was an emblem of his final victory over Satan; and his raising particular persons from the dead was a convincing display of his power to accomplish a general resurrection.

[i] All, that is, great numbers of sick people.] It would be endless to enumerate the texts where common sense requires us to take the word all in this general manner; see Mark i. 37. Luke iii. 21. John iv. 29. xiv. 26. 1 Cor. ix. 22. and Phil. ii. 21.

[k] Even demoniacs, and lunatics, and paralytics.] Possession, madness, and the palsy, are justly reckoned as cases of great misery and little hope; the evangelist therefore properly instanced in these. It is an evident proof that these were thought distinct cases; for the different readings are so ill supported as not to deserve a particular mention.

[l] From Decapolis.] This is well known to have been a tract of land on the east side of the sea of Galilee, in which ten cities were situated near each other and formed into a distinct district. It formerly belonged to the half tribe of Manasseh.

[m] From Jerusalem, and Judea.] Hence Sir Isaac Newton concludes that Christ had been at Jerusalem at his second passover; and that these people had attended him from thence: see Newton on Prophecy, p. 151. The circuit described above might indeed have been the employment of four months, and probably took up most of that time; but Matthew might have used this expression, if persons who came from Jerusalem followed Christ here, though he himself had never been there at all. On the whole, however ingenious and probable the hypothesis of this learned author is, it is liable to so many objections that, on the maturest deliberation, I durst not venture to build upon it the structure of an harmony entirely different from that of all other commentators; except Osiander, which (if I mistake not) in most places agrees with his maxims.

SECT. XXVI.

IMPROVEMENT.

Mark I. 32,33 How delightfully were the sabbaths of Christ spent in the midst of all his fatigues! How pleasantly did the sun go down upon him, when he had been imitating that heavenly luminary in his steady and constant course; scattering a brighter light and more beneficial influences upon all about him.

35 And when the sabbath had been spent in these labours of piety and love, how happily were the fruits of it carried into the ensuing week? The first morning of it, that it might be most pleasantly and most profitably begun, Jesus rose before it was light, that he might enjoy God and himself in religious retirement. It surely becomes us sometimes willingly to deny ourselves the gratifications of sleep, that we may have the better opportunity for devotion. And it should be the peculiar care of those who are employed in God's public service, to cultivate communion with him in private; lest while they keep the vineyard of others, their own be neglected and impoverished. (Cant. i. 6.)

Luke IV. 42. Our Lord's retirement is interrupted by the people, who came to inquire after him and desired to have detained him longer among them: and who that has ever known the pleasure of conversing with him, would not desire that it might be longer

Mark I. 38. continued and frequently renewed? But in this instance, their request must be denied; the great purposes of his ministry required his presence elsewhere, and he breaks through all that importunity which would have broken in upon his schemes of usefulness: a resolution which we must learn in some cases to imitate if we would prosecute the business of life with vigour and success.

Luke IV. 43. Let us often reflect wherefore we are sent; and judge by that where God would have us to be; that by the intimations of his pleasure every motion may be regulated, and every abode determined.

Mat. IV. 23, 25. Wherever Christ removes, he still goes about doing good, publishing the gospel and confirming it by the most amazing works of power and of mercy. How well were these miracles suited to awaken men's attention, and to convince their consciences of his Divine mission! Well might his fame go over the whole country: may it extend itself now to the remotest regions, that all the ends of the earth may look unto him and be saved, (Is. xlv. 22,) while he displays a healing power over their spirits proportionable to that which he here exerted on their bodies!

SECT.

maxims. I rather chuse to add an appendix representing the order in which the sections are to be read according to him; which will, to the more curious part of my readers, be sufficient, and will excuse me from the necessity of swelling these notes in such a manner as I must otherwise have done.

n About Jordan.] See note b at Mat. iv. 15. p. 182.

a That

SECT. XXXVII.

Christ begins his sermons on the mount with the beatitudes and general exhortations to exemplary piety. Mat. V. 1—16.

MAT. V. 1.

AND seeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain: and when he was set, his disciples came unto him:

MAT. V. 1.

SECT. XXXVII.

Mat. V. 1.

AND [Jesus], in his circuit through Galilee, seeing the vast multitudes which flocked around him from all parts, thought it proper to inform them more largely than he had hitherto done concerning the nature of his doctrine and the design of his appearance; that he might correct those false notions of the Messiah's kingdom[a] which so generally prevailed, and which would prove so pernicious to those who were governed by them. He therefore went up to a mountain[b], that he might be the better heard by the crowds which surrounded him; and when, according to the custom of the Jewish rabbis in their sermons, he was set down to teach them, they that were already his disciples, and others that were disposed to receive information, came near to him.

2 And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying,

And opening his mouth[c], with an air of great solemnity, to intimate the importance of what he was going to deliver, he taught them the most suitable and excellent lessons. And as happiness was the great end to which the wisest philosophers a That he might correct those false notions of the Messiah's kingdom.] In order to enter into the beauty of this discourse it is necessary to consider it as addressed not merely to the apostles (who are not yet chosen under that character), but to his disciples in general, and to vast numbers of people who, affected with the sight or fame of his miracles, were now assembled around him; probably expecting that he would immediately declare himself the Messiah, and full of those false notions of his kingdom which so generally prevailed. Mr. Blair, in his excellent discourses on this chapter, has shewn (I think beyond all others) how directly the beginning of this sermon is levelled against these prejudices. He has also observed (as it is very necessary to do) what a beautiful correspondence there is between the characters described in these beatitudes, and the blessings connected with them.

2

b Went up to a mountain.] It does not appear in what part of Galilee this mountain was situated; and (if the cure of the leper, which Christ performed at his descending from it, was wrought in the confines of some other city, and not of Capernaum) there is no reason to suppose, as most expositors do, that it was in the neighbourhood of Capernaum; (see Mat. viii. 1, 2; and note b on Luke v. 12; sect. xliv.) Mr. Maundrel says, that what is now called The Mount of the Beatitudes is a little to the north of Mount Tabor, (Trav. p. 115); and if this be its true situation it must be at some considerable distance from Capernaum.—I shall elsewhere give some hints of the reasons which have led me to conclude that this discourse was different from, and previous to, that which Luke has given us in the sixth chapter of his gospel, ver. 20. & seq. though many of the sentiments and expressions are the same; (see note a on Luke vi. 20. sect. iii.)

c Opening his mouth.] I do not take the expression of opening his mouth to be always a pleonasm; the manner in which it is used elsewhere may sufficiently prove the contrary; compare Judg xi. 35, 36. Job iii. 1. xxxiii. 2. and Acts viii. 35. x. 34. And thus the ancient Greek and Roman writers used it, as Elsner proves, Observ. Vol. I. p. 20, 21.

d Happy

SECT. XXXVII.

phers undertook to conduct their hearers, our Lord began his discourse with several weighty, though uncommon remarks as to the surest method of obtaining it: saying,

Mat. V. 2.

3 You naturally congratulate the rich and the great; and expect, under the reign of the Messiah, to be advanced to wealth and dignity and power: but happy[d] are the poor in spirit[e], those humble souls that, deeply conscious of their ignorance and guilt, can quietly resign to Divine teachings and Divine disposals, and accommodate themselves to the lowest circumstances which Providence shall appoint them; for howsoever they may be despised and trampled on by men, theirs is the kingdom of heaven; they will be most likely to embrace the gospel, and they alone will be entitled to its most important blessings for time and eternity.

3 Blessed are the poor in spirit; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

4 You admire the gay and jovial part of mankind, and please yourselves with the hopes of joy and festivity: but I say unto you, Happy are the men of a more serious temper, and especially they that now mourn under a penitent sense of their sins[f]; for they shall ere long be comforted with the discoveries of God's forgiving love, and be cheered with the reviving rays of his everlasting favour.

4 Blessed are they that mourn; for they shall be comforted.

5 You imagine that military courage and martial exploits are to introduce the kingdom now to be erected, and to raise men to distinguished stations in it: but I rather say, Happy are the men who are meek and gentle under injuries and provocations, and are cautious in offering but patient in bearing them; for they shall weather many a storm which would bear down the rugged

5 Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth.

d Happy.] I have here used the word happy rather than blessed, as more exactly answering to μακαριοι, as the other does to ευλογημενοι; and I the rather chose to render it thus because our Lord seems to intimate by it, not only that the dispositions here recommended would be the way to future blessedness, but that they would immediately be attended with the truest happiness, and the most noble pleasures.

e The poor in spirit.] Though I cannot think, with Mr. Joseph Mede (p. 25), that this chiefly refers to a disposition to part with their possessions for charitable purposes; or confine it, with Grotius and Baxter, to a disposition to bear poverty with resolution, submission and cheerfulness; yet I doubt not but the latter of these is comprehended in that humility which is here expressed by poverty of spirit; which is a temper that indeed is absolutely necessary in order to our being cordially reconciled to the gospel method of salvation.

f They that mourn under a penitent sense of their sins.] It seems proper to restrain it within these limits, since there is a sorrow in the world which ends in death, 2 Cor. viii. 10. and though mourning for the calamities of life be often allowable and commendable, yet it is so natural an affection, and sometimes in its degree so sinful, that one can hardly suppose our Lord here pronounced a blessing upon it in such general terms.

g That ged and obstinate, and at length (as the Psalmist expresses it, Psal. xxxvii. 11) "shall inherit the earth, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace," which can only have its seat in such gentle bosoms.

SECT. XXXVII.

Mat. V. 5.

6 Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled.

Happy are they that, instead of desiring insatiably the possessions of others, and endeavouring to obtain them by violence or deceit, eagerly hunger and thirst after righteousness[g], and make it the delightful business of life to improve in all the branches of virtue and goodness; for they shall never be disappointed in these pious pursuits, but be abundantly satisfied with the righteousness they seek (compare Prov. xxi. 21.) and be competently supplied with every necessary inferior good. (See Mat. vi. 33.) 6 7 Blessed are the merciful; for they shall obtain mercy.

Far from training you up to delight in scenes of desolation and slaughter, I rather declare, Happy are the merciful and compassionate, that feel the sorrows of others as their own, and with tender sympathy hasten to relieve them; for they shall obtain that mercy from God which the best and happiest of mankind need, and on which they continually and entirely depend. 7 8 Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God.

Indulge not a thought of those licentious gratifications which are often mingled with victory and are accounted as the pleasures of the great: happy are the men that not only abstain from these gross enormities, but are concerned that they may be pure in heart too[h], avoiding every irregular desire and mortifying every unruly passion: this resolute self-denial shall be the source 8

g That hunger and thirst after righteousness.] The very pious and judicious writer I mentioned above, in note [a], has taken a great deal of pains to prove that these words are chiefly designed to recommend a love of justice towards our fellow-creatures; and is for rendering χορτασθησονται, they shall be fed to the full, while those who are violent and rapacious as young lions, may lack and suffer hunger, Psal. xxxiv. 10. But the phrase of hungering and thirsting after righteousness must surely be expressive of much more than merely a steady care to treat all mankind equitably, and to avoid what would be injurious and oppressive; and we may rather understand it as a just and beautiful description of a holy ardour of soul, in pursuit of the most eminent attainments in universal goodness, which will end in complete satisfaction, as the necessary consequence of perfect holiness in a future state.—These different views of the future blessedness sufficiently vindicate our Lord from the charge of tautology, though we should suppose (as, after all that Mr. Blair has said to the contrary, I think we must) that our Lord leads the minds of his disciples upwards in almost each of these beatitudes.

h Happy are the pure in heart.] Mr. Blair supposes this may refer to the expectation they had of possessing themselves of beautiful captives in those wars by which they fancied that the Messiah's kingdom would be raised and established. The large seraglios of eastern princes and great men which, by a very mistaken taste, were regarded as matters of state and grandeur, gave too much countenance to such a wild and extravagant notion: but as the hint is at most but obliquely intimated, I thought it convenient to touch upon it only in a very transient and general manner.

SECT. XXXVII.

source of nobler and more lasting pleasure; for they shall see God[i]; and thus purified and refined shall enjoy him in his ordinances now, and dwell with him for ever in heaven.

Mat. V. 8.

9 I come not, as you may fondly suppose, to lead you forward to the field of battle or to teach you to propagate religion by the sword; but, on the contrary, I declare unto you, Happy are the peace-makers, who not only avoid contention but labour to extinguish it wherever it prevails; for though mistaken men may ascribe such a gentle disposition to cowardice and meanness of spirit, they shall have the honour to be called the children of the God of peace[k], and be owned by him in that dear relation, as they resemble him in the benevolence of their characters.

9 Blessed are the peace-makers; for they shall be called the children of God.

10 Instead of these pomps and pleasures, these victories and triumphs (in expectation of which you may now be crowding around me) my followers must prepare themselves for the severity of suffering: but happy are they that are persecuted for the sake of righteousness, and courageously endure the greatest extremities for the testimony of their consciences: their richest treasure is beyond the reach of their most inveterate enemies; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven, and they shall reign with God in everlasting glory.

10 Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness sake; for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

11 And, on these principles, happy are ye, my sincere disciples and faithful friends, when men shall injuriously reproach you and persecute you, and shall falsely say every thing that is evil and scandalous of you for my sake, and because of your professed relation to me. Be not discouraged under all this load of infamy and oppression; but rather rejoice, and triumphantly exult[l]; because your reward in heaven [will be] proportionably great and distinguished: for this has in all ages been the portion and the proof of the most eminent saints; and you particularly know

11 Blessed are ye when men shall revile you and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.

12 Rejoice, and be exceeding glad; for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted i For they shall see God.] Elsner has illustrated this text by shewing, that the Pagans thought a good man might see their deities in some circumstances, when to the wicked they were invisible. (Elsn. Observ. Vol. I. p. 22, 23.) But this, in their theology, might be intended to subserve some fraudulent views from which the nature of Christianity is most abhorrent. The remark, however, may in some degree shew how natural the thought is in the words before us.

k The children of the God of peace.] So God is often called, Rom. xvi. 20. 2 Cor. xiii. 11. Phil. iv. 9. and Heb. xiii. 20. (Compare Ecclus. iv. 10.) To be called God's children, signifies to be really so, and to have a right to that name conferred upon us by a Divine adoption; see 1 John. iii. 1. and John i. 12.

l Triumphantly exult.] Of the emphatical signification of the word αγαλλιασθε, see note f on Luke i. 14. p. 32.

m Thus

SECT. XXXVII.

know from the sacred records, that it was thus they persecuted the prophets of their own nation [m], who were long before you the ambassadors from God to them; and as you now share in the tribulation of those holy men, you shall ere long share in their glory. Mat. V. 12.

secuted they the prophets which were before you.

13 Let it be, in the mean time, your care to imitate their piety and zeal, as remembering that you, my disciples, are to be as it were the salt of the earth, the means of preventing or curing the growth of that corruption which prevails in it, and of seasoning men's minds with wisdom and grace: but it would be most unhappy for yourselves, as well as for them, if you should be destitute of those blessed principles; for if the salt be grown insipid [n], with what can it possibly be seasoned? It is no farther of any avail or significancy at all: but, as an useless thing, is left to be thrown out of doors and to be trampled on by men as the common dirt of the streets: thus worthless and contemptible will you, my disciples, be, even in the most eminent stations, if you lose your character for real and vital religion. 13

13 Ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost its savour, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men.

14 And therefore, that this may not be the case with you, consider the distinguished circumstances in which you are placed: you are, like the sun, to be the light of the world; and how conspicuous and bright should you appear under that character! Even a city that, like yonder town, is situated on a mountain [o], cannot be hid, but will attract men's eyes from a considerable distance. 14

14 Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid.

[m] Thus they persecuted the prophets of their own nation.] This is abundantly evident from the known histories of Moses, Samuel, David, Elijah, Elisha, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, Amos, &c See 2 Chron. xxxvi. 15, 16. Mat. xxiii. 29—35. Acts. vii. 51, 52. and Heb. xi. 36, 37.

[n] If the salt be grown insipid.] Mr. Le Clerc sinks the meaning of this noble passage very low, when he supposes our Lord only intends to compare his disciples to salt ashes used in manuring the ground, (see Luke xiv. 34, 35.) That passage, in which Levy calls Greece Sal Gentium, the salt of all the nations, on account of those intellectual improvements they learned from thence, might easily have suggested a much nobler sense, which the paraphrase expresses. The word μωρανθη has a peculiar beauty and strength here, and might literally be rendered, if it be infatuated, or grown foolish, alluding to the common figure in which sense and spirit are expressed by salt; but I thought the metaphor too strong to be literally retained in the version, and therefore contented myself with a distant imitation, as we call a flat lifeless discourse insipid. Compare Job vi. 6, and Col. iv. 6.

[o] A city that, like yonder town, is situated on a mountain.] Mr. Maundrel tells us that there is a city called Saphet, supposed to be the ancient Bethulia, which, standing on a high hill, might easily be seen from the mountain on which Christ made this discourse; and probably supposes he might point to that here, as afterwards he did to the birds and the lilies: Mat. vi. 26—28. Maundr. Travels, p. 115.) Many writers have justly observed, that our Lord, like Socrates, takes his similies from the most obvious things, familiarly known to his hearers, and often before their eyes, even while he was speaking; a thought most largely illustrated by Sir Isaac Newton on the Prophecies, p. 148, 149.

SECT. XXXVII.

distance. Neither do men light so much as a common lamp, and put it under a bushel, and conceal it there; but they rather set it on a stand, and it giveth light to all that are in the house. How much less will it become you, whom I have compared to the sun[p], to hide or to suppress your rays? On the contrary, let it be your care that your light may so shine before men, that they may continually see your good works in every circumstance and relation of life, and may thereby be engaged to glorify your Father who is in heaven; not only praising him for sending such a religion into the world, but also themselves embracing your faith and imitating your holy example.

Mat. V. 15.

15 Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel; but on a candlestick, and it giveth light unto all that are in the house.

16 Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. 1, 2 WHAT abundant reason have we to bless God that this large and edifying discourse of our blessed Redeemer is thus particularly recorded by the sacred historian. Let every one that hath ears to hear attend to it; for surely never man spake as our Lord here doth. Let us fix our souls in a posture of humble attention, that we may 3--12 receive the law from his mouth.

He opened it with blessings, repeated and most important blessings. But on whom are they pronounced? and whom are we taught to think the happiest of mankind? The meek and the humble, the penitent and the merciful, the peaceful and the pure, those that hunger and thirst after righteousness, those that labour, but faint not under persecution! Blessed Jesus! how different are thy maxims from those of the children of this world! They call the proud happy, and admire the gay, the rich, the powerful and the victorious. But let a vain world take its gaudy trifles, and dress up the foolish creatures that pursue them. May our souls share in that happiness which the Son of God came to recommend and to procure! May we obtain mercy of the Lord; may we be owned as his children; may we see his face; and may we inherit his kingdom! With these enjoyments, and these hopes, we will cheerfully welcome the lowest or the most painful circumstances.

Let us awaken and stir up our souls to the cultivation of those amiable virtues which are here recommended to our pursuit; this humility and meekness, this penitent sense of sin, this ardent desire after righteousness, this compassion and purity, this peacefulness and fortitude of soul, and, in a word, this universal goodness, which becomes p How much less will it become you, whom I have compared to the sun, &c.] That this is the sense and spirit of this beautiful passage Mr. Pierce has well shewn in his fourth Dissertation.

comes us as we sustain the character of the salt of the earth and the light of the world. SECT. XXXVII.

Is not there reason to lament it, that we answer the character no more? Is there not reason to cry out, with a good man in former times*, "Blessed Jesus! either these are not thy words, or we are not Christians!" Oh, season our hearts more effectually with thy grace! Pour forth that Divine oil on our lamps! Then shall the flame brighten; then shall the ancient honours of thy religion be revived; and multitudes be awakened and animated by the lustre of it to glorify our Father in heaven. Amen. Ver. 13, 14 16

* Linacer.

SECT. XXXVIII.

Our Lord declares his purpose of establishing and vindicating the moral law, and enters on his divine exposition of it. Mat. V. 17—26.

Mat. V. 17.
THINK not that I am come to destroy the Law or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil.

Mat. V. 17.

THAT the great design of our Lord's appearance might be more fully understood by the multitudes that were now assembled around him, he proceeded in his discourse and said, Suppose not that I am come to dissolve that goodly fabric of holy precepts contained in the sacred writings of the laws, or the prophets; for I solemnly assure you, That I am not come to dissolve but rather to vindicate and illustrate, to complete and adorn [them[a],] both by my example and discourses, as well as to answer the highest ends of the ceremonial institutions. For verily I say unto you, That as their original is Divine, their honours shall be perpetual; so that till heaven and earth pass away, and the whole visible frame of nature be disjointed, not one jot or one tittle shall pass SECT. XXXVIII. Mat. V. 17. 18 18 For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled.

[a] To vindicate and illustrate, to complete and adorn them.] I was willing to take the word πληρωσαι in its most extensive sense, as comprehending what Christ has done to answer the end of the ceremonial law, as well as to vindicate and enforce the moral: yet by the connection it seems that the latter was chiefly intended; and this phrase, the law and the prophets, is used in this sense, Mat. xxii. 40. It is strange that any should have questioned whether the precepts of Moses required such spirituality of obedience as Christ here demands. That great command of loving the Lord God with all the heart, &c. and our neighbour as ourself, (Mat. xxii. 37) must surely comprehend all this. I shall only add, that Vitringa's interpretation of πληρω, who supposes it here to answer to the Chaldee GEMAR, which signifies to paraphrase, illustrate, open, or explain, seems to me worthy of consideration. (Compare Rom. xv. 19. πεπληρωκεναι το ευαγγελιον, I have fully explained the gospel; and Col. iv. 12. πεπληρωμενοι εν θελημασι του Θεου, completely instructed in the will of God.) See Vitring. Observ. Sacr. lib. 1. dissert iii. cap. 5. §. 3.

 [b] One

SECT. XXXVIII.

pass or perish from the law[b], till all things which it requires or foretells shall be effected[c]. Whoever therefore shall himself transgress or violate one of the least of these commandments which are contained therein; and especially, whoever shall teach other men so to do, whether by his licentious principles or irregular example, he shall be accounted [one of] the least and unworthiest members in the kingdom of heaven, or in the church of the Messiah; and shall soon be entirely cut off from it as unfit for so holy a society: but whosoever shall do them, and teach [them] with that advantage which nothing but the authority of a good example can give, he shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven and be treated with distinguished honour and favour in proportion to his zeal in so good a cause. Let this therefore be the care of all that hear me this day: for I say unto you, with all the solemnity that so important an affair requires, That unless your righteousness abound far more than [that] which is apparent in the lives, or even required in the precepts of the scribes and Pharisees[d], as highly as they are generally esteemed, ye shall be so far from making any illustrious figure, that ye shall not by any means enter into the kingdom of heaven[e], or be owned by the Son of man as truly his subjects.

Mat. V. 19. 19 Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do, and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven.

20 20 For I say unto you, That except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven.

To illustrate this, I will now proceed to explain some of those precepts of the law which these Pharisaical teachers have, by their perverse glosses,

[b] One jot, or one tittle.] The word ιωτα, which we render jot, undoubtedly answers to the Hebrew letter jod, whence the English word here used seems to be derived, and which, being the least letter of their alphabet, might properly be used proverbially on this occasion.—Κεραια, which we render tittle, properly signifies one of those little ornamental curvatures or flourishes which, when Hebrew is elegantly written, are generally used at the beginning and end of a letter, and sometimes at the corners too.—I think it might well have been rendered, not the least letter or stroke, &c. and so much the rather, as jot and tittle, in English, signify much the the same.

[c] Till all things which it requires or foretells shall be effected: εως αν παντα γενηται.] The translation here given is most literal and comprehensive. The law has its effect when its sanctions are executed, as well as when its precepts are obeyed.

[d] Apparent in the lives, or even required in the precepts of the scribes and Pharisees.] As our Lord levels his following discourse, not so much against the corrupt lives of these Jewish teachers, as against their doctrines, I conclude that the text chiefly refers to the latter: yet since their lives were yet worse than their maxims, it must comprehend the former. They seem, (so far as we can judge by this sermon, and other scriptures) to have taught—that the precepts of the law extended only to the outward actions—that a zeal in the ceremonial parts of religion would excuse moral defects and irregularities—and that some important privileges were inseparably connected with a descent from Abraham, &c.

[e] Ye shall not by any means enter into the kingdom of heaven.] This must, greatly surprise Christ's hearers, if the proverb which has since prevailed were of so ancient a date; for it has been commonly said by the Jews, that "if but two men were to enter into the kingdom of heaven, one of them would be a Pharisee and the other a scribe."

f You

glosses, enervated and dishonoured; and I will begin with the sixth commandment. You have heard that it was said to the ancients[f], and particularly to your fathers at mount Sinai, Thou shalt not kill[g]: and you have been taught that the only design of it was to restrain men from actual murder; and accordingly it has been added, That whosoever shall unlawfully kill another, shall be obnoxious to the judgment[h], and be capitally punished in the common courts of judicature. But I say unto you, That it was the design of God in this precept to prohibit extravagant passions and abusive language, as well as the most fatal effects of them in destroying the lives of each other: so that whosoever shall, without just cause[i], be angry with his brother, so as secretly to wish him evil, shall be obnoxious to the judgment, or shall be liable to a worse punishment from God than any that your common courts of judicature can inflict[k]: and whosoever to his secret anger shall add opprobrious and contemptuous words; or, for instance, shall say to his brother, Raca, that is, Thou worthless empty fellow[l], shall be exposed to yet more terrible effects of the Divine resentment, and be obnoxious to a yet severer punishment, that will as far exceed the former as that inflicted by the sanhedrim, which extends to

SECT. XXXVII.

M. t. V. 21.

21 Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill, shall be in danger of the judgment:

22 But I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause, shall be in danger of the judgment: and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council: but whosoever 22

f You have heard that it was said to the ancients.] Thus are the words ερρεθη τοις αρχαιοις, to be rendered; see Grotius and Whitby in loc.

g Thou shalt not kill.] I might have rendered, Ου φονευσεις, Thou shalt not commit murder, as Dr. Scott has very properly done; but I chose to retain the words of the commandments as they are usually expressed among us, that it might at first hearing be more apparent to every reader, that what follows each, is our Lord's commentary upon it.

h Shall be obnoxious to the judgment.] To understand this and the following verse, it is necessary to observe, that the Jews had a common court of twenty-three men, wherein capital sentences might be passed, on which a malefactor might be strangled or beheaded; this was called the judgment: but the sanhedrim, or council, was the supreme Jewish court, consisting of seventy-two, in which the highest crimes were tried, which they, and they alone, punished with stoning, which was thought a more terrible death than the former. See Grotius's excellent note on this text, of which the best commentaries upon it since him are little more than transcripts. (See Bishop Hopkins's Works, p. 65, 66.) As murder was undoubtedly a capital crime, Dr. Lightfoot, and after him, Dr. Whitby must be mistaken in supposing that judgment here signifies punishment from the immediate hand of God, as in a case which human laws would not reach. See Lightf. Hor. Heb. and Whitby, on Mat. v. 22.

i Without just cause.] Though εικη, without cause, be wanting in some old versions and manuscripts, the sense plainly implies it. See Dr. Whitby in loc.

k To a worse punishment from God, &c.] That judgment must here signify punishment from God, is plain, because this causeless anger might be so concealed in the heart, as not to admit of conviction before men.

l Raca, that is, thou worthless empty fellow.] Drusius gives the most learned and accurate account of the etymology and import of this word, which seems pretty exactly to answer to COXCOMB in our language.

SECT. XXXVIII.

to stoning, does that which follows on the judgment of the inferior courts, which only have the power of the sword, but whosoever, in his unreasonable passion, shall presume to say unto his brother, Thou fool, that is, Thou graceless wicked villain [m], thereby impeaching his moral character, as well as reflecting on his intellectual, shall be obnoxious to the fire of hell, or to a future punishment more dreadful even than that of being burnt alive in the valley of Hinnom [n], from whence you borrow the name of those infernal regions.

Mat. V. 22.

ever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell-fire.

23 Remember therefore to lay aside all your animosities, and to live in peace and love, as ever you would escape God's wrath and secure his favour. Without this your most expensive sacrifices would be so vain, that I must inculcate it on every one of you as a most necessary caution, If thou art bringing thy gift, however costly and free [o], even to the very altar, and there recollectest that thy brother has any just cause of [complaint] against thee, do not content thyself with a secret, and it may be a treacherous purpose, that thou wilt hereafter accommodate the affair, but bring it to an immediate issue;

23 Therefore, if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there remembrest that thy brother hath ought against thee;

24 And, leaving thy gift there, in the hand of those that are ministering before the altar, go away, and

24 Leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way, first be

[m] Thou fool, that is, thou graceless wicked villain.] Mr. Blair thinks that μωρε, thou fool, answers to RAKEHELL; but that being only applied to a debauchee, seems too contracted. Wicked men are so often called fools in the Old Testament, especially in the writings of David and Solomon, that the appellation in the Jewish language, signifies not so much a weak thoughtless creature, as a man deliberately guilty of some heinous crime, or, in one word, a VILLAIN. On this account I cannot but think it wrong that αφρονες Luke xxiv. 25, or αφρων, 1 Cor. xv. 36, should, by so harsh a translation as ours, have been confounded with such an infamous word as this.

[n] Burnt alive in the valley of Hinnom.] Though it is so well known to the learned, I must beg leave to remind my English reader that the valley of Hinnom or Tophet had been the scene of those detestable sacrifices in which children were burnt alive to Moloch (compare 2 Kings xxiii. 10. 2 Chron. xxviii. 3. and Jer. xix. 2—5; xxxii. 35.) and was afterwards defiled by Josiah, 2 Kings xxiii. 10. and made a receptacle for the filth of the city, where fires were kept continually burning to consume it: and it is probable that if any criminals were executed on the statute, Lev. xx. 14. or xxi. 9. this accursed and horrible place might be the spot of ground on which they were consumed. However that were, it seemed, both with regard to its former and latter state, a fit emblem of hell itself (see Isa xxx. 33. and Jer. xix. 11—13.) which, in the Syriac language, takes its name from thence, and was commonly called Gehenna by the Jews; (see Lightf. Hor. Heb. in loc. and Preface to his Harm. of the New Test.)—It must here signify a degree of future punishment, as much more dreadful than that incurred in the former case, as burning alive was more terrible than stoning: for I apprehend the punishment of each degree of anger and fury here mentioned is to be referred to the invisible world or else our Lord's words would not be generally true.

[o] If thou art bringing thy gift, however costly and free.] Δωρον, a gift, implies that it was a free-will offering; which adds great strength to the sentence, beyond what it would have had if the word had been θυσιαν, sacrifice.

SECT. XXXVIII.

be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift.

and first make it thy care to be reconciled to thy brother, by an acknowledgment of thy fault, and by a readiness to make him any reasonable satisfaction; and then come and offer thy gift[p], which thou mayest then cheerfully hope God will accept at thine hands. Mat. V. 24.

25 Agree with thine adversary quickly whilst thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison.

And it will be prudence as well as humanity 25 to apply this advice to suits at law, if you are so unhappy as to be engaged in them: my counsel then to each of you is, That thou shouldest make it thine endeavour to come to a friendly agreement with thine adversary[q] quickly, while thou art in the way going with him to a magistrate; lest the adversary should deliver thee to be tried before the judge; and the judge deciding the cause against thee, deliver thee to the officer of the court, to keep thee in custody till payment be made; and thou not having enough by thee to discharge an account inflamed with so many additional articles of expence, shouldest be cast into prison:

26 Verily I say unto thee, Thou shalt by no means come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing.

Verily I say unto thee, Thy antagonist, when he 26 has got thee at such an advantage, will be more rigorous in his demands than before; and thou shalt not by any means come out from thence, till thou hast discharged the very last farthing of thy debt. And surely, if by impenitent wickedness thou makest thyself the prisoner of the Divine justice[r], thy case will be yet more deplorable and hopeless.

IMPROVEMENT.

LET us seriously consider and often recollect the purposes of Christ's appearance: he came not to destroy the law and the prophets, Ver. 17 or

p First be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift.] It is observable that Philo (de Sacrif. p. 844.) explaining the law of the trespass-offering, tells us, "That when a man had injured his brother, and repenting of his fault, voluntarily acknowledged it (in which case both restitution and sacrifice were required), he was first to make restitution, and then to come into the temple presenting his sacrifice, and asking pardon." This is a very just and a natural account of the matter, and adds a great illustration to this text, especially when it is considered that our Lord supposes in this case not a trespass-offering but a voluntary gift presented before the altar; and yet declares that this will not be accepted while there is a consciousness of having wronged a brother and not made him reparation.

q Come to a friendly agreement with thine adversary.] The word ἀνιδίκῳ properly signifies a person who is going to law with another. I have rendered ἴσθι εὐνοῶν, come to a friendly agreement, because the original seems to imply not only peace but benevolence.

r If thou makest thyself the prisoner of the Divine justice.] This thought is a natural reflection on what was said before; but it is rather intimated than expressed in our Lord's words, which so naturally lead to the sense given in the paraphrase, that to those who are unacquainted with the Popish manner of managing controversies, it might seem surprising they should ever be urged in favour of purgatory. The vanity and inconsistency of it is well exposed by Bishop Burnet on the Articles, p. 169, and Limborch, Theolog. lib. vi. cap. 10. § 22.

SECT. XXXVIII.

or to dissolve men's obligation to observe them: but rather to enforce as well as to fulfil them. How fatally shall we pervert the purposes of his coming, if we regard him as the minister of sin? How ungratefully shall we abuse the merciful constitution of his gospel should we take encouragement from thence to violate his law? Dangerous as well as ungrateful abuse indeed! For God's eye will be watchful over its honours, and his hand exerted to maintain them; so that heaven and earth shall pass away before it shall fail of its accomplishment in being either obeyed or avenged on the impenitent sinner. May it be our constant care to keep it ourselves, and to teach others to observe it! May we teach it by our lives as well as our lips; and let our daily conversation demonstrate how practicable and how amiable its precepts are! So shall we be great in the kingdom of heaven, in the pursuit of which we may give full scope to the noblest ambition of which human nature is capable.

Mat. V. 17, 18, 19

Let our hearts own and feel the spiritual sense of God's law, that we may rise to a more sincere and more extensive righteousness than that of the scribes and Pharisees. May we delight in it after the inward man, and learn to regulate our thoughts and our passions, as well as our external behaviour, by it!

20

Especially let us avoid all the malignant and ill-natured passions, all thoughts of rash and immoderate anger, all words of contumely and reproach. If we would maintain communion with the God of love, let love govern in our hearts; and when we come to present our devotions to him, let us lift up holy hands without wrath, as well as without doubting (1 Tim. ii. 8.) so may we promise ourselves a gracious welcome; so shall we carry away the most valuable blessings!

21, 22, 23

But are none of us strangers to this blessed state? Are none of us obnoxious to the Divine displeasure? If we are so, with what a holy solicitude of soul should we labour, to make up the controversy and come to an agreement, while we are yet in the way with this awful adversary! lest we be immediately hurried before the tribunal of the righteous Judge of all the world, and be delivered into the hands of justice, to be reserved in everlasting chains beyond the possibility of redemption.

25

Lord, we were all the debtors, and, in one sense, the prisoners of thy justice; and of ourselves we are most incapable, not only of paying the uttermost farthing, but even of discharging the least part of the debt! We bless thee for that generous Surety who has undertaken and discharged it for us; and by the price of whose atoning blood we are delivered from the chains of darkness, and are translated into the glorious liberty of thy children.

26

SECT.

SECT. XXXIX.

Our Lord proceeds in his exposition of the law, strictly prohibiting uncleanness, divorce, contention, and revenge; and urging the contrary virtues. Mat. V. 27, to the end.

MAT. V. 27.

YE have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery.

28 But I say unto you, That whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her, hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.

29 And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee, that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

MAT. V. 27.

JESUS proceeded in his sermon to the seventh commandment, and observed, You have often heard that it was said to the ancients, Thou shalt not commit adultery; and that law has been explained as if it related only to the grossest acts of uncleanness: But I say unto you, That it extends not only to unchaste actions and words, but even to looks and the very thoughts of the heart; for whosoever shall gaze on a woman[a] to lust after her, and thus cherish and indulge the secret workings of irregular desire in his mind, has already committed that adultery with her in his heart[b] which this commandment was designed to forbid, and thereby rendered himself, in the sight of God, guilty of the breach of it.

SECT. XXXIX. MAT. V. 27. 28

You will think me severe in requiring you so strictly to mortify all the irregular propensities of nature, but you will find it, on the whole, as much for your interest as it is to part with a gangrened member to prevent the death of the whole body; yea indeed it is infinitely more so. And if, therefore, thy right eye offend or ensnare thee[c], or any thing dear as thy right eye would be the necessary occasion of leading thee into sin, pluck it out with inexorable resolution, and cast it far from thee with abhorrence: for it is advantageous to thee, that one of thy members should perish, rather than thy whole body should be thrown 29

a Whosoever shall gaze on a woman: • βλεπων γυναικα.] There are several other places where the word βλεπω signifies to look on an object with great attention, or to fix the eye upon it. See Mat. vii. 3. xviii. 10. Luke vii. 44. viii. 18. Acts i. 9. iii. 4. 1 Cor. iii. 10. x. 12. Phil. iii. 2. and Rev. xvii. 8.

b Committed adultery with her in his heart.] In the first edition I had rendered it debauched her, because it is plain εμοιχευσεν must extend to single as well as married persons; but, on the animadversion of a learned friend, I am convinced that the spirit of our Lord's meaning is best expressed by retaining the word used in the seventh commandment, and giving the passage such a turn as I have now given it in the paraphrase, which does not at all limit the sense. But to render γυναικα a married woman, would be a limitation, I think, not to be justified.

c Offend or ensnare thee.] It is well known that this is the force of the word σκανδαλιζω, which most literally signifies to be a stumbling-block in a person's way, or an occasion of his fall; and so implies much more than merely to displease. I mention this remark, obvious as it is, because the sense of so many texts depends on attending to it. See Rom. xi. 9. xiv. 13, 21. xvi. 17. 1 Cor. viii. 13. Gal. v. 11. and Rev. ii. 14.

d If

SECT. XXXIX.

thrown into hell; which yet must be the fatal consequence of indulging the most favourite lust. Yea, if thy right hand offend or insnare thee[d], though it be so useful and necessary a part, do not spare it, but immediately cut it off, and cast it from thee; for I renew the declaration, That it is highly advantageous to thee, that any one of thy members should perish, rather than thy whole body should be thrown into hell[e], to be the companion of thy guilty soul there in everlasting horror and misery.

Mat. V. 30.

30 And if thy right hand offend thee, cut it off, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

31 It has been said, (Deut. xxiv. 1.) Whoever would dismiss his wife, let him give her a writing of divorce: and this precept, which was indeed intended to prevent the frequency of such dismissions, by making it so solemn and irrevocable a thing, has perversely been interpreted as a warrant for having recourse to it upon every trifling occasion. But such a practice is directly contrary to the original design of marriage, and highly injurious to the common good of mankind: I therefore think it necessary to restrain so dangerous a liberty, and say unto you, That whosoever shall dismiss his wife, except it be on the account of whoredom[f], causeth her, by a second marriage, to commit adultery, or at least exposeth her to great danger of doing it; and whoever shall marry her that is thus unlawfully dismissed[g], committeth adultery, since the bond of the former marriage does in the account of God remain undissolved.

31 It hath been said, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement.

32 But I say unto you, That whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery; and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced, committeth adultery.

33 Again, you have heard that it was said to the ancients, (Lev. xix. 12. Deut. xxiii. 21.) Thou shalt not perjure or forswear thyself, but shalt diligently perform unto the Lord thine oaths and vows: and this has been expounded as extending 33 Again, ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths.

[d] If thy right hand offend or ensnare thee.] The greatest part of Christ's auditors were poor people who lived by their daily labour; and to these the loss of a right hand would be a much greater calamity than that of a right eye: so that there is a gradation and force in this passage beyond what has generally been observed.

[e] Rather than thy whole body should be thrown into hell.] This plainly implied the doctrine of a resurrection, though Christ had not yet expressly taught it.

[f] On the account of whoredom.] It is very evident that πορνεια, as here used, must have a more ambignous and larger sense than the English word fornication, which generally answers to it; and must be understood here of adultery.

[g] Shall marry her that is unlawfully dismissed.] Mr. Blair (in the third volume of his Sermons, p. 111, 112.) explains this clause as intended to forbid women divorced for adultery to marry, which he thinks an additional punishment inflicted on persons guilty of so enormous a crime, and a wise provision for preventing bad women from committing adultery in hopes of opening their way to another more agreeable marriage. But I prefer the sense here given, because it makes this latter clause more correspondent to the former, and prevents the necessity of supposing μοιχευω to be used in two different senses so near together.

h Swear

SECT. XXXIX.

Mat. V. 33.

ing merely to those oaths in which the name of God is expressly used, and only prohibiting the violation of such, but tolerating the use of them, even on slight occasions, so it be not in confirmation of a falsehood. But I say unto 34
you, Swear not at all in your common discourse with each other[h], even so much as by the creatures; either by heaven[i], for it is the throne of the glorious and holy God; Or by the earth, 35 for it is under his dominion, and subject to him as his footstool, or by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the Great King of Israel and of the universe: Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, for thou art 36
so far from having an absolute power over it, that thou canst not make the colour of one hair of it white or black: so that these oaths by the creatures, if they have any sense at all, are an implicit appeal to God. But I charge you to 37
avoid the customary use of all such oaths, as well as of those in which the name of God is directly expressed; and let your conversation be all plain and simple: when you affirm, say, Yes, yes; and when you deny, No, no; for if you conduct yourselves as you ought, this will be sufficient to gain you credit; and you may be assured that whatever is more than these cometh from the evil one[k], who artfully contrives, by the habitual use of swearing even by the creatures, to lessen your 34 But I say unto you, Swear not at all; neither by heaven, for it is God's throne;

35 Nor by the earth, for it is his footstool; neither by Jerusalem, for it is the city of the Great King:

36 Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black.

37 But let your communication be Yea, yea; Nay, nay; for whatsoever is more than these, cometh of evil.

[h] Swear not at all in your common discourse with each other.] The opposition between this verse and the 37*th* limits the prohibition to this sense; and, waving that, it would be necessary to interpret it as a restrictive rather than an universal precept, and to consider it as more particularly levelled at the common practice of the Jews, who reckoned swearing by the creatures to be far more excusable than swearing by the name of God, and made but little scruple of the frequent use of it. For that all swearing is not here condemned as a thing absolutely evil, is fully evident from other passages of scripture, and of necessity must be allowed to vindicate the conduct of Christ and his apostles. Compare Mark viii. 12. Mat. xxvi. 64. Rom. i. 9. ix. 1. Gal. i. 20. 2 Cor. i. 18. and Heb. vi. 16.

[i] Either by heaven.] Though I allow, with the learned Heinsius, that the words μη ομοσαι ολως may be rendered By no means swear, either by heaven, earth, or the like; yet it will not follow that the words only forbid swearing by creatures, since ver. 37. forbids whatever is more than yea or nay. So that it is absolutely necessary to have recourse to some other solution of this prohibition, as well as of that in Jam. v. 12. where any other oath is forbidden; and nothing is more natural and easy than to understand it in both places as a prohibition of the use of oaths in common conversation.

[k] Cometh from the evil one.] Εκ του πονηρου εστιν will properly bear this version; and some copies read διαβολου. cometh from the devil. I would observe that whether this version or the common one be admitted, the clause before us contains a demonstration that ver. 34. is to be explained with the limitation proposed: for it is evident that oaths were in some cases not only allowed, but required by the Mosaic law; (see Exod. xxii. 11. Lev. v. 1. Numb. v. 19—21. and Deut. xxix. 12—17.) So that if Christ's prohibition had here referred to swearing in solemn and judicial cases, he would in these words have charged the Divine law with establishing an immorality, which it is most absurd to suppose; and I cannot but wonder that so obvious and decisive a thought should not have been more insisted upon in this controversy.

SECT. XXXIX.

your reverence for the solemnity of an oath and to lead you at length to take the name of God in vain, even by perjury itself.

Mat. V. 38.

You have heard that it has been said in the law (Deut. xix. 21.) An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth: and this statute, which was only intended to direct judges as to the penalties to be inflicted in case of violent and barbarous assaults, has been interpreted as encouraging a rigorous severe revenge of every injury a man might receive. But I say unto you, That when you meet with ill usage in the world, you do not immediately set yourselves against the injurious person[l] in a posture of hostile opposition, and with a resolution to return evil for evil; but, where the damage is not great, chuse rather to pass it by, though possibly it might on that account be repeated, than to enter into a rigorous prosecution of the offender. On these principles, if any man strike thee on thy right cheek, patiently turn the other to him also[m]. And if any one be resolved to sue thee at law, and take away thy vest, permit him to take thy mantle too[n]; for the loss of both would be but a trifle in comparison of those vexations, snares and expences, which would probably attend the continuance of the suit. And if any press thee to go with him one mile, obliging thee and thy carriages to attend him on a public account[o], rather go with him

38 Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth.

39 But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also.

40 And if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloak also.

41 And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain.

l Do not set yourselves against the injurious person.] So the phrase αντιστηναι τω πονηρω may exactly be rendered; (compare 2 Tim. iii. 8.) Had our Lord meant to intimate that we should rather suffer ourselves to be murdered, and our families to be ruined, than resist the villain that attempts it, he would have laid down so strange a precept in the strongest terms: and it is very unreasonable to infer it from this passage, which speaks of so trifling an injury as a slap on the face, or suing a man for the value of a waistcoat or cloak.—If it be asked whether we are universally forbidden to resist on these occasions? I answer we are; unless we be in our consciences convinced, that in present circumstances, to stand on our defence will be more for the public good; and in those cases this particular precept is superseded by the general law of universal benevolence. But I apprehend these expressions intimate that, on the whole, it will generally be for the best to wave rigorous prosecutions on such slight occasions.

m Turn the other to him also.] This is a proverbial phrase, to express a meek submission to injuries and affronts. See Isa. l. 6. and Lam. iii. 30.

n Thy mantle too.] Vest and mantle more exactly answer to χιτων and ιματιον than coat and cloak (compare John xix. 23. and see Casaubon in loc.) and are parts of dress, under different names still retained in Barbary, Egypt and the Levant. See Dr. Shaw's Travels, p. 289 - 292. The mantle being much larger than the vest, must probably be more valuable; and as it would be natural for a robber on the highway to take the outer garment first, I look on this manner of expressing it as a good argument for retaining our translation of κριθηναι, and rendering it sue thee at law, rather than take it in a more general way as signifying to strive or contend; though I know it has sometimes this last signification, as Lud. Cappellus urges.

o Press thee to go with him, &c.] The word press seems best to answer the original αγγαρευσει, which is well known to be

SECT. XXXIX.

him two more, than disturb the peace by a forcible opposition; for in many such cases as these it will be more for your own comfort, as well as the credit of your profession, to submit than contend. Mat. V. 41.

42 Give to him that asketh thee; and from him that would borrow of thee, turn not thou away.

42 ᵒWhen thou seest any one in real necessity, and hast it in the power of thine hand to do it, give to him that asketh thee thy charity [p]; and do not turn away, with a severe denial, him that would borrow of thee [q]; for in some cases a seasonable loan may be as valuable a kindness as a gift.

43 You have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy:

By such condescensions and favours you will generally gain the friendship of those with whom you converse; but if any should be so base, as, notwithstanding all, to persist in using you ill, do not indulge to sentiments of revenge. I know you have heard that it was said to our fathers, Thou shalt love thy neighbour, (Lev. xix. 18.) and from thence, though in direct contradiction to many other scriptures, (Exod. xxiii. 4, 5. Lev. xix. 17. and Prov. xxv. 21.) some have argued as if it had been added, Thou shalt hate thine enemy; and the precepts for destroying the Canaanites (Deut. vii. 16, and the like), have been abused to countenance such an addition [r]. But instead of favouring this pernicious maxim, I say unto you, Love your enemies, and whatsoever you may suffer by them, while you abhor their sinful practices, shew a concern for the true welfare

44 But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse be derived from the name of those officers who were commissioned for this purpose by the Persian emperors when Judea was one of their provinces. See Drusius in loc. (Compare Mat. xxvii. 32.) Among the Jews the disciples of their wise men were excused from such services; but Christ advises his disciples not to insist on that exemption. See Lightf. Hor. Heb. in loc.

42 43 44

p Give to him that asketh thee thy charity, τω αἰτοῦντί σε δίδου.] Mr. Blair would refer this to πονηρῷ, in ver. 39, and render it, Give to the injurious person what he asketh thee; and has a very beautiful discourse upon it in that view: but it is plainly unnecessary to limit it; and I think that, on this interpretation, it would too much coincide with verse 44. In whatever sense it be taken, it must admit of some exceptions, or it will not only be inconsistent with such precepts as require us to take care of our families, (as 1 Tim. v. 8.) but with natural justice and common sense. It is amazing, therefore, that any who do not think themselves obliged by the literal sense of this precept, to give or lend to every idle importunate creature whatever he asks, should insist on a rigorous interpretation of the preceding passage, from ver. 34 to 41.

q Do not turn away him that would borrow of thee.] Τον θελοντα απο σου δανισασθαι μη αποστραφῃς, is thus most literally rendered.

r The precepts for destroying the Canaanites have been abused, &c.] These precepts were of a peculiar nature; and that in particular, Deut. xxiii. 6. Thou shalt not seek their peace nor their prosperity all thy days for ever, relates to avoiding throughout all generations any association with the Moabites; which was an everlasting brand of infamy set upon them for the affront, which, in the matter of Peor, they had offered to God himself, under whose conduct the Israelites were. But though it forbids any national alliance with them, it seems that the settlement of Ruth in Israel when she embraced the Jewish religion (Ruth i. 16.) and the permission given to the Moabites to live as tributaries under David after the conquest of their country, (2 Sam. viii. 2.) were not at all inconsistent with this law.

SECT. XXXIX.

welfare of their persons; bless them that in the bitterest manner curse you (whether by prophane execrations in their common discourse, or by unjust anathemas in their ecclesiastical assemblies) be ready to do good to them that hate you; and pray for the conversion of them that insult you[s], and persecute you: That you may thus approve yourselves to be the children of your heavenly Father; for, with the most diffusive kindness and beneficence, he causeth his sun to arise on the evil and on the good, and showereth down rain on the just and the unjust; so that his enemies share in his providential bounties and subsist on his daily care.

Mat. V. 44.

curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you;

45 That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven; for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust.

46 Let it be therefore your concern to imitate this extensive goodness: for if you only love them that love you, what reward have ye? or what extraordinary praise can ye expect? Do not even the most infamous and scandalous sinners, such as the very publicans, do the same? And if ye salute and embrace your brethren only[t], or those of the same sect, party and interest with yourselves, what extraordinary thing do you practise more than the rest of mankind, though your advantages are so much greater than theirs? Do not even the heathens and publicans do so? And will not common humanity teach even the very worst of men civility to those that treat them with respect and excite them to some sentiments of gratitude to their friends and benefactors?

46 For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? Do not even the publicans the same?

47 And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? Do not even the publicans so?

48 You, who stand in so near a relation to God as my professed disciples, should far excel them: Be ye therefore, in these instances of undeserved and forfeited goodness[u], and, in all other respects, as

48 Be ye therefore perfect,

[s] That insult you; επηρεαζοντων υμας.] As this word, according to the judgment of Erasmus, Beza and several other able critics, is derived from Αρης, the name of Mars, it may perhaps strictly answer to dragooning in our modern language: but as it is plainly used by St. Peter to express abusive language (1 Pet. iii. 16.) I chose to render it insult, which may be applied either to injurious words or actions. To traduce does by no means express the force of the idea. Nor can I think, with the learned Elsner (Vol. I. p. 30, 31.) that this clause is to be interpreted chiefly of malicious prosecutions in judicial courts, though that be a sort of insult and persecution, undoubtedly comprehended among many others, and often expressed by the Greek words here used.

[t] If ye salute and embrace your brethren only.] The word ασπασησθε alludes to the custom of saluting by embracing. And when Christ cautions against confining their regards to brethren, he may perhaps obliquely glance at those prejudices which different sects had against each other, and intimate that he would not have his followers imbibe that narrow spirit. Would to God the hint had been more attended to among the unhappy subdivisions into which his church has been crumbled; and that we might at least advance so far as cordially to embrace our brethren in Christ, of whatever party or denomination they are!

[u] In these instances of undeserved and forfeited goodness.] The love to friends, enjoined by the scribes and Pharisees, was very perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.

as far as frail mortality will admit, perfect, even as your heavenly Father is perfect[x]; whose name you will most effectually honour, and whose favour you will most happily secure by a care to imitate him to the utmost in all the moral perfections of his nature. (Compare Eph. iv. 31, 32. v. 1.)

SECT. XXXIX.

Mat. V. 48.

IMPROVEMENT.

ALAS! how may we blush to call God our Father, while we resemble him so little! And what reason is there, on a survey of these directions of our Lord, to acknowledge our deficiencies and our faults! Let us review the many advantages we enjoy, as Christians, and the engagements we are under in the particular circumstances in which Divine Providence has placed us; and blush to think that we do so little more than others, perhaps in many instances falling short even of the virtues of heathens.

Ver. 48

46

Let us particularly be instructed by these lessons of our Divine Master to recompense good for evil: lessons which come with peculiar grace from his mouth, as he was himself the kindest friend to his most inveterate enemies, and bore and forgave more than any but himself could possibly do.

43, 45

Let us, who are his disciples, abhor contention and revenge. Let us not prosecute every little injury to the utmost, nor govern ourselves by those false maxims of prudence and honour, which pride and self-love have introduced on the ruins of real Christianity. Let us not, even in the most legal methods, seek the punishment of those who have wronged us, except in circumstances in which we are in our conscience persuaded it will, on the whole, be greater very imperfect: we are to labour after a more complete resemblance to God, in loving enemies. Our Lord therefore afterwards expressed it in a parallel discourse, by saying, Be ye merciful, as your Father also is merciful, Luke vi. 36. but it is probable he used a greater latitude of expression here, to remind us of our obligations to imitate the Divine Being in all his moral perfections.

38, 42

[x] Perfect, even as your heavenly Father is perfect.] Many authorities are produced by Elsner, in his note on this text, to prove not only that the heathens gave the epithet of τελειος, or perfect, to many of their gods, especially the chief; but that some of their writers describe clemency and goodness to enemies, as a virtue by which mortals make the nearest approach to Divine perfection. These words conclude Christ's excellent vindication of the law from the corrupt glosses of the Jewish teachers. I know it has been objected to it, that, considering the many figurative expressions used in it, we might as easily trace out the duties recommended by the light of reason alone, as adjust the sense of such obscure and hyperbolical precepts. But if it were really so (which I cannot grant), it is to be remembered, that the chief design of the gospel is not to inform us what is justice, humanity, and charity, in particular cases (which a view of present circumstances can alone discover) but to awaken a regard to the known, though neglected dictates of natural religion on these heads; and this may be most effectually done by such animated and sprightly exhortations as these, especially when considered as coming from a Person whose authority and love concur to demand our attention and obedience.

a Practise

SECT. XXXIX. greater charity to animadvert on the offence than to pass it by; and even then let us act in a calm and dispassionate manner, pitying and loving the persons of the injurious, even while, for the sake of society, we prosecute their crimes.

46 If this be our duty towards our enemies, how inexcusable are we if we are cold and insensible to our friends! And how much worse than publicans themselves, if we do not love them that love us, and do good to those from whom we have received it. Happy is that Christian to whom the God of nature hath given a heart so turned to sentiments of benevolence that, in all these instances, love is a law unto itself!

Yet let us remember, that the whole of our duty is not comprehended in these social regards. The great Author of our being, who hath endowed us with rational faculties, justly requires that we assert their empire over the meaner powers of appetite and passion. We see that he forbids not only gross enormities, as Ver. 27, 28 adultery (which, though so unaccountably spared by the laws of many Christian countries, the heathens themselves have condemned as a capital crime, and which some of the most barbarous nations have esteemed infamous,) but the unchastity of the eye and of the heart. Let us then earnestly pray that God would create in us a clean heart, and renew a right spirit within us (Psal. li. 10.) and let 29 us maintain a most resolute guard over our senses and our thoughts, remembering that there is no other alternative, but that the dearest of our lusts must be mortified and subdued, or our whole persons be cast into hell.

30 Elevate our affections, O Lord, to nobler objects than those which are suited merely to animal nature! Teach us to keep under the body, and bring it into subjection (1 Cor. ix. 27.) that we may not finally be cast away from thy presence, and fall into that dreadful state where every drop of sinful pleasure will be recompensed with full vials of misery and despair!

SECT. XL.

Our Lord having thus vindicated the Mosaic law, proceeds, in his divine discourse on the mount, to caution his disciples against vain-glory in alms-deeds, prayer and fasting. Mat. VI. 1—18.

MAT. VI. 1.

SECT. XL. OUR Lord proceeding in his discourse to caution them against vain-glory, said unto Mat. VI. 1. them, Take heed in general, that you practise not your righteousness[a], or perform not any religious

MAT. VI. 1. TAKE heed that ye do not your alms before

[a] Practise not your righteousness.] As read δικαιοσυνην, righteousness, instead of some copies, and very ancient versions ελεημοσυνην, alms-deeds, and several of the fathers

SECT. IX.

Mat. VI. 1.

before men, to be seen of them: otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven.

religious action, in an ostentatious manner before men, making it your chief end to be viewed and admired by them: or otherwise if this caution be neglected, you will have no reward from your heavenly Father, who knows all the secret principles of your heart, and indispensably requires the greatest uprightness and sincerity there.

2. Therefore when thou doest thine alms, do not sound a trumpet before thee, as the hypocrites do, in the synagogues, and in the streets, that they may have glory of men: verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

2 The caution is so important that I shall illustrate it in various particulars. When therefore, for instance, thou performest [thine] alms-deeds, do not, as it were, sound a trumpet before thee, and make proclamation to all around to induce them to take notice of it; as it is customary for the hypocrites to do in the public assemblies [b], and in the streets, that acting their part as on an open theatre [c], they may be applauded of men who are the spectators of their liberality: verily I say unto you, That in this empty sound of human praise, they have their poor reward [d], and must expect no acceptance and recompence from God.

3 But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth:

3 But when thou art doing [thine] alms, use the utmost privacy; and, if it be possible, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand is doing [e], when it is stretched out to these charitable purposes;

fathers quote it so, I chuse, with Beza, to follow that reading; because it prevents the appearance of a tautology in the following words, and makes this verse a general and very proper introduction to the remaining part of the section, in which the caution is branched out into the particular heads of alms, prayer, and fasting. (See Dr. Mill. in loc.)—Nevertheless I by no means insist on the change: but if it be admitted, I cannot acquiesce in the criticism of a learned friend, who would explain righteousness as here signifying charity, or liberality; because, though I am well aware it has that signification sometimes (I think not so often as some have supposed,) yet admitting it here would destroy that beautiful variety between this and the following verse, which I have endeavoured to illustrate in the paraphrase, and which makes it so proper an introduction to this part of our Lord's sermon.

[b] In the public assemblies.] It is certain that the word συναγωγη may be taken in this extent; and though it is most probable it may even here refer to religious assemblies, yet we may recollect on this occasion that it is a known custom in the eastern nations to distribute alms when they are going to enter on public councils.—The phrase of sounding a trumpet before them seems only a figurative expression to represent their doing it in a noisy ostentatious way; as it is certain that to do a thing with the sound of a trumpet is sometimes used proverbially to express a public ostentation. See Elsner in loc.

[c] Acting their part as on an open theatre.] Erasmus and Beza very justly observe that δεδηνται in the verse before is a theatrical word; and υποκριται is well known to signify players disguised (as the Grecian actors used to be) in masks; not to say that the sounding of a trumpet may allude to the music of the stage. I have endeavoured to express this in the phrases here used in the paraphrase.

[d] They have their reward.] Sir Norton Knatchbull earnestly contends that απεχουσι τον μισθον αυτων ought to be rendered they fall short of their reward: but the word απεχω is plainly used in the sense in which our translators take it, Luke vi. 24. Philip. iv. 18. and Philemon. ver. 15. and it is with peculiar propriety that human applause is here called their reward, as being that which they chuse and seek. See Beza's elegant note on the words.

[e] Let not thy left hand know what thy right hand is doing.] It is said that the poor's chest stood on the right hand as they entered the synagogues, to which some suppose the words to allude. It is plainly a proverbial expression of strict care to conceal an action.

[f] Contrive

SECT. XI.

poses; and far from publishing it with vain affectation, conceal it, as far as may be, from thy nearest friends: That thine alms may be performed in secret; and thy Father who sees in secret, and knows every circumstance of your most retired actions, will himself be ready to honour and reward thee another day, and, that openly, before the assembled world.

Mat. VI. 4.

4 That thine alms may be in secret, and thy Father which seeth in secret, himself shall reward thee openly.

5 And, again, when thou prayest (as, if thou art my disciple indeed, thou often wilt,) thou shalt not be as the hypocrites, who discover on all occasions the vanity of their hearts; for even when performing their particular, and those that ought to be their secret devotions, they love to pray standing in the public assemblies in sight of numbers of people, and fixing them exactly to one constant hour, contrive to be catched, as it were, just at that sacred time[f]; not only in the common places of resort, but in the corners of the streets, where several ways meet; that they may thus be sure of being viewed by a great number of beholders: but howsoever, upon this account, they may indeed be admired of men, as persons of singular piety, yet verily I say unto you, That in this admiration of those that observe
6 them they have all their reward. But thou, O my disciple, whoever thou art, when thou prayest, and dost not intend it as a social exercise of devotion, withdraw from the sight and intercourse of men, and enter into thy closet, or any other retired apartment[g]; and having shut thy door, to prevent interruption, and exclude spectators, pray with a holy freedom of soul to thy Father who is with thee in secret; and thy Father, who always sees in secret as distinctly as in the most open scene of action will regard these addresses with peculiar pleasure, as the emotions of a pious and sincere heart; and will another

5 And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are; for they love to pray standing in the synagogues, and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men: verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

6 But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret, and thy Father which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

[f] Contrive to be catched at that sacred time.] Thus the late pious and eloquent Mr. Grove explains and finely illustrates this text in his Discourse on Secret Prayer, p. 3, 4. It is plain this custom still prevails among the Mahometans; as Pfeiffer has observed, Theolog. Mohammed. Oper. p. 848—974. and Bohovius in his Turkish Liturgy, § 1. See a remarkable illustration of it in Mr. Addison's Freeholder, No. 59.

[g] Enter into thy closet, or any other retired apartment.] Ταμιειον signifies closet, chamber, wardrobe, warehouse, or any other separate place; and Mr. Blair piously conjectures that Christ might use a word of such latitude that none might omit secret prayer for want of so convenient an apartment as they could wish to retire into. It will, I hope, be observed that many remarks of this kind proceed on a supposition that the Spirit of God directed the apostles in their writings to chuse such Greek words as most exactly corresponded to those in the Jewish language which Christ used.

h Do

another day reward thee openly for these duties which were so entirely referred to the views of honouring and pleasing him. SECT. xi.

Mat. VI. 7.

7 But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do; for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.

But when you pray, do not use a vain multiplicity of words[h], as it is usual for the heathens to do in the invocation of their deities; for they foolishly think they shall be heard in their addresses to them for their speaking much. Be not 8 ye therefore in this respect like them, since you are so much better instructed in the Divine nature than they, and cannot but know that your prayers are intended to affect your own hearts that they may be fit to receive blessings, and not to inform or work upon the heart of God: for your heavenly Father is ready to bestow his blessings on you, and always knows what you really want, even before you ask him; which therefore should teach you to avoid whatever may look like prescribing to him, by too minute and repeated a detail of particulars.

8 Be not ye therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him.

9 After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name:

Thus therefore pray ye, or to this effect at 9 least, and in this plain, concise and humble manner, if not in these very words: "Our Father, who art seated on a throne of glory in the highest heaven; while we bow before thine awful presence with the humblest reverence, we would nevertheless approach thee with filial confidence, as our bountiful and compassionate Parent; uniting our supplications to thee with hearts full of brotherly love, and asking for each other the blessings we seek for ourselves. We would so remember our relation to thee as to be above all things concerned for thy glory; and therefore make it our first petition, May thy illustrious name be sanctified! May the whole race of mankind, yea, the whole world of intelligent creatures pay their dutiful veneration to thy Divine Majesty[i] which thy matchless per- 10 fections so justly require! And for this purpose,

10 Thy kingdom come;

h Do not use a vain multiplicity of words, μη βαττολογησητε.] Beza has well explained the etymology of the word; and Dr. Hammond shews how applicable it was to the devotion of the Gentiles. (Compare 1 Kings xviii. 26. and Acts xix. 34.) It is plain that the Jews were running into the same fault, if we may judge by their oldest Liturgies. (See Le Clerc, in loc. and Selden, de Synedr. lib. i. cap. xii. p. 467, & seq.) And Dr. Wotton has illustrated the text so well, if it be considered as referring to them, that one could wish he had produced some better authorities than he has done for reading υποκριται rather than εθνικοι. See Wot. Misc. Vol. I. p. 186—188.

i That dutiful veneration to thy Divine Majesty] The name of God seems a phrase nearly answering to that of majesty when applied to an earthly sovereign; as Mr. Blair has justly observed. Serm. Vol. IV. p. 42.

SECT. XI.

Mat. VI. 10.

pose, may that thy kingdom, which thou art now introducing among men, more perfectly come[k]; may it be established with greater efficacy, be more clearly discovered, and more resolutely pursued! May thy will, always wise and always gracious, be done, as in heaven, so likewise upon earth; and may we mortals be taught to regard it with a resignation, acquiescence and obedience[l], resembling that of the heavenly spirits! And as for ourselves, O Lord, we would not seek the great things of life, we would not be anxious about its distant futurities, but humbly entreat thou wouldest open that bountiful hand on which we continually depend, and wouldest give us this day our daily bread[m], providing a competent supply for our present necessities, and teaching us to refer the rest to thy continual paternal care! And though we have in many respects been disobedient and ungrateful children, yet we beseech thee, O most compassionate Father, to forgive us our offences, whereby we stand chargeable, as it were, in thy book, with debts which we can never clear: yet do thou freely forgive them all, as we also desire to forgive our debtors, even all that have in any respect offended and injured us: yea, such pardon may we receive from thee, our God, as we are willing to impart to them[n]! And do not bring us into circumstances of pressing temptation, lest our virtue should be vanquished and our come: thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven:

11 Give us this day our daily bread:

12 And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors:

13 And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: for k More perfectly come.] It is reasonable to believe this petition had a sense peculiar to the period in which it was prescribed, and that we under this perfect revelation of the gospel cannot properly use it precisely with the same meaning: but so extensive a phrase may justly admit of other senses, at least by accommodation, as the Assembly's Catechism, with great propriety, illustrates it; and I believe there are few who decline the use of this prayer on this account, who do not often use scripture phrases with a much greater latitude.

l Resignation, acquiescence and obedience.] I have here joined their several expressions because I am not able certainly to determine which was most directly intended. There is a great deal of beauty and spirit in the interpretation which Mr. Addison gives of this petition: Spectat. Vol. III. No. 207.

m Our daily bread; τον αρτον ημων τον επιουσιον.] I can see no reason for changing our received translation; and cannot but acquiesce in Mr. Mede's remark that επιουσιος signifies what is sufficient for our present support and subsistence, as περιουσιος signifies abundant: so that this petition is nearly parallel to that of Agur, Prov. xxx. 8. (See Mede's Works, p. 125.) This is a most excellent lesson to teach us, on the one hand, moderation in our desires, and, on the other, an humble dependance on Divine Providence for the most necessary supplies, be our possessions or our abilities ever so great.

n Such pardon—as we are willing to impart to them.] It is hardly possible to imagine a more effectual expedient to promote the forgiveness of injuries than this, of making it a part of our daily prayer to ask such pardon from God as we impart to our offending brother. For in this circumstance every malicious purpose against him would turn this petition into an imprecation, by which we should, as it were, bind down the wrath and vengeance of God upon ourselves.

for thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

our souls endangered by them; but if we must be thus tried, do thou graciously rescue us from the power of the evil one [o], that he may not triumph in our sin and ruin! These things we know that thou canst do for thy children, and we are humbly bold to hope thou wilt do them for us: for thine is the kingdom of universal nature [p], and the fulness of almighty power, and the glory of infinite perfection; and to thee be the praise of all ascribed for ever. Amen. So may it be! We most sincerely and earnestly desire that thou mayest be glorified and our petitions heard and accepted."

SECT. xi.

Mat. VI. 13.

14 For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you.

Let this be the model of your prayers, for these are the most important blessings you can ask. And let me particularly charge you to remember the view and connection in which I have taught you to ask the pardon of your sins: for if you forgive men their offences, your heavenly Father will also forgive you, supposing that forgiveness to proceed from a truly religious principle: But if you do not forgive men their offences, but continue to cherish resentment and to seek revenge, neither will that God whom you call your heavenly Father, own you for his genuine offspring and forgive you your offences; but by using the petition I have now been prescribing, you will in effect bind down a curse upon yourselves.

14

15 But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.

15

16 Moreover, when ye fast, be not as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance; for they disfigure

I would also apply the general advice I before gave to fasting as well as to prayer; and would again exhort you, That when you keep a private fast (as I conclude my disciples will often do) you be not like the hypocrites, going about with a dejected melancholy face and putting on a dismal

16

o Rescue us from the evil one.] Ρυσαι ημας απο του πονηρου may literally be rendered thus. For this signification of ο πονηρος, see note h, p. 193.

p For thine is the kingdom, &c.] Though I am sensible there is some reason to doubt of the genuineness of this doxology, notwithstanding all that Mr. Jones (in his History of the Canon, Vol. I. p. 141, 142) has urged in its defence. (See Dr. Mill in loc. and Mr. Hallet in his Notes on Scripture, Vol. I. p. 133, & seq.) Yet it is certainly very ancient; and, as Bishop Hopkins, Mr. Blair, and other excellent writers have well observed, so admirably suits and enforces every preceding petition, that I could not persuade myself to omit it. And I hope the learned reader will excuse me, if, in matters of moment, I sometimes seem over cautious of omitting some passages which are indeed wanting in many ancient manuscripts, and omitted by some celebrated commentators, ancient as well as modern. I apprehend I shall have done my part, in thus hinting at the doubt which learned men have entertained concerning them, where I conceive the reasons for such doubt to be considerable. For the word amen, as it signifies truth, see note g on John i. 51, p. 129. When added to the conclusion of our prayers it is intended to express the sincerity and earnestness with which we desire the blessing we ask, with some cheerfulness of hope as to the success of our petitions.

q Emaciate,

SECT. XI.

mal air; for upon these occasions they emaciate, contract and deform their countenances [q], that by their sad and mournful looks they may appear Mat. VI. 16. to men to fast, and may be esteemed as persons of unusual mortification and holiness: verily I say unto you, That, in this notice that is taken of them by their fellow creatures, they have all their reward, and have not any to expect from 17 God. But thou, O my disciple, when thou keepest such a fast, and comest from thy devout retirement, dress thyself just as thou dost at other times; anoint thy head with oil, and wash thy 18 face [r], instead of fouling it with ashes; That thou mayest not appear to men as one that fasteth, but only to thy Father who is in secret; and thy Father who sees in secret, and observes what passes in retirement, as the surest test of men's true characters, will not fail to reward thee openly for thy genuine and unaffected devotion.

disfigure their faces, that they may appear unto men to fast: verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

17 But thou, when thou fastest, anoint thine head, and wash thy face:

18 That thou appear not unto men to fast, but unto thy Father which is in secret, and thy Father which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. 1 LET us learn from these repeated admonitions of our blessed 15, 16 Redeemer what is the only acceptable principle of every religious action; namely, a desire to approve ourselves to God in it: and let us particularly bring it into the instances in which it is here recommended.

2, 6 Our Lord takes it for granted that his disciples would be both charitable and devout. Let us cultivate both these branches of the Christian temper and avoid ostentation in both; as remembering the day approaches when every one of us must be made manifest in his true character before the tribunal of Christ. And, oh, what discoveries will then be opened upon the world! How many specious masks will be plucked off, that the hypocrite's character may appear in its native deformity! And, on the other hand, how many secret acts of piety and benevolence, which have been industriously concealed from human observation, will then shine forth q Emaciate, contract and deform their countenances.] I know not any word in our language which exactly answers to αφανιζουσι in this connection. It is rendered corrupt in ver. 20, (compare Acts xiii. 41. Heb. viii. 13. and James iv. 14.) and properly signifies to change, spoil and consume; and is with peculiar elegance applicable to such an alteration of the natural countenance as proceeded from their emaciating themselves, and contracting their faces into a dismal form. The learned author of Fortuita Sacra, p. 18—22, has rendered it unnecessary for me to add any thing more on this or the following verse.

r Anoint thy head with oil, and wash thy face.] This was usual among the Jews, not only at feasts, but at other times; compare Ruth iii. 3. 2 Sam. xiv. 2. and Judith xvi. 8. On the other hand dust and ashes were often used in times of deep mourning, or public fasting, which must sadly deform the countenance; see 2 Sam. xiii. 19. Esth. iv. 1, 3. Isa. lxi. 3. Dan. ix. 3. and Jonah iii. 6.

forth in all their glory, celebrated and rewarded by God himself, who sees in secret, and whose eye penetrates all the recesses of our houses and our hearts! SECT. XL.

Ver.

There may our praise and our portion be! In the mean time let us with humble pleasure obey the call of our Divine Master, and be often addressing our heavenly Father in such language as he hath taught us; entering for secret exercise of devotion into our closet and shutting our door, excluding (as far as possible) every thought which would interrupt us in these sacred and happy moments. From thence let our prayers daily come before the throne like incense, and the lifting up of our hands be as the morning and the evening sacrifice. (Psal. cxli. 2.) 18 6

Christ himself has condescended to teach us to pray. Attentive to his precepts, animated by his example and emboldened by his intercession, let us learn and practise the lesson. Shed abroad on our hearts, O Lord, thy Spirit of adoption, which may teach us to cry, Abba, Father! to draw nigh to thee with filial reverence and confidence and with fraternal charity for each other, even for the whole family, to whom thou graciously ownest the relation! Inspire us with that zeal for thy glory which may render the honour of thy name, the prosperity of thy kingdom and the accomplishment of thy will far dearer to us than any interest of our own! On thee may we maintain a cheerful dependance for our daily bread, and having food and raiment, be therewith content! (1 Tim. vi. 8) most solicitously seeking the pardon of our past sins and the influences of thy grace to preserve us from future temptations, or to secure us in them! And may our sense of that need in which we stand of forgiveness from thee, dispose us cordially to forgive each other, especially as thou hast wisely and graciously made this the necessary means of receiving our own pardon! Our corrupted hearts are too little disposed for these sentiments; but may God's almighty power produce and cherish them in us! and while the comfort is ours may all the glory be his, through Jesus Christ our Lord! Amen. 9, 13 14, 15

SECT. XLI.

Our Lord cautions his disciples against the love of the present world, and urges a variety of lively and convincing arguments to dissuade them from anxiety about the morrow. Mat. VI. 19. to the end.

MAT. VI. 19.

LAY not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth

MAT. VI. 19.

I WOULD also take this opportunity of cautioning you, my hearers, against that covetous temper which the Pharisees are so ready to indulge (compare Luke xvi. 14. and Mat. xxiii. 14.) SECT. XLI. Mat. VI. 19.

SECT. xli.

14.) and therefore add, Do not make it your great care to lay up for yourselves treasures here on earth, where so many accidents may deprive you of them; where the moth, for instance, may spoil your finest garments, and a devouring canker may consume your corn, or may corrupt the very metals you have hoarded [a]; and where thieves may dig through the strongest walls that you have raised about them, and may steal them away. But build your happiness on a nobler and more certain foundation, and store up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where none of these accidents can happen; where neither moth nor canker can consume them, and where thieves cannot break in, nor steal them away; but the arms of Everlasting Power and Love shall secure you from every calamity and invasion.

Mat. VI. 19.

20

The influence which this advice will have on your whole conduct should engage you to attend more diligently to it; for where that which you account your chief treasure is, there will your heart also be, and thither will the tendency and series of your actions be referred. See therefore that you form a right judgment on so important an article and do not over-value the world and its enjoyments. For as the eye is the lamp of the whole body; and therefore, on the one hand, if thine eye be clear [b], and free from any vitiating humour, thy whole body will be full of light; But, on the other hand, if thine eye be distempered, thy whole body will be full of darkness: so it is with respect to the practical judgment you form as to the worth of earthly and heavenly enjoyments. If therefore the light that moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal:

21

22

23

20 But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven; where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through, nor steal.

21 For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

22 The light of the body is the eye: if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light.

23 But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness: if therefore the light that is in thee a Canker may consume your corn, or corrupt the very metals you have hoarded.] The word βρωσις is by some translated smut or weavel, and is supposed to signify any little insect that gets into corn and eats it. Mr. Blair seems to understand it so, and thinks our Lord here refers to clothes, grain and gold, as the chief treasures respectively obnoxious to moth, smut and thieves; which may seem the more probable, as a different word ιος, is used for rust, Jam. v. 3. But as βρωσις properly signifies any thing that eats into another substance, I rather chose to render it canker, which has much the same ambiguity; and to paraphrase it in a manner including both the senses.

b If thine eye be clear, &c.] Some commentators have explained this as if our Lord intended here to urge the practice of liberality, as what would have a great influence on the whole of a man's character and conduct; and suppose it illustrated by all those passages where an evil eye signifies a grudging temper, and a good eye a bountiful disposition (compare Deut. xv. 9. Prov. xxiii. 6. xxviii. 22. and xxii. 9. Heb.) and also by those texts in which simplicity is put for liberality, (Rom. xii. 8. and 2 Cor. viii. 2. ix. 11—13. Gr.) See Hammond, Whitby, L'Enfant, and Beausobre, in loc. But the sense given above appears most natural as well as most extensive.—I have rendered απλους clear, rather than single, as less ambiguous, and with more evident propriety applied to the eye: it is opposed to an eye overgrown with a film, which would obstruct the sight.

c God

thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!

that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness! and if the maxims you lay down to yourselves are wrong, how very erroneous must your conduct be! SECT. xii. Mat. VI. 23.

24 No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

And do not impose upon yourselves so far as 24 to imagine that your hearts can be equally divided between heaven and earth: for as no man can serve two masters whose interests and commands are directly contrary to each other; but will quickly appear, either comparatively to hate the one, and love the other; or, by degrees, at least, will grow weary of so disagreeable a situation, so as to adhere entirely to the one, and quite neglect and abandon the other: so you will find you cannot at the same time serve God and mammon[c], that unworthy idol to which so many are devoting their hearts and their pursuits.

25 Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?

And I would charge you therefore to take heed 25 that your affections be not engaged in a service so inconsistent with religion and true happiness; and in particular, I say unto you[d], Be not distressed with anxious cares about your subsistence in life[e] what you shall eat, and what you shall drink, when your present stock of provisions is gone; nor with respect to your body, what you shall put on, when the garments you have are worn out. Is not life a better and more valuable gift than food, and the body than raiment? And if it be, why should you not trust that almighty and gracious Being who formed your bodies and inspired them with life, to maintain the work of his own hands?

You

[c] God and mammon.] Mammon is a Syriac word for riches, which our Lord beautifully represents as a person whom the folly of men had deified. It is well known the Greeks had a fictitious god of wealth; but I cannot find that he was ever directly worshipped in Syria under the name of mammon.

[d] Therefore I say unto you, &c.] A late writer, who takes upon him, by the strength of his own reason, to reject at pleasure what the apostles believed and taught, strangely complains of a want of connection between this and the preceding verse. But can there be any better reason assigned against immoderate anxiety than this, that such a subjection to mammon as this expresses is utterly inconsistent with the love and service of God?

[e] Be not anxious about your subsistence in life.] It is certain that the word μεριμναω generally signifies an excessive anxiety (see Luke x. 41. xii. 11. xxi. 34. and Phil. iv. and indeed almost every other place where it is used); which is agreeable to the derivation of it. There is no need therefore to say (as Archbishop Tillotson, Vol. II. p. 255, and Dr. Clarke in his Sermons, Vol. III. p. 116, & seq. do) that our Lord only addresses this to his apostles, who were to cast themselves on an extraordinary Providence, without being any wise concerned themselves for their support. Mr. Blair has well proved the contrary at large in his excellent Appendix to his fourth Sermon, Vol. I. p. 55, & seq. and it is easy to observe that the arguments our Lord urges contain nothing peculiar to their case, but are built on considerations applicable to all Christians; compare Phil. iv. 6. and 1 Pet. v. 7. as also Luke xxii. 35, 36. and Acts xx. 34. from whence it appears that the apostles themselves were not entirely to neglect a prudent care for their own subsistence in dependence on miraculous provisions.

[f] The

SECT. XLI.

Mat. VI. 26.

You may surely do it when you reflect on his care of the inferior creatures. Look on the birds of the air, for instance, that are now flying around you[f]: for though they are gay and cheerful to a proverb, yet do they neither sow nor reap: nor do they, like some other animals, gather a stock of food into hoards, to lay up for winter; and yet the rich providence of your heavenly Father plentifully feedeth them; and are not you, his children, much more valuable in his sight than they? as well as much better furnished with means of providing for yourselves[g]? Why then should you at any time suspect his 27 care? And after all, this immoderate carefulness is useless, as well as unnecessary; for which of you can, by [all his] anxiety, add to his age or vigour[h] so much as one cubit, or even the smallest measure or moment beyond what God shall appoint? Nay, it is much more probable you should rather impair than strengthen your constitution by indulging such a temper, which sometimes brings on grey hairs and death before their time.

26 Behold the fowls of the air, for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them: are not ye much better than they?

27 Which of you by taking thought, can add one cubit unto his stature?

28 And as for raiment, why are ye anxious [about that?] Observe not only the animal, but what is yet much lower, the vegetable part of the creation; and particularly, consider there the lillies of the field, how they grow; they toil not to prepare the materials of their covering, nor 29 do they spin or weave them into garments: Yet I say unto you, That even the magnificent Solomon in all his royal glory, when sitting on his throne of ivory and gold, (1 Kings x. 18.) was not arrayed in garments of so pure a white[i], and of such

28 And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lillies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin:

29 And yet I say unto you, That even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.

[f] The birds of the air now flying around you.] It is not so proper to render πέτεινα fowls, as that word generally signifies the larger kind of birds, and especially those under the care of men. For mentioning the birds, as then in their sight, see the latter part of note o on Mat. v. 14. p. 203.

[g] Are you not much more valuable than they, as well as much better furnished with means of providing for yourselves?] Οὐκ ὑμεῖς μᾶλλον διαφέρετε αὐτῶν; may be rendered Have not you greatly the advantage of them? which may refer to men's being capable of sowing, reaping and gathering into barns, which the birds are not: and though I rather prefer the former sense, I thought it not improper to hint at the other; as I have done in many other places where such ambiguities have occurred.

[h] Can add to his age.] It is well known that this is frequently the signification of the word ἡλικια; there being many places where it is evident that it is used for age (as John ix. 21, 23. and Heb. xi. 11.) and certainly it makes the best sense here; for it is seldom found that persons are solicitous about growing a cubit taller.—I confess a cubit of age is not a common phrase among us, though an inch of time be sometimes used; and in this view, had I rendered cubit by moment, as a learned friend who remarked on this passage advised, it would have been very justifiable.

[i] Was not arrayed in garments of so pure a white.] As the eastern princes were often clothed in white robes, and they were generally counted a magnificent apparel (compare Esth. viii. 15. and Dan. vii. 9.)

I think

such curious workmanship as one of these lillies presents to your view. And if God so clothe the grass of the field, and shelters and adorns the flower[k] that grows wild amongst it, which is [flourishing] to-day, and perhaps to-morrow is thrown into the furnace or the still[l], [will he] not much more [clothe] you, his servants and his children, O ye of little faith? that you should be so diffident as to distrust his care, or in the least to doubt of it!

30 Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?

31 Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or what shall we drink? or wherewithal shall we be clothed?

Be not ye therefore any more distracted and torn in pieces (as it were) with anxious and unbelieving thoughts, saying, What shall we eat, or what shall we drink? How is it we shall be provided for, or what shall we wear, in the remainder of our lives? (For it is really beneath your character as my disciples, thus to distress yourselves on this account: the heathen, who are strangers to the promises of God's covenant and to the hopes of his glory, do indeed seek after all these things: and it is no wonder that their minds are taken up with them: but you have greater business to employ you, and higher hopes to animate and encourage you;) for you may be assured that as your heavenly Father knows that you need all these things while you dwell in the body, he will not fail to provide them for you. 31 32

32 (For after all these things do the Gentiles seek:) for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things.

But I exhort you that you turn your cares into a nobler channel and seek, in the first place, and with the greatest earnestness and concern, the kingdom of God and his righteousness[m]; 33

33 But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and labouring

I think it more natural to explain the words thus (as Calmet does in his Dissert. Vol. II. p. 230), than to suppose with Ray (on the Creation, p. 107), that χρινα signified tulips of various colours, or a purple kind of lily. Some have indeed quoted Cant. v. 13. in support of the last interpretation; but that text may refer to the fragrancy of those flowers, rather than their hue.

k Shelters and adorns the flower.] The word αμφιεννυσιν, which we render clothe properly expresses the putting on a complete dress that surrounds the body on all sides; and is used with peculiar beauty for that elegant yet strong external membrane, which (like the skin in the human body) at once adorns the tender structure of the vegetable, and likewise guards it from the injuries of the weather. Every microscope in which a flower is viewed affords a lively comment on this text.

l Is thrown into the furnace or the still.] I apprehend that this may be as properly the signification of the word κλιβανον as oven, and that the sense will thus appear to be more easy; for it can hardly be supposed that grass or flowers should be thrown into the oven the day after they are cut down; unless it was the custom to heat their ovens with new hay, which seems not very natural. Elsner indeed renders χορτον stubble; but that seems not to suit the context.

m The kingdom of God, and his righteousness.] By righteousness Dr. Sykes here understands the Messiah; the righteous Branch who was to rule in righteousness, and in whose days the righteous were to flourish, (see Dr. Sykes on Christianity, p. 35, 36): But it seems more natural to interpret it of that way of becoming righteous which the gospel proposes, and which St. Paul, labouring to secure an interest in the promises of the gospel yourselves, and to promote its reception among others, that by submitting to

SECT. XII.

Mat. VI. 33. the righteousness of God you may be thus accepted as righteous before him: in that you will be sure of success; and as for all these little things of which I have now been speaking, they shall be added to you over and above[n], and, as it were, thrown in amidst a crowd of far more 34 valuable blessings. And therefore, while you faithfully attend to this, be not anxious even for the morrow, and much less for future years; for indeed the morrow shall provide for itself; that Providence which hath taken care of you formerly, shall send in new supplies and suggest new expedients, as new necessities and difficulties require them: and, in the mean time, you need not anticipate future trials; for without such an addition, sufficient for the present day [is] the evil of it, and it is well if you have wisdom and grace proportionable even to that.

and all these things shall be added unto you.

34 Take therefore no thought for the morrow; for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself: sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. How kind are these precepts of our blessed Redeemer! the sub-34 stance of which is indeed but this, Do thyself no harm. Let us not be so ungrateful to him and so injurious to ourselves, as to 31, 32 harrass and oppress our minds with that burden of anxiety which he has so graciously taken off. Every verse and clause we have been reading speaks at once to the understanding and the heart. We will not therefore indulge these unnecessary, these useless, these mischievous cares; we will not borrow the anxieties and 34 distresses of the morrow to aggravate those of the present day: but rather will we cheerfully repose ourselves on that heavenly Father who knows that we need these things, and has given us life, which 25 is more than meat; and the body, which is more than raiment; and thus instructed in the philosophy of our heavenly Master will 26, 28 learn a lesson of faith and cheerfulness from every bird of the air and every flower of the field.

Let the Gentiles that know not God perplex their minds with unworthy suspicions, or bow them down to the ignoble servitude of by a phrase exactly equivalent to this, calls the righteousness of God. Compare Rom. x. 3. and Phil. iii. 9.

[n] Added over and above.] This seems to be the exact import of the word προστεθησεται, than which expression nothing could have been more proper; for these temporal blessings are by no means essential to the stipulations of the covenant of grace, but are entirely to be referred to the Divine good pleasure to add or with-hold as God shall see fit. Compare 1 Kings iii. 11—13.

[a] Place

of mammon, that base rival of our living Jehovah: but we, far from desiring to share our hearts and our services between two such contrary masters, will cheerfully devote them to him, whose right to them is so infinitely beyond all room for any contest. Let us take heed and beware of covetousness, and make it our business not to hoard up earthly and corruptible treasures, but first seek the kingdom of God and his righteousness: so shall other things be added for present subsistence; and so shall we lay up in store an incorruptible treasure in heaven, in which we shall be rich and happy, when the riches of this world are consumed with their owners, and the whole fashion of it is passed away. SECT. XLI. Ver. 24, 19, 20, 33

While these divine maxims are spreading their light about us, let our eye be clear to behold them, and our heart open to receive them; and let us cautiously guard against those deceitful principles of action which would give a wrong bias to all our pursuits, and turn the light which is in us into a fatal and incurable darkness. 22, 23

SECT. XLII.

Our Lord proceeds in his discourse to caution his disciples against rash judgment, and to exhort them to impartiality, prudence, prayer and resolution; and warns them against seducers. Mat. VII. 1—20.

Mat. VII. 1. JUDGE not, that ye be not judged.

Mat. VII. 1.

YOU, my disciples, live in a very censorious age, and the scribes and Pharisees, who are in the highest esteem for the strictness of their lives, place a great part of their own religion in condemning others[a]; but see to it that you do not judge those about you in this rigorous and severe manner, nor pass such uncharitable censures upon them, that you may not yourselves be judged with the like severity. For in this respect you will find, that according to the judgment with which you judge others, you shall be judged; and by that very measure that ye mete to them, it shall be measured back to you: God and man will make great allowances to the character of the candid and benevolent; but they must expect "judgment without mercy who have shewed no mercy;" nor can they deny the equity of such treatment. (Jam. ii. 13.) SECT. XLIII. Mat. VII. 1. 2

2 For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

The

a Place a great part of their own religion in condemning others.] Though Christ does not so directly level his discourse against the Pharisees in this chapter as in the two foregoing, he seems to glance upon them in this and other expressions which he uses in it. That they were very culpable on this head appears from such passages as Luke xviii. 9—14. xvi. 14, 15. and John vii. 47—49. (Compare Isa. lxv. 5.) Their unjust censures of Christ are the strongest instances of it that can be conceived.

SECT. XLII.

Mat. VII. 3.

The caution I have mentioned is more apparently necessary, considering how prone men are to be partial to themselves: but why dost thou, whoever thou art, look at that little infirmity which is but like a mote in thy brother's eye, while thou observest not the much greater fault which 4 is like a beam in thine own eye[b]? Or how canst thou say to thy brother, with any appearance of justice, or any degree of assurance, Hold still, [and] I will take the mote out of thine eye[c]; while behold, it is much more visible that [there is] a 5 beam in thine own eye? Thou partial hypocrite, begin thy reformation at home, and make it thy first care to clear out the beam from thine own eye, or to correct the errors of thy judgment and the enormities of thy life; and then wilt thou better discern [how] to remove the mote out of thy brother's eye, and mayest attempt it with more decency, as well as greater probability of success.

6 I would farther remind you that how unexceptionable soever your own characters may be, there is some caution to be used in attempting to reprove, or even to inform others; or you may expose your admonitions to contempt and yourselves to abuse. Give not that holy [food] to dogs, or to such profane, furious and persecuting wretches as deserve no better name; nor cast your precious pearls of heavenly wisdom before such profligate sensualists as resemble swine rather than men; lest, as those brutal creatures might do, if jewels were thrown before them, they trample them under their feet with scorn, and turning [upon you] as if they had received an injury rather than a favour, fasten on you and tear you[d]: for so extremely sordid and malignant

3 And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

4 Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye; and behold, a beam is in thine own eye?

5 Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.

6 Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine; lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you.

b Look at a mote in thy brother's eye, while thou observest not the beam in thine own eye.] Dr. Lightfoot (Hor. Heb. in loc.) has shewn that this expression, as well as that in ver. 2, was a proverb among the Jews. The word καρφος, which we render mote, is well explained by Hesychius, who tells us it signifies a little splinter of wood (though others understand it of a small seed;) and thus it is opposed to δοκος, a large beam, with great propriety. But as it is impossible that such a thing as a beam of wood should be lodged in the eye, I am ready to imagine that these words might signify different kinds of distempers to which that tender part is subject; the former of which might be no more, in comparison of the latter, than a grain or splinter to a beam.

c Hold still [and] I will take the mote out of thine eye.] This seems to be the exact meaning of αφες εκβαλω, which I chose to translate thus literally, as I think it elegantly intimates how ready men are to shrink back from reproof. The simile here used implies that it is as absurd for a bad man to set up for a reprover of others, as it would be for one that is almost blind himself to pretend to perform operations on other men's eyes.

d And turning [upon you] tear you.] I cannot blame the translation of 1727, which follows Castalio, and renders it lest these (that is, the swine) trample them under foot, and those (that is, the dogs) turn upon you and tear you. This may perhaps be our Lord's meaning, but it did not seem necessary lignant will you find many in these degenerate days. SECT. xlii.

7 Ask, and it shall be given you: seek, and ye shall find: knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

Now, whether you want wisdom to guide you in these difficulties, or fortitude to animate you against such hardships; or, in a word, whatever your exigencies or necessities may be, ask the Divine assistance in prayer, and it shall be given you; seek it, and you shall find it; and if it be a while delayed, knock with repeated importunity at the door of mercy, and it shall at length be graciously opened to you. To this you are encouraged by the experience of every praying soul; for every one that asketh aright receiveth; and he that diligently seeketh, findeth; and to him that patiently knocketh, [the door] shall be opened. Mat. VII. 7.

8 For every one that asketh receiveth: and he that seeketh findeth: and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened.

9 Or what man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone?

And indeed[e] it is no inconsiderable encouragement which you may derive from that natural affection to your offspring which a merciful God has infused into the hearts of those of you that are parents; for what one man is there among you[f], in all this numerous assembly, who, if his son should ask him for bread, will give him a stone? Or if he ask him for a fish, will give him a serpent? Can you imagine any father could be so unnatural as to deny the necessary supplies of life to his hungry child; and instead of these to give him what would starve or poison him? If therefore you, imperfect and evil as you are, and some of you perhaps tenacious, froward and unkind, yet know how to give good gifts to your chil-

10 Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent?

11 If ye then being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more nessary to alter the version, as it is possible that dogs might trample upon jewels, and swine might be ready to wound those that disturbed them.—That the figure here supposed is sometimes used does indeed appear by comparing Mat. xii. 22. 1 Cor. xi. 11. 2 Cor. ii. 15. and Philem. ver. 5. But I think the order of the words as they stand in the original may very well be retained in the translation of these places; for the transposition of words, even where there is a trajection in the sense, is so dangerous a thing where sacred writers are in question, that no small advantage gained in elegance or perspicuity seems sufficient to counterbalance it.

[e] And indeed.] Dr. Whitby thinks that where the particle η is placed at the beginning of a sentence it is intended merely for a mark of interrogation; and in this way it is that he supposes we are to understand it here, and likewise in Mat. xx. 15. and 1 Cor. xiv. 36. But as the sense will very fitly bear it, I conceive that in each of these places it may be rendered indeed.

[f] What one man is there among you?] This seems to be the emphasis of τις εστιν εξ υμων ανθρωπος: some think it also to imply the same as if it had been said, Which of you is there, though but a man? And as what is added in the eleventh verse plainly expresses this sense, perhaps it might also be intended here.—Young preachers will, I hope, observe how much life and force it adds to these discourses of our Lord that they so closely are directed, through the whole of them, as an immediate address to his hearers; and are not loose and general harangues, in the manner of those essays which are now grown so fashionable in pulpits. If any are grown too polite to learn true oratory from Christ, I wish they would at least learn it from Demosthenes, who, I doubt not, would have admired the eloquence of this sermon.

SECT. XLII.

Mat. VII. 11.

children; if you find your hearts disposed and ready to communicate the best of what you have for their relief and sustenance, how much more will your almighty and all-bountiful Father in heaven, who has a perfect sight of all your wants, and can with perfect ease supply them, and who himself has wrought into your hearts these benevolent affections, be ready to exceed you in expressing his kindness, so as freely to give good things to those that ask them of him by fervent and constant prayer?

more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?

12 Being animated therefore by his goodness[g], study to express your gratitude for it by your integrity and kindness to your fellow-creatures; and take it as a most sacred rule, All things which ye would be willing that men should do to you, do ye also in like manner to them: treat them in every instance just as you would think it reasonable to be treated by them, if you were in their circumstances, and they in yours: for this is, in effect, a summary and abstract of all the human and social virtues recommended in the moral precepts of the law and the prophets; and it was one of the greatest ends of both[h] to bring men to this equitable and amiable temper.

12 Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law, and the prophets.

13 It will indeed be very difficult thus to overcome the prejudices of self-love, and to subdue those other corruptions of the heart which oppose themselves to the obedience of the Divine laws; and the persecutions to which good men are often exposed will increase the difficulty[i]: but I would

13 Enter ye in at the

[g] Being animated therefore by his goodness.] Some would have us to consider the particle ουν in this passage as a mere expletive; but there is certainly a force in the connection beyond what most have observed. See the excellent discourses of Bishop Atterbury and Dr. Evans upon it; which illustrate the sense, reasonableness and use of this golden law, in a manner that deserves the most attentive perusal.

[h] One of the greatest ends of both.] I say one of the greatest, that this may be reconciled with our Lord's declaring the love of God to be the first and great commandment (Mat. xxii. 38,) and it is indeed a most absurd and fatal error to imagine that the regulation of social life is the only end of religion. I fear many good-natured deists will perish by taking this one principle for granted, and my heart is wounded with the sad apprehension of it.

[i] Persecutions—will increase the difficulty.] In order to reconcile what is here advanced with those passages which assert Christ's yoke to be easy, and the ways of wisdom to be ways of pleasantness, &c. a late learned writer thinks it necessary to suppose that this text refers entirely to the case of persecution; and that the strait gate is a violent death, which lay at the end of the narrow way, and concluded the injuries and calamities which persecutors would bring upon Christians. (See Mr. Hallet's Disc. Vol. III. p. 24—29.) But nothing is more certain than that Christ requires from all his disciples, in all ages and places, a life of mortification and self-denial; which, though it is mingled with and introductory to pleasures abundantly sufficient to counterbalance it, yet to corrupt nature is difficult and painful; (see Mat. v. 29, 30. xvi. 24. Rom. vi. 6. viii. 13. Col. iii. 5. Gal. v. 16, 17. and 1 Cor. ix. 26, 27. However, therefore, I allow that persecutions are to be included among other difficulties, yet I can see no reason to believe that martyrdom was the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction; and many there be which go in thereat:

SECT. lxii.

Mat. VII. 13.

would press you to exert a becoming resolution, and courageously to enter in through the strait gate of self-denial and holiness; for wide is the gate, and smooth and spacious the way which leads to destruction; and there are many who enter into destruction by it: And this they do

14 Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life; and few there be that find it.

14 because they are discouraged by the hardships which attend the entrance on a religious life, or must be expected in a progress in it; as they see that strait is the gate, and rugged and painful the way which leads to eternal life; and they who find it, and with a holy ardency and resolution press into it, so as to arrive at that blessed end, are comparatively few: see to it, therefore, that you be of that little number.

15 Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves.

15 And it concerns you so much the rather to be careful about it, as the falsehood of many who set up for religious teachers will in some degree increase the difficulty and danger. Be therefore on your guard against those false prophets, who come to you indeed in the clothing of sheep[k], in the most specious forms of humility, innocence and piety; but inwardly are ravening wolves, which seek nothing but to feed themselves by the destruction of the flock. And you will find on a more accurate observation of their actions, that you may generally know them by their fruits[l], and was so common in the age of those to whom Christ addressed himself, as to be spoken of in such general language as the gate leading to life: not to insist upon it that our Lord now speaks of what then was, and not what would be the case in future years; and that he mentions the gate before the way; whereas I think Mr. Hallet's interpretation would have required a different order.—When Grotius refers the straitness of the gate to the difficulty of virtue in itself, and the ruggedness of the way to accidental oppositions, he seems to refine too much. Many parallel passages from heathen writers may be seen in him and Dr. Whitby.

16 Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do

[k] Who come to you in the clothing of sheep.] It is a very low thought to suppose that our Lord here refers to the rough habit worn by false prophets of old; for which purpose so many critics quote Zech. xiii. 4. and, very unaccountably, Heb. xi. 37. For, not to insist on the probability there is that those rough garments might be made of goat's or camel's hair rather than wool, (compare 2 Kings i. 8. and Mat. iii. 4.) the beauty of the simile is lost by this interpretation. A wolf in sheep's clothing is grown into a proverb for a wicked man that makes a great profession of religion, yet cannot dissemble so well as not to be discovered by attentive observation; which was just the character of the Pharisees in our Saviour's days; see Mat. xxiii. 23—28. and Luke xi. 39—42.

[l] You may know them by their fruits.] The characters of men are not to be discovered by the doctrines that they teach; and therefore this cannot (as some have thought) be the meaning of knowing them who were their teachers by their fruits. It is more reasonable to explain it of their actions, which are often called fruits; (compare Mat. iii. 8. xxi. 43. John xv. 2, 5. and Col. i. 6)—It will be objected that bad men may teach good doctrines, and even the worst have been known to do it in some instances. But as to this, I answer that our Lord does not exhort his disciples to reject whatever such men taught, but only to be upon their guard against them, that they might not credit any thing merely on their authority.—I only add that this caution would, by a parity of reason, extend to all that set up for teachers, as well as to prophets (not to insist on the latitude in which that word is used;) so that it would at and discover, through all their disguise, that base character which lurks beneath, and which may justly render you suspicious as to their doctrines: (2 Tim. iii. 5—9.) For do men look to gather grapes from thorns, or figs from thistles[m]? Or can it be expected by you, in a common way, that you should gather spiritual advantage, or should obtain religious improvement from the lessons of wicked men? Their influence, on the whole, will be more likely to debauch than edify your minds; for as the fruit will be agreeable in its nature and kind to the tree that produces it, even so every good tree produces good fruit, but a corrupt tree produces bad fruit; and in like manner will the fruits that men produce be answerable to the habitual frame and disposition of their hearts. Nor can it indeed be otherwise in the usual course of things; for as a good tree cannot bear evil fruit, so neither can a corrupt tree bear good fruit; (compare Mat. xii. 33—35. sect. lxii.) And therefore, by the way, to prevent such false pretenders to religion from being a lasting incumbrance and mischief, they shall assuredly be overtaken by the righteous judgment of God; and as you see that every tree which, after a competent trial, beareth not good fruit, how fair and flourishing soever it may seem, is cut down and cast into the fire; such too will be the end of hypocritical professors and ungodly men, which it becomes you all seriously to consider. Upon the whole it will be found that there is now a difference in men's characters correspondent to the great difference to be made in their future estate; so that I had reason to say, that you shall generally know them by their fruits; the disguise will fall off in an unguarded moment, and it will be your wisdom to observe and improve the signal.

SECT. XLII.

Mat. VII. 16.

Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?

17 Even so, every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit.

18 A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit; neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

19 Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit, is hewn down and cast into the fire.

20 Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.

IMPROVE-

at least obliquely glance on the Pharisees, whose influence over the people was so injurious to the gospel, and so exceeding mischievous to those who had a veneration for them, that our Lord found it necessary often to repeat such cautions. See Mat. xv. 12, 13. xvi. 6. xxiii. 2, &c. seq. Mark. viii. 15. and Luke xii. 1.

[m] Do men gather grapes from thorns, or figs from thistles?] These words suppose the plant was known to be a thorn or a thistle, and represent the folly of looking for grapes or figs from plants that had it not in their nature to bear them, or of expecting good from persons that were vicious and corrupt. Had Christ meant what has commonly been suppo-ed, he would rather have said, You do not find thorns on a vine, or thistles on a fig-tree.

IMPROVEMENT.

SECT. xlii.

When will the happy time come in which Christians shall form themselves on these important maxims of their great Master! When shall they be known to be his disciples by the candour of their sentiments, the equity of their conduct and the beneficence of their actions, as well as by the articles of their faith and the forms of their worship! Let us all apply these charges to ourselves in the dear and awful name of him that gave them. Ver.

What can be more dreadful to us than to think of being severely judged by that God, without whose hourly forbearance and gracious indulgence we are all undone? Let us then exercise that mercy which we need: and to form our minds to this most reasonable temper, let us often be thinking of our own many infirmities, and be humbling ourselves before God on account of them. 1, 2 3, 5

Animated by the gracious invitations and the precious promises which are here given, with earnest importunity let us make our daily addresses to his throne; asking, that we may receive; seeking, that we may find; and knocking, that the door of mercy may be opened to us. And while any of us feel in our hearts the workings of parental tenderness towards our infant offspring, let us consider it as a delightful emblem of yet greater readiness in our heavenly Father to pity and relieve his children. 7, 8 9, 11

May universal righteousness and charity be practised by us in the whole of our behaviour, and may we always exercise ourselves herein to have a conscience void of offence, both towards God and towards men! (Acts xxiv. 16.) May we avoid all manner of injustice and guard against the sallies of a proud and over-bearing temper! May we be upright and benevolent in all our conduct; and make it our constant care to govern our actions by that most equitable rule, Of doing to others as we would reasonably desire they should do to us, on a change of our circumstances and theirs! Happy those generous souls in whom the bias of self-love is so rectified, that they can, in this instance, hold the balance between themselves and others with an impartial and unwavering hand! 12

On the whole, let us remember that we ourselves are at last to be tried by the rule by which we are here directed to judge of others, even by the fruits which we produce. May God by his grace make the tree good, that the productions of it may be found to his glory and the refreshment of all around us, that we may not be cut down as cumberers of the ground, and cast into the fire! 20 17, 18 19

SECT. XLII.

The way of life, which our blessed Redeemer has marked out for us in such precepts as these, may indeed to corrupt nature appear rugged and narrow, and the gate strait through which we are to pass: but let us encourage ourselves against all the difficulties, by considering that immortal life and glory to which they infallibly lead. Then shall we, doubtless, prefer the most painful way of piety and virtue, though with yet fewer companions than we might reasonably expect, to all those flowery and frequented paths of vice which go down to the chambers of death.

Ver. 13 27

SECT. XLIII.

Our Lord concludes his sermon on the mount with a lively representation of the absolute necessity of a practical regard to his precepts. Mat. VII. 21, to the end.

MAT. VII. 21.

SECT. XLIII.

THESE are the precepts I thought proper to give you; and you must govern your lives by them, if ever you hope to find your account in the most diligent attendance on my ministry: for it is not every one who saith unto me, Lord, Lord, who is ready now in words to acknowledge me as his Master, or who at last, with the most passionate and earnest cries, entreats my mercy, that shall enter into the kingdom of heaven[a], and be admitted to the complete felicity in which the administration I am now opening shall finally terminate, but he only shall be entitled to that privilege, who conscientiously performs in the main series of his life the holy will of my Father who is in heaven.

Mat. VII. 21.

MAT. VII. 21.

NOT every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven: but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.

22 It will be your wisdom to attend to these things; for though you now see me in what may seem a mean and despicable form, the time will certainly come when I shall appear as the Universal Judge: and I now forewarn you, that many will say to me in that day, when their eternal state is to be determined, Lord, Lord, have we not been employed in distinguished offices in thy church, and been furnished for them even by miraculous endowments? and in pursuance of them, have we not taught and prophesied

22 Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not a Shall enter into the kingdom of heaven.] Here the kingdom of heaven must signify that of glory above; for calling Christ Lord, is the very circumstance which constitutes us the subjects of his earthly kingdom, or members of his visible church. Compare Mat. viii. 11. Luke xiii. 28. and 1 Cor. xv. 50.

b I never not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?

23 And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

24 Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock;

25 And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house: and it fell not, for it was founded upon a rock.

26 And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand;

27 And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house: and it fell, and great was the fall of it.

phesied in thy name? and in the authority of thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name have done many wonderful works? And, nevertheless, I will then openly declare unto them, I never knew you, or never approved of your character[b], even when you made the most florid profession[c]; and therefore depart from me, ye workers of iniquity[d]; and whatever you that hear me may now imagine, that separation from me will be their everlasting destruction. SECT. XIII. Mat. VII. 22. 23

Hear therefore the conclusion of the whole matter, and seriously attend to it. Every one, whoever he be, and how great soever his former irregularities may have been, who heareth these my words, and doeth them; or in the main course of his life governs his temper and his actions by them, lays a solid foundation for present comfort and everlasting security and joy: I will compare him therefore to a prudent man who built his house upon a firm rock; And the stormy rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew and beat with violence upon that house; and it fell not, for it was founded on a solid rock. And thus shall the good man's hopes be established, when they come, as all must come, to the strictest trial. But every one that heareth these my sayings, and doeth them not, how constantly soever he may attend them, and whatever zeal he may profess for them, may justly be compared to a foolish man, who, without any care to secure the foundation, built his house upon the sand; And the stormy rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew with a tempestuous violence, and struck directly on that house; and it fell at once, and its ruin was great and wide as the building had been: a lively emblem of the ruin which will another day overwhelm the unhappy man who trusts to an outward profession and form of godliness, when he does not sincerely and practically regard it. 24 25 26 27

And

[b] I never knew you, or never approved of your character.] The word knew is plainly used in this sense, Psal. i. 6. Mat. xxv. 12. 2 Tim. ii. 19. John x. 14. Rom. vii. 15. and perhaps 1 Cor. viii. 3.

[c] Even when you made the most florid profession.] This is a very remarkable circumstance that is strongly implied in the words, I NEVER knew you.

[d] Depart from me, ye workers of iniquity.] There is an incomparable dignity in this whole passage, which I have endeavoured a little to illustrate in the paraphrase. The poor despised Jesus not only calls God his Father, but speaks as the Eternal Judge before whom men should beg and plead for their very lives, dreading banishment from him as their final destruction.

SECT. xliii.

Mat. VII. 28.

And it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these excellent sayings[e], the multitudes that heard him were struck with amazement at his doctrine. For in this and his other sermons 29 he was still teaching them[f] as one that had a Divine authority to dictate in his own name, and not as the scribes, their established teachers; who generally contented themselves with quoting the name and authority of some celebrated doctors of the former age, and that frequently to confirm some trifling remark or useless ceremony of human device[g]: whereas the discourses of Christ were weighty and convincing and always delivered with an air of seriousness, dignity and majesty, becoming the great Prophet and King of his church, and the immediate Delegate from God to men.

28 And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at his doctrine.
29 For he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. 28 How justly may our admiration concur with theirs that heard these sayings of our Lord, while we have the honour and pleasure of attending these discourses as the inspired penmen have recorded them, by the assistance of that Spirit who was to bring all things to their remembrance! Are we not struck with the authority of this Divine Teacher, so as to bear our witness to the gracious and edifying words that proceeded out of his mouth? (Luke iv. 22.)

24--27 Let us not content ourselves with applauding what we have heard, but let us go away and practise it. Shortly will that stormy day arise which must try the foundation of our hopes. God will lay judgment to the line and righteousness to the plummet; and the hail shall sweep away the refuge of lies, and the waters shall overflow the hiding-place. How thankful should we be that God has laid in Zion for a foundation, a chief Corner-stone, elect and precious;

e When Jesus had finished these excellent sayings.] This plainly intimates that all this discourse was delivered at once, and consequently that several passages related by Luke, as spoken at different times, are repetitions of it; compare Mat. v. 3, &c. seq. with Luke vi. 20, &c. seq.—Mat. v. 13, with Luke xiv. 34, 35.—Mat. v. 25, with Luke xii. 58.—Mat. vi. 9, &c. seq. with Luke xi. 2, &c. seq.—Mat. vi. 20, 21. Luke xii. 33, 34. —Mat. vi. 24, with Luke xvi. 13.—Mat. vii. 1, &c. seq. with Luke vi. 37, &c. seq.— and Mat. vii. 12—14, with Luke xiii. 24.

f He was still teaching them.] Beza has well observed, that these words ην διδασκων refer to the continued course and general character of his teaching, of which this discourse is a noble specimen; indeed so glorious a one, that I persuade myself the reader will pardon my having paraphrased it in so copious a manner.

g To confirm some trifling remark, or useless ceremony of human device.] If we may judge of the teachings of the scribes in Christ's days, by the Jewish Talmuds, or even by their Mishnah, this was so eminently the character of it, that nothing could be more justly contemptible; and their frigid and insipid comments and lessons could no more be compared with those strains of Divine eloquence with which our Lord's discourses abounded, than a glow-worm can be compared to the sun.

precious; with an assurance, that he that believeth on him shall not be confounded! (Compare Isa. xxviii. 16. & seq. and 1 Pet. ii. 6.) But let every man take heed how he builds thereupon; lest the weight of his ruin be proportionable to the height of his hopes. (1 Cor. iii. 10.) SECT. XLIII. Ver. 27

We say unto Christ, Lord, Lord; but let us remember this will not secure our entering into his heavenly kingdom. Whatever be our profession, or whatever our office in his church, the most splendid and honourable of our works will be vain, if we are found workers of iniquity; for our great Master will then disown us as those whom he has never approved. Blessed Jesus! it will then be in vain to fly to thee with the importunity of prayer, and to repeat the most earnest addresses. We would now, while yet there is room for it, fall down before thee, entreating thee to add the teachings of thy Spirit to those of thy word, that we may be effectually engaged to do the will of thine heavenly Father, that we may finally be confessed and owned by thee and be admitted into the joy of our Lord! 21, 22, 23

SECT. XLIV.

Jesus descending from the mount, cleanses a leper who applied to him for a cure. Mat. VIII. 1—4. Luke V. 12—16. Mark I. 40, to the end.

MAT. VIII. 1.

WHEN he was come down from the mountain, great multitudes followed him.

LUKE V. 12. And it came to pass, when he was in a certain city, behold,

MAT. VIII. 1.

NOW when Jesus had finished this large and excellent discourse, as he was coming down from the mountain[a] on which he delivered it, great multitudes of people, impressed and charmed with what they had already heard, followed him to the town towards which he went, in hopes of farther instruction and edification. SECT. XLIV. Mat. VIII. 1.

And when he was just in the confines of a certain city[b], in the neighbourhood of that mountain, behold, Luke V. 12.

a As he was coming down from the mountain.] I think this a sufficient warrant for fixing this story where we introduce it; though it be contrary to the order in which many learned men have placed it. Neither Mark nor Luke are, in this respect, by any means so express in the connection of it. Yet an attentive reader will observe, that I have not in this instance transposed either of them. The erroneous opinion that Luke vi. contained the sermon on the mount, and fixed it to an order different from Matthew's, is that by which so many have been led into a mistake here. As Luke expresses it thus, I am apt to think it was not Capernaum, which Luke had so often named before; and consequently, that the mountain, on which Christ's sermon was delivered, lay at some distance from thence; whereas the plain, on which some of it was repeated, was contiguous to Capernaum, into which, as Luke says, he entered at the close of it; (see Luke vii. 1. sect. lv. and compare note b on Mat. v. 1. p. 199.)—I speak of the confines of this city, whatever it was; because lepers were not allowed to live in towns. Compare Numb. v. 2. 2 Kings vii. 3. 2 Chron. xxvi. 21. and Luke xvii. 12.

b In a certain city: εν μια των πολεων.]

SECT. xliv.

behold, a man full of leprosy, and dreadfully overrun with that sad disease, seeing Jesus, and having been informed of the many miraculous cures which he had done, came to him, most earnestly entreating him to have pity on his wretched case; and, first kneeling down to him, he then fell prostrate before him, and worshipped him, saying, Lord, though my distemper be to human power incurable, (2 Kings v. 7.) yet I know assuredly that, if thou wilt, thou canst cleanse me from it.

Luke V. 12.

behold, a man full of leprosy; who seeing Jesus, [MARK came to him, beseeching him; and kneeling down to him,] fell on his face, [MAT. and worshipped him;] saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. [MAT. VIII. 2. MARK I. 40.]

Mark I. 41.

And Jesus, pleased with so strong a degree of faith, performed the cure, and did it also in the most condescending manner; for, being moved with compassion at so melancholy a sight, he took him aside from the multitude [c], and stretched out his hand, and touched him, saying unto him, I will that thy petition be granted, and from this

MARK I. 41. And Jesus, moved with compassion, put forth his hand, and touched him, and saith unto him, I will, be thou clean. [MAT. VIII. 3. LUKE V. 13.—]

42 moment therefore be thou clean. And the almighty power of his commanding word immediately took place, and as soon as he had spoken, the leprosy departed from him; and it appeared by the alteration of his countenance that he was entirely cleansed from that loathsome and inveterate disease.

42 And as soon as he had spoken, immediately the leprosy departed from him, and he was cleansed.—[MAT. VIII. 3.—LUKE V. 13.—]

43 And Jesus had no sooner wrought this miracle, but having strictly charged him not to divulge the matter [d], he dispatched him presently away;

44 Saying unto him, as he departed from him, See that at present thou say nothing unto any one of my having performed this cure [e]; but make it thy first business

43 And he straitly charged him, and forthwith sent him away;

44 And saith unto him, See thou say nothing to any man; but

c He took him aside from the multitude.] Else I think there could have been no room for the charge of secrecy given below; and the supposition of such a circumstance, which certainly happened in another cure (compare Mark viii. 23, sect. lxxxviii.) will be a sufficient answer to the objections which Mr. Whiston has urged against following the order of St. Matthew here. See his Harmony, p. 107, and Jones's Vindication, p. 112—121.

d Having strictly charged him not to divulge the matter.] Some have supposed, that ἐμβριμησαμενος αυτω implies that Christ reproved him sharply for the sin for which he had been visited with this disease, and threatened him with the fatal consequence of it if he returned to sin again: and in this case, the probability of what we have supposed is strengthened, that this was spoken to him in private, and was delivered in the same manner as the like caution was which Christ afterwards gave to the impotent man. (Compare John v. 14, sect. xlvi.) But as the word is generally used to signify the giving of a strict injunction, or a solemn charge (as Phavorinus, Suidas and Hesychius, have explained it), I rather chuse to understand it of the strict charge that Christ gave to the leper not to divulge the manner of his cure, which is expressly mentioned in the following verse; and in which sense it is evident that the same word is used Mat. ix. 30, sect. lxxii. where the same charge is given to the two blind men that Christ restored to sight.

e See thou sayest nothing unto any one of my having performed this cure.] Christ probably designed by this, not only to avoid the shew of any ostentation of his miraculous power, but to prevent the malice of the priests; who might have been unwilling to pronounce this leper clean, and have been ready to deny the cure if they were told that he was healed by one they were so strongly prejudiced against; or might perhaps have censured Christ as having usurped an office that belonged to them, but go thy way, shew thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing those things, [MAT. the gift,] which Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them. [MAT. VIII. 4. LUKE V. 14.]

45 But he went out, and began to publish it much, and to blaze abroad the matter.—

LUKE V. 15. [And] so much the more there went a fame abroad of him; and great multitudes came together [to him from every quarter,] to hear, and to be healed by him of their infirmities. [MARK I. 45.]

MARK I. 45.—Insomuch, that Jesus could no more openly enter into the city, but was without in desert places.—

LUKE V. 16. And he withdrew himself into the wilderness, and prayed.

business to go directly to Jerusalem, and there shew thyself to the priest whose office it is legally to pronounce thee clean; and offer the gift of birds and lambs, [and] all those things which Moses has commanded for thy purification (Lev. xiv. 1—32), that it may be for a testimony to them that the cure is really perfected; and that, if I should ever be heard of as the author of it, they may see my regard even to the ceremonial precepts of the law. But such was the impression that was made upon the leper by so great an instance of Divine mercy to him, and he was so transported with joy at his miraculous deliverance, that he went out into the neighbouring country, and began to publish it much, and to proclaim the matter wherever he came. SECT. XLIV. Mark I. 44. 45

And the more Jesus avoided the ostentation of such works, so much the more there went a fame of him abroad through all the country; and great multitudes from all parts came together to him to hear him preach the gospel, and to be healed of their infirmities by him. Luke V. 15.

And after some interval of time, the resort to him was so great that he could no longer openly enter into the city without drawing a multitude of attendants after him, but was obliged for a while to be chiefly without in desert places. And, to avoid the interruptions of the crowd, he frequently withdrew into the wilderness, and prayed; chusing in these circumstances to spend some time in more than ordinary devotion, that he might engage a blessing on the truths he had so largely delivered and obtain that success which this eagerness of the people seemed to promise to his gospel. Mark I. 45. Luke V. 16.

IMPROVEMENT.

OUR souls are overspread with the leprosy of sin: and where should we apply for help but to the healing power and recovering grace of the great Redeemer! Be the malady ever so deep, spreading or inveterate, we may surely adopt the words of the leper before us, and say, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. Luke V. 12.

And

them, and taken upon him to pronounce a leprous person clean. Christ therefore would not have him to make known the circumstances of his cure to any, till he had first of all been with the priest; and, upon this account, dispatched him presently away, or sent him off in haste, that he might reach Jerusalem before the priests had any information of this miracle; as seems to be implied in the force of those words in ver. 43, ευθεως εξεβαλεν αυτον. See Grotius on Mat. viii. 4, and Lightfoot's Harmony, in loc.

SECT. XLV. And how much reason have we to hope this compassion will be moved in our favour, and his power exerted in our cure!

Mark I. 43, 44. If we have received that favour, we are under the obligation of no command to conceal it. It is, on the contrary, our duty most gratefully to publish it abroad, for the honour of our Benefactor, and the advantage of those who may be encouraged to make the same application in humble hope of the same success.

But when will the happy time come that men shall be as solicitous about their spiritual welfare as about the health of this mortal body! Almighty Physician! exert thine energy in this instance as a token of farther favours! Convince men of their pollution and danger, and bow their stubborn knee, that it may bend in submissive and importunate supplication!

Mark i. 41. Let the compassionate air with which this cure was wrought, be considered by all spiritual physicians as a lesson of condescension and tenderness; and let the modesty, with which it was conducted engage us to avoid every appearance of ostentation and vain-glory.

Luke v. 16. To conclude; since Christ himself found it proper to retire into a desert place to pray, when crowds of admirers were flocking in upon him, let it teach those who are engaged in the scenes of public business and fill them up with the greatest applause, yet resolutely to command some seasons for retirement; as remembering, that the more various and important our public labours are, the more evidently do we need to draw down succour by ardent prayer, that we may be strengthened and prospered in them.

SECT. XLV.

Christ returning to Capernaum heals a man quite disabled by the palsy; vindicates his power of forgiving sins; and calls Matthew the publican to attend him. Mark II. 1—14; Luke V. 17—28; Mat. IX. 2—9.

MARK II. 1.

Mark II. 1. AND after Jesus had spent [some] days[a] in devout retirement, he appeared again in public,

MARK II. 1.

AND again he entered into Capernaum, after some days, and it was a And after Jesus had spent some days.] Matthew has recorded so many events between the cure of the leper and the paralytic, that I should not have connected them, had not Mark so expressly asserted, that some of those events, especially the dispossession of the legion, happened long after (see Mark iv. 35. note a, sect. lxix, and Mark v. 1. sect. lxx). and Luke strongly intimates the same concerning the other story of the centurion's servant. (See Luke vii. 1, 2, & seq. sect. lv.) Now I think the honour of the New Testament requires—that when one of the evangelists does expressly assert the order in which he places facts in question and the other does not so expressly assert it (which is the case with Matthew here), the order of the latter, though an apostle and eye-witness, should be changed out of regard to the former. As likewise—that if none of the three assert their order, that in which any two agree to place a fact in question, should be chosen rather than that of the third. And on these two rules I have proceeded was noised that he was in the house.

public, and entered into Capernaum; and it was quickly taken notice of, and great numbers of people soon heard that he was in the house where he formerly dwelt; and as he had been some time abroad, and greatly increased his reputation both by his miracles and preaching, they flocked around him with the greatest eagerness.

SECT. XIV.

Mark II. 1.

Luke V. 17. And it came to pass on a certain day, as he was teaching, that there were Pharisees and doctors of the law sitting by, which were come out of every town of Galilee, and Judea, and Jerusalem: and the power of the Lord was present to heal them.

And it happened on a certain day, while he continued here, that, as he was teaching the people, [several] of the Pharisees and doctors of the law were sitting by; who were come out of every town of Galilee, and even of Judea, and particularly [from] Jerusalem[b]; and by appointment met here to attend his doctrine and observe his miracles; at which the governors of the Jewish church began now to be greatly alarmed. But notwithstanding the malicious views with which they came, Jesus went on as usual in his work, and the miraculous power of the Lord was [present] to heal them[c] who then applied to him for the cure of their diseases.

Luke V. 17.

And

proceeded in many instances.—But that the order of Matthew should be changed for that of Luke, when neither of them assert any thing concerning that order, is what I think no inference from Luke i. 3, can justify. (See note g on that text, p. 22.) Much less can it be allowable expressly to contradict Matthew, for the sake of keeping to the order of Luke; which yet most harmonizers seem to have done, even when he was relating what passed in his own house and presence. (See note a on Mat. ix. 18, sect. lxxii.) Could I have persuaded myself to take such liberties with any of the sacred writers, I should not have doubted to follow Matthew and John in their order universally, as Sir Isaac Newton doth, and to transpose Mark and Luke wherever they disagree with either of them; for I cannot observe that those two do in any instance disagree with each other in any of the facts in question.—As to the story of the paralytic here before us, Mark strongly connects it with that of the leper, as happening some days after it; though Matthew does not mention it till the next chapter, and places several events between them; while Luke according to his frequent custom, mentions it only as happening on a certain day. This therefore seems to be the proper place to introduce it, and Matthew's order may be changed for the reasons given above.

b From Jerusalem.] If this happened, as most commentators suppose, a little before Christ's second passover (John v. 1), some of these might be sent from the Sanhedrim with a view of gaining some information concerning Jesus, to guide their resolves concerning him at the ensuing feast, in which they persecuted him, and sought to slay him. John v. 16. It is very probable that the scribes at Jerusalem, hearing how expressly he had attacked their interpretation of the law, some days before, in his celebrated sermon on the mount, (which, so far as we can learn, was the first time he did it) might summon their brethren in the neighbouring country to meet them at Capernaum, in order to attend on the next of Christ's public discourses, wherever it might happen to be.

c The power of the Lord was present to heal them.] According to the common method of construction this may seem to intimate that the healing power of Christ was exerted on some of the Pharisees: but as they came from distant parts to attend Christ as spies, it is not probable they were diseased persons; or that, if any of them being advanced in years might labour under some infirmities, they were so great and visible that a cure would be immediately remarked; and least of all can we suppose they had that faith in Christ which he required in those whom he intended to heal; (see Mark vi. 5. and compare John vii. 48.) It is more reasonable therefore to conclude, on all these accounts, that this is one of those few places where the relative them is referred to a remoter antecedent than that which is immediately before it. Compare in the original, Mat. xi. 1. xii. 9. Luke v. 30. John viii. 44. Acts viii. 26. and Heb. xii. 17. See Glass. Philolog. Sacr. p. 513—515.

SECT. XLV.

Mark II. 2.

And immediately so many of the neighbouring inhabitants were assembled that there was not room to receive [them] in the house, or even about the door; so desirous were they to hear how Jesus would acquit himself in the presence of such curious, critical and prejudiced inquirers as those that were then sitting around him. And he preached the word of the gospel to them with his usual plainness, seriousness and authority, and confirmed it by various miracles.

MARK II. 2. And straightway many were gathered together, insomuch that there was no room to receive them, no not so much as about the door: and he preached the word unto them.

3 And behold, among many others in most deplorable circumstances who were cured by him, they came unto him, bringing a man seized with the palsy, and quite disabled by it, so that he was obliged, in order to his being presented to Jesus, to be laid on a bed, or couch, and carried by four men. And they endeavoured to bring him in and lay him down before him, hoping that so melancholy a sight would affect his compassionate temper and engage his assistance.

3 And [behold,] they come unto him, bringing [a man] sick of the palsy, which [lying on a bed] was borne of four: [LUKE, and they sought means to bring him in, and to lay him before him.] [MAT. IX. 2. LUKE V. 18.]

Luke v. 19.

And when they could not find any way to bring him in, and could not so much as come near enough to speak to Jesus, because of the crowd, and feared a delay might lose so precious an opportunity, they carried him round to a back passage, by which they went up to the top of the house (compare Mark xiii. 15), which, according to the Jewish custom, was made flat (Deut. xxii. 8), and uncovered the roof of the apartment where [Jesus] was (which was a room that had no chamber over it), opening a way into the house by lifting up a kind of lattice or trap-door (compare 2 Kings i. 2), and when they had pulled [it] up, or had removed the frame of it to make the passage wider[d], they let down [the paralytic,] with his couch, through the tiles, with which

LUKE V. 19. And when they could not find by what way they might bring him in, [and could not come nigh] because of the multitude, they went upon the house-top, and [uncovered the roof where he was: and when they had broken it up, they] let him down through the tiling with his couch, into the midst before Jesus. [MARK II. 4.]

d When they had pulled it up, or had removed the frame, &c.] Ἐξορύξαντες, which we render broken up, plainly signifies pulling out, (Gal. iv. 15.) And no man in his senses can suppose the evangelist meant to say that they tore up the beams and rafters of the house upon this occasion; and yet this has been made the foundation of great objections against this story. We have a right to suppose this removal of the frame was done with care; because the circumstances plainly require such care, and common sense would suggest it. Woolston's perverse attack on this miracle is as plausible as any thing he has written against Christianity; but I have endeavoured, in as few words as possible, to suggest an answer to the chief of his objections; and it may be considered as a specimen of the manner in which I shall proceed in other cases of the like nature: for it would be very improper to enter on the controversy at large here, especially after all the convincing and unanswerable treatises which have lately been written in defence of the evangelists; among which I apprehend none more valuable than that called The Miracles of Christ Vindicated, in four parts; to which I with great pleasure refer for a larger account of this story, and the others handled by the excellent author of it.

SECT. XLV.

which the other part of the roof was paved, into the midst[c] of the company assembled, and so laid him before Jesus. And Jesus seeing their faith, and graciously excusing the inconveniencies into which their affection had transported them, said to the man that had the palsy, Take courage, son[f], for thy sins are forgiven thee; and in token of it, I assure thee thy distemper shall be removed.

MAT. IX. 2. And Jesus seeing their faith, said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee. [MARK II. 5. LUKE V. 20.]

Mat. IX. 2.

But behold, such was the perverseness of some of the scribes and Pharisees who were then sitting there, that on his saying to the man in such an absolute and sovereign way, Thy sins are forgiven thee, they took offence at the expression; and reasoning in their hearts upon it, they said within themselves, maliciously reflecting on him, This man most certainly blasphemeth: Who is this that pretends to such an authority? [and] why does this arrogant man thus allow himself to speak such blasphemies as these? Such a speech as this surely deserves the name; for who can undertake to forgive sins, but God alone, the awful Majesty of heaven, who is affronted and dishonoured by committing them?

Mark II. 6.

MARK II. 6. But [behold,] there were certain of the scribes [LUKE, and the Pharisees] sitting there, and reasoning in their hearts [they said within themselves, This man blasphemeth.]—[MAT. IX. 3. LUKE V. 21.]

7 [Who is this] Why doth this man thus speak blasphemies? Who can forgive sins but God only? [LUKE V. 21.]

And immediately, when Jesus, who perfectly well knew the secret workings of their thoughts, perceiving in his own mind that they reasoned thus in themselves, though they did not openly declare their dissatisfaction and censure, he said to

8

8 And immediately, when Jesus [knowing their thoughts] perceived in his spirit that they so reasoned within themselves, he said unto them, Why reason

[c] They let down the paralytic—into the midst.] What is suggested in the paraphrase is the most probable account of the matter, if we suppose our Lord to have been in any covered room of the house. But Dr. Shaw's hypothesis, which goes on principles which were quite unknown to me till I had the pleasure (since the first edition of this work) of reading his excellent travels, seems to me yet more natural. From considering what is now the form of the houses in Barbary and the Levant, he supposes that τὸ μέσον signifies the court-yard, round about which the house was built; and that our Lord was there. He thinks that, crowded as this area was, the bearers of the paralytic might get in at the gate-way (where perhaps Christ could neither be seen nor heard), and might carry him up the stairs, which commonly go up from thence; and being got to the flat roof might take down inwards a part of the balustrade or parapet-wall, and so let down the bed with cords by the side of the glazed and perhaps painted tiles which might beautify the walls of the house towards this court. Many of his quotations from the ancients do, in a very agreeable manner, at once illustrate this account, and receive new light from it. See Dr. Shaw's Travels, p. 373—380.

[f] Take courage, son.] Few can need to be told that son is a title of condescension and tenderness by which superiors addressed inferiors that were not properly their children (compare Josh. vii. 19. Eccles. xii. 12. and 2 Tim. ii. 1.) as father was a correspondent title of respect, (compare 2 Kings v. 13. vi. 21. xiii. 14.) Yet it seems probable, from the use of it here, that the patient was a young man, considering that Christ himself was but a little above thirty; and if it were so it made the case the more pitiable. Luke uses the word man on the occasion; and Christ might possibly use both: as the apostle joins men and fathers, Acts vii. 2. and men and brethren, or, literally, men, brethren, Acts i. 16. ii. 19. xv. 7, 15. xxiii. 1. and xxviii. 17.

SECT. XIV.

to them, Why do you reason thus in your hearts, and so maliciously reflect upon me? [and] wherefore do you think [such] evil things of what I have now been saying? I shall be at no loss to vindicate the reasonableness of it: for which is easier to say to this paralytic, Thy sins are forgiven thee: or to say to him, Arise, and take up thy couch, and walk away with it? May it not justly be concluded that if I have a power efficaciously to say the one, I may without any usurpation say the other likewise; and declare the sin forgiven, when I can thus miraculously remove the punishment of it? But that you may know the case, I put is not a vain presumptuous boast, but that the Son of man here on earth, though appearing in so humble and obscure a form, has yet a Divine authority to forgive men's sins, (he turns about, and says to the paralytic,) O man, I say unto thee, Arise immediately; and to shew thou art perfectly healed at once, take up the couch on which thou liest, and, bearing it on thy shoulders, go thy way to thine own house, for at this instant I will enable thee to do it.

Mark II. 9.

10

11

reason ye these things [Wherefore think ye evil] in your hearts? [MAT. IX. 4. LUKE V. 22.]

9 Whether is it easier to say to the sick of the palsy, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and take up thy bed, and walk? [MAT. IX. 5. LUKE V. 23.]

10 But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (he saith to the sick of the palsy,) [MAT. IX. 6. LUKE V. 24.]

11 I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house. [MAT. IX. 6. LUKE V. 24.]

Luke V. 25

And immediately he was so strengthened by a secret power which went along with the word, that, believing the virtue and efficacy of it, he rose up before them all; and taking up the couch on which he lay, though before he was utterly weak and helpless, he went forth, vigorous and cheerful, to his own house, humbly glorifying and adoring God for that extraordinary cure which he had now received.

LUKE V. 25. And immediately he rose up before them [all,] and took up [the bed] whereon he lay, and departed to his own house, glorifying God. [MARK II. 12.—MAT. IX. 7.]

26 And when the multitude saw [it,] they were all amazed, and with united acclamations glorified God, who had given such mighty and beneficent power to men, and raised up so eminent a Prophet to his people. And they were filled with such a reverential kind of fear and dread, under the apprehension of so marvellous a proof of the Divine presence among them, that they could not forbear saying one to another, We have indeed seen most extraordinary strange things to day: and after all the wonders we have known, We never before saw any thing like it, nor have we heard of any such event as this in the days of our fathers.

26 And [MAT. when the multitude saw it,] they were all amazed: and they glorified God, [MAT. which had given such power unto men;] and were filled with fear, saying, We have seen strange things to-day; [We never saw it on this fashion.] [MARK II. 12. MAT. IX. 8.]

Mark II. 13.

And when the evening advanced, and the day grew cooler, he went forth again by the sea-shore; and all the multitude who had before attended in or about the house, and many more who could not get near enough to see and hear what passed there, MARK II. 13. And he went forth again by the sea-side; and all the multitude resorted unto him, and he taught them.

there, resorted to him; and he cheerfully went on with his work, and taught them here, after all the former labours of the day. SECT. XLV.

Mat. IX. 9. And [Luke, after these things,] as Jesus passed forth from thence, he saw a man [Luke, a publican,] named Matthew, [or Levi, the son of Alpheus,] sitting at the receipt of custom: and he saith unto him, Follow me. And he arose, [Luke, and left all,] and followed him. [Mark II. 14. Luke V. 27, 28.]

Mat. IX. 9.

And after these things, as Jesus passed out from thence (that is, from the house in which the paralytic had been cured), and was going down to the sea-side, he saw a man (who was indeed a publican[g], that collected the customs there) whose name was Matthew, [or] as he was otherwise called Levi, the son of Alpheus, the brother of James (compare Mark iii. 18. Luke vi. 15. Acts i. 13.) and he was then sitting at the custom-house[h]: and calling him to be one of his disciples, he said unto him, Follow me. And immediately consigning his books and cash to some careful hand, he arose, and left all the care and profits of his employment, and followed him, with most grateful acknowledgments of his condescension in admitting a person of his station of life into the number of his stated attendants.

IMPROVEMENT.

Luke V. 17

It is a pleasure to reflect upon it that Christ was attended by such vast numbers of people, and that they who were teachers of others should themselves sit down to hear him. But it is melancholy to reflect on the perverse purposes with which many of them came; and how few did, on the whole, receive his word into their hearts, so as to bring forth fruit unto perfection. Curiosity led some, and interest others; and some came to find occasion of hurting him whose whole business in life was to do good. Yet these low, these vile purposes did not prevent his preaching and working miracles before them, and being ready to exert his power for their benefit. Thus courageous and resolute let us be in the discharge of our duty; thus solicitous, that we may not be overcome of evil, but may (which, on the whole, is always in some degree practicable) overcome evil with good. (Rom. xii. 21.)

Mark II. 2 & seq.

How industrious were the attendants and friends of this poor paralytic to obtain a cure for him! What contrivance, what labour

Luke V. 19

[g] A publican.] This was a very odious name among the Jews, and their employment was attended with so much corruption and temptation, that there were few among them that were honest men; but they were generally persons of so infamous and vile a character, that publicans and sinners are often joined together as synonymous terms, (Mat. ix. 11. xi. 19. and elsewhere.) See the paraphrase on Luke iii. 12, p. 101.

[h] At the custom-house.] So τελωνιον properly signifies. Some have rendered it toll-booth; and I should have followed them had I not apprehended that the word might have suggested some modern idea, for which there is in the original no foundation.

SECT. XLV. bour did they use to find a proper opportunity to bring him in, and lay him before Jesus! Ought we not to be as tender and zealous in all the offices of the truest friendship; and to imitate, so far as suits the difference of circumstances, their importunate application and their lively faith?

Luke V. 19.

Mat. IX. 2. Theirs had its praise and its reward. Our Lord said to this distempered person, Thy sins are forgiven thee. He pardoned all his iniquities, while he healed all his diseases (Psal. ciii. 3). This was a blessing that would render the cure yet incomparably more valuable; and this reviving declaration had the Son of God a power to add and to pronounce. The scribes and Pharisees, ignorant and prejudiced as they were, considered such a declaration as blasphemy. Their principle indeed was right, that God alone has power to forgive sins, and it is impious for men to claim it; but their application was evidently wrong. The miraculous effect plainly shewed the Divine authority of the blessed Jesus. And he has still the key of David: he openeth and no man shutteth; and shutteth, and no man openeth (Rev. iii. 7.) Almighty Saviour, may we each of us receive from thee forgiveness of our sins; and we will not complain though our sicknesses should not immediately be removed! Let us glorify God who has given this power to his Son; and thankfully acknowledge that we are ourselves, in many respects, the monuments both of his pardoning and healing mercy.

Mark II. 6, 7.

Ver 10, 11, 12.

Luke V. 26.

To conclude, let us view with humble wonder and pleasure this farther instance of the condescension and grace of the Redeemer in the call of Matthew; his condescension in calling to so near an attendance and so intimate a friendship, a man who was a publican, infamous as that employment was; and his grace, which could immediately inspire him with so firm a resolution of quitting all the profits of it, that he might reduce himself to circumstances of life as precarious as those of his Divine Master. Many, no doubt, censured him as a rash enthusiast, or a lunatic, rather than a sober convert; but he is even now reaping the abundant reward; his loss is gain, and his contempt glory.

Mat. IX. 9.

SECT. XLVI.

Christ goes up to a feast at Jerusalem (generally supposed to be his second passover,) and there cures a poor impotent man at the pool of Bethesda. John V. 1—16.

SECT. XLVI.

John V. 1.

JOHN V. 1.

AFTER this, there was a great feast of the Jews, even the feast of the passover;[a] and Jesus,

JOHN V. 1.

AFTER this, there was a feast of the Jews; and Jesus went up to Jerusalem.

[a] A feast of the Jews, even the feast of the passover.] It is certain from Luke vi. 1, note b, sect. xlix.) that a passover happened soon after the facts recorded in the preceding

SECT. XLVI.

John V. 1.

Jesus, according to his custom, went up to Jerusalem, both that he might pay a religious regard to the ceremonial law, and that he might take an opportunity of teaching considerable numbers of people assembled from distant parts and countries where he did not appear in person.

2 Now there is at Jerusalem by the sheep market, a pool, which is called in the Hebrew tongue, Bethesda, having five porches.

2 Now it is well known, that there is at Jerusalem, near the sheep-[market][b], a pool, or great reservoir of water,[c] which is called in the Hebrew language, Bethesda, or the House of Mercy; and was indeed, as the name intimates, a kind of hospital, having five porticos, or cloysters,[d] built round it, to accommodate and shelter those who might resort to it for pleasure, convenience or cure: for the water was highly esteemed on account of some medicinal virtues which attended it, and the benefit many had received by bathing in it; and its reputation was greatly advanced, since those miraculous circumstances had been observed, which we shall presently mention.

3 In these lay a great multitude of impotent folk, of blind, halt, withered, waiting for the moving of the water.

3 In these cloysters were laid a great number of sick and diseased persons, such as were either blind, or lame, or had any part of their body withered; who either came or were brought thither in expectation of a cure and lay there waiting for the moving of the water.

4 For an angel went down at a certain season into the pool, and troubled the water: whosoever

4 For God, to add the greater lustre to his Son's miracles, as well as to shew that his ancient people were not entirely forgotten by him,[e] had been pleased of preceding section; and most critics (after the example of Irenæus, lib. ii. cap. 39.) conclude that this was it. And indeed, as the passover was the greatest of all their feasts it is sometimes denoted by the word ἑορτη, even without the article. (See Mark xv. 6. and Luke xxiii. 17.) This chapter may, at least, be as well introduced here as any where else: and one has little temptation to recede from this order in favour of Mr. Manne's singular hypothesis; who supposes that the feast here spoken of was the feast of Pentecost, and that this whole chapter is transposed, and should come in at the end of the sixth. How little this is capable of defence we shall endeavour to shew in the notes on John vi. 1, and 4. see sect. lxxviii. note b and o.

[b] Near the sheep-market.] I chuse to retain the common translation of sheep-market rather than gate; because, if the report of the best travellers is to be credited, the place shewn for the pool of Bethesda is much nearer the temple than the sheep-gate could be. (Compare Neh. iii. 1. and xii. 39.)

[c] A pool, or great reservoir of water.] The etymology of the word κολυμβηθρα intimates it was a place to swim in; so that it seems to me to have been a kind of bath like those near Jericho, where Aristobulus was drowned by Herod's order as he was swimming, (Joseph. Antiq. lib. xv. cap. 3. § 3.) I do not find any satisfactory proof (though many have asserted it) that the sheep to be sacrificed were washed here, or that the blood of the sacrifices ran into it: yet this is the foundation of that strange conjecture of Dr. Hammond which we shall presently mention.

[d] Having five porticos, or cloysters.] It is a very probable thought of Dr. Lightfoot (in his Harmony in loc.) that the basin itself might be in the form of a pentagon, and that these cloysters might correspond to its five sides.

[e] To add the greater lustre to his Son's miracles, &c.] These reasons are suggested and well illustrated in Mr. Calvin's judicious notes on this story.

SECT. xlvi.

John v. 4.

of late to perform some supernatural cures at this place. For at a certain season,[f] which returned at some particular periods, an unusual motion was discovered in the water; and from the marvellous effects of it, it was rightly concluded that at that time an angel descended into the pool and stirred the water[g], by which a healing virtue was whosoever then first after the troubling of the water, stepped in, was made whole of whatsoever disease he had.

[f] At a certain season.] Though κατὰ καιρὸν might be sometimes rendered at that time (as Rom. v 6.) and some have therefore thought the passover, or the feast that was mentioned just before, to be the season when the angel came and stirred the water; yet, as the words will very justly bear the sense that has been given them in our translation, there is no reason why we should suppose it to have only been an annual miracle, which would but needlessly increase the difficulty. Indeed the expectation of the people intimates it was at some particular periods, though probably they were not fixed in such a way as that they certainly could tell the stated times of their return; at least we know not what they were, nor can it be determined from this indefinite expression. And if it be thus taken to refer to a certain hour of the day, or day of the week (perhaps the sabbath, which was the day that they were now expecting it) κατὰ καιρὸν will signify at every such time, as κατ' ἐνιαυτὸν every year, Heb. x. 1, and καθ' ἡμέραν, every day, Acts ii. 46, 47.

[g] An angel descended into the pool and stirred the water.] The late English version renders it a messenger, agreeable to the strange hypothesis of Dr. Hammond; who thinks that this water had contracted a natural virtue by washing the carcases and entrails of the sacrifices in this pool; and that, on stirring it up, that virtue exerted itself the more; so that a proper officer was appointed for that purpose: a thought so unphilosophical, as well as ungrounded in history and antiquity, that one would wonder how so learned a man could fall upon it.—Mr. Fleming, to avoid the apparent difficulties of the literal interpretation, concludes that the latter part of the third and the whole fourth verse is a spurious addition of some ignorant monk in the eighth or ninth century; because that part is wanting in Beza's manuscript, and is written by a later hand in the margin of that in the French king's library, which Lamy in his Harmony so much extols. But I cannot acquiesce in this omission, since the passage in question is found in all the other most celebrated manuscripts, as also in the Syriac version, and all the rest in the Polyglott bible: and besides this, the seventh verse (which none dispute) implies that there was a miraculous virtue in the water after it was troubled, which extended only to the first that went in, and cured his disease, whatever it were; so that the chief difficulties would still remain, were Mr. Fleming's criticism to be allowed, see his Christology, Vol. I. p. 13—15.—I cannot here discuss the matter at large; but beg leave, in a few words, to hint at what seems to me the easiest solution of this greatest of difficulties in the history of the Evangelists, in which, of all others, the learned answerers of Mr. Woolston have generally given me the least satisfaction, and which few commentators enter into: and I am pleased to find, long since I wrote this note, that the ingenious Dr. Pearce agrees with me in the most material circumstances of this hypothesis; (see his excellent Vindication of Christ's miracles, p. 68, & seq.—I imagine this pool might have been remarkable for some mineral virtue attending the water; which is the more probable as Jerom tells us it was of a very high colour: this, together with its being so very near the temple, where a bath was so much needed for religious purposes, may account for the building such stately cloysters round it, three of which remain to this day; (see Maundrell's Travels, p. 108.) Some time before this passover an extraordinary commotion was probably observed in the water; and Providence so ordered it that the next person who accidentally bathed here, being under some great disorder, found an immediate and unexpected cure; the like phænomenon in some other desperate case was probably observed on a second commotion: and these commotions and cures might happen periodically, perhaps every sabbath (for that it was yearly none can prove,) for some weeks or months. This the Jews would naturally ascribe to some angelic power, as they did afterwards the voice from heaven (John xii. 29,) though no angel appeared. And they and St. John had reason to do it, as it was the scripture scheme that these benevolent spirits had been, and frequently are, the invisible instruments of good to the children of men; (see Psal. xxxiv. 7. xci. 11. Dan. iii. 28. and vi. 22.) On their making so ungrateful a return to Christ for this miracle, and those wrought at the former passover, and in the intermediate space, this celestial visitant probably from this time returned no more;

and

SECT. xlvi.

John V. 4.

was communicated to it; and the first person therefore, that went in after the stirring of the water, was instantly cured[h] whatever the distemper was that he before was seized with.

5 And a certain man was there, which had an infirmity thirty and eight years.

And it now happened that a certain man was 5 lying there who had been thirty-eight years disabled by an illness which had seized his nerves, and taken away the use of all his limbs. Jesus 6

6 When Jesus saw him lie, and knew that he had been now a long time in that case, he saith unto him, Wilt thou be made whole?

then seeing him as he lay by the side of the pool, and knowing that he had been now a long time [in this melancholy condition,] says to him, with a view to stir up his attention to himself, and to engage him to reflect on his own helpless state and on the greatness of the mercy he designed him, Dost thou desire to be cured of thine infirmity? The poor disabled man answered him, Sir, 7

7 The impotent man answered him, Sir, I have no man, when the water is troubled to put me into the pool; but while I am coming, another steppeth down before me.

I cannot but earnestly desire it, but am now ready to despair of being so happy; for I am poor as well as lame; and I have no man to wait on me and put me into the pool when the water is stirred; and my own motions are so slow that, while I am coming towards it, another descends before me, and enjoys the benefit of the miracle.

8 Jesus said unto him, Rise, take up thy bed, and walk.

Upon this, Jesus says to him, with an air of 8 Divine majesty and authority, Arise, take up thy couch on thy shoulders, and walk away with it, to shew how perfectly thou art recovered. And 9

9 And immediately the man was made whole, and took up his bed, and walked:—

such virtue attended these words, that the man immediately became well; and, leaping up in a transport of wonder and joy, he took up his couch and walked away with it to his own house, through some of the most public parts of the city.

—And on the same day was the sabbath.

Now on that day that this miraculous cure was wrought, it was the sabbath: yet Christ commanded and therefore it may be observed that though the evangelist speaks of the pool as still at Jerusalem when he wrote, yet he mentions the descent of the angel as a thing which had been, but not as still continuing (compare ver. 2. and 4.) This may account for the surprising silence of Josephus in a story which made so much for the honour of his nation. He was himself not born when it happened; and though he might have heard the report of it, he would perhaps (as is the modern way) oppose speculation and hypothesis to fact; and, like Dr. Wellwood in a much plainer case, (see his Letter relating to Maitland's cure,) have recourse to some indigested and unmeaning harangues on the unknown force of imagination, or if he secretly suspected it to be true, his dread of the marvellous, and fear of disgusting his Pagan readers with it, might as well lead him to suppress this, as to disguise the passage through the red sea, and the divine voice from mount Sinai, in so mean and foolish a manner as it is known he does. And the relation in which this fact stood to the history of Jesus, would make him peculiarly cautious in touching upon it, as it would have been so difficult to handle it at once with decency and safety.

h The first that went in—was cured.] This may well be considered as a circumstance wisely ordered by Providence to illustrate the superior power and goodness of the Son of God, who, not at distant periods of time, but every day, not only performed a single cure, but healed whole multitudes that resorted to him.

SECT. xlvi.

commanded him, even on that day, to carry his couch, both to shew his own authority and to exercise the faith and obedience of his patient.

John V. 10. The Jews therefore who saw him pass by in this manner said to him that was cured, It is the sabbath-day; and therefore it is not lawful for thee thus to carry a couch, or to bear any burthen whatsoever. (Compare Jer. xvii. 21, 22. and Neh. xiii. 15—19.) How is it then that thou art so presumptuous as to profane this holy day?

11 But he answered them by giving an account of his cure, and only added, He that miraculously healed and made me well, and restored me with a word to this health and strength, even he[i] said to me, Take up thy couch, and walk away with it: and I could not question his authority to dis-

12 pense with such a ceremonial precept. And upon this, dropping all mention of the cure, and only fixing on what seemed liable to exception[k], they asked him then, Who is the man that said unto thee, on this sacred day, Take up thy couch, and

13 walk away with it? Now he that was healed did not at that time know who it was that had cured him? for as there was a crowd of people in the place, Jesus had modestly slipped away[l] among them as soon as he had spoken the healing word.

14 But afterwards Jesus findeth him in the court of the temple, and said unto him, Behold, by the singular mercy of God, thou art now recovered to health and vigour; but take heed that thou sin no more, lest something yet worse befall thee; for thou knowest in thine own conscience that the iniquities of thy youth brought this calamity upon thee[m], and the deliverance thou hast now received

10 The Jews therefore said unto him that was cured, It is the sabbath-day: It is not lawful for thee to carry thy bed.

11 He answered them, He that made me whole, the same said unto me, Take up thy bed and walk.

12 Then asked they him, What man is that which said unto thee, Take up thy bed, and walk?

13 And he that was healed wist not who it was: for Jesus had conveyed himself away, a multitude being in that place.

14 Afterwards, Jesus findeth him in the temple, and said unto him, Behold, thou art made whole: sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee.

[i] Even he.] There seems to be this emphasis in the word εκεινος, in this connection after ο ποιησας. It is very far from being an expletive, though few versions take any notice of it.

[k] Only fixing on what seemed liable to exception.] They do not ask, Who is it that has made thee well? but, Who is it that bade thee to take up thy couch upon the sabbath-day? though he had just told them it was the author of his cure that gave him that command: for all that they proposed was, not to hear of any good that had been done to engage their admiration and applause, but to lay hold of some occasion to find fault, to gratify the pride and malice of a censorious temper—I am obliged to Grotius for this delicate remark, which well illustrates their partiality and malignity.

[l] Modestly slipped away.] The word εξενευσεν (as Casaubon observes in his learned note on the place) is an elegant metaphor borrowed from swimming: and we may thus observe how well it expresses the easy unobserved manner in which he, as it were, guided through them; while, like a stream of water, they opened before him, and immediately closed again, leaving no trace of the way he had taken.

[m] The iniquities of thy youth brought this calamity upon thee.] Our Lord seems not merely to have referred to a general notion that diseases were the punishments of sin, but to glance at some irregularities of the received will be a dreadful aggravation of thy future guilt. SECT. XLVI.

15 The man departed, and told the Jews that it was Jesus which had made him whole.

The man then informed himself of those that stood by, who it was that spoke to him; and knowing him to be the person to whom he was obliged for his cure, he went away from the temple and told the Jews, who had before examined him, that it was Jesus of Nazareth who had restored him to health; expecting, no doubt, by this discovery, to have procured him that honour and respect which was due to so much power and goodness. And yet the Jews were so far from paying him any just acknowledgments that, on the contrary, they persecuted Jesus on this account and endeavoured to put him to death, as an impious transgressor of the law, because he had done these things on the sabbath-day: and, in pursance of that unrighteous and barbarous purpose, they brought an accusation against him before the sanhedrim [n], which occasioned the large and excellent apology related in the two following sections. John V. 15.

16 And therefore did the Jews persecute Jesus, and sought to slay him, because he had done these things on the sabbath-day. 16

IMPROVEMENT.

WHAT reason have we humbly to adore that Almighty Being who kills and makes alive, who wounds and heals! (Deut. xxxii. 39.) If the Jews had cause of thankfulness for this miraculous interposition, surely those virtues which God has in a natural way bestowed on medicines, and that sagacity which he has given to men for the discovery of those virtues, are matter of much greater acknowledgment, as the blessing is so much more extensive and lasting. Ver. 4

But how much greater still are our obligations to him for the blessings of his gospel and the ordinances of his worship, those waters of life by which our spiritual maladies are healed, and vigour restored to our enfeebled souls! Let us humbly attend them; yet during that attendance let us look beyond them: for surely the efficacy of this pool of Bethesda did not more depend upon the descent of the angel, than the efficacy of the noblest ordinances depends on that blessed Spirit which operates in and by them.

Multitudes were continually attending at this pool: and why then is the house of God forsaken? where not one alone, but many, at the same moment, may receive spiritual sight and strength; yea, and 3

life

the man's younger years which, though they were committed before Christ was born (for we are told, ver. 5, that this disabled man had laboured under his disorder thirty-eight years) yet were perfectly known to him.

n Before the sanhedrim.] See the reason for this conjecture in the next section, ver. 17, note 4, compared with ver. 33.

SECT. XLVI.

life from the dead? Yet, alas! under the diseases of the soul, how few desire to be made whole! Blessed Jesus! if thou hast awakened that desire in us, we would adore thee for it as a token for good;

Ver. 6 and would lift up our believing eyes to thee, in humble expectation that thou wilt graciously fulfil it.

14 The man who was lately languishing on his couch we quickly after find in the temple: and where should they be found who have been raised up from beds of weakness, and brought out from chambers of confinement but in the sanctuary, rendering their praises to the God of their mercies? How reasonable is the caution which our Lord gave him there! Sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee. May we see sin as the root of all our afflictions; and, by the bitterness of them, may sin be embittered to us, and our hearts fortified against relapsing into it, especially when we have been chastised, and restored again!

15 One would have expected that, when this grateful creature published the name of his Benefactor, crowds should have thronged about Jesus, to have heard the words of his mouth, and to have received the blessings of his gospel; and that the whole nation should have gloried in the presence of such a person, as far more valuable than the descent of a heavenly spirit at some particular seasons for the cure of their diseases, or even the abode of an incarnate angel among them would have been. But instead of this, behold the malignity of our fallen nature, and the force of stubborn

16 prejudice! They surround him with an hostile intent; they even conspire against his beneficial life; and for an imagined transgression in a point of ceremony, would have put out this light in Israel. Let us not wonder then if our good be evil spoken of: (Rom. xiv. 16.) Let us not wonder, if even candour, benevolence, and usefulness, do not wholly disarm the enmity of some; especially of those who have been taught to prefer sacrifice to mercy; and who, disrelishing the genuine contents of the gospel, naturally seek occasion to slander and persecute the professors, and especially the defenders of it.

SECT. XLVII.

Christ vindicates the miracle which he had wrought at the pool on the sabbath-day, and solemnly declares the dignity of his person and office. John V. 17—30.

JOHN V. 17.

SECT. XLVII.

THE miracle which he had just performed was a plain evidence of his Divine authority and power: but Jesus being questioned by the Jews, and, as it seems, examined before their most solemn

John V. 17.

JOHN V. 17.

BUT Jesus answered them, My Father worketh worketh hitherto, and I work.

solemn council[a], for the cure he had wrought on the sabbath-day, he took the opportunity of declaring at large the dignity of his person, the evidence of his mission and the absolute necessity of faith in him to their eternal salvation[b]; while, in reply to the malicious charge which they brought against him, he answered them as follows: My heavenly Father, in the administration of his providential kingdom, worketh continually, from the beginning of the world even till now; and upon sabbath-days, as well as others, he exerts that unremitting and unwearied energy which is the life of the creation: and, in like manner, I also work, in obedience to the intimations of his will and in subserviency to his glory. And in this very action I have given you so visible a proof that I am directed and assisted by him, that you ought humbly to acquiesce in it, without presuming to cavil at what is so evidently Divine, or to limit the majesty of heaven by those rules which he has prescribed to his creatures.

SECT. xlvii.

John V. 17.

18 Therefore the Jews sought the more to kill him, because he not only had broken the sabbath, but said also that God was his Father; making himself equal with God.

18 But upon hearing this suggested by our Lord in vindication of himself, they were so far from yielding to the argument, that, for this very reason, the resentment of his adversaries was increased; and being therefore more incensed against him than before, the rulers of the Jews endeavoured the more eagerly to put him to death, because (as they imagined) he had not only violated the sabbath, but had now also gone so far as even to have called God his own Father[c], in so peculiar and appropriating a sense as in effect to make himself equal with God; while he thus argued his own right to work on the sabbath-day, from God's working upon it; though this was evidently no argument with respect to mankind in general, nor had ever been pleaded by the greatest of the prophets in such a view.

18

Jesus

[a] Before their most solemn council.] I here follow Mr. Fleming's opinion (in his Christology, Vol. II. p. 296) which seems to be confirmed by ver. 33; and there appears a great deal of additional propriety and beauty in the discourse when it is considered in this view.

[b] He took the opportunity of declaring at large the dignity of his person, &c.] Christ had hinted at several of these things in his conference with Nicodemus (John iii. 13—21, sect. xxvi.) who had probably reported them to his brethren. But he here expatiates more largely on some; and, no doubt, if Nicodemus, as a member of the council, was now present, he heard him with great pleasure and improvement.

[c] Called God his own Father.] This is the plain and literal sense of the original, πατερα ἰδιον. The whole nation of the Jews thought God their Father (John viii. 41.) and they could not therefore have accounted it blasphemy to have used the phrase, had they not interpreted it in so high and appropriating a sense.

[d] The

SECT. xlvii.

John V. 19.

Jesus therefore, to explain the matter more fully to them, and to leave them yet more inexcusable in their malicious opposition to him, answered and said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, and do most faithfully and solemnly declare, That the Son of God, great and glorious as he is, now acts in an avowed subjection to the authority of the Father and can do nothing of himself[d], in pursuance of any distinct schemes or separate interest of his own, unless he see the Father doing it[e] or perceive him intimating it as his pleasure that it should be done: for whatsoever are the things that he (that is, the Father) doeth, even these likewise doeth the Son in a most intimate conjunction with him; at all times cheerfully complying with his purposes and esteeming it his honour always to be employed in his service. For the Father loveth the Son, and that with so entire an affection, that he sheweth him all things that he himself doeth[f], letting him into the secret of his councils, and teaching him in the most wonderful and Divine manner to act in prosecution of them; and he will shew, or point out to him far greater works than these which he has hitherto performed; which shall hereafter be accomplished by him, that you may all be filled with wonder, though you will not be 19 Then answered Jesus, and said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do; for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise.

20 For the Father loveth the Son, and sheweth him all things that himself doeth: and he will shew him greater works than these, that ye may marvel.

d The Son can do nothing of himself.] I cannot forbear mentioning a remarkable note of the learned Elsner (Observ. Vol. I. p. 307, & seq.), in which he shews by a great variety of instances, that the later heathen writers seem to have ascribed to Minerva, as the daughter of Jupiter, many things which our sacred scriptures speak of Christ as the Son of God.

e Unless he see the Father doing it.] Whether our Lord here means in the general, unless he see it to be correspondent to the Father's scheme; or whether he refers to any peculiar Divine impulse which he sometimes felt upon his mind, leading him to exert his miraculous power in this or that instance, I cannot certainly determine: but rather incline to the latter, which might also be comprehended in ver. 17.—The particle εαν μη, which is exactly the same in signification with ει μη, is here also used in a less proper sense. See the note on John xvii. 12. sect. clxxix. and compare John viii. 38, sect. civ.

f Sheweth him all things that he himself doeth.] The editors of the Prussian Testament say, that the word δεικνυσιν, which we have rendered sheweth, signifies here to teach or form to any thing; as a master forms his scholar to do what he himself doeth, and teaches him the secrets of his art or profession: but I cannot acquiesce in this sense, as expressing the whole meaning of the phrase. It rather refers to the ample and comprehensive knowledge which the Son has of the whole plan of the Father's councils, in all their mutual relations and dependances; whereas the prophets and the apostles too, had, in comparison of this, but very limited and contracted views. Compare Isa. xl. 10, where it is said (as we have no room to doubt) of Christ, and probably in this sense—his work is before him—Dr. Whitby refers αυτω to the Son; and understands it as if it had been said, Whatever the Son doeth, is by the direction of the Father: but I think the genius of the Greek language would not in that sense have allowed the repetition of αυτω, but it would rather have been said, παντα α ποιει δεικνυσιν αυτω: not to insist upon it, that the sense in which I have explained it is much nobler, and not so nearly the same with what Christ had said in the preceding verse.

SECT. XIVII.

John IV. 21.

21 For as the Father raiseth up the dead, and quickeneth them; even so the Son quickeneth whom he will.

22 For the Father judgeth no man; but hath committed all judgment unto the Son:

23 That all men should honour the Son, even as they honour the Father. He that honoureth not the Son, honoureth not the Father which hath sent him.

24 Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation; but is passed from death unto life.

be open to conviction. You have now seen the cure of one who had been long disabled by a disease, but I have not yet raised any from the dead: yet you shall quickly see, that it is not for want of power; for as the Father, whenever he pleases, raises up and animates the dead, so also you shall have sufficient evidence that the Son animates whom he will. Nor is it to be wondered at, that he should have so great a power lodged in him; for the Father now in his own person judges no man, but has given the administration of all judgment to the Son, before whom all men are at last to appear, and by whom they are to be assigned to their final and eternal state. And this important power God has committed to me[g], that notwithstanding the humble form in which I now appear, all may be engaged to honour the Son even as they honour the Father himself; yielding an unreserved homage and obedience to him, as what is necessary to approve their duty and fidelity to God: for he that, in such a circumstance, and on such a discovery, honoureth not the Son, as worthy of the highest veneration, honoureth not the Father that sent him; but affronting him in the person of so dear and so great an ambassador, must expect to be treated as an enemy and a rebel. 22 23

This is a truth of the utmost consequence to your final happiness, and therefore I insist the more largely upon it; see then that none of you presume to pass it slightly over; for verily, verily, I say unto you, and solemnly declare it in the presence of you all, He that heareth my word with an attentive regard and truly believeth in him that sent me, hath everlasting life: he is already intitled to it, yea, it is already begun in his soul; and he shall shortly possess it in its full perfection, and shall not come into condemnation for any former 24

g This important power God has committed to me.] Though our Lord here speaks of himself in the third person, yet afterwards, in ver. 30, & seq. he speaks in the first: and common sense would teach all that heard him, that by the Son he here meant himself. Now I appeal to any unprejudiced person to judge, whether our Lord's making such a declaration as this before the Jewish rulers, and probably in full council, was not far more liable to exception, than merely his calling the temple his Father's house (John ii. 16.) at his first passover; in the same manner as he long before had done, in calling God his Father, even when he was but twelve years old, (Luke ii. 49.) So little is there in Mr. Manne's argument from the text. (See note c on John ii. 16, p. 137.)—And it is also to be remembered that, according to Mr. Manne's Scheme of the Harmony, he makes this to have happened about ten months before Christ's death, and long before many of those charges to his disciples, not to make him known; from whence this gentleman argues, that the forecited words in John ii. 16, could not be spoken till his last passover.

h Renew

SECT. xlvii.

John v. 24.

former offences; but is passed from that state of death in which men naturally are, to a state of life, security and felicity. Think not this an incredible assertion; for verily, verily, I say unto 25 you, and in the strongest terms renew the important declaration [h], That the season cometh, and is now just at hand, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God, and they that hear [it] shall immediately live; for within these few months there shall be some dead bodies raised to life by the word of his power (See Mark v. 41. Luke vii. 14. John xi. 43. and compare Mat. xxvii. 52, 53), and many souls that are dead in sin shall, by his grace, be quickened and made
26 spiritually alive [i]. For as the Father has originally and essentially life in himself, so he has also given to the Son, that he should, for these purposes of glorious and Divine operation, have a principle of life in himself to be communicated 27 unto whom he will. (See 1. Cor. xv. 45.) And he has given him authority, not only to quicken men now, but also to execute final judgment, because he is the Son of man; and as he has voluntarily humbled himself to so lowly a form (see Phil. ii 5—11), God will accomplish to him all those glorious predictions which represent him as possessed of universal and perpetual dominion and coming in the clouds of heaven in that day when the judgment is set and the books are opened. (See Dan. vii. 9—14. Phil. ii. 8, 9. and Heb. xii. 2.) 28 And therefore, wonder not at this which I have now declared concerning the resurrection of a few, shortly to be expected; for the hour is coming in which all that are dead and buried now, and all that shall then be lying in the graves, though mouldered away and consumed there, 29 shall hear his voice, And shall come forth out of 25 Verily, verily, I say unto you, The hour is coming, and now is, when the dead shall hear the voice of the Son of God; and they that hear, shall live.

26 For as the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself.

27 And hath given him authority to execute judgment also, because he is the Son of man.

28 Marvel not at this; for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice,

29 And shall come forth,

h Renew the important declaration.] These repetitions of this solemn asseveration are by no means vain, considering the vast importance of the truth; and how incredible it would appear, that he who stood before them in so humble a form, was in reality the Lord of Life, and the universal Judge. See note g on John i. 51, p. 129.

i Some dead bodies raised to life, and many souls made spiritually alive.] I express it thus ambiguously, because I am something doubtful, whether it may not refer to the conversion of sinners by Christ's ministry, rather than the resurrection of a few by his miraculous power. It is well known, sinners are often represented in scripture as dead (Mat. viii. 22. Eph. ii. 1. v. 14. 1 Tim. v. 6. and Jude, ver. 12), and if the expression οι ακουσαντες, is to be taken, as we render it, with the most literal exactness, for they that hear, or they, and they alone, that so attend unto the voice of Christ as to believe in him—it will then limit it to this sense; which seems also favoured by ver. 24, where death plainly signifies a state of sin and condemnation.

k I seek forth, they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life, and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation.

of the dust, they that have done good, to the resurrection of eternal life, and they that have done evil, to the resurrection of final damnation. See to it therefore, that you shew a due regard to him before whom you yourselves are to stand; and do not rashly condemn a Person from whose lips you are to receive your decisive sentence. Not that any corrupt bias of partial resentment will be brought into the proceedings of that day, or into any of my conduct; for I can of myself do nothing, but now act by a delegated power as the minister of a righteous God: and therefore as I hear, I judge, pronouncing according to the evidence of facts before me; and upon this account it must appear that my judgment is just; because I seek not any distinct will or separate interest of my own[k], but the wise and holy will of the Father who sent me; which is, that every man should be treated according to his real character, and be the object of favour or of wrath, as his temper and conduct have been upright or wicked.

SECT. xlvii.

John v. 29.

30 I can of mine own self do nothing; as I hear, I judge; and my judgment is just; because I seek not mine own will, but the will of the Father which hath sent me.

30

IMPROVEMENT.

With what humble prostration of soul should we bow before the Lord Jesus Christ while we read such words as these! Though he appeared under the form of a servant; and as man and mediator, confessed a holy subjection to his Father and his God; yet is he his own, his only-begotten Son, the Son whom he loves, whom he honours, whom he commands all men to honour even as himself, and to whom such power and authority are committed, that he is the principle of life and the administrator of judgment. Let us adore the wisdom of such a contrivance, that he who humbled himself thus low, should be so highly exalted. Let us labour to secure an interest in him; treating him with that submission, duty and obedience, which becomes at once the divinity of his nature and the dignity of his office.

Ver. 19, 20 23 26 27

May we be enabled by Divine grace so to hear the voice of his gospel, that we may arise to a life of holy obedience; that we may another day hear him with joy calling forth our sleeping dust, and arise to the resurrection of life; while those that have despised and rejected him, shall find themselves the helpless prisoners of his justice, and with reluctance and terror come forth to the resurrection of damnation!

25 28

SECT.

k I seek not any distinct will or separate interest of my own.] This limitation the sense evidently requires. See Heb. x. 9, 10. Mat. xxvi. 39. and note h on Mat. xii. 7. sect. xlix.

SECT. XLVIII.

Christ having declared to the Jews (and, as it seems, to the Sanhedrim), the dignity of his person, office and character, goes on to represent the proofs of his mission; and concludes his discourse with proper admonitions and cautions. John V. 31. to the end.

JOHN V. 31.

SECT. xlviii.

John V. 31.

OUR Lord proceeded in his discourse to the Jews, and said, I have certainly entered a very high claim, and represented myself as a person of great dignity and authority; nor do I see it without sufficient proof. Indeed If I bear this witness of myself alone, it must be acknowledged, that my testimony is not immediately [to be admitted as] true[a]: you have a right to insist on other evidence; and a variety of it arises from the testimony of John, from the power of my miracles, from the testimony of the Father and from innumerable passages in your own sacred writings.

JOHN V. 31.

IF I bear witness of myself, my witness is not true.

32 I would then first observe that, besides what I have told you of myself, there is another of undoubted reputation and veracity that beareth witness of me; and I know that the witness which he beareth of me is true and credible; and well remember by the happiest tokens, the great fact on which it especially turned[b]: nor can you reasonably take upon you to dispute it; for the person I refer to is John the Baptist, whom your whole nation agreed to reverence as a prophet:

32 There is another that beareth witness of me; and I know that the witness which he witnesseth of me is true.

33 And you know, that you yourselves sent messengers on purpose from your own court unto this John (John i. 19—27, sect. xx.), and he, in the most express terms, bore a faithful and honourable testimony to the truth of what I have now attested and referred to, assuring you that he saw 33 Ye sent unto John, and he bare witness unto the truth.

34 the Spirit in a visible form descend upon me. I do not indeed receive the chief testimony on which I

34 But I receive not testimony from man; but a Is not [to be admitted as] true. That this is the sense of the word true here, is very evident; and appears in part from comparing John viii 13—17. sect. ciii.

b The great fact on which it especially turned.] The propriety and spirit of our Lord's expression, I know that the witness which he beareth of me is true, is much illustrated, by supposing that here is an oblique reference to that great event, the descent of the Holy Spirit on Christ at his baptism; on which John so expressly grounded the testimony he bore to Christ, the very next day after their messengers came to him, who probably staid some time to make their remarks on his preaching and conduct. (See John i. 29—34. sect. xxi.) And the blessed effects of this effusion on Christ still continued, and incessantly wrought in him.

c For

but these things I say, that ye might be saved.

I rest the credit of my mission, from man; nevertheless, I say these things to you, on your own principles, out of a tender and compassionate concern for your conviction, that you, who are now conspiring against my life, may be saved from that destruction which he foretold as the portion of those who should reject me, and which the greatest of them shall not be able to escape, (Mat. iii. 10—12, sect. xvi.) He was indeed a burning and a shining light (Eccles. xlviii. 1), who, to his bright and distinct knowledge of the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, joined a most fervent zeal in bearing his testimony to them; and for a while you were disposed greatly to rejoice in his light[c]; but you did not express that continued regard to his preaching which at his first appearance you seemed to promise.

SECT. xlviii.

John V. 34.

35 He was a burning and a shining light; and ye were willing for a season to rejoice in his light.

35

36 But I have a greater witness than that of John; for the works which the Father hath given me to finish, the same works that I do, bear witness of me, that the Father hath sent me.

I will not therefore insist farther on this topic, but proceed to other evidence. And I have indeed a testimony which is much greater still than [that] of John; for the works of wonder and mercy which the Father has assigned and given in commission to me, that according to his wise and gracious purposes I might accomplish them among you, even these miraculous works which I daily perform, are also witnesses in my behalf, and bear a most convincing testimony to me, that the Father hath sent me as his Ambassador to men, with the most ample commission to reveal his will.

36

37 And the Father himself which hath sent me, hath borne witness of me: ye have neither heard his voice at any time, nor seen his shape.

And indeed I may say, with the greatest propriety, that by these miracles, as well as by the public testimony that he gave me at my baptism, the Father who has sent me has with the strongest evidence confirmed my mission and has himself borne witness to me: nor have you any reason to dispute the testimony that he thus hath given me [though] you have never either heard his voice, or seen his form, as being one whom no man hath seen nor can see; for he has testified the same concerning me in his word, where he has spoken of me in the clearest manner. But, notwithstanding the submission you

37

[c] For a while you were disposed greatly to rejoice in his light.] Our Lord might speak thus of John, though he was yet living, as his light was now in a great measure extinguished by his imprisonment; so that the argument from this text, for transposing this chapter, seems inconclusive. Had the sanhedrim, as some have supposed, imprisoned John before he was seized by Herod (see the preface to the Prussian Testament, p. 244), our Lord would hardly have failed to reprove them for it on so natural an occasion as this.

SECT. xlviii.

you profess to his authority, you will not be persuaded to receive the testimony he has given: and after all that he has said, it is still evident that you have not his word cordially abiding in you[d], nor do you shew a due regard even to those former revelations which you acknowledge as Divine; for notwithstanding all the reasons that are there given to induce you to it, you do not believe him whom he had sent with a much fuller and clearer discovery of himself than any of his former messengers have brought.

38 And ye have not his word abiding in you: for whom he hath sent, him ye believe not.

John v. 38.

39 You make it your employment and your study to peruse and search the scriptures[e], and enter into deep enquiries concerning the contents of them; because you very rightly apprehend that you have the doctrine of eternal life in them, that they contain the promises, and instruct you in the way of obtaining it: and these now are [the very writings] which in numberless passages bear 40 a most important testimony to me. And yet the obstinacy of your hearts is such, that notwithstanding you profess so great a regard for them, you will not come to me, that you may have that eternal life which they direct you to obtain in this method, but rather chuse to die under the force of your inveterate prejudices.

39 Search the scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me.

40 And ye will not come to me, that ye might have life.

41 I speak of your coming to me: but let me remind you that it is not out of an ambition of drawing multitudes about me, to follow and applaud my teaching; for the whole of my conduct proves that I receive not glory from men[f]. 42 But I say it out of a tender regard for your instruction and reformation; for notwithstanding your distinguished profession of piety, and the eminent 41 I receive not honour from men.

42 But I know you, that ye have not the love of God in you.

[d] You have not his word abiding in you.] Some would render it, You have not his LOGOS, that is, me residing among you for any continuance of time (see Mr. Locke's Reasonableness of Christianity, p. 65,) and refer it to Christ's making so short an abode at Jerusalem: but I prefer the more obvious sense. Compare John xv. 7.

[e] You search the scriptures.] There is a known ambiguity in the word ἐραυνᾶτε, which may justify either this translation or the common one; nor is it very material which is preferred, I thought the following words, which express their high opinion of the scriptures, rather suited the former; and it is exceeding probable that, at a time when the Pharisees were so impatient of the Roman yoke, they would with great diligence search the sacred oracles for predictions relating to the Messiah; though it is too plain they had an unhappy bias on their minds, which prevented the good effects which might have been expected from that inquiry, had it been impartial.—It is also well known, that refined criticisms on their sacred writings made the most fashionable branch of learning among the Jews; in comparison of which, profane literature was held in great contempt, and indeed by many of their zealots in great abhorrence: see Joseph. Antiq. Jud. lib. xx. cap. ult. § ult. and Mr. Biscoe's Sermons at Boyle's Lecture, p. 89, 90.

[f] I receive not glory from men.] The whole series of this discourse excellently shews how far our Lord was from soothing the vanity of great and learned men, in order to obtain their favour.

SECT. xlviii.

John v. 42.

eminent station in which you are placed, I know you, and have observed it for some time concerning you, that you have not the love of God in you, that great and only principle of a true religion and happiness. For I am come to you in my Father's name, and with evident credentials from him; yet you receive me not; which, if you had really loved him, you would undoubtedly have done: whereas if another should come in his own name[g], without such credentials, and set up a scheme of temporal grandeur and dominion, him you would readily receive, in pursuit of those worldly principles which, though directly contrary to the love of God, yet bear the rule in your corrupt hearts. But how indeed can you believe in me, and fall in with such an humbling and self-denying scheme as that of my gospel, while, with an ambitious emulation, you are receiving honour of each other[h], and seek not that true honour which [comes] from the approbation of God alone, and from the testimony of your consciences in his sight.

43 I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not: if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive.

44 How can ye believe, which receive honour one of another, and seek not the honour that cometh from God only?

Nevertheless, remember this, that you will another day appear self-condemned for this your infidelity: and do not think that, to convict you in his presence, I will accuse you to the Father; it will not be necessary that I should do it; for even now, that Moses, in whom you trust as your great law-giver and patron, is (as it were) your accuser before God[i], and charges you with being regardless of him as well as of me. For if you had believed Moses, and really had that regard to him which you profess to have, you likewise surely would have believed me; for he wrote concerning me in many most memorable passages[k]. But I will now conclude my discourse;

45 Do not think that I will accuse you to the Father; there is one that accuseth you, even Moses, in whom ye trust:

46 For had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me; for he wrote of me.

47 But if ye believe not

[g] If another should come in his own name.] Some think here is a reference to Barchochebas, a noted impostor in the following age, for adhering to whom the Jews were severely chastised by Adrian. (Euseb. Hist. Eccles. lib. iv. cap. 6.) But it is certain there were many other pretended Messiahs, who wrought no miracles, and yet met with a much better reception from the Pharisees than Christ did; and I doubt not but Christ meant to include, at least, all those who appeared while the sanhedrim existed.

[h] You are receiving honour of each other.] This has much more spirit, if we consider it as applied to the members of the sanhedrim, who had such distinguished titles of honour, than if we only take it as spoken to a mixed multitude, who might happen to surround Christ in the temple: the taste of the Populace seldom lies that way.

[i] That Moses, in whom you trust, is your accuser.] This is one of the most expressive passages that can be imagined, in which Moses, their great law-giver, is represented as looking down with indignation upon these elders who gloried in being the most distinguished of his disciples; and seeing how injuriously they treated Jesus the great Prophet, turning himself to God with a severe accusation against them, and urging his own predictions as an aggravation of their inexcusable infidelity.

[k] He wrote concerning me in many most memorable passages.] Christ might perhaps intend course; for if you do not believe his writings, which are daily in your hands, and the Divine authority which you so strenuously assert, how shall I expect that, under the power of such prejudices, you shall believe my words?

SECT. XLVIII.

not his writings, how shall ye believe my words?

John v. 47

When our Lord had thus spoken he withdrew; and they were so overawed with the majesty of his presence and the unanswerable force of his discourse, that they did not attempt to seize or detain him.

IMPROVEMENT.

How various is the evidence of our Redeemer's mission, and with what pleasure should we trace it in the testimony which John bore, the miracles which himself wrought, the testimony of the Father to him and the predictions which the prophets uttered and recorded! To confirm our faith in all, let us be daily searching the scriptures, as the oracles of God and the great fountains of life and salvation. We profess a regard to them: may that regard never be our condemnation! or the blessed penmen witness against us, as Moses against those who gloried in his writings, and yet wanted a true faith in them!

Verse 32--37 39 45

In proportion to the degree in which we are convinced of the truth of Christ's religion, let us set ourselves to cultivate the temper which he exercised. He sought not glory from men, but made his Father's will the rule of his actions, and his Father's honour the end of them. Let us not greedily catch at human applause, but aim at an infinitely nobler object, even the honour that cometh from God alone, the only true judge of actions and characters, because the only discerner of hearts.

41 44

May we have not only his word in our hands, but his love remaining in us; that thereby our natural aversion to the methods of his saving grace in the gospel may be subdued, that notwithstanding the obstinacy of our degenerate wills we may come unto Christ that we may have life! May we receive him with the greatest readiness, as coming to us in his Father's name: and not only for a season rejoice in his light, but stedfastly continue in his word, as made known to all nations for the obedience of faith; that the advantages which we enjoy may not be found to aggravate our guilt and to condemn us with the unbelieving Jews!

42 40 43

Christ

intend to refer to what Moses had written, —of the seed of the woman, (Gen. iii. 15,) —of the seed of Abraham, in which all the nations of the earth should be blessed, (Gen. xxii. 18.)—of the Shiloh, who should come to gather the people, (Gen. xlix. 10.) and of the Prophet whom God should raise up unto them from among their brethren, (Deut. xviii. 18,),—as well as to the many ceremonial institutions which had their final accomplishment in him.

a Returned

Christ shewed the tenderness of his compassion e a in the severity of his rebukes, and spoke these awful and awakening words that these his unjust and inveterate enemies might be saved. May they be the power of God unto our salvation! as they will be, if we believe in him whom he hath sent. SECT. xlviii. 34 33

SECT. XLIX.

Christ vindicates his disciples from the censure of the Pharisees, for rubbing the ears of corn in their hands as they passed through the fields on a sabbath-day. Luke VI. 1—5; Mat. XII. 1—8; Mark II. 23, to the end.

Luke VI. 1.

AND it came to pass, [at that time,] on the second sabbath after the first, that [Jesus] went through the corn-fields; and his disciples [were an hungered.]

Luke VI. 1.

AFTER the preceding conference with the Jews, our Lord departed from Jerusalem, where he had met with such an ungrateful reception, and returned towards Galilee[a]; And it came to pass, that about this time, on the first sabbath after the second [day of unleavened bread[b],] Jesus, SECT. xlix. Luke VI. 1.

[a] Returned towards Galilee.] We may reasonably conclude this, because both Mark and Luke mention his being there quickly after this story. Compare Mark iii. 7, and Luke vi. 12, 13 with vii. 1.

[b] The first sabbath after the second day of unleavened bread.] So I venture to render δευτεροπρωτον, the word used by Luke; yet not without much hesitation; for it is so singular an expression, that (as Erasmus long since did) I despair of seeing its sense exactly ascertained.—Could Theophylact, or his very learned followers, Scaliger, Lightfoot and Whitby, produce any instance of δευτεροδευτερον being used for the second, or δευτεροτριτον for the third of the sabbaths between the passover and pentecost, I should entirely acquiesce in the translation here given; which supposes this was the first of those seven sabbaths which followed the second day of unleavened bread, from whence the fifty days to pentecost were to be computed; see Lev. xxiii. 15, 16.—On the other hand, could the great Grotius or his followers, Woltzogenius and Brennius, have produced an instance in which πρωτοπρωτον, or τριτοπρωτον occurs, there would have been reason to conclude with them, that there were three prime sabbaths which were accounted sabbaths of peculiar solemnity; the first, that after pentecost; and the third, that after the feast of tabernacles.—For want of sufficient authorities to support either of these interpretations, Sir Isaac Newton (on Proph. p. 154), after Epiphanius and Beza, has advanced another yet less probable than either; which is, that it was the second of the two great feasts of the passover; as we call easter-day itself high easter, and its octave, low easter, or low sunday. But though the seventh day of unleavened bread was to be a holy convocation, yet the law expressly allowed the Jews to dress victuals on it (Exod. xii. 16); which would have afforded so direct an answer to the Pharisees' objection, that one can hardly suppose Christ would have failed to urge it.—On either of these two last suppositions, it must be rendered, the second prime sabbath: but as I could not translate it all, without fixing it one way or the other, I chose the former rendering, for these two reasons: (1) Because I cannot find that there is any Divine command to observe the sabbaths which follow the day of the three great feasts, and particularly that of pentecost, with any such peculiar solemnity as to afford sufficient reason for this distinguishing title; though large sacrifices were to be offered every day for seven days after the passover, and for eight during the feast of tabernacles; which are distinctly prescribed, Numb. xxviii. 16—25, and xxix. 12, & seq. And (2) Because, considering what Philo and Isidorus assert, and Josephus intimates, of corn being ripe in Judea about the time of the passover (see Petav. Var. Diss. lib. ii. cap. 11. Plin. Nat. Hist. lib. xviii. cap. 18, and Joseph. Antiq. lib. iii. cap. 10. § 5), and the law of presenting the loaves made of new wheat on the day

SECT. xlix.

Luke VI. 1. Jesus, attended as usual by a train of followers, (who had been with him at the feast), went through the corn-fields; and as his disciples were hungry, and the barley was now ripe, they began, as they went, to pull off some of the ears of corn[c]; and rubbing them in their hands to break off the beards and the husk, did eat the grain.

hungered.] and began [MAR. as they went,] to pluck the ears of corn, and did eat, rubbing them in their hands, [MAT. XII. 1. MARK II. 23.]

Luke VI. 2. And some of the Pharisees, who were employed by the rulers to follow him from place to place as malicious spies on all his discourses and actions, when they saw it, were offended at the time and circumstances of the action[d], and reproving his disciples, said to them, Why do ye thus gather and rub out the grain; for that is a kind of servile work, which it is not lawful for

2 And certain of the Pharisees [when they saw it] said unto them, Why do ye that which is not lawful to do on the sabbath-days? MAT. XII. 2.]

Mat. XII. 2. any one to do on the sabbath-days? And that they might involve their Master also in the same charge, though he did not himself join with them in it, they said to him, Behold, these thy disciples in thy very presence, do that which it is not lawful for any one to do on the sabbath; and wilt thou permit it to pass without a reproof?

MAT. XII. 2. [And] they said unto him, Behold, thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do upon the sabbath-day. [Mark II. 24.]

Luke VI. 3. And Jesus said in answer to them, Have ye, that value yourselves so much on your acquaintance with the sacred writings, and set up for the expositors of them to others, never read that which

LUKE VI. 3. And Jesus answering them said, Have ye not read so much as this, what David day of pentecost (Lev. xxiii. 17), it seems probable the harvest was generally concluded before that day. (See also Scalig. Emend. Temp. Proleg. p. 25, 26, and lib. vi. p. 557, 558.—I suppose these considerations, or the authority of such great names, may have determined most harmonizers to introduce this story immediately after the fifth chapter of John; nor do I see any reason to vary from them herein. And the order would be the same if Reland's conjecture were to be admitted, that the πρωτοπρωτον was the first sabbath in the civil, and the δευτεροπρωτον the first in the ecclesiastical year. (See Reland. Antiq. Heb. lib. iv. cap. 9.) But this is a conjecture, which has so little to support it even in hypothesis, as scarcely to deserve a mention.

[c] To pull off some of the ears of corn.] The word στάχυας, here used, may indifferently signify ears of any kind of grain; but it might probably be barley, that being first ripe in those parts. (Compare Exod. ix. 31, 32.) Sir Isaac Newton lays a great deal of stress on this, for fixing the time of Christ's death: concluding this passover must happen late, and that it was two years before that in which our Lord was crucified; and consequently that Christ's death must be fixed to such a time that the passover two years before it may be a late one. But I fear the argument is not so conclusive as one could wish, considering with what ingenuity and labour it is pursued. For that great man seems to have forgot how expressly Maimonides and the other rabbies assert that the Jews did not always fix their passover by the vernal equinox; but, in case of a backward spring, added an intercalary month between that and Abib. (See Lightfoot's Hor. Heb. on Mat. xii. 1.) If this be credible it shews how little we can ascertain the Jewish passovers by astronomical calculations; and if it be not, why did Sir Isaac proceed in his computations on those rules for the translation of feasts, which we have only by late rabbinical tradition? See Bochart. Hieroz. lib. ii. cap. 50.

[d] Offended at the time and circumstances of the action.] The law so expressly allowed to pluck ears of corn as one passed through a field, that, malignant as they were, they pretended not to find fault with the thing itself (see Deut. xxiii. 25.) but they were perverse enough to think this a kind of reaping and dressing the grain, which was indeed forbidden on the sabbath.

[e] Abiathar

David did, when [MARK, he had need and] was an hungred, [MARK, he] and they which were with him? [MAT. XII. 3.—MARK II. 25.]

4 How he went into the house of God [MARK, in the days of Abiathar the high priest,] and did take and eat the shew-bread, and gave also to them that were with him, [which was not lawful for him to eat, neither for them] but for the priests alone? [MAT. XII. 4. MARK II. 26.]

MAT. XII. 5. Or have ye not read in the law, how that on the sabbath-days the priests in the temple profane the sabbath, and are blameless?

6 But I say unto you, That in this place is one greater than the temple.

which David did in his extreme necessity, when he and they that were with him were hungry? How he went into the tabernacle, which is the house of God, in the days of Abiathar, who was afterwards the high priest[e], and then officiated for his father Ahimelech; (see 1 Sam. xxi. 3, & seq.) Have ye forgot that this faithful servant of God, this man after his own heart, took and eat the shew-bread, which had that very day been taken from the holy table, and gave it also to those that attended him; which it was neither lawful for him nor them to eat, nor even for the Levites themselves, but for the priests alone? Yet in this case their necessity was judged a sufficient excuse for dispensing with the observance of such a ceremonial institution; see Lev. xxiv. 6—9.)

SECT. XLIX.

Luke VI. 3.

4

Or have ye not read in the law, that by those sacrifices which are appointed for the sabbath-day, and some of them peculiar to it, the priests themselves, who minister in the temple, are obliged to perform very servile works on the sabbath-days, in making up the fires, killing, slaying and dressing the sacrifices, and the like, by which others would be justly reckoned to profane the sabbath; and yet, doing it with an immediate reference to the service of God, they are accounted blameless, and really are so. Now 6 I say unto you, That there is [something] greater than the temple here[f], and of much more importance than the service of it. My disciples therefore may surely be vindicated on such an occasion as this, when in attendance upon me, in

Mat. XII. 5.

[e] Abiathar, who was afterwards the high priest.] If our present reading (which Beza suspects, though older than the Syriac version) be allowed as genuine, here is a remarkable instance of a person being designed by an office which he did not bear till after the date of the event referred to; in like manner as Cyrenius (Luke ii. 2.) is called governor of Syria because he was so after the enrolment. It seems indeed that Ahimelech was high priest when David took the shew bread, though in all the story he is only called the priest; and as it is merely an arbitrary supposition that the father was sometimes called Abiathar, or the son of Ahimelech, it seems impossible to defend the received reading otherwise than by supposing with Grotius, that as Abiathar was a much more celebrated person than his father, our Lord mentions his name in preference to the other. He was probably present, and, for any thing we certainly know, his aged father might act by his advice in the affair referred to; which if he did, it was exceeding proper to mention him here.

[f] Something greater than the temple.] So many manuscripts, with Theophylact, read μειζον, something greater, instead of μειζων, one greater, (see Dr. Mill in loc.) and in this view the opposition seems so natural that I prefer this reading. Our Lord might perhaps point to his own body, the noblest temple of the Deity (compare John ii. 21, sect. xxiv.) or it might refer to the work then going on: but the former sense is much more natural.

SECT. xlix.

in prosecution of my service, they do what is so much less laborious than the offices which you allow there in the priests.

Mark II. 27. And he said unto them farther on this occasion, The sabbath was made for the benefit of man, subservient to the rest and relief of his body, as well as to be spent in religious improvement; and not man for the observation of the sabbath, or of any other ceremonial institution whatsoever.

MARK II. 27. And he said unto them, The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath.—[LUKE VI. 5.]

Mat. XII. 7. But if ye had known the intent of that scripture, Hos. vi. 6. and had considered what this meaneth, "I require mercy and not sacrifice[g]; "that is, I always prefer acts of charity to matters of positive institution, when in any instance they interfere with each other[h];" you would not have condemned the innocent, as you have now done, merely for rubbing out a handful of corn to refresh them in my service.

MAT. XII. 7. But if ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless.

8 You are therefore, on the whole, greatly to blame to censure them; and would be so, if they had only my dispensation for what they do, and were defended by no farther arguments; for the Son of man is a person of so great dignity and authority, that he indeed is Lord[i] even of the g I require mercy, and not sacrifice.] So θελω evidently signifies when it expresses the will of a superior; and this the original Hebrew word imports, which seems here to answer to that modern phrase used by princes, Such is our pleasure.

8 For the Son of man is Lord even of the sabbath-day. [MARK II. 28. LUKE VI. 5.

h I always prefer acts of charity, &c.] I must here repeat a very obvious remark, because the sense of so many important scriptures depends upon it, viz. that according to the genius of the Hebrew language, one thing seems to be forbidden and another commanded, when the meaning only is that the latter is greatly to be preferred to the former. The text before us is a remarkable instance of this; as likewise Joel ii. 13. Mat. vi. 19, 20 John vi. 27. Luke xii. 4 5. and Col. iii. 2. And it is evident that Gen. xlv. 8. Exod. xvi. 8. John v. 10. vii. 19. and many more passages, are to be expounded in the same comparative sense. A late ingenious writer says, "Our Lord does not compare moral and positive duties together here, but only the commandments of men with the commandments of God" But it is plain the series of our Lord's arguments here is intended to prove that circumstances of necessity dispense with some ceremonial observances, which were in the general commanded by God; and manifestly goes upon this foundation, that ceremonial institutions being the means of religion, if circumstances occurred in which they interfered with the end of it, they were suspended of course; and when this is the case, the conscience of particular persons is to judge as in the sight of God.

i For the Son of man is Lord, &c.] The author of the new translation renders it in Matthew, The sabbath is subservient to man; though he paraphrases it as it stands in Mark, The Son of man has a power of dispensing with the law of the sabbath; which is undoubtedly the true sense: for I cannot find that the Son of man does, in the New Testament, signify any one but Christ; and were the words (which are exactly the same) to be translated in Mark as he has rendered them in Matthew, they would be a mere repetition of ver. 27, The sabbath was made for man, &c.—It is worthy of our notice that Matthew introduces these words with γαρ, for, and Mark with ωςε, therefore, or so that; and both connections may be justified. Yet as it is hardly to be imagined both were equally intended, I look upon this to be a considerable proof that the sacred writers were not always critically exact in the use of their particles: a remark which I apprehend to be of great importance both for clearing their sense and vindicating their character. Whoever considers the ambiguity of many of those Hebrew the sabbath [itself] [k]; and he may hereafter give you far more surprising instances of his power over it. SECT. XLIX. Mat. XII. 8.

IMPROVEMENT.

WITH pleasure we observe the zeal which these attendants of Christ express, who chose on a sacred festival to expose themselves to hunger as well as toil, rather than they would lose the benefit of his instructions, which, like the heavenly manna on the day preceding the sabbath, were then poured out in a double plenty. But what numerous auditory is so candid as to contain none who come, like these Pharisees, with a desire to cavil rather than to learn! The malignity of their temper sufficiently appeared in taking exception at so small a circumstance: hypocrites that could thus strain at a gnat and yet swallow a camel, (Mat. xxiii. 24.) scrupling to rub out a few grains of corn, while they sought to devour widows' houses, and were, under this grave mask of the strictest piety, inwardly full of rapine and all wickedness! (Luke xx. 47. and xi. 39.) Ver. 1, 2

Let us attend to the apology Christ makes for his disciples. It speaks his own authority, as greater than the temple, and Lord of the sabbath: and well might he, in whom dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead bodily, without the least presumption, use such language as this. It likewise declares much of the genius of his religion, which deals not in forms and ceremonies, and dispenses even with rituals of a Divine appointment, when humanity and benevolence interfere with the observance of them. Since God will have mercy rather than sacrifice, let us abhor the perverseness and wickedness of those who sacrifice mercy itself, not merely to ceremonies of a Divine original, but to their own arbitrary invention, superstitious dreams and precarious though confident determinations. Let us practise habitual caution and candour, lest, before we are aware, we condemn the innocent and the pious, and become guilty of what is much more displeasing in the sight of God than the faults which a peevish and censorious temper may fancy it discovers in our brethren. 6, 8 7

SECT.

Hebrew particles which correspond to the Greek, will find little reason to wonder at it. Compare Luke xi. 36. sect. lxiv. and note d there.

k Even of the sabbath itself; καὶ τῷ σαββάτῳ.] This certainly implies that the sabbath was an institution of great and distinguished importance; and may perhaps also refer to that signal authority which Christ by the ministry of his apostles should exert over it, in changing it from the seventh to the first day of the week.

SECT. L.

Christ, on a following sabbath cures a man whose hand was withered; and vindicates that action from the cavils of the Pharisees. Luke VI. 6—11. Mat. XII. 9—15. Mark III. 1—7.

LUKE VI. 6.

SECT. 1. Luke VI. 6.

WE have just mentioned an instance of the Pharisees cavilling at a very innocent action of the disciples; we shall now proceed to another, in which they charged our Lord himself with the violation of the same sacred rest, in a yet more malicious and unreasonable manner. For it came to pass also, when he was departed from thence[a] (that is, from the town in whose neighbouring fields they had rubbed out the ears of corn), that on another sabbath he entered again, as he was used to do, into the synagogue, in some other city which lay in his way through Galilee, and taught his heavenly doctrine there. And behold, a remarkable circumstance occurred; for there was a man present, whose right hand was withered, the nerves and sinews of it being so shrunk up that it was entirely useless.

7 And the scribes and Pharisees, who were there also present with him, watched him, to observe whether he would again heal on the sabbath-day; that they might find some new matter for an accusation against him, having succeeded so ill in the former attempt, and plainly perceiving that his reputation grew more and more among the people.

8 But when the synagogue-worship was dispatched, and our Lord's sermon was also concluded; he, knowing the malignity and wickedness of their thoughts and views, instead of being discouraged by the design they had against him,

LUKE VI. 6.

AND it came to pass also, [when he was departed thence,] on another sabbath, that he entered [MARK, again] into the synagogue, and taught: and [behold,] there was a man [MARK, there,] whose right hand was withered. [MAT. XII. 9, 10. MARK III. 1.]

7 And the scribes and Pharisees watched him, whether he would heal on the sabbath-day; that they might find an accusation against him. [MARK III. 2.]

8 But he knew their thoughts, and said to the man which had the withered hand, Rise up, and stand forth in the midst. And he arose and stood forth. [MARK III. 3.]

[a] When he was departed from thence.] There can be no doubt as to the connection of this story with the preceding, in which all the evangelists agree; and indeed had not Luke told us it was on another sabbath, the words of Matthew would have led us to imagine it had been the same day. Perhaps he might spend most of the week in the town to which the fields mentioned above belonged.—Beza's favourite manuscript, now at Cambridge, as well as one of Stephens's, adds the following words in Luke, immediately before this story: The same day, seeing a certain man at work on the sabbath, he said to him, O man, if thou knowest what thou doest, thou art happy; but if thou dost not know it, thou art cursed, and a transgressor of the law. This is undoubtedly a spurious addition; for had the Pharisees heard any thing like this from Christ, they would have followed him no farther, and observed him no more, to find matter even of capital accusation against him. And indeed it goes on a very false supposition that the ceremonial law was already abrogated.

[b] They

him, said to the man who had the withered hand, SECT. I.
Rise up from thy seat, and stand in the midst of the assembly: and he cheerfully arose, and stood in the most conspicuous part of the synagogue, hoping to receive the favour of a cure. Luke VI. 8.

MAT. XII. 10.—And they asked him, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath-days? that they might accuse him.

And as the Pharisees saw what Jesus intended, they asked him, saying, Is it then to be taken for granted that it is lawful to cure on sabbath-days, as well as at other times? And they put the question in that general form [b], on purpose that they might have an opportunity to accuse him, and not from any desire of instruction. Mat. XII. 10.

11 And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you, that shall have one sheep, and if it fall into a pit on the sabbath-day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out?

And he said to them, in reply to that ensnaring question, What man is there of you, in all this assembly, who, if he have but one sheep that on the sabbath-day should fall into a pit [c], and be in danger of perishing there, would not lay hold of it without delay, and make no scruple of attempting presently to raise it up from thence, though it would be a work of some labour and difficulty? 11 12 How much then is a man better than a sheep? Wherefore it is lawful to do well on the sabbath-days.

Now I leave it to your own consciences to reflect how much is a man better than a sheep? So that you must, on your own principles, allow that it is lawful to do well, and to perform the lovely acts of charity and mercy [d] even on sabbath-days: and you must own, for instance, that if a man should fall into a pit, it would be lawful on that day to pull him out; and consequently too, it must be lawful, if he labours under a disease, to apply any proper remedies for his cure; much more then must it be so to cure a person, without any laborious application merely by speaking a word. 12

LUKE VI. 9. Then said Jesus unto them,

Then Jesus said farther to them, To end the controversy in a few words, I will ask you one thing more; Is it lawful to do good on sabbath-days, Luke VI. 9.

b They put the question in that general form.] The word θεραπευειν is very extensive, and properly includes all the care, labour, and attendance, which the case of any distempered or wounded person can require; as I apprehend our English word cure also does; though, through the poverty of our language, we are forced to apply it to those miraculous effects which were so instantaneously produced by the healing word of our blessed Redeemer.—What Syriac word they might use I know not; but it is plain the question is put in very general terms, which best favoured their base purpose of founding an accusation on our Lord's answer.

c If ye have but one sheep that should fall into a pit.] The common version is more literal; but that which I have given plainly suits our English idiom better, and appears to me perfectly faithful, for the stress of the thought cannot lie on supposing a man to have but one sheep in all; but in this, that one only fell into the pit, yet for the comparatively small value of that one he would not scruple to undertake the labour of helping it out on the sabbath.

d To do well, and to perform the lovely acts of charity and mercy.] This is the meaning of that phrase, καλως ποιειν; in the use of which the evangelist might intimate an appeal to some remainders of a moral sense, distinguishing the natural beauty of such actions, which these worst of men could not totally eradicate.

e Secretly

SECT. I.

days, or to do evil? to save life, or to destroy [and] even kill the innocent? thereby secretly referring to the purpose of destroying his life [e], which, while they were thus scrupulous about the observation of the sabbath, they were even then forming in their hearts. But they were silent; being convinced in their own minds of the reasonableness of what he said, and stung with secret remorse of conscience, yet unwilling to confess what they saw and felt.

Luke vi. 9.

Mark III. 4.

I will ask you one thing: Is it lawful on the sabbath days to do good, or to do evil? to save life, or to [kill, and] destroy it? [MARK III. 4.]

MARK III. 4. But they held their peace.

5 And when he had looked around upon them all with a just indignation, being grieved for the hardness of their hearts, and for that condemnation and ruin which he knew it would bring upon them, as well as for the mischief it might occasion to others, he says to the man that laboured under the calamity which was mentioned before, Stretch forth thine hand. And accordingly he stretched it out, and was not only strengthened for that particular motion of which he was before incapable, but his hand was perfectly restored, and was well and strong as the other.

5 And when he had looked round about [LUKE, upon them all] with anger, being grieved for the hardness of their hearts, he said unto the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it out: and his hand was restored whole as the other. [MAT. XII. 13.—LUKE VI. 10.]

6 And the Pharisees were so incensed at the affront which they imagined they had received in our Lord's neglecting their censure, and intimating his knowledge of the evil purposes of their hearts, that they were no longer able to bear the place; but went out of the synagogue, and immediately took counsel together with the Herodians [f], who, different as their civil and religious

6 And the Pharisees went forth, and straightway took counsel

[e] Secretly referring to the purpose of destroying his life.] I appeal to every reader of taste whether there be not another kind of spirit in these words, on this supposition of such a reference, than we could find in them, by any forced attempt to prove, that not to have cured a withered hand in these circumstances would have been, in a sense, destroying life. Such cold and unnatural criticisms have been a great dishonour to scripture, and I persuade myself the authors of them have not seen whither they tended.

[f] With the Herodians.] The Herodians were a sect of men, who, so far as we can judge by their name, seem to have distinguished themselves by their zeal for the family of Herod; whom they might perhaps compliment with the title of the Messiah, though it is plain that neither Herod himself nor the generality of the people fell in with this extravagant opinion: (see Mat. ii. 1—4.) However, from their high regard to Herod, these men would naturally be zealous for the authority of the Romans, by whose means Herod was made and continued king; and it is probable, as Dr. Prideaux conjectures (Connect. Vol. II. part 2, book 5, ad fin.) that they might incline to conform to them in some particulars which the law would not allow of; and particularly in the admission of images, though not in the religious, or rather idolatrous, use of them. Herod's attempt to set up a golden eagle over the east gate of the temple is well known (see Joseph. Antiq. lib. xvii. cap. 6, (al. 8. § 1—3.) these complaisant courtiers would, no doubt, defend it; and the same temper might discover itself in many other instances. On all these accounts they were most diametrically opposite to the Pharisees; so that the conjunction of their counsels against Christ is a very memorable proof of the keenness of that malice which could thus cause them to forget so deep a quarrel with each other.

sel with the Herodians against him, how they might destroy him. [Mat. XII. 14.]

Luke VI. 11. And they were filled with madness, and communed one with another what they might do to Jesus.

Mat. XII. 15.—But when Jesus knew it, he withdrew himself from thence, [with his disciples to the sea.] [Mark III. 7.]

ligious notions were from those of the Pharisees joined with them in their enmity to Christ, and zealously united in a conspiracy against him, how they might destroy him, either by a public prosecution, or a private assassination. And they were filled with madness and rage against him, and discoursed over the point at large with each other, to determine what they might do to prevent the growing reputation of Jesus among the people, and to put a period at once to his labours and his life. SECT. I. Luke VI. 11.

But Jesus knowing [it,] that nothing might hinder him from fulfilling his ministry, withdrew himself from thence, and went with his disciples to the sea of Galilee, on the shore of which he frequently preached to the people. Mat. XII. 15.

IMPROVEMENT.

What actions are so fair and lovely, that malice cannot turn them into reproach! What characters are so unblemished, what so exemplary, that uncharitableness cannot revile and condemn them! While the eyes of distressed multitudes were turned to Christ as their only Physician and most valuable Friend, the eyes of the Pharisees are continually upon him for evil: and they behold his wondrous miracles; not for their own conviction, but that they may, if possible, turn them into the means of his destruction. So ineffectual are the most obvious and demonstrative arguments, till Divine grace conquer men's natural aversion to a Redeemer's kingdom and captivate their hearts to the obedience of faith! Luke VI. 7. 9, 11

To have reviled and dishonoured Christ and to have endeavoured to prevent the success of his ministry, had been a daring crime: but these desperate wretches conspire against his life; and, different as their principles and interests were, form a transient friendship to be cemented by his blood. Blessed Jesus! well mightest thou say, Many good works have I shewn you, and for which of them would you murder me; (John x. 32.) Mark III. 6.

What reasoning could be more plain and forcible than this which our Lord used? and yet, like deaf adders, they stop their ears, and harden their hearts against it. Inhuman creatures, that were more concerned for the safety of a sheep than the happiness of a man! Yet would to God that unworthy temper had died with them; for surely there are those, even among professing Christians, who regard their cattle more than even the souls committed Mark XII. 11, 12.

SECT. I. mitted by Providence to their care, and therefore, no doubt, more than their own too!

Mark III. 5 The indignation which Christ felt on this occasion was a just and amiable passion. Happy they, whose anger, like his, is only awakened by sin, and burns only to destroy that accursed thing?

Mat. XII. 13 The malice of the Pharisees did not restrain the benevolence of our compassionate Saviour, nor deprive the poor patient of his cure. Such let our conduct be! Let us not be overcome of evil: let not the most unjust censures, or the most malicious opposition break our spirits so as to prevent us from doing our duty.

Luke VI. 11 If others are mad with persecuting rage, let us pity them; and let all their fury against the cause of God be improved as a motive to excite our most zealous and courageous endeavours for its service.

SECT. LI.

Christ retiring to the sea side, cures great multitudes with such modesty and gentleness as was agreeable to Isaiah's prophetic description of his conduct. Mark III. 7—12. Mat. XII. 15—21.

MARK III. 7.

SECT. li. IT was before observed that Jesus retired from the synagogue, where he had cured the man

Mark III. 7 that had a withered hand, and went with his disciples to the sea-shore: we now pursue the story[a], and add, that he was there attended by a great multitude of people who followed him 8 from Galilee, and even from Judea: And particularly from Jerusalem, where that extraordinary cure lately wrought at the pool of Bethesda, and that excellent defence with which it was followed, had greatly increased his popularity: nay, there were some that came yet farther from the south, and were from Idumea; the natives of which country being long since obliged to become Jews[b], had many of them seen Jesus at the feasts; and others too attended him

MARK III. 7.

AND a great multitude from Galilee followed him, and from Judea, [MAT. XII. 15.—]

8 And from Jerusalem, and from Idumea, and from beyond Jordan, and they about Tyre, a We now pursue the story.] The connection of this section with the preceding, both in Matthew and Mark, is express: and I desire the reader would once for all observe, that when I give no reason for placing the sections in the order in which they stand, it is because I am not aware there is any difficulty or controversy about them. And their following each other in the evangelists, though without any express note of exact connection, I always reckon a good reason for continuing that order, unless there be some weighty argument inducing us to change it.

b Obliged to become Jews.] That Hyrcanus had obliged them to this about an hundred and fifty years before the birth of Christ, we are assured by the account Josephus gives us, Antiq. lib. xiii. cap. 9, (al. 17) § 1.

c Rushed

Tyre and Sidon, a great multitude, when they had heard what great things he did, came unto him.

him from the eastern regions which lay beyond Jordan; and also a great multitude from the western parts, even as far as from the neighbourhood of Tyre and Sidon, having heard what great and glorious things he did, came to him.

SECT. li.

Mark III. 8.

9 And he spake unto his disciples, that a small ship should wait on him, because of the multitude, lest they should throng him.

And he spoke to his disciples, that a little vessel should be in readiness near him, because of the multitude that was now flocking around him; that they might not throng in upon him in a manner which would have been very inconvenient to him, and would have prevented great numbers of them from seeing and hearing what passed. 9

10 For he had healed many, [and he healed them all,] insomuch that they pressed upon him for to touch him, as many as had plagues. [MAT. XII. 15.]

For he had healed many and [indeed] all that applied to him; so that they eagerly rushed in upon him[c], even as many as were under any remarkable scourge of God's afflicting hand, that they might touch him, and so partake of that healing virtue which went out from him. 10

11 And unclean spirits, when they saw him, fell down before him, and cried, saying, Thou art the Son of God.

And they who were possessed with impure spirits, as soon as ever they saw him, though they before were perfect strangers to him, immediately fell down before him in a posture of submission and homage; and such a terror seized the demons that possessed them, that they cried out, with all the appearances of horror and confusion, saying, We know that thou art the Messiah, the Son of the most high God[d]. 11

12 And he straitly charged them that they should not make him

But our Lord preserved the usual modesty of his temper on these occasions as well as others; and, being desirous to occasion as little disturbance and offence as possible, he charged them with strictness, and some appearance of severity[e], that they should not make him known: for, intending to visit several of those parts himself, he 12 c Rushed in upon him.] This the phrase επιπιπτειν αυτω yet more strongly expresses; which signifies that they were ready to drive each other upon him, so that those nearer him could hardly stand, being pressed forward by those behind.

d Thou art the Messiah, the Son of the most high God.] The Leicester manuscript reads it, Συ ει ο Θεος, υιος της Θεας; Thou art God, the Son of God: which I mention, not that I think the authority of that sufficient to justify a change in the received reading, but only as one remarkable instance, among many others which I could easily give, of the negligence with which that manuscript was collated by Dr. Mill's correspondent; since this reading, memorable as it is, is omitted by the Doctor. But I hope the world will ere long be favoured with a far more exact account, not only of that manuscript, but of several others much more valuable than that, some quite omitted by Dr. Mill, and others very imperfectly collated. This we are encouraged to expect from the reverend, accurate and indefatigable Mr. Wasse of Ayno, whose obliging readiness to assist me in this work I do myself the honour of acknowledging with the utmost gratitude.—His death, since the publication of the first edition of this volume, is a calamity to the learned world long to be lamented.

e He charged them with strictness, and some appearance of severity.] This we may take to be included in the force of that expression, πολλα επιτιμα αυτοις.

SECT. li.

he was unwilling to give an unnecessary alarm to his enemies; and he always chose to avoid every degree of ostentation.

him known. [MAT. XII. 16.]

Mat. XII. 17.

So that in him it might be evidently seen to be accomplished which was spoken by Isaiah the prophet[f] (Isa. xlii. 1—4), saying, "Behold the great Messiah, my Servant whom I have chosen for the great work of redeeming and saving my people; he is my Beloved, in whom my very soul does entirely acquiesce as every way qualified to perform it: for I will put my Spirit upon him; and he shall proclaim judgment, that is, the great law of religion, righteousness and truth, even to the most distant of the heathen nations. He shall not contend with martial violence, nor cry out in a clamorous and turbulent manner; nor shall any one hear his voice in the streets, as giving a loud and disquieting alarm: But he shall manage his administration with so much gentleness and sweetness, with so much caution and tenderness, that (as it is proverbially expressed) he shall not break even a bruised reed or cane, which snaps asunder immediately when pressed with any considerable weight; nor shall he extinguish even the smoking flax[g], or the wick of a lamp, which, when it is first beginning to kindle, is put out by every little motion: with such kind and condescending regards to the weakest of his people, and to the first openings and symptoms of a hopeful character, shall he proceed, till he send forth judgment to victory[h], or till he make his righteous cause gloriously triumphant

MAT. XII. 17. That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, 18 Behold my Servant whom I have chosen, my Beloved in whom my soul is well pleased: I will put my Spirit upon him, and he shall shew judgment to the Gentiles.

19 He shall not strive, nor cry, neither shall any man hear his voice in the streets.

20 A bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax shall he not quench, till he send forth judgment unto victory.

[f] By Isaiah the prophet.] I refer the learned reader to Grotius and Heinsius for the difference between the original and the quotation here, which chiefly lies in the clause of sending forth judgment unto victory.

[g] He shall not break a bruised reed, nor extinguish the smoking flax.] The immense pains Zegerus and some other commentators have taken to shew on what accounts either the Pharisees or the multitudes, or the Jews or Gentiles, might be compared to a bruised reed or smoking flax, seem very wide of the purpose. They seem to be only proverbial expressions to signify a person of a most gentle character (as I illustrate them above), and something resemble the proverb among the Spanish Jews to the same purpose; If such a one were to walk on a pavement of eggs he would not break them: (see Pol. Synops. in loc.) To suppose, with Dr. Lightfoot, it signifies he shall not make so much noise as breaking a bruised reed does, or pouring water on smoking flax, sinks the idea too low.

[h] Till he send forth judgment to victory.] Isaiah says to truth: and we may take the words to signify till he make the cause of righteousness and truth completely victorious; or, till at length he take a righteous and speedy vengeance on the Jews for rejecting him, to verify and fulfil the truth of his predictions.—I have expressed it in a manner which may suit either; but I think the former much preferable, since then the words describe the general character of Christ's administration in all ages, and especially as it best agrees with the sense of the original, He shall bring forth judgment unto truth; He shall not fail, nor be discouraged, till he have set, or established, judgment in the earth: which phrases explain each other, and the sense of each is abridged here.

[i] And

21 And in his name shall the Gentiles trust.

triumphant over all opposition. And this gentle and gracious administration shall charm mankind in so sensible and irresistible a manner, that the Gentiles shall confide in his illustrious name[1]; and distant, yea barbarous nations, shall seek their refuge and salvation in his grace; though Israel may ungratefully reject him, and therefore be justly abandoned by God."

SECT. li.

Mark XII. 21.

IMPROVEMENT.

SURELY face does not more exactly answer to face in water than the character of Christ drawn by the prophet to his temper and conduct as described by the evangelists. How should Zion rejoice, and the daughter of Jerusalem shout, that such a King cometh unto her, meek and having salvation! (Zech. ix. 9.) Let us with pleasure trace his gentle administration, and with a cheerful confidence commit our souls to so kind and so faithful a hand: far from breaking, he will strengthen the bruised reed; far from quenching the smoking flax, he will rather blow it up into a flame.

Mat. XI. 17

20

How well does it become the disciples of Christ, and especially how well does it become his ministers, to imitate what was so amiable in their Lord, and not to despise the day of small things! Let us not strive nor cry; but, laying aside all unnecessary contentions and angry debates, let us receive one another as Christ hath received us (Rom. xv. 7), and, avoiding all vain ostentation, let us silently and meekly attend, each of us, to the discharge of his proper office. So may we hope that the cause of religion will go on successfully around us, and that righteousness will in due time be brought forth to complete victory over all opposition, and, by its own genuine influences, be happily established in the earth.

19

Mat. XII. 20

The Gentiles trust in a Redeemer's name, and the British Isles are numbered among those that wait for his law. May our souls with humble submission bow themselves to receive it, and observe it with such faithful care and obedient regards, that our example, wherever it is seen, may promote the reception of it among those that as yet are strangers to it!

SECT.

[1] And the Gentiles shall confide in his name.] Isaiah's saying, chap. xlii. 4. The isles shall wait for his law, is illustrated and explained by this correspondent phrase, which Matthew uses.

SECT. LII.

Our Lord having spent the night in prayer on a mountain, in the morning chuses the twelve apostles; and then comes down to the multitude assembled in the plain, and performs a great number of miracles among them. Luke VI. 12—19. Mark III. 13—19.

Luke VI. 12.

SECT. lii.

Luke VI. 12. AND it came to pass in those days[a] of his teaching near the sea of Galilee, that Jesus, seeing the general notice which was taken of his appearance, and the inclination which multitudes had to be farther informed concerning him, determined to chuse a number of persons who should assist and succeed him in his ministerial work. And as the office to which he intended to assign them was of so great importance, even to the remotest ages, previous to the choice of them he went forth to a neighbouring mountain to pray; and his heart was so much enlarged on this momentous occasion that, notwithstanding all the labours of the preceding day, he continued all night at his devotions, in an oratory [devoted to the service] of God[b], where he had some opportunity of being sheltered by the trees which were planted round it.

Luke VI. 12. AND it came to pass in those days, that he went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God. [Mark III. 13.]

13 And when it was day, early in the morning he called his disciples to him, [even] those whom he pleased, (compare John xv. 16,) and they cheerfully came to him upon his summons: and out of them he chose [and] constituted twelve[c], whom he also

13 And when it was day, he called unto him his disciples, [whom he would; and they

[a] In those days.] There can be no doubt of the place of this section, since this choice of the twelve apostles is mentioned both by Mark and Luke just in this connection; and Matthew does not mention it at all till he comes to speak of the mission of the twelve, which is plainly a different thing, and happened some time after. Compare Luke xii. 1, 2. with Mat. x. 1—5. sect. lxxiv.

[b] In an oratory [devoted to the service] of God; εν τη προσευχη του Θεου.] This is so singular an expression that I cannot agree with our translation; but rather conclude with Drusius, Prideaux, Whitby, Hammond, and many other good critics, that we are to understand it of an oratory, or proseucha, or prayer-house, as Dr. Watts chuses to render it, (in his late ingenious discourse on the Holiness of Places, p. 111.) and as the word seems also to be used, Acts xvi. 13. (See Hammond in loc.) Descriptions of these places may be found in most writers of Jewish Antiquities, and in none that I know of better than in Calmet) at the word Proseuche, and in Prideaux's Connection, Vol. I. p. 387—389. It is well known they were open at the top, and planted round with trees; as well as often situate by the sides of seas or rivers, as was probably the case here. I did not chuse, with Dr. Whitby, to render it in God's house of prayer, that phrase having been so peculiarly appropriated to the temple. See Mat. xxi. 13.

[c] Constituted twelve.] So I chuse to render εποιησε rather than ordained; ordination to the ministry, carrying along with it an idea by no means suiting what passed now, which was so long before their entering on the office. The word is used elsewhere for appointing to an office, 1 Sam. xii. 6. Gr. and Heb. iii. 2.—It is probable our Lord they came unto him:] and of them he chose [and ordained] twelve whom also he named apostles [that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach;] MARK III. 13. 14.

SECT. iii.

also named his apostles, or envoys; a name which well expressed the office for which they were designed: these he now fixed upon, that for some time they should continually be with him, not only to attend upon his public ministry, but to enjoy the benefit of his private conversation; that he might furnish them the better for the great work in which they were to be employed; and that at length, after suitable preparation, he might with more advantage, send them abroad to preach his gospel, and thereby make way for his own visits to some more distant parts where he had not yet been. And to enable them the more effectually to do it, he determined that they should then have power to heal distempers, and to cast out demons from those unhappy people who were possessed by them; well knowing such endowments would command a regard, notwithstanding the meanness of their appearance.

Luke VI. 13.

Mark III. 15.

MARK III. 15. And to have power to heal sicknessess, and to cast out devils.

16 And Simon he sirnamed Peter; [LUKE VI. 41.—]

And the twelve persons who were so signally honoured by him, and whose names (excepting that of Judas Iscariot) will be ever venerable in the Christian church, as being, next to Christ, the great foundations of it, (Eph. ii. 20. Rev. xxi. 14,) were these; Simon, whom (it has been observed before, John i. 42, p. 125) he sirnamed Peter[d], that is, a rock, on account of his remarkable steadiness and intrepidity of temper (see Isa. l. 7,) as well as the peculiar use to be made of him: And James, [the son] of Zebedee, the fisherman; and John the beloved disciple, who was the brother of James: and he sirnamed them Boanerges, which signifies, Sons of thunder[e]; thereby intimating with what victorious and resistless power they should bear down all opposition, and with Divine eloquence and mighty miracles confound the enemies of his gospel:

16

17 And James the son of Zebedee, and John the brother of James; (and he sirnamed them Boanerges, which is, The sons of thunder; (LUKE VI. 14.—].

17

Lord chose twelve apostles in reference to the twelve tribes of Israel, (see Mat. xix. 28. Luke xxii. 30. Rev. xxi. 12, 14. and compare Exod. xxiv. 4. Deut. i. 23; and Josh. iv. 2, 3,) and therefore care was taken, on the death of Judas, to chuse another to make up the number. (Acts i. 21. 22, 26.) Which seems to have been a piece of respect paid to the Jews previous to the grand offer of the gospel to them; whereas when they had generally rejected it, two more, Paul and Barnabas, were added without any regard to the particular number of twelve.

d He sirnamed Peter.] To sirname, here plainly signifies to give an additional name; επεθηκε τω Σιμωνι ονομα Πετρον.

e Boanerges, which signifies Sons of thunder.] As it stands in this form it is plainly a corruption of BENEI REGISH. Considering the remarkable gentleness of John's temper and manner of writing, it is more reasonable to interpret this title as in the paraphrase, than to refer it to any thing peculiarly awful or awakening in their manner of address beyond what was to be found in the other apostles.

f Lebbeus,

SECT. III.

gospel: And Andrew, and Philip, of whose first acquaintance with Christ we were before informed, (John i. 40, 43;) and Bartholomew; and Matthew, or Levi, who had lately been called from the infamous employment of a publican, (Mat. ix. 9. p. 249.) and Thomas, who was also called Didymus, as having a twin brother; and James [the son] of Alpheus, called James the less, (Mark xv. 40) and Lebbeus, whose sirname was Thaddeus, and who was [also called] Judas, or Jude, [the brother] of James[f]; and Simon the Canaanite, called also Zelotes[g]; or the zealot, as having before professed a distinguished zeal for the law: And, worthy of being mentioned in the last place, or rather unworthy of being mentioned at all, otherwise than with the greatest abhorrence, was Judas Iscariot, or a man of Carioth, (Josh. xv. 25,) that infamous abandoned wretch, who also was the traitor, that afterwards was so ungrateful to his Lord, that he even betrayed him[h], into the hands of his bloody enemies: he had professed himself, with secular and worldly views, a disciple of Christ; and though our Lord well knew him, yet, as his character was free from any visible ground of suspicion, in order to accomplish what was delivered in the sacred oracles, he was pleased to invest him with this holy office, and to place him among his apostles: (compare John xiii. 18.) And

Mark III. 17.

18 And Andrew, and Philip, and Bartholomew, and Matthew and Thomas, and James the son of Alpheus, and Thaddeus, [or Judas the brother of James,] and Simon the Canaanite, [called Zelotes;] — [LUKE VI. 14, 15, 16.—]

19 And Judas Iscariot, [which also was the traitor,] which also betrayed him.— [LUKE VI. 16.—]

[f] Lebbeus, whose sirname was Thaddeus, and who was also called Judas, or Jude, the brother of James.] That this person had all these names appears from comparing the catalogues given us in the places before us, and in Mat. x. 2—4. and Acts i. 13. Lebbeus being derived from LOB, which signifies the heart, and Thaddeus probably from THAD, a Syro-chaldaic word, which, as some critics tell us, signifies the breast, seem equivalent names, and may signify the hearty Judas; perhaps to distinguish him from that other Judas whose faithless breast and foul heart had brought a kind of infamy on the name; so that neither Matthew nor Mark use it when speaking of this apostle; and John takes particular care to prevent the confusion which might arise from the ambiguity of it. John xiv. 22.

[g] Simon the Canaanite, called also Zelotes.] It is matter of some doubt with me whether he was called the Canaanite, as being a native of Cana in Galilee, as some have thought; or whether it be derived, as Dr. Hammond thinks, from the Hebrew KANAD and signifies the same with Zelotes. But though we have many instances of extraordinary zeal in Phinehas, Elijah, the Maccabees, &c. and read in ancient Jewish writers of the Judgment of zeal by which Stephen was murdered, Paul assaulted, &c. yet I cannot find any sect of men distinguished by that name till mentioned by Josephus (Bell. Jud. lib. iv. cap. 3. (al. 5.) § 9,) a little before the destruction of Jerusalem. If Simon had the additional name of Zelotes given him on account of his personal zeal for the law (which is possible,) he might probably be a Pharisee: but Mr. Fleming's conjecture that he was the father of Judas Iscariot, who is called the son of Simon (John xii. 4.) seems very precarious, considering how common the name of Simon was. See Fleming's Christology, Vol. II. p. 167.

[h] That even betrayed him.] It is plain that καὶ has great force here, if it be rendered even; or else it seems a mere expletive.

} Unclean

SECT. lii.

Luke VI. 17. And he came down with them, and stood in the plain, and the company of his disciples, and a great multitude of people out of all Judea and Jerusalem, and from the sea coast of Tyre and Sidon, which came to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases;

And after he had acquainted these twelve persons with his design, and had given them such private instructions as he judged convenient to render their attendance upon him subservient to the execution of their important office, he came down from the mountain with them, and stood in the neighbouring plain: and as the morning was now pretty far advanced, the crowd of his disciples [gathered round him:] and besides those that had followed him for some time, and were now persuaded of his Divine mission, there was also still waiting upon him (as we observed above, Mark iii. 7, 8, p. 276) a great multitude of people from all parts of Judea, and particularly from Jerusalem, and even from the shore of Tyre and Sidon, which lay on the Mediterranean sea; who came to hear him, and to be healed of their diseases: And they also who were infested with unclean and wicked spirits[i], made their application to him; and they were cured of the terrible disorders which those malignant beings occasioned. And the whole multitude of these unhappy people endeavoured at least to touch him; for so extraordinary were the miracles of this day, that in some instances, where our Lord did not so much as take any apparent notice of the case, yet there went a Divine, though secret virtue out of him, and wrought so powerfully on those that touched him, that it healed them all, how desperate soever their distempers were.

Luke VI. 17

18 And they that were vexed with unclean spirits: and they were healed.

18

19 And the whole multitude sought to touch him; for there went virtue out of him, and healed them all.

19

IMPROVEMENT.

WHEN we consider how much the church in all ages has been indebted to the labours of the apostles, and how much we ourselves owe to them, we shall see great reason of thankfulness to our wise and gracious Master, who was pleased to assign this work to his servants, and so eminently to qualify them for it. It is observable, that before he sent them forth, he chose them to be with him in a more

Luke vi. 13.

i Unclean spirits.] It seems to me an excessive refinement in the learned editors of the Prussian Testament to distinguish (as they do in their note on Mat. x. 1.) unclean spirits from other evil spirits which might possess men; supposing the word only to signify such kind of spirits as drove men to dwell among the tombs, by which they became ceremonially unclean. How little it can be supported from Luke iv. 33, see the note there, p. 191. It is evident unclean and evil spirits are generally used as nearly synonymous terms, referring to the moral impurity and malignity of their natures. Compare Mat. xii. 43; Luke xi. 24; and Rev. xvi. 13, 14.

a Such

SECT. LIII.

more constant attendance on his person and ministry. May all who succeed them as preachers of the gospel, be such as have intimately known Christ themselves, and have been accustomed to spiritual converse with him; that they may with the greater ability, zeal and efficacy, recommend him to others!

Mark iii. 14.

Luke vi. 12.

We may assure ourselves that these his future ministers had no inconsiderable share in those petitions in which, with unabating fervour and intenseness of devotion, our Redeemer spent this memorable night. And if we have any regard for the support of religion in the rising age, let us likewise be earnestly praying both for them that are already in the ministry, and for such as are preparing for it. This surely ought to be the frequent care, not only of those who have the tremendous charge of educating such as are ere long to be intrusted with the honour of the gospel and the care of souls, but of those who are now struggling with the glorious labours and trials of that important office, and even of all those private christians, who cordially love the interest of their Master, and wish the salvation of their fellow-creatures.

Let us unite our cries to him who has engaged to be always with his church even to the end of the world, and say, "Light up, O Lord, a brighter and a stronger flame in the lamps of thy sanctuary! Polish these arrows of thy quiver, that they may pierce deep into the consciences of men! Let thy priests be clothed with salvation, that thy saints may shout aloud for joy! And pour forth upon them so plenteous an unction of thine Holy Spirit, that the odours of thy grace may by their means be diffused around throughout all thy tabernacles; like that of the fragrant oil, which was poured on the head of Aaron, in such rich abundance, that it not only ran down on his beard, but reached even to the skirts of his garments! Amen, and Amen."

SECT. LIII.

Christ, in the audience of his new-chosen disciples, and of the multitude, repeats in the plain many remarkable passages of his sermon before delivered on the mount. Luke VI. 20—36.

Luke VI. 20.

SECT. LIII.

Luke VI. 20.

AND [Jesus] lifting up his eyes on his disciples, who surrounded him, and more especially directing them to his apostles whom he had lately chosen, said unto them[a], Happy are you who are

Luke VI. 20. AND he lifted up his eyes on his disciples, and said, Blessed

[a] Said unto them.] Hardly any thing that I have observed in the common harmonies surprises me more, than that so many of them make this discourse to be the very sermon

SECT. liii.

Luke VI. 20.

Blessed be ye poor; for yours is the kingdom of God.

are enriched with Divine knowledge and grace, though your circumstances in this world are poor and mean; for the kingdom of God, in all its transcendent and eternal glories, is yours, and you are hastening on to the full possession of it.

21 Blessed are ye that hunger now; for ye shall be filled. Blessed are ye that weep now; for ye shall laugh.

21 Happy are you who are now hungry and destitute of all the comfortable accommodations of life, if you feel that nobler appetite by which the religious soul longs after improvements in holiness[b]; for you shall ere long be filled with the most substantial and valuable blessings. Happy are you who now mourn under a sense of sin, or under that wholesome discipline of affliction by which God reduces his wandering children, and trains them up to superior virtue; for all your sorrow shall pass away like a dream, and you shall ere long laugh and rejoice in a complete deliverance from it. (See Mat. v. 4.)

22 Blessed are ye when men shall hate you and when they shall separate you from their company, and shall reproach you, and cast out your name as evil, for the son of man's sake:

22 Happy are you when men shall hate you, and persecute you; when they shall separate you [from their assemblies[c],] as unworthy of communion with them; and shall reproach you in their private conversation, and cast out your names as infamously evil in their public acts of civil or ecclesiastical judgment, on account of your professed adherence to the Son of man (see John ix. 22—34), for that glorious and sacred Person is able abundantly to repay all you can suffer for him:

23 Rejoice ye in that day,

And therefore, far from being dismayed and overwhelmed man on the mount recorded at large by Matthew in his fifth, sixth, and seventh chapters. That was delivered by Christ, sitting on a mountain (Mat. v. 1); this (as it seems from ver. 18) standing in a plain; and, which weighs yet much more with me, there is such a difference in the expression, when the parallel passages come to be compared, that it seems evident the evangelists have not related it exactly, if they meant to give us the same. On the other hand, there appears not the least difficulty in supposing that Christ might here repeat a part of what he had delivered some months before to another auditory, and probably at some greater distance than just in the same neighbourhood. (See note [b] on Luke v. 12, p. 241, and note [b] on Mat. v. 1, p. 199.) For it is plain from other instances, that this is nothing more than what he often had occasion to do. (Compare Mat. ix. 32—34 with Mat. xii. 22—24, and xvi. 21 with xvii. 22, 23, and xx. 17—19.) And indeed, since it is certain from Mat. vii. 28, 29, that what that evangelist has recorded as the sermon on the mount was all delivered at once; they who suppose this the very same, must grant that great part of it was repeated at different times, and on different occasions. (See note [e] on Mat. vii. 28, p. 240.) Dr. Whitby and Mr. Blair agree with me in this account of the matter, chiefly on the reasons I have here assigned.

[b] Who are now hungry—If you feel that nobler appetite, &c.] Compare note [g] on Mat. v. 6. p. 201. And let it be observed in general, that the sense of the more dubious expressions in this discourse may be much illustrated by comparing parallel passages in the sermon on the mount; to which I have accordingly referred, not judging it necessary to repeat in the notes here what I had said there.

[c] Separate you from their assemblies.] Grotius's excellent note on this clause well deserves a most attentive reading; containing a most learned dissertation on the various kinds of excommunication among the Jews.

SECT. liii.

whelmed with trouble and distress at such abuses and assaults, be glad in that day, and with holy alacrity even leap for joy; for, behold, your reward in heaven is great in proportion to your sufferings on earth: For thus their fathers did to the prophets of old, who now are in seats of distinguished glory. (See Mat. v. 11, 12.)

Luke VI. 23.

day, and leap for joy; for behold, your reward is great in heaven: for in the like manner did their fathers unto the prophets.

24 But there is, generally speaking[d], cause to denounce a woe to you who are rich; for so ensnaring are the circumstances in which you are placed, that it is much to be feared you have already received all your consolation (compare Luke xvi. 25.) and will be so taken up with the transient pleasures of time as to forget and forfeit everlasting blessedness. There is generally reason to say, Woe unto you who are now filled to the full, and pampered with all the most luxurious dainties! for you shall ere long suffer hunger, and fall into a state of indigence and misery, aggravated by all the plenty which you have enjoyed and abused. Woe unto you who spend your lives in mirth and gaiety, and are so vain as now to laugh off every solemn and awful thought! for you have reason to expect a portion in those doleful regions where, without intermission and without end, you shall mourn and lament. And again, I may generally say, in so corrupt an age as this, Woe unto you when all men speak well of you! for such universal applause is seldom to be gained without sinful compliances; and thus did their fathers to the false prophets of old, who soothed them in their idolatries and other crimes with smooth addresses and vain assurances of security and happiness.

24 But woe unto you that are rich! for ye have received your consolation.

25 Woe unto you that are full! for ye shall hunger. Woe unto you that laugh now! for ye shall mourn and weep.

26 Woe unto you, when all men shall speak well of you! for so did their fathers to the false prophets.

27 You, my disciples, if you would approve your fidelity to God and to me, must act in a very different manner, by which you will certainly expose yourselves to hatred and persecution: But I say unto you, and to all that hear me this day, Far from entertaining sentiments of malice and purposes of revenge, love even your enemies, and do good to them that hate you: Bless them that in the malignity of their hearts revile and curse you; and cordially and fervently pray for them that most spitefully harrass and abuse you. (See Mat. v. 44.)

27 But I say unto you which hear, Love your enemies; do good to them which hate you;

28 Bless them that curse you; and pray for them which despitefully use you.

And,

[d] Generally speaking.] Compare Mat. xix. 23, 24. It is most evident that such expressions as these in scripture are to be taken with some limitations, otherwise they would be contrary to fact in some instances.

SECT. lm.

Luke VI. 29.

29 And unto him that smiteth thee on the one cheek, offer also the other; and him that taketh away thy cloak, forbid not to take thy coat also.

And, as ever you would attain to such exalted degrees of fortitude and goodness, accustom yourselves patiently to bear the common injuries of life, which a false sense of honour and interest renders so much more intolerable than they really are. If, for instance, a man smite thee on the [one] cheek, rather than return the blow, offer also the other to him; and if he take away thy mantle, do not by violence attempt to hinder him [from taking] also thy vest. (See the notes on Mat. v. 39, p. 214.)

30 Give to every man that asketh of thee; and of him that taketh away thy goods ask them not again.

I would also charge it upon you to labour 30 after a diffusive liberality, as well as exemplary meekness: be ready then to give to every one that asketh thee for an alms, where thou hast reason to believe it is charity to do it; and from him that taketh away thy possessions in an injurious manner, do not immediately demand them back in the forms of law, but rather endeavour by gentler methods to reduce the offender to reason.

31 And as ye would that men should do to you, do ye also to them likewise.

And do not by any means imagine, that the 31 injuries you receive from others will cancel the bonds of common humanity to them; but as you would reasonably desire that men should do to you, do you also in like manner to them, and by putting yourselves, as it were, in their places, endeavour to form your minds to an impartial judgment. (See note on Mat vii. 12, p. 234.)

32 For if ye love them which love you, what thank have ye? for sinners also love those that love them.

And indeed if you only love them that love you 32 what great thanks are due to you upon that account? For there are some sentiments of gratitude common even to the worst of men, which incline the most scandalous sinners to love those that love them, and to profess an affectionate regard for those by whom they have been treated with respect and kindness.

33 And if ye do good to them which do good to you, what thank have ye? for sinners also do even the same.

And if you do good 33 offices only to them that are your benefactors, what mighty thanks are due to you for that? For even the most infamous sinners, either from instinct, or from mere self-love, may often be observed to do the same. (Compare Mat. v. 46, 47, p. 216.)

34 And if ye lend to them of whom ye hope to receive, what thank have ye? for sinners also lend to sinners, to receive as much again.

And if you lend only to them from whom you 34 hope to receive, and that, perhaps, with considerable advantage to yourselves, what favour do you shew in that, or what extraordinary thanks are due to you on that account? For even the greatest sinners lend to other sinners like themselves, that, when there is occasion, they may receive the like assistance in return from them.

But

SECT. liii.

Luke VI. 35. But I exhort you to love your enemies, and to do good, and lend in cases of great necessity, even when you can hope for nothing again[e]: and so your reward in heaven will be great, and you will appear to be the sons of the most High God; for in the course of his daily providence he is kind to the ungrateful and evil, causing the undeserved benefits of the sun and rain to descend upon them, and filling their insensible hearts with food and gladness. (Compare Mat. v. 44, 45, 36 and Acts xiv. 17.) Be ye therefore merciful, as he also whom you call your heavenly Father is merciful; and unto whom indeed you cannot stand related as his children, if you have no concern to imitate and to obey him. (Compare Mat. v. 43, p. 216.

35 But love ye your enemies, and do good, and lend, hoping for nothing again: and your reward shall be great, and ye shall be the children of the Highest: for he is kind unto the unthankful, and to the evil.

36 Be ye therefore merciful, as your Father also is merciful.

IMPROVEMENT.

Luke vi. 20. How necessary is it, that our forgetful hearts should have line upon line, and precept upon precept? If Christ did not think it improper to repeat this discourse, surely it will not be needless for us to renew our attention to it. Oh that every word of it were engraven on our hearts as with the point of a diamond, that we might learn, in spite of all the foolish wisdom of this world, to form ourselves on these maxims, as the surest guide to present and to eternal felicity!

21--26 Our Lord again pronounces the poor and the hungry, the mournful and the persecuted, happy; and represents those as miserable who are rich and full, joyous and applauded; not that this is universally the case; but because prosperous circumstances are so frequently a sweet poison, and affliction a healing though bitter medicine. Let the thought reconcile us to adversity, and awaken our caution when the world smiles upon us; when a plentiful table is spread before us, and our cup runneth over; when our spirits are gay and sprightly; or when we hear, what to corrupted nature is too harmonious music, that of our own praise from men. Oh that we may secure, what is of infinitely greater importance, the praise of our heavenly Master, by a constant obediential regard to these his precepts!

34 May we be happy proficients in the art of bearing and forgiving injuries! May we be ready to every good word and work! maintaining an eye quick to observe, a heart tender to feel, a hand open

[e] When you can hope for nothing again.] I cannot think (as De Dieu and some others have done agreeably to the Syriac and Arabic versions) that μηδεν απελπιζοντες should be rendered causing none to despair; since neither the phrase itself, nor the opposition in which it stands to ver. 34, will admit such an interpretation. See Dr. Whitby's note here.

a If

open to relieve the calamities and necessities of friends, of strangers and of enemies, giving to some; and where, perhaps, there may be little prospect of a return, lending to others; which, if it engage them to greater industry, is as real a benefit as if the loan were a gift. SECT. LIII. Luke VI. 34.

On the whole, let us not presume to call God our Father, if we do not labour to resemble him; nor dare to challenge the peculiar honour and privileges of Christ's disciples, if we do not distinguish ourselves from others by the charity of our tempers and the usefulness of our lives, as well as by the articles of our faith and the forms of our worship. 35, 36

SECT. LIV.

Our Lord goes on to repeat many remarkable passages of his sermon on the mount, with some proper additions relating to the same subjects. Luke VI. 37, to the end.

Luke VI. 37.

JUDGE not, and ye shall not be judged: condemn not, and ye shall not be condemned: forgive, and ye shall be forgiven.

Luke VI. 37.

JUDGE not others with rigour and severity, and you may hope that you shall not yourselves be judged with that severity which you must otherwise expect from God, and which the most innocent and virtuous characters would not be able to bear: Condemn not others with a rash censoriousness, and you shall not be condemned: Forgive others their offences; and if you do it from a truly religious principle[a], you shall also be forgiven by God those offences against him, which are infinitely greater than any you can possibly receive from your fellow-creatures. (See Mat. vii. 1. p. 231.) SECT. LIV. Luke VI. 37.

38 Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom: for with the same measure that ye mete withal, it shall be measured to you again.

Give liberally to those that need your assistance, and it shall be given back to you in a rich abundance: for it will gain you so much love and respect, that God will so influence men's hearts in your favour, that men shall, as it were, pour into your lap[b] good measure, blessings pressed down, and shaken together, and even running over; for it may be taken as a general rule, that by the same measure that ye measure with to others, it will in return be measured back to you. (See Mat. vii. 2, p. 231.) 38

[a] If you do it from a truly religious principle.] This must be supposed, to make it consistent with those passages in which love to God, and faith in Christ, as well as other branches of the Christian temper, are insisted upon as so absolutely necessary, that without them the greatest lenity and indulgence to our fellow-creatures cannot give us a claim to the promises of pardon and salvation.

[b] Into your lap.] Here is an evident reference to the mantles which the Jews wore, into which a considerable quantity of corn might be received. Compare Ruth iii. 15. 2 Kings iv. 39. Neh. v. 13. Prov. xvi. 33.

SECT. liv.

He spake also, at the same time, a parable to them (which he afterwards repeated, Mat. xv. 14.) to caution them against submitting with Luke VI. 39. an implicit faith to the conduct of ignorant or vicious men, who might set up for religious teachers; and said, Can the blind undertake to guide the blind? Will they not both, in such a case, be likely to fall into a pit, or ditch, which may happen to be in their way? And, in like manner, you have nothing to expect from following such 40 men, but to perish with them. There is little reason to hope that, under their instruction, you should be wiser and better than they: for it is, you know, a common proverb, That the scholar is not above his teacher; but all that can reasonably be expected is, that every one who is a finished [scholar] should come up to him that teaches him; and it is this that he will principally aim at, to be as his master: It is of great importance therefore that you should well consider whom you take to be your teachers; for it is necessary your righteousness exceed that of the scribes and Pharisees, if you expect a share in the kingdom of heaven. (See Mat. v. 20, and x. 24, 25.).

39 And he spake a parable unto them: Can the blind lead the blind? shall they not both fall into the ditch?

40 The disciple is not above his master; but every one that is perfect, shall be as his master.

41 Yet, on the other hand, I would not have you to be forward in blaming them, or any other, while you neglect a due regulation of your own temper and conduct: for why dost thou look at the little mote which is in thy brother's eye, and observest not the much greater disorder which is 42 like a beam in thine own eye? Or how canst thou with any decency, or to any purpose, say to thy brother, Brother, hold still, [and] I will take out the mote which is in thine eye, while thou art at the same time so blind and partial, that thou seest not the beam which is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, who falsely pretendest that zeal for the honour of religion, which, while thou art thus careless of thyself, thou canst not really have, first cast out the beam from thine own eye, and then thou wilt discern [how] to take out the mote that is in thy brother's eye; which is an office that requires greater wisdom and conduct than in thy present circumstances thou canst be supposed to have. (See the notes on Mat. vii. 3, 4, p. 232.)

41 And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but perceivest not the beam that is in thine own eye?

42 Either how canst thou say to thy brother, Brother, let me pull out the mote that is in thine eye, when thou thyself beholdest not the beam that is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, cast out first the beam out of thine own eye, and then shalt thou see clearly to pull out the mote that is in thy brother's eye.

43 Till thou shalt thus reform thyself, there is not much to be expected from thine endeavours to reform others: for as there is no good tree which

43 For a good tree bringeth not forth corrupt fruit: neither doth a a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit.

44 For every tree is known by his own fruit: for of thorns men do not gather figs, nor of a bramble bush gather they grapes.

45 A good man out of the good treasure of his heart bringeth forth that which is good: and an evil man out of the evil treasure of his heart, bringeth forth that which is evil: for of the abundance of the heart his mouth speaketh.

46 And why call ye me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say.

47 Whosoever cometh to me, and heareth my sayings, and doeth them, I will shew you to whom he is like.

48 He is like a man, which built an house, and digged deep, and laid the foundation on a which produces bad fruit; so neither is there any SECT. liv. bad tree which produces good fruit: For all the world is agreed that every tree is to be known Luke VI. 40.

by its proper fruit: men, for instance[c], do not gather figs of thorns, nor do they gather a cluster 44 of grapes from a bramble. (Compare Mat. vii. 16, p. 235.)

And indeed, where men converse with any de- 45
gree of intimacy, they may be known and judged of by their words as well as by their actions. A good man, maintaining an habitual sense of the Divine Presence, and feeling in his own soul a spring of habitual and diffusive benevolence to his fellow-creatures naturally produces that which is good, out of the good treasure of grace and love which is laid up in his heart: and on the other hand, a bad man out of the bad treasure of evil principles and corrupt affections which is laid up in his heart, produces that which is bad, which often breaks out before he is aware, and discovers his character, even contrary to his intention; for his mouth naturally speaks from the overflowing of the heart, and no man has so much artifice as to command it entirely so that it shall never discover itself in some unguarded moment. (Compare Mat xii. 34, 35, sect. lxii.)

Yet remember, it is not merely by men's 46 words that their character will finally be judged, and their estate fixed; especially, that it will not be determined by a few pious and devotional forms of speech, which in themselves are of very little worth: for why do ye call me, Lord, Lord, or what imaginable purpose does that profession serve, if in your practice you are regardless of my will, and do not the things which I say and command to all that call themselves my disciples? (Compare Mat. vii. 21.)

This is a vanity of which I have formerly 47 warned you: and to repeat the warning, I will shew you, on the other hand, to whom that man is like, who comes to me, and hears my words, and practises agreeably to them: and, on the other hand, to whom it is that he may be resembled, who hears my words, and doeth them not. As 48 to the former, he is like a prudent man, that built an house on the river-side; and, considering the [c] Men, for instance.] This is one of those many places where the word γαρ (for) has not its usual signification, of introducing the reason of something before asserted, but merely intimates an illustration of it.

SECT. liv.

the importance of the undertaking and the difficulty of the situation, dug deep through the sand and marl and gravel, till he came to the Luke VI. 48. solid stone, and placed the foundation of his house upon a rock: and afterwards he was abundantly repaid for all his labour and expence; for when the inundation came, the current of the river with an impetuous torrent violently broke upon that house, and yet was not able to shake it, because it was founded upon a rock: thus securely will the practical hearer stand the shock of temptations, and the trial of death and of the judgment-day.

a rock: and, when the flood arose, the stream beat vehemently upon that house, and could not shake it; for it was founded upon a rock.

49 But, on the other hand, he that hears my words, and does not practise them, is like a foolish man, that built an house on the bare surface of the ground, without any care to secure a foundation; against which the impetuous stream did violently break with the same fury, and, being unable to withstand the shock, it presently fell down; and the ruin of that house was irreparably great, and its inhabitants were all crushed under it. (Compare Mat. vii. 24—27, sect. xliii.)

49 But he that heareth, and doeth not, is like a man, that without a foundation built an house upon the earth, against which the stream did beat vehemently, and immediately it fell; and the ruin of that house was great.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. Let a frequent reflection on our own faults teach us candour;
37 and let a sense of our continued dependence on Divine liberality make us liberal towards those that need our assistance; lest we lose the comfort so justly forfeited, and abused mercies be another day 38 repaid with measures of wrath, pressed down, shaken together, and running over.

We are another day to give an account of ourselves before God: let us then judge for ourselves in matters of religion; and be very 39 careful that we do not stupidly follow blind guides, till we fall with them into destruction. "Lead us, O Lord, in the way everlasting! Form us to a more perfect resemblance of our great 15 Master! Make us severe to ourselves, and, so far as it is real 41, 44 charity, indulgent to others! Sanctify our hearts by thy grace, that they may be as trees bringing forth good fruit, or as foun-
45 tains pouring out wholesome streams! There may a good treasure be laid up, from whence good things may be abundantly produced! There may those holy and benevolent affections continually spring up, which may flow forth with unaffected freedom, to refresh the souls and animate the graces of all that are around us!"

46, 49 May these beautiful, striking, repeated admonitions, which our Saviour gives us of the vanity of every profession which does not influence the practice, be attended to with reverence and fear!

We

We are building for eternity; may we never grudge the time and labour of a most serious inquiry into the great fundamental principles of religion? May we discover the sure foundation, and raise upon it a noble superstructure, which shall stand fair and glorious, when hypocrites are swept away into everlasting ruin, in that awful day in which heaven and earth shall flee away from the face of him that sits upon the throne! (Rev. xx. 11.) SECT. LV.

SECT. LV.

Christ, after preaching in the plain, goes to Capernaum, and miraculously cures, even at a distance, the centurion's servant that was sick of a palsy. Luke VII. 1—10. Mat. VIII. 5—13.

Luke VII. 1.

NOW when he had ended all his sayings in the audience of the people, he entered into Capernaum.

Luke VII. 1.

IN the two former sections we have heard the excellent discourse that Jesus made; and now, when he had finished all these his sayings, which, though immediately addressed to his disciples, he had delivered in the hearing of the people who stood round him in the plain, having dismissed the assembly, he quickly after entered into Capernaum again. SECT. IV. Luke VII. 1.

2 And a certain centurion's servant, who was dear unto him, was sick, and ready to die.

And at that time the servant of a certain Roman officer in that city (called a centurion, from his having the command of a company of soldiers consisting of a hundred men), who was dear to his master, and greatly esteemed by him, was exceeding ill, and in great danger of death. 2

3 And when he heard of Jesus, [when Jesus was entered into Capernaum,] he [came unto him; having first] sent unto him the elders of the Jews, beseeching him that he would come and heal his servant:—[Mat. VIII. 5.]

And hearing of Jesus, when he entered into Capernaum, where the nobleman's son was miraculously cured by him at a distance (John iv. 46, sect. xxxi), such was the faith of the centurion in his power to help him, that he came to him[a] with a very humble and respectful application; which indeed he did not directly presume to make in his own person, [but first] sent unto him the elders of the Jews, or some of the most considerable of them that dwelt in this city, in whom his generosity had procured a considerable interest; humbly entreating him by them, that he would condescend to come and set him free from the distress that he was in, not doubting his ability 3 to a He came to him.] It is very plain, from Luke's larger and more circumstantial representation of the case, that the centurion did not come at first in his own person (see Luke vii. 6, 7), but he might properly be said to do that which he directed the elders to do in his name: and nothing is more frequent, even to this day, in our courts of law, than to say that a person comes into the court and asks a thing which he asks perhaps only at third hand, by the counsel whom his solicitor has employed in his cause.

SECT. lv.

to heal his servant; And saying, Lord, my faithful and beloved servant lies at home in [my] house in a very deplorable condition, being seized with the palsy; which, though it has quite disabled him from motion, yet has left him sensible of pain, with which he is so dreadfully tormented that he can take no rest.

Mat. VIII. 6. And saying, Lord, my servant lieth at home sick of the palsy grievously tormented.

Luke VII. 4

And such was the regard the elders of the Jews had for him, that, being come to Jesus, they entreated him with great importunity, saying, He in whose name we now address thee is one who 5 is worthy of this favour[b]. For though he be a Gentile, and a stranger among us, yet he is a worshipper of the true God, and greatly loves our nation; so that he takes many opportunities of doing good in the neighbourhood (compare Acts x. 2), and has carried his generosity so far that he hath built us a synagogue for public worship at his own expence.

Luke VII. 4. And when they came to Jesus, they besought him instantly, saying, That he was worthy for whom he should do this:

5 For he loveth our nation, and he hath built us a synagogue.

Mat. VIII. 7

And Jesus, willing to pay some distinguishing respect to a person of so worthy a character, saith unto him, or sent him word by those who had petitioned for him, I will immediately come down to the centurion's house, to see the servant he is so concerned about, and heal him.

Mat. VIII. 7. And Jesus saith unto him, I will come and heal him.

Luke VII. 6

And accordingly, Jesus went with them; and now, as he was going thither, when he was not a great way from the house, the centurion sent some other friends to him; and at last came himself in person; and answered the kind message which Jesus had sent him, saying unto him, Lord, trouble not thyself to come any farther; for I am not worthy that thou, who art so holy and honourable a person, shouldest enter under my roof: 7 Wherefore indeed neither did I think myself, who am an alien from this holy nation, worthy to come immediately to thee; but first chose to make use of the elders of the place, and of these my other friends: and all that I would now presume to ask, is, That thou wouldest but please only to speak the word, and I know that my servant shall im- 8 mediately be healed. For even I [who] am only a centurion, a man ranged under the authority of my commanding officer[c], yet as I have soldiers

Luke VII. 6. Then Jesus went with them. And when he was now not far from the house, the centurion sent friends to him, [and answered,] saying unto him, Lord, trouble not thyself, for I am not worthy that thou shouldest enter under my roof: [MAT. VIII. 8.—]

7 Wherefore, neither thought I myself worthy to come unto thee; but say in a word, [speak the word only,] and my servant shall be healed. [MAT. VIII. 8.]

8 For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers; and I say unto

[b] Worthy of this favour.] By far the greater number of copies read it as it stands in our version, Worthy for whom he should do this: yet the connection seems to intimate that the original reading was ἀξιε, Thou shouldest do this. I have chosen to render it in such a manner as will suit either.

[c] Ranged under the authority of my commanding officer.] It is well known that the Roman centurions were subject to the command of their respective tribunes; as our captains are to that of their colonels.

[d] Slave.]

unto one, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it. [MAT. VIII. 9.]

soldiers under myself, order and govern them by the intimations of my will, whether present or absent; and I say to one, Go to such a place, and he goeth; and to another, Come hither, and he cometh; and to my slave[d], Do this, and he immediately doeth it; now I firmly believe thou hast yet a more absolute power over the strongest and most desperate diseases, and canst at pleasure command them off from the afflicted, when thou art either near, or at a distance; and I shall thankfully accept this cure in the manner that may be least inconvenient to thyself. SECT. IV. Luke VIII. 8.

9 When Jesus heard these things, he marvelled at him, and turned him about, and said unto the people that followed him, [Verily,] I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel, [MAT. VIII. 10.]

And Jesus hearing these things, admired him on account of his great humility, and the strength of his faith; and, turning about, he said to the multitude that followed him, Verily, I declare unto you, That through all my journies and converse, I have not found, even in all Israel, such an illustrious degree of faith as now appears in this stranger, who only sojourns among you. 9

MAT. VIII. 11. And I say unto you, That many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven.

But I say unto you with great solemnity, That many shall at last come, not only from the neighbouring provinces of the Roman empire, but even from the remotest Gentile nations, which lie to the east and west[e] of its utmost boundaries, and shall sit down with your pious ancestors, Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, to share with them in the delightful entertainments and final blessedness of the kingdom of heaven[f]. Mat. VIII. 11 12 But the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

But many of the children of the kingdom, who were born within the sacred enclosure, and appeared to stand fairest for all the mercies of the covenant, and indeed the bulk of the Jewish nation, shall be rejected with abhorrence for their unbelief, and be cast out into that gloomy darkness which is without[g]; there 12

[d] Slave.] As the word δουλος generally signifies a slave rather than a hired servant, I chose to render it thus here, as thinking it most expressive of the authority to which the speech refers.

[e] From the east and west.] Perhaps this may be only a proverbial phrase to signify coming from the most distant parts. But I cannot forbear observing here that the gospel spread much more to the east and west of Judea than to the north and south of it: though it seems rather to be spoken as a general expression, as will appear by comparing it with Luke xiii. 29. and Isa. xliii. 5, 6.

[f] Final blessedness of the kingdom of heaven.] So the phrase must here be explained; for it cannot be said, with any propriety, either that the holy patriarchs, share with Christians in the present privileges of the gospel-state, or that the Jews weep and wail on account of their being excluded from them.

[g] Gloomy darkness which is without; το σκοτος το εξωτερον.] It has justly been observed by many commentators that this phrase, which is often used after the kingdom of heaven has been compared to a banquet, contains a beautiful allusion to the lustre of those illuminated rooms in which such feasts were generally celebrated, as opposed to that darkness which surrounded those who by night were turned out: but it also sometimes goes yet farther, when the

SECT. IV.

there shall be perpetual weeping for sorrow, and gnashing of the teeth with envy, at such an enraging sight.

Mat. VIII. 13. And, having uttered these words for the admonition of the Jews, and for the encouragement of this pious stranger and his friends, Jesus said to the centurion, who now stood by, Go thy way home[h] in peace; and be it unto thee, and to thy servant, according to thy faith. And in that very hour that he spake these words, just at that instant, was his servant healed.

13 And Jesus said unto the centurion, Go thy way: and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. And his servant was healed in the self-same hour.

Luke VII. 10. And they who had been sent from the centurion as his messengers to Christ, returning with him to the house, were eye-witnesses of the cure, and found the servant that had been sick restored to perfect health and vigour[i]. This might occasion the conversion of the family; and was a miracle that greatly raised the fame of Jesus, and made the multitude more eager in their pressing after him.

Luke VII. 10. And they that were sent, returning to the house, found the servant whole that had been sick.

IMPROVEMENT.

Luke vii. 2, 3. It is pleasant to think of this good centurion, who amidst all the temptations of a military life, retained the principles, not only of liberality and humanity, but of piety too; and, probably amidst the raillery of his irreligious and idolatrous brethren, had the courage to frequent, and even to build a synagogue. Surely his devotion did not enervate, but rather invigorate and establish his valour; nor did he find himself less dutifully regarded by the soldiers under his command for his parental tenderness to his afflicted servant, which brought him thus humbly to petition Christ in his favour. Such may our officers be! and we may hope that the hosts of heaven will with pleasure cover their heads in the day of battle, and obedient troops be formed, by their example and their care, to the discipline of virtue as well as of war.

Mat. viii. 6, 9.

Luke vii. 4, 5. We see the force of real goodness to conquer the most inveterate prejudices: the elders of the Jews at Capernaum turn petitioners for a Gentile, for a Roman centurion: so may we disarm the virulency of a party spirit, and conciliate the friendship of those who otherwise might have their eyes upon us for evil!

In

persons excluded are supposed to be thrown into a dark dungeon. Compare Mat. xxii. 13. xxv. 30. and Jude, ver. 1.

h Go thy way home.] This most evidently proves that the centurion was at length come out of his house, probably on hearing that Jesus was nearer to it than he apprehended when he sent the second message by his friends.

i Restored to perfect health and vigour.] This the word ὑγιαίνοντα seems to import; nor did it suit the honour and goodness of Christ to leave the cure incomplete. Compare Mat. viii. 15.

In plentiful circumstances and an honourable station, how great is the humility of this worthy man! How low are the thoughts that he has of himself! And with what veneration and respect does he address himself to Christ! And, had this centurion been even a tribune or a general, this humble address would well have become him when he was thus applying unto Christ. And how well does it become us, when entreating the blessed Jesus to exert his healing power on our hearts, to bow with deep humility before him, and to say, "Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldest come under my roof, or worthy the honour of appearing in thy presence!" He that thus humbleth himself, shall be exalted, (Luke xviii. 14.) nor do we ever stand fairer for the praise of Christ than when we see ourselves undeserving even of his notice.

SECT. lv. Mat. VIII. 8. Luke vii. 6, 7.

Behold an instance of faith in a stranger to the commonwealth of Israel, by which their unbelief was condemned! Oh that the virtues of heathens may not another day rise up to our condemnation, notwithstanding an higher profession and much nobler advantages! We cannot but rejoice to hear that many shall come from the east and the west, to sit down with the pious patriarchs in the kingdom of heaven: but how deplorable is the case of those children of the kingdom, who, with all their towering expectations, shall be cast out, and doomed to hopeless sorrow and to everlasting darkness!

Mat. viii. 10. 11 12

May Almighty Grace awaken those who are now ignorant of the value and importance of the blessings of the gospel; and excite those holy desires after them, which may prevent that impatience and envy, that rage and despair, with which they must otherwise view them at an unapproachable distance; yea, view them possessed by multitudes, whom they are now most ready to despise!

SECT. LVI.

After having quitted the multitude who crowded in upon him, and reposed himself that night at Capernaum, Jesus goes the next day to Naim, and raises the son of a poor widow from the dead. Mark III. 19—21. Luke VII. 11—17.

Mark III. 19.
AND they went into an house.

Mark III. 19.

NOW after Jesus had performed this miracle and was prevented thus from going to the centurion's, before he left Capernaum with his twelve new-chosen apostles, they went into an house[a], where he commonly resided while he was

SECT. lvi. Mark III. 19.

[a] They went into an house.] We must conclude, from the manner in which Mark connects this with the names of the apostles, that it happened very quickly after their being chosen. The other evangelists inform us of some previous events which happened in the mean time; but they might be dispatched in a few hours. This therefore is was in that city. And the multitude, that had been standing in the plain, assemble again about the doors and windows of the house; and, animated by the illustrious miracle he had just performed on the centurion's servant, they pressed so eagerly upon him, that they of the family could not so much as eat bread, though it was the proper hour for it. And, when his friends had heard [of it,] that he was so intent upon his work as to go out of doors again to preach to the people, they went out after him, to lay hold on him, and importune him to come in; for they said, He is transported too far[b]; not to allow himself time for his meals, after all the watchings of the last night, and the fatigue of this day[c].

SECT. lvi.

Mark III. 20.

20 And the multitude cometh together again, so that they could not so much as eat bread.

21 And, when his friends heard of it, they went out to lay hold on him: for they said, He is beside himself.

And, Jesus having so far yielded to their importunity as to repose himself that evening there, it came to pass on the next day, that he went from Capernaum to a city called Naim[d]; and many of his disciples went thither with him, and a great multitude of others. And, when he approached the gate of the city, a circumstance happened, which proved the occasion of one of the most memorable miracles of his life. For behold, the corpse of a dead person was carried out in funeral procession

Luke VII. 11.

LUKE VII. 11. And it came to pass the day after, that he went into a city called Nain; and many of his disciples went with him, and much people.

12 Now when he came nigh to the gate of the city, behold, there was a dead man carried out, the only son of his mother, and she is undoubtedly the proper place for these verses; and it is strange that Le Clerc and others should have placed them before the sermon in the plain. (See Luke vi. 17—20, p. 283, 284.] I suppose this was after the cure of the centurion's servant, as the word παρεκάλει, (Mat. viii. 5.) seems to intimate that Christ was then entering Capernaum; and the multitude was not yet dismissed when that cure was wrought. (Mat. viii. 10.)

[b] They said, He is transported too far: ὅτι ἐξέστη.] Our manner of rendering these words, He is beside himself, or, He is mad, is very offensive. One can hardly think Christ's friends would speak so contemptibly and impiously of him; and, if that sense must necessarily be retained; it would be much more decent to render the clause, It that is, the multitude mentioned in the verse before) is mad, thus unseasonably to break in upon him. But 2 Cor. v. 13. is the only passage in the New Testament where the word has this signification. It generally signifies to be greatly transported, or, as we express it in a word derived from this, to be thrown into an ecstasy. (Mark ii. 12. v. 42; vi. 51. Luke viii. 56. and Acts ii. 7, 12. xii. 16.) And, though the Seventy sometimes use it for fainting away, (Gen. xlv. 26. Josh. ii. 11. and Isa. vii. 2.) I do not find it ever signifies that faintness which arises from excess of labour or want of food: but our Lord's attendants seem to have feared lest his zeal and the present fervency of his spirit, should have been injurious to his health.

[c] After all the watchings of the last night, and the fatigue of this day.] Compare Luke vi. 12. & seq. sect. lii. whence it appears our Lord had sat up the preceding night, and eaten nothing this day; but spent the morning in giving a charge to his new-chosen apostles, and the advance of the day in preaching to a vast auditory, and working many miracles.

[d] To a city called Naim.] If Naim was a city of the tribe of Issachar, and lay at the foot of mount Tabor (where most geographers have placed it), our Lord made a pretty long journey, this day, especially considering what was mentioned in the last note; for he must thus have travelled about twelve miles. Lightfoot supposes it to be the same with En-gannim, which is mentioned in Josh. xix. 21, and xxi. 29. but this lay also in the tribe of Issachar, and must have been at no less distance from Capernaum, (See Lightfoot's Chorog. ad Luc. vii. 11. § 3.) The circumstance here recorded might probably happen towards the evening, at which season funerals are commonly celebrated.

she was a widow: and much people of the city was with her.

procession (according to their manner of burying without the walls of their cities), and the deceased was the only son of his mother, and she was a widow, which made the case so much the more deplorable; and this sad circumstance, together with others which attended it, so influenced the minds of many of her neighbours, that there was a great multitude of the city with her. SECT. lvi. Luke VII. 12.

13 And, when the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep not.

And, the Lord seeing her in this afflicted condition, was moved with tender compassion for her; so that he prevented any opportunity of solicitation on their part, and said unto her, Weep not any longer upon this occasion; for I am come to bring thee consolation and relief. 13

14 And he came and touched the bier, (and they that bare him stood still,) and he said, Young man, I say unto thee, Arise.

And presently approaching them, he touched the bier, on which, according to the manner of that place and time, the corpse was laid, covered over with a kind of mantle, or winding-sheet; and the bearers, who were carrying it upon their shoulders, stood still: and with an unaffected freedom and simplicity he said, in such a manner as discovered his Divine authority, Young man, I say unto thee, Arise! And, as soon as he had spoken these astonishing words, the youth who had been dead, awakened by that almighty energy which went along with them, sat up, and began to speak: and Jesus, when he thus had shewn his power in restoring him to life, discovered too the sympathizing kindness of a friend; and, taking him by the hand, delivered him to his mother, in such a manner as to express the pleasure he found in changing her sorrow into a transport of proportionable joy. 14

15 And he that was dead sat up, and began to speak: and he delivered him to his mother.

16 And there came a fear on all: and they glorified God, saying, That a great prophet is risen up among us; and, That God hath visited his people.

And a religious dread fell upon all those who were present; and they glorified God, saying, Truly a great prophet is risen up among us; and God has again graciously regarded his ancient people, who were in former ages so often distinguished by his favours. 15 16 17 And this rumour of him went forth throughout all Judea, and throughout all the region round about.

And this report of him, and of this glorious miracle which he had wrought, went forth, not only through the neighbouring parts of Galilee; but was soon spread through all Judea, and the whole region that was round about; and greatly heightened and increased the mighty expectations from him which they had long since begun to entertain. 17

IMPROVEMENT.

It surely becomes us likewise to glorify God on account of this great Prophet, whom he has raised up, not only to his ancient people, Luke VII. 16.

SECT. LVI. people Israel, but to be for salvation to the ends of the earth. (Acts xiii. 47.) Welcome, thou Messenger of the Father's love! How illustrious thy miracles! how important thy doctrine! how beneficent and amiable the whole of thy behaviour.

Luke VII. 16.

11 He went from Capernaum, to Naim, still on the same blessed errand, to do good to the bodies and the souls of men. Oh that our lives, in their humbler sphere, might be such a circle of virtues and graces! that we might thus go about doing good; and might learn, by the happiest of all arts, to make the close of one useful and pious action the beginning of another!

13 Of him may we also learn the most engaging manner of conferring benefits; that lovely mixture of freedom and tenderness, which heightens the sweetness, and doubles the value of every favour! May our hearts imbibe the same temper, and it will diffuse 14, 15 on our actions some proportionable gracefulness! May our bowels, like his, yearn over the afflicted, and our hand be ever ready thus gently to wipe away their tears! But, O gracious Redeemer, how impotent is our pity when compared with thine! with thine, which could call back lamented children from the grave, and turn the sorrows of a weeping parent into a torrent of joy! We are sometimes ready fondly to say, "Oh that thou hadst been near when the darlings of our hearts were snatched away from us, and we left them in the dust!" But thou indeed wast near; for thou hast the keys of death and the unseen world! And this we know, that, if our beloved children are sleeping in thee, thy voice shall at length awaken them; and thou wilt deliver them to us, to die no more; and wilt thyself graciously take part in that mutual and lasting joy which thou shalt give to us and to them.

SECT. LVII.

John the Baptist sends two of his disciples to Jesus, to inquire whether he was the Messiah; and Jesus answers them in a convincing, though oblique manner. Luke VII. 18—23. Mat. XI. 2—6.

Luke VII. 18.

SECT. LVII. WE have before mentioned the imprisonment of John the Baptist, and given some account of the occasion of it. (Sect. xxviii. p. 156, & seq.) Now the disciples of John had the courage to resort to him where he was confined, and informed him of what passed: and they particularly gave him an account of all these things which had now lately been performed by Jesus[a]; how he had cured the centurion's servant,

Luke VII. 18.

Luke VII. 18. AND the disciples of Jesus shewed him of all these things.

[a] All these things which had now lately been performed by Jesus.] This is a plain argument that this message from John happened quickly after the miracles which Luke had servant at a distance, and raised the young man at Naim to life when they were carrying him out to his funeral. SECT. lvii.

19 And John [when he had heard in the prison the works of Christ,] calling unto him two of his disciples, sent them unto Jesus, saying [unto him,] Art thou he that should come, or look we for another? MAT. XI. 2, 3.

And when John had thus heard in his prison the works of Christ, as the very persons that brought him the news of them seem to have entertained some doubt concerning Jesus, whether he was the promised Messiah or no; for their satisfaction therefore, rather than his own[b], he called two of his disciples to him, and sent them in his own name to Jesus, saying unto him, What dost thou say to this plain question, Art thou the great expected Messiah, whom we have so long been used to speak of by the emphatical title of He that cometh[c], or are we to expect another under that character? Answer the question as expressly as I formerly bore my testimony to thee. Luke VII. 19.

20 When the men were come unto him, they said, John Baptist hath had recorded in the preceding part of this chapter. And therefore, though Matthew has mentioned many other facts and discourses before he relates this message, yet because he asserts nothing at all as to the order and connection of it, (see Mat. xi. 2,) I have, with most other harmonizers, thought myself obliged to follow Luke, on the principles laid down above. See note a, p. 244.

And when the men who were employed by John to be his messengers to Jesus upon this important errand were come to him, they delivered their message with great exactness; and said, John the celebrated 20

b For their satisfaction therefore, rather than his own.] Mr. L'Enfant, with some others, thinks as Justin Martyr and Tertullian did, that John was so discouraged by his own long imprisonment, that he began himself to doubt whether Jesus was the Messiah: and, agreeably to this, he supposes that when our Lord afterwards says, Happy is he that is not offended in me, he meant it as a caution to John, that he should be upon his guard against so dangerous a temptation. But, considering what clear evidence John had before received by a miraculous sign from heaven, and what express and repeated testimonies he himself had borne to Jesus, I cannot imagine this to have been possible; especially as he foresaw, and foretold, that he must himself quickly be laid aside. (John iii. 30, p. 153.—But his disciples might very probably be offended at this circumstance, as well as at the freedom of Christ's conversation, so different from the austerity used among them; and therefore he might think it necessary to put them in the way of farther satisfaction: not to say, that the warmth of John's temper might render him something uneasy at the reserve which Christ maintained: and that he might imagine it agreeable to the general design of his own office, as his forerunner, thus to urge a more express declaration. For these reasons, I chuse to render and paraphrase it thus, rather than with Limborch (Theol. Christ. lib. iii. cap. 11. § 14.) to translate it, Thou art he that should come, and do we look for another? that is, We do not expect any Messiah but thee: so understanding it, as a repeated testimony, which John bore by proxy when he could no longer do it in his own person. All the spirit of Christ's answer would be lost, if we were to understand the message in this sense.

c He that cometh: ὁ ἐρχόμενος.] It seems that, by their speaking of the Messiah by this phrase, (He that cometh, or, He that is coming,) the pious Jews in the most lively manner expressed their confident expectation of him, and their eager longing for his appearance, as the greatest and most welcome messenger of God to man, and the most desirable person that ever did, or should come into the world. (See Mark xi. 9, 10. and compare Psal. cxviii. 26. Dan. vii. 13. Hab. ii. 3. Septuag. Is. lxii. 11. and Zech. ix. 9. Bishop Pearson justly observes, that this among many other arguments, proves, that the notion of two Messiahs, one suffering, and the other triumphant, is a vain dream of the modern Jews, that was altogether unknown to the ancients. See Pearson on the Creed, p. 183.

SECT. lvii.

lebrated Baptist, whose courage and faithfulness in his ministerial office have been the occasion of his imprisonment, has sent us to thee, saying, Luke VII. 20. Art thou he that cometh, and dost thou own thyself to be indeed the great Messiah, or are we to expect another under that character?

hath sent us unto thee, saying, Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?

21 Now Jesus was determined to return an answer to their question, by actions rather than by words; and therefore in that very hour, while they were present with him, and were eye-witnesses of what he did (as the message was on purpose delivered before a large assembly of people, in which, as usual, there were many who came to be healed of various incurable distempers) he exercised the power that he had of working miracles, and cured many that were then before him of their diseases and plagues[d], and delivered them from the possession of evil spirits, and graciously bestowed sight on many that were blind[e].

21 And in that same hour he cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evil spirits; and unto many that were blind he gave sight.

22 And then Jesus, answering their demand, said unto them, Go, and relate to John the things which you yourselves have seen and heard this day, as well as those that you have been informed of by others, who have been eye and ear witnesses of my miracles and discourses: say, in particular, That the blind receive their sight, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the very dead are raised: and observe also, that I do not court the rich and the great, as impostors are most apt to do; nor do I bear a commission chiefly directed to them, as some of the prophets did; but, as you see by the auditory now around me, the poor, and even the meanest of the people, have the gospel preached to them; they have the good news of eternal salvation most freely published among them, and the blessings of it offered to their acceptance. And be sure you add farther, that I appear in such circumstances, that there is reason to say, Happy is he that is not scandalized, or stumbled, at me[f]: for

22 Then Jesus answering, said unto them, Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard; how that the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised, [and] to the poor the gospel is preached. [Mat. XI. 4, 5.]

23 And blessed is he whosoever shall not be offended in me. [Mat. XI. 6.]

d Of their diseases and plagues.] Μαστιγες, plagues or scourges, may probably signify some of the most grievous distempers, such as leprosies, palsies, inveterate fluxes, &c. (compare Mark iii. 10. and v. 29—34.) and may allude to their being supposed to be such corrections as intimated the great displeasure of God against the persons on whom they were sent. Compare John v. 14. and ix. 2 e And graciously bestowed sight, &c.] The original phrase, εχαρισατο το βλεπειν, seems to express, both in how generous, and how kind and affectionate a manner, our blessed Redeemer performed these cures.

f Happy is he that is not scandalized, or stumbled, at me.] This was intended as an awful admonition to the disciples of John that they should themselves guard against those prejudices which might prevent their receiving Christ; and contains a strong intimation that their final happiness would be for he must be singularly wise and religious, who is not shocked by the strong popular prejudices which lie against me. Let John consider these things in themselves, and let him compare them with those prophecies[g] which foretel that the Messiah should work such miracles (Isa. xxv. 5, 6.) that he should preach the gospel to the poor (Isa. lxi. 1.) and that many should despise and reject him (Isa. viii. 14. liii. 1—3.) And he, and, by a parity of reason, you and the rest of his disciples, may easily collect a convincing answer to the question you are come to ask, without any more express declaration from me[h]. SECT. lvii. Luke VII. 23.

IMPROVEMENT.

We have here in John the Baptist a very edifying instance of a most candid and pious temper. How solicitous was he to remove those scruples from the minds of his disciples which, perhaps, their excessive fondness for him might have occasioned? He wisely sends them to converse with Jesus themselves: and surely they who most accurately inquire into the credentials he brings, will be most effectually convinced and impressed by them. Ver. 18 19

Let us, when tempted to doubt of the truth of Christianity, recollect the various and unanswerable proofs of it, which are summed up in these comprehensive words; arising from the miracles and character of our Redeemer, and the prophetic testimony that was borne to him. Let us particularly rejoice that the poor have the gospel preached; and that the blessings of it are offered to enrich the souls of those, whose bodily necessities we often pity, without having it in our power to relieve them. 22 be determined by the regards they should pay to him, as well as that these prejudices should generally prevail to men's ruin. See note c on Mat. v. 29, p. 211.

And,

g Compare them with those prophecies.] Archbishop Tillotson has largely shewn the correspondence between the prophecies and events here referred to; see Tillotson's works, Vol. II. p. 451, & seq.—Dr. Thomas Jackson has laboured the point yet more largely in the second part of his curious discourse on this text. See his Works, Vol. II. p. 470, & seq.

h Without any more express declaration from me.] Nothing could be more apposite, natural and convincing, than such an answer as this, which took its rise from what Christ was then doing, and rested on the most apparent testimony of God himself in astonishing miracles, to which they knew their master made no pretences (see John x. 41.) miracles of so beneficent a nature, that no austerities of a retired life were by any means comparable to them; and miracles receiving an additional lustre from their being foretold by a prophet many ages before (see note i on John ii. 22, p. 139.) and even by Isaiah the prophet, by whom the Baptist was so particularly described, that as he himself had frequently referred to him (Mat. iii. 3. Luke iii. 4—6. and John i. 23.) so his disciples must, no doubt, have made themselves peculiarly familiar with his writings.—These, and many other particulars, are set in a most beautiful light by the masterly hand of Bishop Atterbury, in his Posthumous Sermons, Vol. II. p. 41—50, who has very judiciously abridged what is most material in the large discourse of the learned Dr. Jackson referred to in note g.

SECT. lvii.

Luke VII. 23.

And, since our Lord pronounces a blessing upon those that shall not be offended in him, let us consider what those things are, in the doctrine or circumstances of Christ, which have proved the most dangerous stumbling-blocks, and endeavour to fortify our souls against those temptations which may arise from them. So the trial of that faith which is a much more valuable treasure than gold which perishes, though tried in the fire, may be found unto praise, and honour, and glory, (1 Pet. i. 7.) and we, on the whole, may be advanced in our way by incidents which at first threatened to turn us entirely out of it; as the faith of these disciples of John must surely be confirmed by those doubts which they had for a while entertained.

SECT. LVIII.

Jesus discourses with the multitude concerning John, and justly complains of the perverseness of that generation. Luke VII. 24—35. Mat. XI. 7—19.

LUKE VII. 24.

SECT. lviii.

Luke VII. 24.

NOW when the messengers of John were gone away to inform their master of the things which they had seen and heard, Jesus began to speak unto the multitude that still surrounded him, concerning John the Baptist, and to inquire into the reason of their having formerly flocked after him as they had done. I know (said he) that many of you were of the number of his hearers, and were baptized by him: now I would seriously ask you, and advise you attentively to ask yourselves, What went you out into the wilderness in which he preached, to behold? You did not surely go on any trifling occasion, or for a mere amusement: none of you would be so senseless as to undertake a journey to see a reed, or a bulrush shaken by the wind, nor can you say you found him wavering in his conduct, or inconsistent in the testimony that he bore to me.

LUKE VII. 24.

AND when the messengers of John were departed, [Jesus] began to speak unto the people concerning John; What went ye out into the wilderness to see? A reed shaken with the wind? [MAT. XI. 7.]

25 But what then went you out to see? You could not go with any expectation to find a man in such a place, dressed in soft garments of the finest silk, and living in an elegant and sumptuous way: for, behold, they that wear a splendid dress, and live luxuriously, are to be sought in royal palaces rather than in a rough and barren wilderness; and you well knew that John's manner of living was plain and austere, such as suited the message he brought, and illustrated his integrity in delivering it.

25 But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment? Behold, they which are gorgeously apparelled and live delicately, are in kings courts. [MAT. XI. 8.]

But

26 But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? Yea, I say unto you, and much more than a prophet. [MAT. XI. 9.]

27 [For] this is he of whom it is written, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee. [MAT. XI. 10.]

MAT XI. 11. Verily, I say unto you, Among them that are born of women, there hath not risen a greater [prophet] than John the Baptist: notwithstanding, he that is least in the kingdom of heaven, is greater than he. [LUKE VII. 18.]

LUKE VII. 29. And all the people that heard him, and the publicans, justified God,

SECT. lviii.

But once more I would ask you, What did you then go out to see? Are you not ready to allow that you went out to see a prophet? Yea, I say unto you, and much more than a common prophet. Luke VII. 26. For this is the very person of whom it is written, 27 (Mal. iii. 1.) "Behold, O my Son, I send my appointed messenger before thy face, who shall prepare thy way before thee, and in a proper manner introduce thee into the world."

Wherefore I assuredly say unto you, That Mat. XI. 11. among all those that have been born of women, or the whole race of mankind in all former ages, there hath not arisen a prophet greater than John the Baptist; for as he is, with regard to his moral and religious character, one of the best of men, so he has some peculiar honours superior to any prophet of former generations[a]: nevertheless, there is a sense in which he that is least in the kingdom of heaven, not only in its final glories, but even here on earth, is greater than he; for my ministers, and people in general, shall receive superior supplies of the Spirit, and know many important truths relating to my gospel, which have not been revealed to John himself.

He is now laid aside from his ministry, yet I would have you to reflect upon the consequences of his preaching, and to consider the success of it: and you must needs remember that when he came and preached the baptism of repentance, and publicly proclaimed that the Messiah was at hand, all the people in general hearing [him] preach[b], and even the publicans themselves, justified God, and testified their approbation of the Divine scheme[c] in sending such an Ambassador, by Luke VII. 29.

a Superior to any prophet of former generations.] The obvious sense of what is here expressed, together with the following words, does plainly limit it to them alone. And it might properly be said that John was greater than any of the ancient prophets on account of his wonderful conception and birth, his excellent knowledge of gospel-mysteries, (see especially John iii. 27. & seq. sect. xxvii.) his express testimony to the Messiah, and his remarkable success in making way for him: John was also himself the subject of ancient prophecies, and long expected by the church.

b All the people in general hearing him preach.] The reader will observe that (with Grotius) I take these to be the words of Christ, continuing his discourse; whereas our translation seems rather to intimate they are the reflections of Luke on the sentiments of those who are now hearing Christ. I long considered them in this view; but it now seems to me so evident, from the most ancient manuscripts and versions, that the words, And the Lord said, at the beginning of ver. 31, were not in the original, that I could not but connect and render them thus. Nevertheless I shall shew so much regard to the common reading as to add (in note h below) the version and paraphrase in that sense and connection; submitting it, on the whole, to the learned reader to judge as he shall think proper; but must first desire him to consult Grotius, Dr. Mill and the Polyglot.

c Justified God, and testified their approbation, &c.] From the opposition between those

SECT. lviii. by professing to fall in with the design of his appearance, and being accordingly baptized with Luke VII. 30. the baptism of John, humbly confessing their sins and declaring their repentance. But the proud Pharisees, and doctors of the law, to their own unspeakable detriment, rejected the gracious counsel of God addressed to them, not being baptized by him, when they saw how plainly he dealt with them and their brethren[d].

God, being baptized with the baptism of John.

30 But the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, being not baptized of him.

Mat. XI. 12. But though these great and learned men despised him, yet the good effects of his ministry on others are still apparent; for from the days of John the Baptist, or from the time in which he bore his public testimony to an approaching Messiah, even to the present time[e] the spirits of men are so raised and animated by a desire after the kingdom of heaven, that it is (as it were) attacked with violence, like a besieged city; men of all sorts are pressing to get into it, and the violent seize it with eagerness[f]: multitudes are flocking around me, to be instructed in the nature of my kingdom; and some of most licentious characters, who have been looked upon as little better than ruffians and bravoes, seem resolutely set on securing it; while others of graver and fairer characters are found to neglect it. (Compare Luke xvi. 16.)

MAT. XI. 12. And from the days of John the Baptist, until now, the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.

13 This is a new, and very wonderful event For till [the time of] John the Baptist, all the prophets prophesied, and the law of Moses, as explained by them, was the only revelation of God's will to the people of Israel; which, so far as it related to me, was but an obscure intimation of what men 13 For all the prophets, and the law, prophesied until John.

those that justified God and those that rejected his counsel, it is plain that to justify here signifies to approve and vindicate. Compare ver. 35. (at the end of this section); Rom. iii. 4. and 1 Tim. iii. 16.

d How plainly he dealt with them and their brethren.] Of this see the paraphrase on Luke iii. 10. p. 101.

e From the days of John the Baptist even to the present time.] Sir Isaac Newton (on Prophecy, p. 159.) urges this as an argument to prove that some considerable time must have elapsed since John's imprisonment. But, on the common hypothesis, it must be near a year; and our Lord might probably include some time of his ministry preceding his imprisonment: so that we cannot be much assisted in our calculations by this text.

f The kingdom of heaven is attacked with violence—and the violent seize it with eagerness.—βιαζεται, και βιασται αρπαζουσιν αυτην.] The words of the original are very strong and forcible, and the translation I have given is very literal.—It seems necessary to interpret the latter clause as in the paraphrase, to prevent the appearance of a tautology: Yet I did not venture to render βιασται, ruffians or bravoes; because I think the version should be left in as great a latitude as the original; and I was afraid so great a variation from what is commonly taken to be the meaning of this passage, might have shocked some at the first hearing. To suppose, as a late ingenious writer has done, that this refers to the first attempts made to destroy the gospel in its infancy, and that αρπαζουσιν signifies tear it to pieces, does not appear natural in this connection; though the word must be allowed sometimes to have that import.

g This

men were to expect from my appearance: but John opened a much more perfect dispensation. SECT. IVIII.

14 And if ye will receive it, this is Elias which was for to come.

And indeed (to speak more plainly than I have commonly done), if you will hearken to my testimony, and receive [it,] this John is the Elijah who was to come[g], or the person whom Malachi describes under that name, as to be sent before the coming of the day of the Lord. (Mal. iv. 5, 6.) Mat. XI. 14.

15 He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

This is so important an intimation, 15 that I must urge your most attentive regard to it: and therefore, He that hath ears able to hear, let him hear [it,] and let every one that has a mind capable of reflection, reflect seriously upon it; for to understand and regard the character and mission of John aright, will have a most happy tendency to promote your receiving Him whom John was sent to introduce[h].

LUKE VII. 31. And the Lord said, Whereunto then shall I liken the men of this generation? and to what are they like? [MAT. XI. 16.]

32 They are like unto children sitting in the market-place, and calling one to another, [unto their fellows] and saying, We have piped unto you, and

[And the Lord Jesus farther said,] To what then shall I now compare the men of this generation? and to what indeed are they like? Reflect upon yourselves, and you will surely see the justice of the comparison which I am going to make. They are like a company of little children[i], whom 32 you may sometimes have observed, as they were sitting in the market-place, to be so froward and perverse in their behaviour to each other, that no contrivance could be found to please them; and some of them you may have heard calling out to their companions, and saying, What shall we do to please you, and to bring you to join with us in our diversions? We have tried all the ways we can think of: sometimes we have piped to Luke VII. 31

g This John is the Elijah who was to come.] How little there is in Mr. Collins's objection against thus fixing Malachi's prophecy of Elijah to John the Baptist, many of his learned antagonists have shewn: and I think none in an easier and stronger light than Mr. Bullock: see his Vindication, pref. p. 50.

h Whom John was sent to introduce.] According to the received reading, Luke vii. 29, 30, must be introduced here, and may be paraphrased thus: "29—And all the people that were present, and the publicans in particular, when they heard [this] discourse, having formerly been baptized with the baptism of John, justified and approved the wisdom of God as illustrated in it. 30—But the Pharisees, and doctors of the law, in whose presence it was delivered, disrelished it; and, puffed up with a vain conceit of their own knowledge and goodness, rejected the gracious counsel of God towards them; and, not having been baptized by him, were displeased to hear so high an encomium given to John. 31—And the Lord knowing how ready they were to cavil, both at him and his fore-runner, said, with a particular reference to these Pharisees and doctors, Whereunto then shall I liken the men of this generation? &c." Compare note b in this section.

i They are like little children.] It is plain our Lord's exact meaning is, that the men of that generation, or the cavillers of whom he was now speaking, were like the children complained of, and not like those that made the complaint: but, more especially in Matthew's style, the phrase [it is like] often signifies only in general that the thing spoken of may be illustrated by the following similitude. And so the phrase must be understood, Mat. xiii. 24, and 45. xviii. 23. xx. 1. and xxii. 2.

SECT. lviii.

to you a pleasant tune, and you have not danced to the musick; and at other times we have changed the ditty and mourned to you, or played and sung such dirges as are used at funerals, and you have not taken your part and lamented with us; but are always finding fault with every thing we do and will not be prevailed upon to join with us. Such is that childish obstinacy and perverseness that appears in you, who think yourselves the oracles of wisdom in the present age; and you discover the same froward temper in far more important instances: for John the Baptist, of whom I have now been speaking, came with an uncommon austerity of behaviour, neither eating bread, as others do, nor drinking wine, but living on locusts and honey and water in the wilderness; and you say, He has a devil, and acts like a wild distracted demoniac, whom an evil spirit drives from the society of men. On the other hand, the Son of man is come, without any of this severity, eating and drinking, as others do, conversing familiarly among you and with a temperate freedom sharing in your festivals as well as your common meals; and you say, Behold, a gluttonous man, and a winebibber, a fit friend and companion of publicans and sinners: thus ungratefully do you injure his character for that humanity and condescension which you should rather applaud. But, nevertheless, true wisdom has still been justified and vindicated by all those who are indeed her children: and they who are truly wise and religious must needs approve this beautiful variety in the conduct of Providence; and see that the difference in our manner of living suits the purposes of our respective appearances and is adapted to promote the general design of God's glory and man's salvation.

Luke VII. 32

33

34

35

and ye have not danced; we have mourned to you, and ye have not wept, [or lamented.] [MAT. XI. 16, 17.]

33 For John the Baptist came, neither eating bread, nor drinking wine; and ye say, He hath a devil.] MAT. XI. 18.]

34 The Son of man is come eating and drinking; and ye say, Behold a gluttonous man, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners. [MAT. XI. 19.—]

35 But wisdom is justified of all her children. [MAT. XI. 19.]

IMPROVEMENT.

Luke VII. 32

How happy would it be, if we could learn to correct the natural inconsistencies of our temper and conduct by wise reflections and considerations! How much more improving would our attendance on the ministrations of God's servants be, were we seriously 24—26 to ask ourselves to what purpose we attended!

It ought surely to be followed with such considerations, since it is intended to lead us to the kingdom of heaven: a glorious prize! too glorious to be obtained by faint wishes and inactive desires.

There

There is a sense in which it still suffers violence: and how sad is the degeneracy of our natures, that we should exert so little warmth in such a pursuit, and so much for every trifle! Instead of that holy ardour with which men should press into it, they fold their hands in their bosoms, and lose themselves in soft luxurious dreams, till the precious opportunity is for ever gone. May Divine Grace display the crowns and palms of victory before our eyes, in so awakening a manner, that we may joyfully seize them, whatever obstacles may lie in our way, whatever must be done, or whatever must be borne to secure them! SECT. lviii. Mat. XI. 12.

Let us not, as we love our own souls, through a proud self-sufficiency reject the gracious counsels of God which are addressed to us, lest we should be another day condemned by publicans and sinners. Divine providence and grace are using a variety of methods with us: let not our perverseness and folly, like that of the Jews, frustrate them all; but rather let us shew ourselves the children of wisdom, by falling in with its measures and improving as well as applauding them. Luke VII. 30

SECT. LIX.

Our Lord laments over the impenitent cities of Galilee, acknowledges the Divine sovereignty in the dispensations of the gospel and invites sinners to come to him. Mat. XI. 20. to the end.

MAT. XI. 20.

THEN began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not.

21 Wo unto thee, Chorazin! Wo unto thee, Bethsaida! for if the mighty works which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes.

MAT. XI. 20.

THEN, after Jesus had in general reproved the Jews for the perverseness of their carriage under the great advantages that they enjoyed, he began particularly to upbraid the cities in which most of his miracles had been wrought because they did not repent, and believe in him[a]: And in the most affectionate and solemn manner he declared, how terrible would be the consequence of their impenitence and unbelief; and said, Wo unto thee, O Chorazin, and Wo unto thee, O Bethsaida, where I so often have conversed and taught! for surely if the miracles which have been wrought in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon of old, though they were places so remarkable for their luxury, pride and contempt of religion[b], they would long ago have repented with tokens SECT. lix. Mat. XI. 20. 21

[a] Because they did not repent and believe in him.] Our Lord had great reason thus to upbraid them on this occasion; considering how much time he had spent among them, and how many excellent discourses he had delivered, as well as how many surprising miracles he had wrought in these parts; as may be seen in several preceding sections.

[b] Places so remarkable for their luxury, pride and contempt of religion.] This is frequently

SECT. lix.

tokens of the deepest humility, covering themselves in sackcloth and lying in ashes[c]. Wherefore I say unto you, That as they never had such means of conviction as you have been indulged with and have ungratefully abused, the condition even of Tyre and Sidon, in the day of the final and universal judgment[d], shall be more tolerable than yours, who will deservedly be exposed to a much heavier weight of vengeance. (Compare Luke x. 13, 14. sect. xcvii.)

Mat. XI. 22.

22 But I say unto you, it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon, at the day of judgment, than for you.

23 And thou especially, O guilty Capernaum, who hast been (as it were) exalted even to heaven, not only in wealth and magnificence, (compare Dan. iv. 22.) but, what is infinitely more valuable, in the means of grace, by my long abode in thee, and continued labours among thine inhabitants: such dreadful desolation is appointed for thee, that thou shalt (as it were) be brought down to hell, being swallowed up in utter irrecoverable destruction: (compare Isa. xiv. 13—15.) And thy punishment will be apparently just: for surely if the miracles which have been wrought in thee, had been performed even in Sodom itself, licentious and abandoned as that infamous city was[e], it would have been convinced and reformed; so that, instead of being consumed by that shower of flaming vengeance, it might have continued in all its glory and beauty even to this 24 day. Wherefore I say unto you, That the condition even of the inhabitants of the land of Sodom in the day of the final judgment, shall be more tolerable

23 And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell: for if the mighty works which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day.

24 But I say unto you, That it shall be more tolerable for the land frequently the case with rich trading cities: and that it was so with these in particular, may be learned from many passages in the Old Testament, as well as from profane writers. See Judg. xviii. 7. Isa. xxiii. 9. Ezek. xxviii. 2, 5, 17, 22. and Amos i. 9, 10.—May God preserve London in particular from resembling them in character, whom in commerce and grandeur it so much exceeds!

c Covering themselves in sackcloth and lying in ashes.] As covering themselves with sackcloth or hair-cloth, for such it was), and lying in ashes, were usual expressions of mourning; so they particularly were made use of on days of public fasting and deep humiliation for sin; and therefore are justly introduced here, as expressions of sincere repentance and self-abhorrence. Compare Esth. iv. 1—3. Job xlii. 6. Isa. lviii. 5. Dan. ix. 3. and Jonah iii. 6—8.

d In the day of judgment.] Dr. Hammond understands this passage as referring to the temporal calamities to come on these places by the Romans; who did indeed shortly after overrun the whole country, and made dreadful ravages in some of these cities. See Joseph. de Bell. Jud. lib. iii. cap. 6, 7. (al. 5, 6.) & lib. vi. cap. 9. (al. vii. 17.) But there is no evidence that the destruction of these Jewish cities was more dreadful than that of Tyre and Sidon, and it was certainly less so than that of Sodom and Gomorrah: besides, our Lord plainly speaks of a judgment, that was yet to come, on all these places that he mentions.

e Licentious and abandoned as that infamous city was.] It is well known that those abominable cities of Sodom and Gomorrah had long since grown into a proverb for wickedness and misery. See Gen. xiii. 13. xviii. 20. Deut. xxix. 23. xxxii. 32. Isa. i. 9, 10. iii. 9. xiii. 19. Jer. xxiii. 14. xlix. 18. Lam. iv. 6. Amos iv. 11. Zeph. ii. 9. Mat. x. 15. and Rev. xi. 8.

land of Sodom, in the day of judgment, than for thee.

tolerable than yours; for your condemnation shall rise in proportion to your more aggravated guilt, and to those more valuable mercies and privileges which you have abused.

SECT. lix.

Mat. XI. 24.

25 At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes.

At that time also (as well as another that will be elsewhere mentioned, (Luke x. 21. sect. cvi), Jesus took occasion, from the circumstances which he then observed, to say[f], I ascribe glory to thee, O Father[g], thou supreme Lord of heaven and earth, that while thou hast, in the course of thy wise, though mysterious providence, hid these great things of thy gospel from those who have the character of wise and understanding persons[h], or from the learned scribes and refined politicians of the age, whom thou hast suffered, through their own pride and folly, to reject them with disdain; thou hast brought the humble to the knowledge of them, and hast graciously revealed them to many of the lowest and plainest of mankind, who, in comparison of the former, are but as infants. Mortifying as such a circumstance might seem, I cordially acquiesce in it; and say, Be it so, O my Father, since such is thy sovereign will and pleasure thus to exalt thine own glorious name, and to lay the creature in low abasement before thee. 25

26 Even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight.

26

27 All things are delivered unto me, of my Father: and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth

And then, turning himself to those that stood near him, he said, Do not be led by the example of your great and learned men to slight and despise me; for, humble as my circumstances now appear, all things are delivered unto me by my almighty Father, who has fully instructed and empowered me for whatever relates to the salvation of men[i]: And such are the mysteries and 27

[f] Jesus took occasion to say.] It is in the original, αποκριθεις ο Ιησους ειπεν; which our translation has literally rendered, Jesus answered and said: but when the words so introduced are not a reply to any preceding speech, I apprehend the version here given expresses the sense of them with yet greater exactness.—The words [at that time] seem plainly to prove, that what follows is to be introduced here, and consequently that Luke x. 21, 22. is a repetition of it on another proper occasion.

[g] I ascribe glory to thee, O Father.] This is one proper meaning of εξομολογουμαι, as appears from comparing Heb. xiii. 15. and Rom. xv. 9.

[h] Thou hast hid these things from wise and understanding persons.] God is often said, in scripture, to do those things which he determines to permit, and which he foresees will be in fact the consequence of those circumstances in which his creatures are placed, though their wills are laid under no constraint. (Compare Exod. vii. 3, 4. 2 Sam. xii. 11, 12. xxiv. 1. and 1 Kings xxii. 23.) In this sense alone could he be said to hide those things from the learned men of this age, which he revealed so plainly, that honest and well-disposed persons, though children in understanding, might come to the knowledge of them. Compare Mat. x. 34, 35.

[i] Has fully instructed and empowered me, &c.] I cannot, with Mr. L'Enfant, confine the sense of παντα μοι παρεδοθη merely to the instructions Christ had received from the Father: his exaltation to supreme power and government was so near, and so sure,

SECT. lix.

Mat. XI. 27.

and glories of my person and kingdom, that no one fully knows the Son, but the Father[k]; neither does any truly know the Father, but the Son, and he to whom the Son is pleased to reveal him: For I have that knowledge of him to which no creature can pretend; and it is my great errand to the world to discover his nature and will, and lead his wandering creatures into a saving acquaintance with him; A work which I undertake with the greatest cheerfulness and delight: and therefore, come unto me by faith, all ye that labour, and are heavy burdened, whether with the distresses of life, or with the sense of guilt (see Psal. xxxii. 4. xxxviii. 4.) or with the load of ceremonial observances which your unmerciful teachers are so ready to impose (Mat. xxiii. 4.) and I will ease you of the grievous burdens you are sinking under.

Be persuaded then to take my yoke upon you, and to learn of me, as my obedient disciples; for I am meek, condescending and lowly in heart[l], and will impose no unnecessary hardships upon you: but on such an application to me, you shall find that refreshment to your souls which you in vain would seek elsewhere; that composure, satisfaction and joy, which nothing but humility and meekness, with an entire subjection to me, can give. For such is the genius of my gospel, that though it will indeed bring you under some restraints, they are not only tolerable, but, on the whole, desirable: and I may truly say, that my yoke is easy and gentle; or, if there be a mixture of difficulty attending it, such assistances and encouragements are provided, that with them my burden is light and pleasant[m] to those who by divine grace are engaged to submit to it. (Compare 1 John v. 3.) knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him.

28 Come unto me, all ye that labour, and are heavy laden; and I will give you rest.

29 Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart; and ye shall find rest unto your souls.

30 For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.

IMPROVE-

sure, that our Lord might with great propriety intend the phrase in that more extensive sense I have given it. Compare John v. 22. and Mat. xviii. 18.

[k] No one knows the Son, but the Father.] These words evidently declare that there is something inexplicably mysterious in the nature and person of Christ; which indeed appears in the most convincing manner from the account elsewhere given of his Deity in scripture.

[l] For I am meek, condescending and lowly in heart.] Some have apprehended that our Lord here intends peculiarly to recommend the imitation of his humility and meekness as what would especially tend, in the natural consequence of things, to promote the repose and tranquillity of their minds; and Dr. Watts, in a very beautiful manner, has paraphrased the words thus in his Hymns. (Book I. Hymn 127.) But I apprehend our Lord chiefly means to remind them of the general lenity of his temper, which would engage him to decline all grievous impositions and unnecessary burdens, and tenderly to instruct them in the way to pardon and life. Compare Mat. xii. 19, 20. sect. li.

[m] My burden is light and pleasant.] Ελαφρον properly signifies both light and pleasant;

IMPROVEMENT.

SECT. lix.

WHAT can we imagine more dreadful than the guilt and condemnation of those who hear the gospel only to despise it! How can we read the doom of Chorazin, Bethsaida and Capernaum, without trembling for ourselves, lest we should incur the like sentence! Such have been our religious advantages and opportunities, that, like them, we have indeed been lifted up to heaven: The Lord grant that we may not, by our misimprovement and disobedience, be cast down to the lowest hell! that Tyre and Sidon, and even Sodom and Gomorrah, may not at last rise up in judgment against us, and call down on our heads a punishment more intolerable than that which has fallen upon them, or which they must even then feel!

Mat. XI. 21—24

Our vain curiosity may perhaps be ready to ask, Why were these advantages given to them that abused them, rather than to those who would have improved them better? But let us impose upon our minds a reverential silence; since the great Lord of heaven and 26 earth giveth not an account of any of his matters, (Job xxxiii. 13.) It is so, Father; for so it seemeth good in thy sight!

Still we see the gospel hid from many who are esteemed the 25 wisest and most prudent of mankind; and, blessed be God, we still see it revealed to some, who, in comparison of them, are but babes. Let not this offend us; but rather taking our notions from the word of God, let us learn to honour these babes as possessed of the truest wisdom, and adore the riches of Divine grace, if we are in their number, while many of superior capacities are left to stumble at this stone till they fall into final ruin.

Whatever objections are brought against Christ and his ways, 27 may we ever adhere to them, since all things are delivered to him by the Father! From him therefore may we seek the true knowledge of God, as ever we desire everlasting life!

We have all our burdens of sin and of sorrow! While we labour 28 under them, let us with pleasure hear the gentle and melodious voice of a Redeemer, thus kindly inviting us to come unto him, that 29 we may find rest to our souls. Let us with pleasure subject ourselves to him, and go on in our holy course with that improvement and cheerfulness which become those who learn by their own daily experience that his commandments are not grievous, and feel that 30 his yoke is easy and his burden is light.

SECT.

pleasant; and χρηστος, easy, may be also rendered gentle and agreeable; and so with great propriety may express that true pleasure and cheerfulness which are the genuine result of a sincere subjection to Christ's government, which is plainly the meaning of taking his yoke. (Compare Deut. xxviii. 47, 48. 1 Kings xii. 4. and Isa. x. 27.)—It is observable, that the word yoke is particularly used for ceremonial impositions, Acts xv. 10. and Gal. v. 1. and the word burden is used in the same sense, Mat. xxiii. 4. Compare Mat. xvi. 19. and note b there, sect. lxxviii.

[a] One

SECT. LX.

Jesus accepts an invitation to dine at a Pharisee's house, and vindicates the woman who anointed his feet there. Luke VII. 36. to the end.

LUKE VII. 36.

SECT. IX.

Luke VII. 36.

AND one of the Pharisees who was present at this discourse[a], and might feel himself touched by some insinuations which it contained, under a specious pretence of respect to our Lord, though as it seemed with an ensnaring design, invited him to eat with him that day, taking care to have others of his own sect present to observe what passed. And Jesus, being willing to express his condescension and candour, accepted his invitation; and entering into the house of the Pharisee, he sat down to table, without taking any notice of the omission of some usual ceremonies of respect which so great a guest might well have expected.

37 And, behold, there was a woman in that city who had once been a great and scandalous sinner, and was still accounted infamous on account of the lewdness and debaucheries of her former life. and, when she knew that he sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, she took encouragement from his late gracious invitation, and determined to give a remarkable token of her reverence and love to so glorious and compassionate a Saviour; and for this purpose she brought an alabaster ves-

38 sel full of richly perfumed ointment; And standing by the couch on which our Lord, according to the custom of those times, lay down to eat, waiting behind him in the posture of a servant at his feet, her very heart was melted with such pious remorse, that in the presence of the whole company she was unable to refrain from weeping in such great abundance, that she began even to water his feet with a shower of tears[b]; and, observing

LUKE VII. 36.

AND one of the Pharisees desired him that he would eat with him: and he went into the Pharisee's house, and sat down to meat.

37 And behold, a woman in the city, which was a sinner, when she knew that Jesus sat at meat in the Pharisee's house, brought an alabaster-box of ointment;

38 And stood at his feet behind him weeping, and began to wash his feet with tears, and did

[a] One of the Pharisees, who was present at this discourse.] Dr. Whitby has abundantly proved this to be a different story from that of Mary's anointing Christ's head a little before his death; (Mat. xxvi. 6—13. sect. cxlv.) And indeed the difference is so great and so plain, that it is astonishing so great a critic as Grotius should so confound them, and build so many remarks on that gross mistake.

[b] To water his feet with a shower of tears.] This is the proper signification of the word βρεχειν. Compare Mat. v. 45.—We are not to imagine she came with a purpose thus to wash and wipe the feet of Christ; but, probably hearing that the Pharisee who had did wipe them with the hairs of her head, and kissed his feet, and anointed them with the ointment.

observing how wet they were, she wiped them with the fine long tresses of her hair[c], which she wore flowing loose about her shoulders; and then, to shew the warmth of her affection, kissed his feet, and anointed them with the perfumed balsam she brought with her, as not thinking herself worthy to pour it upon his head. SECT. IX. Luke VII. 38.

39 Now when the Pharisee which had bidden him, saw it, he spake within himself, saying, this man, if he were a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth him; for she is a sinner.

Now the Pharisee who had invited him, observing [this,] which, according to the traditions they maintained, appeared to him a very indecent sight, was so offended, that he said within himself, This man, if he were really a prophet, as he pretends to be, would certainly have known who and what kind of woman this vile creature is that thus familiarly toucheth him, and would immediately have driven her away with a just disdain; for she is such a scandalous and filthy sinner, that her very touch is enough to pollute him. 39

40 And Jesus answering, said unto him, Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee. And he saith, Master, say on.

And Jesus, in reply to these uncharitable sentiments which he discerned at their first rising in his heart, said to him, Simon, I have something to say to thee on this occasion, which deserves thy regard. And, with an hypocritical profession of respect, he says, O thou great Teacher[d], I am ready to attend; and whatsoever thou wouldest offer, say [it freely]. 40

41 There was a certain creditor, which had two debtors; the one owed five hundred pence, and the other fifty:

Then Jesus immediately delivered this parable as a just, yet mild reproof to his host: A certain creditor had two debtors: one of whom owed him five hundred denarii, or Roman pence[e], and the other owed him but fifty: 41 had invited Jesus to dinner had neglected the usual civility of anointing the head of his Divine guest, she was willing to supply the defect; and as she stood near Jesus, she was so melted with his discourse that she shed such a flood of tears as wetted his feet, which lay bare on the couch, his sandals being put off; and, observing this, she wiped them with her hair, which she now wore flowing loose about her shoulders, as mourners commonly did; and then, not thinking herself worthy to anoint his head, poured out the liquid perfume on his feet. In this view all appears natural and unaffected.

Now

c With the tresses of her hair.] So the word θριξι properly signifies; and the English word tresses might be derived from it. It is well known that long hair was esteemed a great ornament in the female dress (compare 1 Cor. xi. 15.) and women of pleasure used to nourish and plait it, and to set it off with garlands and jewels, to render themselves agreeable to their lovers.

d O Teacher.] So διδασκαλε properly signifies, and I think expresses something more than the English word master, especially in the sense in which it is now commonly used. Whether this was mere hypocrisy, or whether it was intended as a sort of sneer on our Lord, who, though he professed himself so great a teacher, would allow this woman to use such freedoms with him, I pretend not certainly to say.

e Five hundred denarii, or Roman pence.] It is in the original δηναρια, which is well known to have been a Roman coin, in value about seven pence halfpenny of our money; so that five hundred of them were nearly equivalent to fifteen of our guineas, and fifty to one guinea and an half.—There is no reason to believe that there was any mystery intended in Christ's fixing on these sums rather than any others that had as great a difference between them.

f Water

SECT. IX.

Luke VII. 42.

Now as they had not any thing to pay, so that neither of them could discharge any part of his debt, he freely forgave them both the whole of what they respectively owed: and upon this it may be reasonably expected that both would have some sense of his goodness; say, therefore, which of them do you think would love him most?

42 And when they had nothing to pay, he frankly forgave them both. Tell me therefore, which of them will love him most?

43 And Simon very readily replied and said, I suppose, so far as I can judge from the circumstances thou hast mentioned, that he to whom he forgave most could not but have the greatest affection for him. And [Jesus] said to him, Thou hast judged very rightly, and the reflection is evidently suited to the case that we have here before us.

43 Simon answered and said, I suppose that he to whom he forgave most. And he said unto him, Thou hast rightly judged.

44 And, turning himself to the woman, he said to Simon the Pharisee, Thou seest this poor afflicted woman, and canst not but take notice of the extraordinary tenderness and affectionate regard to me that she has now discovered. I came into thine house as a guest, on thine own express invitation [and] thou didst not give me any water to [wash] my feet[f], though that be so customary and necessary a refreshment on these occasions; but she has plentifully watered my feet with her tears, and wiped them even with the tresses of her

44 And he turned to the woman, and said unto Simon, Seest thou this woman? I entered into thine house, thou gavest me no water for my feet; but she hath washed my feet with tears, and wiped them with the hairs of her head.

45 hair. Thou didst not give me the usual respect of a kiss, when I first came under thy roof[g]; but she, ever since she came in[h], has not ceased, with the greatest humility and affection, even 45 Thou gavest me no kiss; but this woman, since the time I came in, hath not ceased to kiss my feet.

46 to kiss my feet. Thou didst not so much as anoint my head with common oil, though few entertainments fail of being attended with that circumstance[i]; but she, as thou seest, has anointed even my feet with this precious and fragrant ointment.

46 Mine head with oil thou didst not anoint; but this woman hath anointed my feet with ointment.

f Water to wash my feet.] Drusius supposes this may be understood as if our Lord had said, "Thou didst not give me so much as water to wash my feet; whereas some guests have their feet washed with wine mingled with spices." Athenæus does indeed mention such an extravagance; but to be sure our Lord did not intend the least insinuation in favour of it.

g The usual respect of a kiss, &c.] How customary it was for the master of the house to receive his guests with such a salutation, to provide them with water to wash their feet, and to anoint their heads with oil, or some liquid perfume, the reader may see in many other commentators, and particularly in Cabnet's Account of the Jewish Feasts. It is possible Simon might omit some of these civilities lest his brethren who sat at table with him should think he paid Jesus too much respect; and, if there was any such slight intended, it might be an additional reason for our Lord's taking such particular notice of the neglect.

h Ever since she came in.] The evangelist so expressly tells us that she heard of Christ's being at dinner with the Pharisee before she came in (ver. 37.) that I make no doubt of following those copies which read it εισηλθεν, she came in, rather than those which have εισηλθον, in the first person, which our translation follows.

i Anointed my head with oil, though few entertainments fail, &c.] How common this circumstance was, may be judged by comparing Deut. xxviii. 40. Micah vi. 15. Psal. xxiii. 5. civ. 15. and cxli. 5.

k Therefore

SECT. IX.

Luke VII. 47.

47 Wherefore I say unto thee, Her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little.

ment. Wherefore I say unto thee, and openly declare it, both for her vindication and for thy admonition, Her many sins, which I well know have been exceeding heinous, are graciously forgiven; and therefore, as I have been the means of bringing her to repentance and peace, she has thus testified the high regard that she has to me, and has loved me much[k], as being persuaded that she never can sufficiently express her sense of the obligation: whereas thou who art over-confident in thine own righteousness, lookest but slightly upon me; as he to whom but little is forgiven, or who thinks his debt was but small, is not so much affected with the kindness of the creditor that forgives him, and loveth him but little.

48 And he saith unto her, Thy sins are forgiven.

And, to renew the kind assurance of the pardon that before was granted to the woman, he says to her, in the presence of them all, I know the sincerity of thy repentance; and therefore now, for thy encouragement under this severe treatment, I solemnly declare that thy sins are forgiven. 48

49 And they that sat at meat with him, began to say within themselves, Who is this that forgiveth sins also?

And they who were at table with him, began to say within themselves, Who is this arrogant and presumptuous man, that not only transgresses our rules by permitting a harlot to touch him, but even presumes to say that he forgiveth sins, which is the peculiar prerogative of God himself? 49

50 And he said to the woman, Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace.

But, far from recalling what he had said, he openly confirmed the consolation that he before had given, and said to the woman, Thy faith hath saved thee; and as the tenderness and love that thou hast shewn have in a convincing, though silent manner testified thy believing regards to me, under the extraordinary character I bear, go thy way in serenity and peace[l], and enjoy the comfort of Divine forgiveness, 50 k Therefore she has loved me much.] As passionately as Clarius opposes this rendering, and after all the immense pains Grotius has taken to find a sense in that which our translation follows, I cannot but think the connection evidently requires that we should render ὅτι therefore, rather than for or because, how singular soever such a sense of the particle may be. And so it is, the Hebrew particle that answers it, is used in Hos. ix. 15. All their iniquity is in Gilgal; for there I hated them; or, therefore there I hated them. For it cannot be supposed that Israel is said to sin in Gilgal, because he hated them there; but on account of the iniquity which they committed there, therefore it was that there he hated them. Our Lord by this answer plainly shewed his knowledge, both of their thoughts, and of her character.

l Go thy way in peace.] This was an usual form of dismissing inferiors, and was an expression of the friendship and good wishes of the person speaking: (Gen. xliv. 17. Exod. iv. 18. 1 Sam. i. 17. 2 Sam. xv. 27. Mark v. 34. Luke viii. 48. and Jam. ii. 16.) Compare Luke ii. 29. p. 72. There is an apparent propriety in the phrase here, considering what had happened to discompose the tender spirit of this humble penitent.

SECT. IX.

forgiveness, without afflicting thyself for the severity with which uncharitable men would treat thee.

Luke VII. 50.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. 50 How joyful an assurance must this be to a soul thus bowed down and humbled in the very dust under a sense of sin! How light did the reproaches of men sit upon her when she heard these reviving words from the mouth of the great Saviour, who alone had authority to pronounce them!

Our hearts surely upbraid us with many and aggravated sins; but we hear the tidings of pardon: let us gladly embrace it; and 41 acknowledging that not five hundred pence, nor even ten thousand talents, are sufficient to express the greatness of our debt; let us retain the remembrance of it, even when we hope that God has 42, 43 forgiven it; and let us labour, that the tenderness of our love, the warmth of our zeal and the steadiness of our obedience may in some measure be proportionable to it: and, blessed Jesus, how distinguished must they then be!

Let us with humble pleasure approach this compassionate Friend of sinners; who, though in one sense separate from them, yet thus freely and graciously encouraged the chief of them to apply to him, 39 though he well knew that condescension would expose him to the censure of the self-conceited Pharisees. May God preserve us from that arrogant confidence in our own righteousness, which, while it leads us to despise some, perhaps much dearer to him than 47 ourselves, would proportionably sink our value for the Saviour, and our love to him!

36 As for what remains, let the candour with which Christ accepted this invitation, and the gentleness and prudence with which he behaved at this ensnaring entertainment, teach us to mingle the wisdom of the serpent with the innocence and sweetness of the dove; and neither absolutely to refuse all favours, nor severely to resent all neglects from those, whose friendship might at best be very dubious, and their intimacy by no means safe.

39 To conclude; let us avoid that very ill temper which this Pharisee shewed in upbraiding this poor humble penitent with the scandals of her former life. Where we have reason to believe that sin has been lamented and forsaken, and consequently that God has forgiven it, let us cheerfully receive those whom our holy Master has not rejected; and if the remembrance of former irregularities cannot be entirely lost, let it only engage us to magnify the riches of Divine grace towards such persons, and to rejoice with them in the display of it.

SECT.

SECT. LXI.

Our Lord, attended by some pious women, takes another progress, in which he casts out a demon; and, having vindicated himself from the blasphemous charge of a combination with Satan, warns the Pharisees of the danger they were in of committing the unpardonable sin. Luke VIII. 1—3. XI. 14, 15, 17—23. Mat. XII. 22—32. Mark III. 22—30.

LUKE VIII. 1.

AND it came to pass afterward, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching, and shewing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God; and the twelve were with him.

LUKE VIII. 1.

SECT. lxi.

Luke VIII. 1.

NOW, in pursuance of the great design which Jesus had been prosecuting in his ministry wherever he had been, it came to pass afterwards (or after the events related above) that he travelled through every city and village in those parts; preaching in every place, and publishing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God, which he was now about to erect among the children of men: and the twelve apostles, whom he had lately chosen, were with him; as he thought it proper they should be for some time, that they might be farther instructed for their work, and that their having been thus publicly seen in his train might promote their reception when they afterwards came to any of these places by themselves. And there were also some 2 women with him who had been cured of grievous disorders brought upon them by evil spirits, and of other illnesses; [particularly] Mary, who was called Magdalene, from Magdala, the place of her residence[a]; a remarkable person, out of whom had been cast no less than seven demons[b], who, probably for the sins of her former life, were suffered by God to agitate and torment her in such a manner as to render her a spectacle of great

2 And certain women which had been healed of evil spirits and infirmities, Mary called Magdalene, out of whom went seven devils, a Called Magdalene, from Magdala the place of her residence.] As ιησους Ναζαρηνος, Jesus of Nazareth, or Jesus the Nazarene, so Μαρια Μαγδαληνη, which we are used to render Mary Magdalene, might as well be rendered Mary the Magdalene, or Mary of Magdala, which was a town in Galilee beyond Jordan. See Mat. xv. 39.

b Out of whom had been cast seven demons.] This is supposed by Gregory to have been only a proverbial expression to signify that she was a person of a very bad character, whom Jesus reclaimed; and Mr. L'Enfant advances the same interpretation, as agreeable to the Jewish style: but, as so much is spoken of dispossessions in the proper sense of the word by Luke, it is most natural to suppose this to be referred to here. Some have thought she was the sinner mentioned Luke vii. 37. but there is no certain proof of it. And the conjecture of those who suppose her to be the sister of Lazarus, whose husband might have lived at Magdala, is rather more improbable: since when Luke and John mention Mary of Bethany, they never intimate that it was Mary Magdalene. See Calmet's Dictionary.

c Then

SECT. lxi.

great horror. And there attended him besides, Joanna, the wife of Chuza, a steward in the court of king Herod; who yet did not think Luke VIII. 3. such an attendance beneath the dignity of her family: and one Susannah, and many other [women]; who, being persons of some considerable rank and circumstances in life, assisted him with their possessions, which they cheerfully employed to supply him and his disciples with necessaries, as occasion required.

3 And Joanna, the wife of Chuza, Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others; which ministered unto him of their substance.

Mat. XII. 22. While he was making then this tour about Galilee and the neighbouring parts, there was brought to him one possessed by a demon[c], who had been rendered by this means both blind and dumb: and he immediately expelled the evil spirit, and cured him that had been so miserably afflicted by it; so that it came to pass, that when the demon was gone out at the command of Jesus, the person that but just before was blind and dumb, both spake and saw[d].

MAT. XII. 22. Then was brought unto him one possessed with a devil, blind, and dumb: and he healed him; insomuch that [it came to pass, when the devil was gone out,] the blind and dumb both spake and saw. [LUKE XI. 14—]

23 And all the multitude of people round him, perceiving he had healed the poor distressed creature in an instant, were astonished at the sight, and said, Is not this the Messiah, the long expected Son of David?

23 And all the people were amazed, and said, Is not this the Son of David? [LUKE XI.—14.]

24 But the Pharisees who were with him, and particularly the scribes, who came down from Jerusalem, and still attended his progress to make their remarks on what passed, hearing [this] natural reflection of the people, and fearing lest their own credit should sink among them as that of Jesus advanced, gave the most malicious and unreasonable turn to the matter which can be imagined: for they said, This is so bad a [man] and so notoriously transgresses the traditions of the elders and the law of God[e], that he is certainly

24 But when the Pharisees, [and the scribes which came down from Jerusalem] heard it, they said, This fellow [hath Beelzebub,

c Then there was brought to him one possessed by a demon.] This miracle appears to have been performed on the morning of that day on which Christ delivered the parables of the sower, &c. (compare Mat. xiii. 1, & seq. sect. lxv.) and on the evening of which he crossed the sea, stilled the tempest, and went into the country of the Gadarenes, where he dispossessed the legion. (See Mark iv. 35, & seq. sect. lxix.) This is the reason of introducing it here, as most critics do; and no other story, not yet inserted, can claim a place before it; therefore Matthew and Luke, in their different order, are transposed to agree with Mark on that grand foundation laid down in note k on Mark i. 16, p. 184.

d The blind and dumb both spake and saw.] We have before observed that κωφος often signifies both deaf and dumb (see note k on Luke i. 22, p. 34.) but, as it is not said that Christ gave this man his hearing, it is plain he was not deaf. And indeed it appears worthy of remark that we hardly ever meet with entire blindness and deafness in the same person.

e So notoriously transgresses the traditions of the elders and the law of God.] There is sufficient reason to conclude that the Pharisees must go on this principle in this random charge, which had not the least shadow of a proof; and it was usual with them to esteem a contempt of their traditions

zebub, and] doth not cast out devils, but by Beelzebub, the prince [Luke, or the chief] of the devils. [Mark III. 22. Luke XI. 15.]

rainly himself possessed by Beelzebub, and does not cast out demons but only by a secret combination with Beelzebub; who being the prince [or] chief of the demons[f], with a view to confirm his own interest, expels other inferior spirits under his command, at the word of this Jesus, who therefore deserves to be put to death as a magician (Exod. xxii. 18.) rather than to be thus extolled as the Messiah. SECT. lxi. Mat. XII. 24.

25 And Jesus knew their thoughts, [and he called them unto h m,] and said unto them, [in parables, How can Satan cast out Satan?] Every kingdom divided against itself [cannot stand, but] is brought to desolation; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand, [Luke, but falleth.] [Mark III. 23—25. Luke XI. 17.]

And, Jesus knowing their thoughts, though he was not within hearing of those reflections, called them to come near him, and said to them in the following parabolical expressions, before all the people, How can you possibly imagine that, in such circumstances as these, Satan should cast out Satan[g]? It may surely be laid down as a maxim, That every kingdom divided against itself cannot long subsist in flourishing circumstances, [but] quickly sinks into contempt, and is brought to utter desolation; and every smaller society, if it be but a city, or a single family, divided against itself, shall not long stand, [but] falleth into inevitable ruin. 25

26 And if Satan [rise up against himself and]

And, therefore, if Satan rise up against himself, as he certainly does 26

tions as equally criminal with the most express contempt of the law. It is also well known that they charged Christ both with sabbath-breaking and blasphemy.

[f] Beelzebub, the prince, or chief of the demons.] There is no doubt but this was spoken by the Jews not merely in a general way of a prince of the demons, or of one of their chiefs, but in particular of him whom they considered as the prince of the powers of darkness: for in Mark it is τῳ ἀρχοντι, though Matthew and Luke express it without the article; and the following words shew he was supposed to be the same with Satan, the grand adversary. One of the titles given him was Beelzebub, or Baalzebub; and a Philistine idol who had his temple at Ekron (and is supposed by some to answer to the Grecian Pluto, Jurieu, Hist. des Dogmes, p. 631.) was plainly called by this name (See 2 Kings i. 2, 3.) which is well known to signify The Lord of flies; this idol being worshipped, as some tell us, under the figure of a fly or beetle, as defending people from these insects; though others think it may allude to the vast multitude of flies with which the slaughter of their sacrifices was infested in the heathen temples, while (as the Jews report) no fly was ever seen to come upon the flesh of any sacrifice in the temple at Jerusalem. (See Selden de Dis Syris Syntag. ii. cap. 6.) But why the Jews should speak of him under this title as the chief of the devils, it is difficult to say; unless (as Heinsius conjectures, rather than proves) the Hebrew word Zebub signified a deadly kind of insect, whose sting was mortal, and which was therefore looked upon as a fit emblem of the mischievous hosts commanded by this prince of the power of the air.—The title in the Greek is Βεελζεβουλ, Beelzebul, which signifies The lord of a dunghill, and seems to be a contemptuous change of the former name, by which it was intimated that the noblest of the heathen deities were fitter to dwell on a dunghill than to be worshipped in a magnificent temple.

[g] Satan should cast out Satan.] This answer of our Lord demonstratively proves that Beelzebub and Satan are names for the same person; and, consequently, that Satan was considered as the prince of those demons who were cast out by Christ, and who are elsewhere represented as his angels; so that it must disprove every hypothesis inconsistent with this assertion. It may not be improper to add here, that the Jewish rabbies call every demon by the name of Satan, and often use the name in the plural number. So they call Sammael, which is but another name for Beelzebub, Rosh kol hassatanim, the head or prince of all the Satans. See Casaubon in loc.

h In

SECT. lxi.

does if he join with me to confirm a doctrine so evidently opposite to his nature and subversive of his kingdom; and if he assist in such a cause Mat. XII. 26. to cast out Satan[h]; it will be evidence from hence that he is divided against himself; and how then shall his kingdom subsist? It plainly follows that, in such a case, he cannot stand, but has contributed himself to put a speedy period to his own kingdom. But, as you never can suppose that such a crafty and sagacious spirit would in so weak a manner hasten his own confusion and defeat, you therefore, upon this account, must give up that uncharitable, inconsistent charge you have been ready to insinuate and urge against me, and must appear to have been guilty of the most extravagant absurdity, because you scruple not to say that I cast out demons by the help of Beelzebub.

and] cast out Satan, he is divided against himself; how shall then his kingdom stand? [he cannot stand, but hath an end;] [LUKE, because ye say that I cast out devils through Beelzebub.] [MARK III. 26. LUKE XI. 18.]

27 And if indeed you will be still so obstinate as to assert that I cast out demons by the assistance of Beelzebub, you may as well say that all miracles of this kind are thus performed; and I may particularly refer you to determine, by whom do your own children expel them, who practise exorcisms[i], and are approved and extolled by you on that account, though some of them do it in my name? Therefore they shall in this respect be your judges, and condemn you of a 28 most partial and unequal conduct. But if you must allow that I cast out demons by the finger, [or] the power and Spirit of God, then it undoubtedly follows, the kingdom of God is indeed come unto you, as I assert; and all the doctrines that I preach are proved by this to be Divine, and consequently worthy of your most serious and obedient regard, since it plainly shews my superiority over all the infernal powers.

27 And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your children cast them out? therefore they shall be your judges. [LUKE XI. 19.]

28 But if I cast out devils by [the finger, or] the Spirit of God, then [no doubt] the kingdom of God is come unto you. [LUKE XI. 20.]

Otherwise,

[h] In such a cause to cast out Satan.] It is certain (as many good writers have observed) that the force of this argument consists in a tacit appeal to the genius and design of his doctrine; which evidently appeared so friendly to the interest of true religion, and so destructive to idolatry and vice in which the kingdom of Satan consisted, that he must really be his own enemy, and rise up for the subversion of his own cause, before he could become an associate with Jesus. See Archbishop Tillotson's Works, Vol. III. p. 545.

[i] By whom do your own children expel them, who practise exorcisms, &c.] For the proof of this fact, see Acts xix. 13. Mark ix. 38. Luke ix. 49. Joseph. Antiq. Jud. lib. viii. cap. 2, § 5. p. 420. Havercamp. and Dr. Whitby's note; but above all, that of Grotius on this passage. I do not see that there is any need of referring this to the apostles who had not yet been sent out; and if they had, they to be sure would be involved in the same censure with Christ. It is more natural to suppose that the disciples of the Pharisees are here probably meant by their children.

k While

29 Or else, how can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man? and then he will spoil his house. [MARK III. 27.]

SECT. LXI.

Otherwise, it is evident I could not do this: for how can any one break and enter into the house of a strong man, and plunder his goods, while he is actually present to guard them[k], unless he first overpower and bind the strong man, who will be sure to do all he can to defend them! and then indeed he may plunder his house of whatever he pleases; but without this it will be utterly impossible to do it. And therefore it is plain, from all these instances of dispossessions, that I have power over Satan to control and bind him, and consequently that I act by a Divine commission.

Mat. XII. 29.

LUKE XI. 21. When a strong man armed keepeth his palace, his goods are in peace:

But still it is not to be thought, the contest will be carried on without an opposition from the enemy, nor can it fail of giving some alarm: for while a strong man, completely armed[l], guards his castle or palace from invasion and attack, his goods are in a profound peace[m], and his prisoners, hard as their situation may be, are afraid to make any attempt to regain their liberty; and such is the quiet which there seems to be while Satan reigns without any control.

Luke XI. 21

22 But when a stronger than he shall come upon him, and overcome him, he taketh from him all his armour wherein he trusted, and divideth his spoils.

But when one stronger than he, or of more power than the warrior I have mentioned, invades his garrison, and conquers him, he takes away all his complete armory in which he placed his confidence, and distributes his spoils among his followers. So shall you see the infernal powers yet more completely baffled and spoiled by me, and my faithful servants adorned by the trophies won from them.

22

MAT. XII. 30. He that is not with me, is against me; and he that While therefore you are animated by such views, you ought not to allow yourselves even in a state of neutrality and indifference: for I must tell you, That he that is not cordially with me

Mat. XII. 30

k While he is actually present to guard them.] This the course of the argument plainly supposes; and the case in question proved the presence of Satan.

l While a strong man, &c.] The reader will observe that (contrary to most others) I have introduced in this section, Luke xi. 14—23, as parallel to Mat. xii. 22—30, and Mark iii. 22—27. The reason is, because as there appeared to me no certain evidence that the miracle and discourse recorded by Matthew were afterwards repeated at another time (see note a on Luke xi. 37, sect. ex), so I was not willing to insert so long a discourse twice: yet it is not impossible it might occur again; and if any, on the whole, judge it most probable it did, they may turn back from thence, and read these verses again.——I likewise thought that the discourse, with the additions from Luke, appeared most complete and beautiful.

m His goods are in a profound peace.] Our Lord here (as also Luke x. 17—20, sect. cvi.) evidently takes occasion, from having spoken of dispossessions, to turn his discourse to that grand and complete victory over Satan, of which these miracles were a specimen; and these words refer not to demoniacs, who were far from being in peace or quiet, but to the case of sinners, who by the arts of Satan are lulled into a state of security and confidence, while in the hands of their greatest enemy, and in the way to final destruction.

n He

SECT. lxi.

me as a friend, is indeed against me [n], and will accordingly be treated as one that is an enemy to me; and he that does not set himself according to his ability to gather subjects into my kingdom with me, is but vainly and foolishly scattering abroad, and, however otherwise employed, wastes his time and labour in what will at last turn to no solid account [o]. Much more criminal and fatal then must the character and conduct of those be, who with deliberate implacable malice oppose my cause and are resolved at all adventures to do their utmost to bear it down, as you are attempting to do by these vile insinuations which you have now suggested.

Mat. XII. 30.

that gathered not with me, scattereth abroad. [LUKE XI. 23.]

31 I therefore give you the most solemn and compassionate warning of your danger; for you are on the brink of a most dreadful precipice. That malignity of heart, which leads you to ascribe these works of mine to a confederacy with Satan, may incline you to pass the same impious sentence on the greatest and fullest confirmation, which is to be given to my gospel by the effusion of the Spirit on my followers: and therefore, to prevent, if possible, such guilt and ruin, verily I say unto you, That all other sins shall be forgiven to the children of men, and even [all] the other blasphemies with which they shall blaspheme; but the blasphemy against the Spirit of God, in this most glorious dispensation of it [p], shall not be forgiven to those impious and incorrigible men who shall dare to impute to diabolical operation those glorious works of Divine power and goodness. 32 And I add, That whosoever speaks a contemptuous and impious word even against the Son of man himself, while here on earth in this obscure form, he may possibly be brought to repentance for it, and so it shall be forgiven him; and consequently even your case, bad as it is, is

31 Wherefore [verily] I say unto you, [All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies, wherewith soever they shall blaspheme:] but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. [MARK III. 28.]

32 And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, n He that is not with me is against me.] How this is to be reconciled with Luke ix. 50. see the note there, sect. xcvi.

o Wastes his time and labour in what will at last turn to no solid account.] This is a more natural sense than to take it as if our Lord had said, He that does not gather subjects into my kingdom, disperses them. According to the interpretation I have given, it is a most noble maxim of Divine wisdom; and happy is the minister, happy the man who attends to it.

p The blasphemy against the Spirit of God, in this most glorious dispensation of it.] After all that Archbishop Tillotson has said (Vol. I. Serm. 17), to prove that the sin against the Holy Ghost was that which these Pharisees committed, in ascribing the miracles of Christ to Satan, I have rather chosen to take the words in Dr. Whitby's sense; and must beg leave to refer to his paraphrase on the places above, and to his excellent dissertation on the subject, in his fourth Appendix to Matthew, for the reasons which induced me to such a judgment.

world, neither in the world to come; [hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation.] [MARK III. 29.]

is not entirely hopeless: but whosoever shall maliciously speak any thing of this nature against the Holy Spirit, when the grand dispensation of it shall open in those miraculous gifts and operations, that will be attended with the most evident demonstrations of his mighty power, it shall never be forgiven him at all, either in this world, or in that which is to come[q]: but he is obnoxious to eternal damnation, and must irrecoverably sink into it; nor will all the grace of the gospel, in its fullest display, afford a remedy for so aggravated a crime, or furnish him with means for his conviction and recovery. SECT. LXI. Mat. XII. 32.

MARK III. 30. Because they said, He hath an unclean spirit.

This admonition he gave them with such repeated solemnity, because they had maliciously said, he hath an unclean spirit, and performs these miraculous works by the assistance of Beelzebub. Mark III. 30.

IMPROVEMENT.

How condescending was the conduct of the blessed Jesus while he dwelt among us! Though he was Lord of all, he not only waved the pompous manner of subsisting by continued miracles, but likewise declined to dwell with the rich and the great, with whom he could easily have secured to himself a constant abode[r]. He chose a laborious itinerant course, and subsisted chiefly on the bounty of a few pious women, whose company and friendship he did not despise. That subsistence was most pleasing to him which was the greatest testimony of the respect and affection of his hearers, and at the same time gave the greatest opportunity to testify his own Luke viii. 1—3

q It shall never be forgiven him at all, either in this world, or in that which is to come.] It is observed both by Lightfoot and Grotius, that through a fond imagination of the final happiness of all the seed of Abraham, the Jews supposed, there were some sins that had not been forgiven here, that would be expiated by death and be forgiven after it; and that our Lord designed by this expression to assure them, that there was no forgiveness to be had for those that should be guilty of this sin, either before or after death; and that their expectations of forgiveness then would prove no other than a deceitful dream. (See Lightfoot's Hor. Heb. and Grotius in loc.) But it is clearly shewn by Dr. Whitby, that this was used as a proverbial expression; and that it only signified, a thing should never be, when it was said, It shall not be, either in this world, or the world to come.—However, as some think that it refers to the Messiah's kingdom, which was often called the age to come, I have also hinted at that sense; which is indeed included in the other, but does not seem to me to be so properly applied here; for if our interpretation be right, the sin could not be committed till that age commenced.

r The rich, and the great, with whom he could easily have secured to himself a constant abode.] Undoubtedly, to mention no more, the centurion (who had wealth and generosity enough to erect a synagogue at his own charge, Luke vii. 5. p. 294), would have been very willing to have received into his house a single Person of so extraordinary a character, so perfectly temperate, and so easy as to the common accommodations of life: but Christ came to bring the gospel to the poor; and the purposes of his mission required frequent removes.

SECT. LXI.

own humility and self-denial, and to pursue his schemes for public usefulness. So may his followers, and especially his ministers, always judge! And may all the great things they seek for themselves be such as lie on the other side of the grave, and are to be enjoyed in the presence of our glorified Master!

Luke viii. 1—3

Mat. xii. 22, 29

We have seen another triumph of Christ over the evil spirit, another of those glorious and delightful instances, in which the great Captain of our salvation, with superior strength, bound the strong man, and spoiled his goods. May the victory still be carried on to perfection! May his merciful alarms break that dangerous and fatal peace in which the slaves of Satan are for a while detained, that he may with greater advantage, and greater terror, plunge them into final and eternal ruin! And, in such a contest, may we abhor neutrality! With pleasure and zeal let us list ourselves under the Redeemer's banners, that we may share his trophies! And, while others are throwing away their time, their labour and their souls, may we, by gathering with him, secure to ourselves everlasting riches!

Luke xi. 21, 22, 23

Mat. xii. 24

We must surely be astonished to hear of that perverse and malignant interpretation which these wretches put on such convincing miracles; and it must move our indignation to see the Son of God maliciously charged as an associate with Satan. If they have thus called the Master of the house Beelzebub, how much more those of his household? (Mat. x. 25.) Let us learn to imitate that meekness of wisdom, with which the blessed Jesus pursues his vindication. Oh that his followers had ever traced it! Yea, I had almost said, Oh that they had learned, even from the union of confederate enemies, the danger of that house or kingdom which is unnaturally divided against itself!

It is matter of great thankfulness thus expressly to hear that every other sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven; but awful to think that the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost is excepted. Let those, who, while they cannot deny the facts of Christianity, despise and oppose its doctrines, tremble to think how near they approach to the boundaries of this sin, which is perhaps more obscurely described that we may more cautiously avoid all such approaches. But let not the humble soul, that trembles at God's word, meditate terror to itself from such a passage; which, when viewed in its due connection, cannot, with any shadow of reason, be thought to belong to any, who do not obstinately reject the gospel and maliciously oppose it, when made known to them with its fullest evidence.

Mat. xii. 31, 32

SECT.

SECT. LXII.

Our Lord goes on to caution the Pharisees of the danger of such sinful words; and answers to the exclamation of the woman who extolled the happiness of his mother. Mat. XII. 33—37. Luke XI. 27, 28.

Mat. XII. 33.

EITHER make the tree good, and his fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and his fruit corrupt: for the tree is known by his fruit.

Mat. XII. 33.

SECT. LXII.

Mat. XII. 33.

WHEN our Lord had thus faithfully warned the Pharisees of the danger they were in of incurring unpardonable guilt, by blasphemy against the Holy Spirit, he proceeded to enforce the admonition in the following manner: Attentively consider what I have offered to you, and either lay aside your vain and hypocritical pretences to religion, or quit that malignity and wickedness which render these pretences insolent and odious; either make the tree good, and shew it to be so by making its fruit also good; or else make, and allow the tree to be corrupt, and its fruit also corrupt, if it in fact appear to be so: for the tree is to be known by the fruit it produces, which is an infallible proof of what quality it is. (Compare Mat. vii 17, 18, sect. xlii.)

34 O generation of vipers, how can ye, being evil, speak good things? for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.

34 O ye abominable brood of vipers, ye perverse, venomous, deceitful creatures, how can you, who are so wicked yourselves, speak good things? It is surely a force upon nature whenever you do it; and you will easily return to such uncharitable and impious language as we have now been hearing from you; for the mouth naturally speaks out of the overflowing abundance of the heart.

35 A good man, out of the good treasure of the heart, bringeth forth good things: and an evil man out of the evil treasure, bringeth forth evil things.

35 And thus, on the one hand, a good man, out of the good treasure of the heart, freely and abundantly produces good things, and scatters the seeds of wisdom and piety in the minds of all with whom he converses; and on the other hand, a wicked man, being full of corrupt affections and a secret malignity against religion, out of the evil treasure of his heart, as naturally brings forth evil things; and, even when he

[a] Make the tree good, &c.] The sense I have chosen is that which seems to agree best with what follows. I could not acquiesce in that of Mr. L'Enfant, who supposes it as if he should have said, Either allow me to be good, or prove the casting out devils to be evil; for that would suppose every one who cast out devils to be a good man. Zegerus and Grotius understand it as if our Lord had said, "Since you cannot but allow that my life and the tendency of my doctrine are good, be not so inconsistent with yourselves as to suppose I am confederate with Beelzebub." And it is indeed very possible that this may be the sense.

SECT. lv. he labours most artfully to disguise himself and his character, breaks out like you, in some unguarded moment, into such language as betrays the shame he would conceal. (Compare Luke vi. 43—45, sect. lv.)

Mat. XII. 35.

36 But take heed, how you suffer your tongues to run on in this profane and licentious manner; for I solemnly declare unto you, That in the awful day of the final and universal judgment, men shall give a strict and impartial account for every unprofitable, and much more for every pernicious word[b] which they shall speak: and wo be to them who have used that noble faculty of speech only to vain or to wicked purposes.

36 But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment.

37 For let every particular hearer apply it to himself: it is not by thine actions alone, but in some degree by thy words, thou shalt at last be justified, or by thy words thou shalt be then condemned,[c] as by the tenor of these, the disposition of thy heart is shewn and thy true character discovered.

37 For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned.

Luke XI. 27.

And while he was speaking these things,[d] a certain pious woman was so transported with a mixture of pleasure at hearing his words, and indignation at the unworthy treatment he met with from his adversaries, that she could not forbear lifting up her voice, and crying out from amidst the crowd,[e] she said unto him, O thou Divine

LUKE XI. 27. And it came to pass, as he spake these things, a certain woman of the company lift up her voice, and said unto him, Blessed is the womb that bare thee, and the paps which thou hast sucked!

b For every unprofitable, and much more for every pernicious word.] Though the terms inconvenient and unprofitable are of sometimes applied to things capable much worse epithets (compare Rom. i. 28. Eph. v. 4, 11. Tit. iii. 9. and Heb. xiii. 17,) yet I cannot think that our Lord here uses ἀργον, idle, merely to signify mischievous. We are certainly accountable for useless as well as wicked discourses, and they will be taken into that last survey which is to determine our character and state; which they, whose life is one continued scene of whim or sneering raillery, would do well seriously to consider. And it was to our Lord's purpose to observe it here, as it inferred, by the strongest consequence, the danger of such vile and criminal discourses as those of the Pharisees in this case. But discourse tending, by innocent mirth, to exhilarate the spirits, is not idle discourse, as the time spent in necessary recreation is not idle time; nor does a wise and gracious God expect from men the life of angels. The Jews about Kimchi's time had a proverb among them. That a scholar may be improved even by the idle words of his master; but I think Heinsius had no reason to value himself so much as he seems to do, on his attempt to explain these words of Christ as an allusion to that. —If any, on the whole, are dissatisfied with the account of things here given, I would beg leave to ask them, whether unprofitable talk be not a sinful wasting of time? and whether that must not render a man in some degree criminal before God?

c Or by thy words thou shalt be condemned.] Since both the clauses in this verse cannot belong to the same person, it is plain that καὶ here, as the Hebrew particle Ve in many places, is put for the alternative Or: and agreeably to this we find that instead of καὶ, the particle η is here inserted in many ancient copies.

d While he was speaking these things.] Luke brings in this story at the end of the parable of the relapsing demoniac, which was delivered just at the conclusion of the discourse before related. And though it is uncertain at what exact time this exclamation was made, yet what was now said might be a proper occasion for it; or, if it be a little transposed, the reader will excuse it, as it serves for a fit appendix to this short section, and likewise prevents the more unequal length of the following.

e From amidst the crowd.] So ἐκ τῆς ὀχλου plainly signifies; and it may thus, I think, be very properly connected with the words which follow it in the original.

Divine Teacher, Happy is the womb of her that bare thee, and thrice happy the breasts which thou didst suck! With what unspeakable delight must thy blessed mother look on so illustrious a Son? SECT. lxii. Luke XI. 27.

28 But he said, Yea, rather blessed are they that hear the word of God, and keep it.

But he modestly and seriously replied, Nay, rather happy are they who hear the word of God which I preach, and keep it in their hearts as a vital principle of holy obedience; for they will be entitled to eternal blessings, infinitely more valuable than any natural relation to me could give, or any opportunities of the most intimate converse with me, separate from such a practical regard to my instructions.

IMPROVEMENT.

Whose heart does not echo back the exclamation of this pious woman? Yet who does not too frequently forget that weighty and important answer which succeeded it? Let us not only hear, but keep the word of Christ; and we shall thus be happy in a nearer union with him than ever could arise from any natural relation to him, and shall ere long have opportunities of more noble and more delightful converse with him than those, with which the virgin Mary herself was honoured during the time of his abode on earth. Luke XI. 27.

Let us especially attend to those instructions we have here received, and judge of ourselves by our fruits; never flattering ourselves that our hearts are good, if our lives are abominable and disobedient, and to every good work reprobate: (Tit. i. 16.) And in particular let us remember, that not our actions only, but the fruits of our lips, are to be brought into the solemn account which we must give to the great Judge of all the earth; and that the day is coming, when all our idle and unprofitable talk, which has proceeded from the evil treasure of a depraved heart, will undergo a strict examination, and we must answer not for our actions only, but shall be justified or condemned by our words. And, if foolish and wicked speeches are to be accounted for in the day of judgment, let us set a watch on the door of our lips to prevent them; and labour daily to use our tongue so, that it may indeed be, as it is in scripture called, our glory. (Psal. xvi. 9. xxx. 12.) Mat. XII. 33. 36 37

For that purpose, let it be our great care to lay up a good treasure of Christian knowledge and experience in our hearts; that while too many are poisoning those that are round about them with erroneous principles and vicious discourses, the opening of our lips may be of righteous things; and we may still be ready, 35

upon

SECT. lxii. upon all proper occasions, with freedom, variety and spirit, to bring forth good and profitable things from the good treasure of our Mat. XII. 35. hearts; which may be edifying unto those that hear us, and may go from one heart to another. So will the Lord himself hearken with pleasure unto what we speak, and exactly record it in the book of remembrance that is written before him; and, producing it at last to our public honour, will own us for his, in the day when he makes up his jewels. (Mal. iii. 16, 17.)

SECT. LXIII.

Our Lord upbraids the Pharisees with their perverseness in asking a farther sign; and delivers the parable of the relapsing demoniack. Mat. XII. 38—45. Luke XI. 16, 24—26, 29—32.

MAT. XII. 38.

SECT. lxiii. THEN some of the scribes and Pharisees who were present, hearing how plainly Christ admonished and how severely he rebuked them, Mat XII. 38. answered him, by diverting the discourse to another topic; [and] with a view to try him, demanded of him a sign from heaven, saying, Master, thou professest thyself a teacher of extraordinary authority, and we may justly expect some proportionable proof of it: now these supposed dispossessions which we have lately seen or heard of, are so liable to fraud and collusion, that we cannot fully acquiesce in them; but would gladly see a more remarkable and convincing sign from thee, and particularly some such celestial appearance [a] as several of our ancient prophets gave.

MAT. XII. 38. THEN certain of the scribes and of the Pharisees answered, [tempting him; and sought of him a sign from heaven,] saying, Master, we would see a sign from thee. [LUKE XI. 16.]

But when the multitude was gathered in a 39 crowd about him, eager to hear what Jesus would reply to this demand, and ready to conclude that he would now perform some wondrous and peculiar kind of miracle, he answered and said to them, This is an evil and adulterous generation,[b] a

39 But [when the people were gathered thick together,] he answered, and said to them, [This is] an evil and adulterous generation, [which] seeketh after a sign, and there

[a] Some such celestial appearance.] The words of Luke expressly fix it in this sense; and Matthew, in another story of this kind (Mat. xvi. 1. sect. lxxxvii.) expressly tells us they demanded a sign from heaven. (Compare also Mark viii. 11.) It is not therefore to be understood of a sign only of deliverance from the Roman yoke, or of the erection of the Messiah's temporal kingdom, as some have supposed, but rather of some miracle performed in the visible heavens, where, they seem to have thought, impostors had less power than on earth. (Compare John vi. 30.)—And they might probably conclude they had the better excuse for making such a proposal, as Moses, (Exod. ix. 22—24.) Joshua (Josh. x. 12.) Samuel (1 Sam. vii. 9, 10.) and Elijah (1 Kings xviii. 36—38. and 2 Kings i. 10.) had given such signs. (Compare Isa. vii. 11. and xxxviii 8.) See Vitring. Observ. sacr. lib. 2. cap. 16.

[b] Adulterous generation.] This plainly signifies a spurious race, degenerated from the

there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas. [LUKE XI. 29.]

a very perverse and degenerate people, [that] amidst such convincing miracles as I am daily performing in the most public manner, still seeks after a farther sign: but no such sign as their bold curiosity prescribes shall be given them, unless [it be] that one yet greater miracle, which I may not improperly call the sign of the prophet Jonah[c], because it bears so great a resemblance to that miraculous occurrence that will be seen hereafter with respect to me. For as Jonah was a sign to the Ninevites[d], and was miraculously sent among them by means of an unparalleled deliverance from the most imminent danger; so also shall the Son of man, by a yet more surprising Divine interposition in his favour, be made a very illustrious sign to this generation. For as Jonah was three days and three nights in the belly of the great fish, that swallowed him[e]; and yet afterwards came out alive and unhurt: so shall the Son of man, after he has been slain by the infidelity and cruelty of those to whom he comes, be part of three days and three nights[f] in the heart of the earth, and on the third day shall, with the ministry of an angel in a visible form descending from heaven, burst the bands of SECT. lviii.

MAT. XII. 39

LUKE XI. 30. For as Jonas was a sign unto the Ninevites, so shall also the Son of man be to this generation.

LUKE XI. 30

MAT. XII. 40. For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth.

MAT. XII. 40

the piety of their ancestors. Compare Isa. lvii. 3, 4 Psal. cxliv. 7, 8. and John viii. 39, & seq.

c Unless it be the sign of the prophet Jonah.] As the resurrection of Christ was attended with the appearance of a descending angel, it was with greater exactness than is generally observed, the very thing that these Pharisees demanded, a sign from heaven.

d For as Jonah was a sign, &c.] The attentive reader may easily observe that some passages of the eleventh chapter of St. Luke are transposed in this section. But I will not insist on the necessity of doing it, since it is very possible the same words might be repeated again: but there is so very small a variation, and the discourse is so long, that I chose to unite all the three evangelists, as far as might be, into one compound text. The reader who chuses to follow Luke's order exactly will find a memorandum, sect. ex. note a) of the place where this paragraph comes in according to that; and I must, on the whole, leave it among some other passages in the evangelists, where it is neither possible nor important to determine the exact series.

e In the belly of the great fish.] It is no where said in the Old Testament, that Jonah was swallowed by a whale; and it is the less probable, as whales are seldom found in the Mediterranean, and as the gullet of a whale is said to be so small as not to be capable of receiving even the head of a man. It is therefore much more probable it was a shark, or some other great fish, which, it is said, the Lord had prepared to swallow up Jonah: (Jonah i. 17.) And the word κητος in Greek, (as well as TANIM in Hebrew) may signify any large fish, as some of the Greek lexicographers have observed.

f Part of three days and three nights.] It is of great importance to observe (as many good writers have done) that the easterns reckoned any part of a day of twenty-four hours for a whole day; and say a thing was done after three or seven days, &c. If it was done on the third or seventh day from that last mentioned. (Compare 1 Kings xx. 29. 2 Chron. x. 5, 12. and Luke ii. 21.) And as the Hebrews had no word exactly answering to the Greek νυχθημερον, to signify a natural day of twenty-four hours, they use night and day, or day and night, for it. So that to say a thing happened after three days and three nights, was the same as to say it happened after three days, or on the third day. (Compare Esth. iv. 16, with v. 1. Gen. vii. 4—12. Exod. xxiv. 18. and xxxv. 28.) See the Miracles of Jesus Vindicated, p. 6—8.

SECT. lxiii.

of death, and come forth from the tomb living and triumphant. And, by a natural consequence, the men of Nineveh shall rise up in the final judgment with this generation[g], and, by the circumstances of their case when viewed together, shall plead against it, and condemn it, as far more inexcusable than they; for they repented in the very dust at the preaching of Jonah, though he made them but a transient visit, and wrought no miracle in their presence to confirm his mission; and, behold, one much greater than Jonah is here, and you reject him, though he has been so long among you, and has performed a great variety of most surprising miracles before you.

Mat. XII. 41.

41 The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it; because they repented at the preaching of Jonas; and behold, a greater than Jonas is here. [LUKE XI. 32.]

42 And much more may it be concluded that the queen of Sheba, in the south country, shall rise up in judgment with this generation, and, by the signal instance, that she gave of her great desire to improve in knowledge, shall plead against the obstinacy and perverseness of this wicked age and condemn it; since, great as her rank and her affairs in life were, she came from the extreme boundaries of the earth, even from the remotest parts of the Arabian coast, to hear the wisdom of Solomon, that she might improve by his learned conversation (see 1 Kings x. 1, & seq.); and, behold, however contemptible he may appear in your eyes, one much greater than Solomon, both in dignity and wisdom, is here before you, and is daily conversant among you[h].

42 The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and behold, a greater than Solomon is here. [LUKE XI. 31]

43 Take heed therefore how you behave to me, lest all your enquiries after the kingdom of heaven, and all your converse with me, serve only to aggravate your guilt and ruin. For, if speedy repentance

43 When the unclean spirit is gone out of g Rise up in judgment with this generation.] Some think there is a reference in this expression to the custom of witnesses rising up to give their testimony; but it was not properly on the testimony of the Ninevites that these sinners would be condemned. The plain meaning is, that the remembrance of their case would be considered as illustrating the guilt of those that rejected Christ; so that here those are said to condemn others who furnish out matter for their condemnation.

h One greater than Solomon is here.] Our Lord speaks of himself in such sublime language with the utmost reason, and with perfect modesty and decorum. The humble form of his appearance, and his necessary reserve in declaring himself the Messiah in so many words, made it yet more expedient that by such phrases as these he should sometimes intimate it: and indeed his saying he was greater than Solomon, that most illustrious of all the royal deseendants of David, was as plain an intimation as could well be given.—Here is another undoubted instance in which Luke has plainly inverted the order of our Lord's words; for the connection cannot be secured without transposing the verses as they stand in him. The attentive reader will observe many more instances of the same kind, and see from hence how little ground there is for what some have supposed, that Luke's account is so exact, that all the gospels should be regulated by his order. See note g on Luke i. 3, sect. i.

i Through

of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest, and findeth none: [Luke XI. 24.—] repentance does not prevent it, I foresee that (to borrow a simile from the late subject of our discourse) your case will be like that of a demoniac, who, after a little respite, falls into a more violent relapse: for, as it sometimes happens, that an unclean spirit, when he has gone out of a man, goes about, in a roaming discontented manner, through dry desarts and wild uncultivated places[i], seeking some rest to his own malignant nature; and, through the invisible restraint of Divine providence, he findeth none: Then he saith, I will return to my dwelling from whence I came out; and resolves to make another attack on the person he had lately quitted: and it may be, when he comes to him, he finds, as it were, an habitation empty of any better guest, and even swept and adorned to receive him[k], that is, he finds the miserable sinner unaffected with his late affliction and deliverance and still a slave to those vices which render him an agreeable dwelling for Satan: And then, by the just judgment of God on such an incorrigible wretch, he goes, and associates with himself seven other

SECT. lxiii.

Mat. XII. 43.

44 Then he saith, I will return into my house, from whence I came out: and when he is come, he findeth it empty, swept, and garnished. [Luke XI. —24, 25.]

44

45 Then goeth he, and taketh with himself seven other spirits, more i Through dry desarts and wild uncultivated places.] Here is a plain reference to the common notion, that evil demons had their haunts in desarts and desolate places. (Compare Isa. xiii. 21. and Rev. xviii. 2.) Some may think that a desire of doing mischief might rather have prompted the evil spirit, of whom our Lord speaks, to have continued in some city, or other place of public resort: but as he may be supposed in this parable to apprehend that, after being driven out, he should for a while be under some extraordinary restraint, it seems to me a very natural and beautiful circumstance thus to represent this malignant being as impatient of the sight of mankind, and rather chusing to seek his rest in the prospect of a sandy desart, than in the view of any more agreeable scene which might renew his anguish, by presenting to him the memorials of divine goodness to the human race.—Another explication has been given to this passage, and Dr. Whitby and some others interpret it of the devils being cast out of Judea, yet finding no rest in the desarts of heathenism, because there also the apostles cast them out, which drove them to return again to the Jews, and to make them worse than before: but, though it is possible that our Lord's comprehensive mind might have some view to this, his hearers could not understand it thus; and perhaps, after all, the circumstances might be merely parabolical and ornamental.

45

k Empty, swept and adorned to receive him.] Mr. Jurieu draws a strange argument from hence in favour of purity (one would think he meant of cleanliness), that finding his former habitation swept and adorned, the demon could not enter in without a confederacy of seven yet more potent than he. But this is quite wide from the meaning of our Lord, who hereby strongly suggests that indulging sinful habits is like sweeping and furnishing the house, to invite the abode of Satan there; in the same manner as purity, devotion and love, are elsewhere represented as consecrating the soul for a temple to the Holy Ghost. (See 1 Cor. iii. 16, 17. vi. 19, 20. Eph. ii. 21, 22. and 1 Pet. ii. 1—5.)—I know some judicious writers have glossed more minutely on these words, as if the meaning were, "empty of true grace, swept from gross sin, and garnished or adorned with seeming virtues and self-righteousness." But, with all due submission, especially to one very great name, by which this interpreration is patronized, I think that in this connection it enervates rather than illustrates the sense and spirit of this fine passage. Nor should I be forward to say that a reformation of life, without a thorough change of heart, though utterly unavailing as to his future state, brings a man more under the power of Satan than he was before, or makes him worthy of the punishment of being given over to seven demons instead of one.

SECT. lxiii.

other spirits which are yet more wicked and mischievous than himself, and, entering in, they dwell together there; so that the last condition of that man is much worse than the former. Thus also will it be to this wicked generation[1]; instead of growing better, they will grow seven times worse than before, as both the natural and the judicial consequence of their rejecting the methods of Divine Grace for their recovery; till, as if they were possessed by a multitude of devils, they are madly hurried on to their irrecoverable ruin in this world and the next.

Mat. XII. 45.

more wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there; and the last state of that man is worse than the first. Even so shall it be also unto this wicked generation.—[Luke XI. 26.]

IMPROVEMENT.

Mat. XII. 43—45

LET us, to whom the revelation of the gospel is so clearly made, fear, lest these dreadful things should come upon us, and the abuse of our advantages should render us an easy prey to Satan, and a fit habitation for the powers of darkness. Let those particularly fear it, who, having been brought to some serious impressions and some external reformation, are tempted to relapse into former vices, which would render their latter end far worse than their beginning; (2 Pet. ii. 20.) God has permitted some such awful instances to occur; and unhappy wretches, perhaps, some of them the children of religious parents too, who were once not far from the kingdom of God, have so abandoned every principle of religion, and every sentiment of wisdom and virtue, that it seems as if seven devils had possessed them, and were driving them headlong to destruction.

38 May we, instead of demanding farther evidence of Christianity than the wisdom of God has seen fit to give us, make it our care to hear and obey and diligently improve the light, we have received! May we be brought to a sincere and lasting repentance by 41 the preaching of Christ and his apostles, lest the Ninevites rise up in judgment against us and condemn us! May we own the superior 42 wisdom of this Divine Teacher, this better Solomon; and say, as the queen of Sheba to the Jewish prince, (1 Kings x. 8.) Happy are these thy servants, who stand continually before thee, and hear thy wisdom! for thou speakest as never man spake (John vii. 46.); and in thee all the treasures of wisdom and knowledge are hid. (Col. ii. 3.)

But

1 Thus also will it be to this wicked generation.] They who have read the sad account Josephus gives of the temper and conduct of the Jews after the ascension of Christ, and just before their final destruction by the Romans, must acknowledge that no emblem could have been more proper to describe them. Their characters were the vilest that can be conceived, and they pressed on to their own ruin as if they had been possessed by legions of devils, and wrought up to the last degrees of madness.

a In

But oh, how many are curious to know what little concerns them, and are fond of improving their own wit, and trying that of others by hard questions, while the far more obvious and important points of wisdom are neglected as beneath their regard; as if every thing were more necessary than being wise to salvation! We need not travel to distant climates to learn this heavenly philosophy; no, it is nigh us, even in our mouth; and we are, on that account, so much the more inexcusable, if it be not also in our heart. (Rom. x. 8.)

SECT. LXIII. Mat. XII. 42.

SECT. LXIV.

Our Lord declares his resolution of persisting in his work, urges the admission of the light he was dispersing, and declares his obedient disciples dearer to him than the nearest relations could otherwise be. Luke XI. 33—36. VIII. 19—21. Mat. XII. 46, to the end. Mark III. 31, to the end.

Luke XI. 33.

NO man when he hath lighted a candle, putteth it in a secret place, neither under a bushel; but on a candlestick, that they which come in may see the light.

Luke XI. 33.

OUR blessed Lord, in the conclusion of this excellent discourse[a], which was occasioned by the perverseness of the Pharisees, who had been impiously reflecting on his miracles and asking for a farther sign, assured them that he was not thus to be diverted from his work, but, notwithstanding all their opposition to it, yet would he still go on to bear his testimony to the truth; and to engage them to a free admission and improvement of the light which was then shining round them, he addressed the following exhortation to them: You have indeed endeavoured to oppose me with the greatest obstinacy and perverseness, nevertheless you shall not silence me; for no man having lighted a lamp, puts it in a bye place, or under a bushel, to conceal its rays; but rather sets it on a stand, that they who come in to the house may see the lustre that it gives: and thus, according to the charge that I gave formerly to my disciples, (Mat. v. 16. sect. xxxvii.) I too will take all opportunities of publishing the important message that I bring, and making my light to shine before men; and do you see, that, what I offer to you be received as it ought, and guard against those prejudices which would lead you to exclude it. For a In the conclusion of this excellent discourse.] Luke has inserted here the following passages, which are delivered in words parallel to Mat. v. 15. and vi. 22, 23. (See the paraphrase and notes there, p. 204, 226.) Yet they appear in this connection to have a different sense, which I have expressed at large.

SECT. LXIV. Luke XI. 33.

SECT. lxiv.

Luke XI. 34. For the eye is, as it were, the lamp of the whole body[b]: if thine eye therefore be clear[c], and free from any vicious humour, that would obstruct the sight, thy whole body also will be enlightened; but if [thine eye] be distempered, thy whole body also will be proportionably darkened, and no other part can supply the defect: and so it is with respect to the judgment, which is to the 35 mind, what the eye is to the body. See to it therefore, lest that which is as the light in thee, be itself darkness; which it will be, if those perverse maxims be adhered to, on which you now go, in rejecting my miracles and the doctrine confirmed by them. (Compare Mat. vi. 22, 23, sect xli.)

34 The light of the body is the eye: therefore when thine eye is single, thy whole body also is full of light: but when thine eye is evil, thy body also is full of darkness.

35 Take heed therefore, that the light which is in thee, be not darkness.

36 It may indeed cost you some pains to reform your judgment, but the pleasure and advantage will be an abundant equivalent for all the labour that you take in doing it. For though the case that I but just now mentioned is so sad, yet, on the other hand, if thy whole body[d] in consequence of a clear eye, and thy whole mind, by means of a rectified judgment, be enlightened, having no part remaining dark through distemper or prejudice, (being [thus] all enlightened[e], the benefit of it will be such, that it will be as when a lamp lights thee by its sprightly lustre,[f] and thou goest on with security and pleasure in those paths

36 If thy whole body therefore be full of light, having no part dark, the whole, shall be full of light, as when the bright shining of a candle doth give thee light.

b The eye is the lamp of the whole body.] Nothing is more common with the finest ancient writers than by an obvious figure to call the eyes the lights of the body, as our Lord here has done.—I render λυχνος lamp, because it had been so translated in the verse before, and it did not seem necessary to change it.

c If thine eye therefore be clear.] See note b on Mat. vi. 22. p. 226.

d For if thy whole body; ει ουν το σωμα σου ολον.] This is an unusual rendering of the particle ουν, but appeared to me necessary; for this verse is not introduced as an immediate consequence from the foregoing, but both of them are collateral inferences from ver. 34. as the intelligent reader will easily observe. And if it be admitted that γαρ, for, as well as ουν, therefore, is sometimes used with such a latitude as that the former may be understood to introduce a reason for, and the latter to introduce a consequence from something not immediately preceding; as also that they are sometimes used promiscuously; it will, I think, clear the connection in some places, where it will otherwise give us a great deal of perplexity, and, I fear, after all our fine-spun reasonings, but very little satisfaction. (See Luke xx. 37, 38. Rom. i. 16, & seq. and Heb. ii. 9, & seq. Greek; and many other places.) Compare note i on Mat. xii. 8. p. 270.

e Being thus all enlightened.] By allowing these words, Φωτεινον ολον, to be thus included in a parenthesis, we prevent the absurdity of supposing, as our translation would lead one to imagine, that our Lord says, If thy whole body be full of light,—the whole shall be full of light. Else the clause should be so rendered as to shew that the following words make a part of what our Lord asserts of the enlightened body; it shall be all as full of light as when a lamp, &c.

f By its sprightly lustre.] This seems to be the force of the word αςραπη which signifies a very strong and vivid flame, and is indeed most commonly applied to that of lightning, being here only used in the New Testament for any other flame. (See Mat. xxiv. 27. xxviii. 3. Luke x. 18. xvii. 24. and Rev. iv. 5. viii. 5. xi. 19. xvi. 18.)—It may perhaps be an oblique hint of the paths which would otherwise be full of uncer- SECT. LXIV.

tainty and danger.

MAT. XII. 46. While he yet talked to the people, behold, [there came then] [LUKE, unto him] his mother and his brethren, [and standing without, they sent unto him, calling him, and] desiring to speak with him. [MARK III. 31. LUKE VIII. 19.]—

And as he was yet speaking these lively and important things to the people,[g] who in vast multitudes were gathered about him, behold, there came unto him, just then, his mother, and his brethren, or near kinsmen; who standing without and apprehending the danger to which he exposed himself by such free remonstrances and admonitions as these, sent to him, to call him away from so dangerous a situation; [and] for this end, desired earnestly to speak with him, as about some affairs of importance. And, as the multitude sat round about him, there was no room for his relations to get near him; and, notwithstanding all that they could urge of a peculiar interest in him, the people were so eager in attending to him, that none of them were willing to give place, and they could not come at him on account of the crowd. Therefore one of the people said unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren stand without at some distance, enquiring for thee, [and] earnestly desiring to see [and] speak with thee: what therefore must be done? Wilt thou go out to them, or give orders to the people to make way for them to come hither to thee? But he, to encourage those that were truly serious in their attendance on his preaching, answered and said to him that told him, Who do you think is my mother? And who are those whom you imagine I consider as my brethren?[h] And looking round on them that were sitting about him to hear his word, and stretching out his hand with an affectionate regard, especially towards those, that were his constant followers and professed disciples, he said, What kindred or relations have I, that are nearer to me or more esteemed

Mat. XII. 46.

MARK III. 32.— And the multitude sat about him, [and they could not come at him for the press.] [LUKE VIII.—19]

Mark III. 32.

MAT. XII. 47. Then one said unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren [without seek for thee, and] stand desiring [LUKE, to see, and] to speak with thee.— [MARK III. — 32. LUKE VIII. 20.

Mat. XII. 47.

48 But he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my mother? And who are my brethren? [MARK III. 33.

48

49 And he [looked round about on them which sat about him, and] stretched forth his hand towards his disciples, and said, Behold, the celestial original and vigorous active influence of that lustre, which Christ diffused to illuminate and guide the mind.

49

g And as he was yet speaking, &c.] Matthew is so express in connecting this story with the preceding discourses (not to insist on Mark's following the same order too) that it is absolutely necessary to transpose Luke viii. 19. & seq. unless we suppose that it happened twice, and that perhaps on the same day; for Matthew assures us, that the parable of the sower, (to which Luke also joins it) was delivered this day, Mat. xiii. 1—3.

h Who is my mother? &c.] To suppose that our Lord here intends to put any slight on his mother would be very absurd: he only took the opportunity of expressing his affection to his obedient disciples in a peculiarly endearing manner; which could not but be a great comfort to them, and would be to Susannah, Joanna, Mary Magdalene, and the other pious women, who sate near him, (Luke viii. 2, 3. p. 319, 320,) a rich equivalent for all the fatigue and expence which their zeal for their heavenly Master occasioned. And as this seems to have been towards the beginning of their progress, it is observable that our Lord appears to have been peculiarly concerned for their encouragement. See Luke xi. 27, 28, p. 328. 329.

SECT. lxiv.

esteemed than these! Behold my mother and my brethren here. For these that hear the word of God, and practise it, are considered and acknowledged by me as my mother and my brethren; nor do I thus regard these only that are now before me, but I declare the same too of all others of their character; [for] whosoever shall do the will of God, my heavenly Father, even this very person, of whatever place and family and station he be, is regarded by me as my brother, or my sister, or mother:[i] for this pious disposition will render such dearer to me than any of the bands of natural relation, if separate from real holiness, could possibly do.

Mat. XII. 50.

hold my mother and my brethren. [MARK III. 34.]

50 For [LUKE, my mother and my brethren are these which hear the word of God, and do it; and] whosoever shall do the will of [God] my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother and [my] sister, and mother, [MARK III. 35. LUKE VIII. 21.]

IMPROVEMENT.

Mat. XII. 46—50.

So may it be our care to do the will of God, that we may be thus dear to our Redeemer, who ought by so many tender bonds to be dear to us; and who, by such gracious and indulgent declarations, as these which we have now been reading, is drawing us as with the cords of a man, and with the bands of love!

Luke XI. 33.

Still does the light of his Divine instructions shine with the brightest lustre, and diffuse itself around us! Let us open the eyes of our mind with singleness and simplicity to receive it; and make it our care to act according to it. Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the Lord, (Hos. vi. 3,) and thus with cheerfulness shall we reap the fruit of a well informed mind and a well regulated life!

May we be delivered from all those false maxims which would darken our hearts amidst all this meridian lustre, and turn our boasted light into darkness! Would to God there were not renewed instances of this kind continually occurring among us; and that we did not daily meet with persons whose pretended wisdom teaches them to forget or despise the gospel, and so serves only to amuse their eyes, while it leads their feet to the chambers of death!

SECT.

[i] This very person is my brother, or my sister, or mother.] This possibly might be intended as an awful intimation to some of his near relatives, to take heed how they indulged that unbelief, which so long after prevailed in their minds; (compare John vii. 3—5. sect. xcviii.) For in this case the nearness of their relation unto Christ according to the flesh would be no manner of advantage to them; but those that should be found to do his will would be preferred in his esteem before them, and be considered as united to him in a relation that should never be dissolved,—This is one of those many places, in which καὶ (and), is put for ἢ (or); for to be sure, our Lord could not speak of the same person as his brother, and sister, and mother. See note c on Mat. xii. 37, p. 328.

a On

SECT. LXV.

Christ, teaching by the sea-side, delivers the parable of the sower, and assigns the reason of his speaking to the multitude in parables. Mat. XIII. 1—17. Mark IV. 1—12. Luke VIII. 4—10.

MAT. XIII. 1.

THE same day went Jesus out of the house, and sat by the sea-side, [and began again to teach.] MARK IV. 1.

2 And great multitudes [LUKE, much people] were gathered together, [LUKE, and were come to him out of every city,] so that he went into a ship, and sat [in the sea,] and the whole multitude stood [by the sea] on the shore [MARK IV.—1.—LUKE VIII. 4.—]

MARK IV. 2. And he LUKE, spake by a parable, and] taught them many things by parables, and said unto them in his doctrine; [MAT. XIII. 3.—LUKE VIII.—4.]

MAT. XIII 1.

SECT. LXV.

IN that day [a] Jesus, going out of the house, into which, at the importunity of his friends, he had retired for a while, sat down by the side of the sea of Galilee, and began again to teach there. MAT. XIII. 1.

And such great multitudes of people were again 2 gathered together about him, and came in crowds from almost every city round about to hear him, that they began to press upon him, as they had done before in the former part of the day (see Luke viii. 19, p. 347,) so that, entering into a ship for the convenience of being better heard, and less incommoded by them, he sat down on the vessel in the sea, at a little distance from the shore; and the whole multitude stood by the sea upon the shore, shewing the utmost eagerness to hear whatever he should say.

And, to make his instructions the more agree- Mark able to them, and the more deeply to impress IV. 2. them on the minds of honest and attentive hearers, he spake to them by a parable [b] concerning a sower, which shall be now related; [and] taught them also many other things in parables; and beginning

[a] On that day.] Matthew is the only evangelist who expressly fixed these parables to the day on which the preceding occurrences happened: I say, fixes them to it, for though the phrases, εν μια των ημερων, on a certain day; and εν εκειναις ημεραις, in those days, be very ambiguous in their signification, (see Mat. iii. 1. and note e, p. 95,) I cannot apprehend any thing more determinate than this of εν τη ημερα εκεινη, on that day. The day in which Luke introduces this discourse, as if it was delivered at the beginning of the progress Jesus made before the passages that we have mentioned in the preceding sections (sect. lxi. & seq.) is not enough to fix the time when this discourse was made: and we have already shewn, in several instances, that it is no unusual thing with Luke to neglect the order of time, and sometimes only to relate a fact as happening on a certain day. (See Luke v. 17. and note a, p. 244, and compare Luke viii. 22. vi. 6. 12. xi. 14. and xx. 1.) Matthew might know the fact we have now before us more circumstantially than Luke, though the latter's account be exactly true so far as it goes: a reflection which we have frequent occasion to make with respect to all the evangelists.

[b] A parable.] The word, according to its Greek etymology, properly signifies a comparison or simile; in which sense it is used here and in most other places; though sometimes it appears to be particularly used for an instructive apologue or fable. (Compare Ezek. xvii. 2 & seq.) And, as these often were expressed in poetical language (see Judg. ix. 7—15), the word parable sometimes signifies a sublime discourse, elevated beyond the common forms of speech, though no simile be used. (Num. xxiii. 7. xxiv. 15. Job xxvii. 1. xxix. 1. and Psal. lxxviii. 2.) And, as short parables after grew into proverbs, or were alluded to in them, hence the word parable is sometimes used for a proverb. Mic. ii. 4. and Hab. ii. 6.

c The

SECT. LXV.

ginning with that of the sower, in the course of his teaching this day, he said unto them:

Mark IV. 3. Hearken with peculiar attention to what I am now going to say, that you may thus be taught to hear my other discourses with improvement, and may not through negligence, inconstancy, or carnality of mind, lose the benefit of my repeated instructions[c]. Behold, at the spring of the year,[d] a sower went forth to sow the ground with his seed.

4 And, as the ground lay near a beaten path, it happened that, while he was sowing, some of the seed was scattered, and fell by the way side; and lying there uncovered, it was either trodden under foot by passengers, or picked up by the birds of the air, who presently came and devoured it.

5 And some of it fell on stony soil, upon a rock that lay but just beneath the surface of the ground, where it had not much earth to cover it; and immediately it sprang up, and appeared green, because it had no depth of earth to make its way

6 through: But its verdure was very short lived; for when the sun shone hot upon it, it was presently scorched by the warmth of its beams; and withered away, almost as soon as it was sprung up, because it had no room for taking root in such a shallow bed of earth, [and] wanted sufficient moisture to nourish it.

7 And some more of the seed being thrown near the hedge, fell among the briars and thorns there; and when it began to shoot out of the ground, the thorns sprang up with it, and grew so much faster, as not to leave it either room to grow or nourishment to support it; and so they choked it, and it yielded no fruit.

8 And the rest of the seed fell on good ground, and yielded fruit, which, being well rooted and nourished, grew up and increased to its full proportion; and the ears filled, and produced a rich and

3 Hearken, Behold, there went out a sower to sow [LUKE, his seed:] [MAT. XIII.—3. LUKE VIII.—5.]

4 And it came to pass, as he sowed, some fell by the way-side, LUKE, and it was trodden down,] and the fowls of the air came and devoured it up.] [MAT. XIII. 4. LUKE VIII.—5.

5 And some fell on stony ground, [LUKE, upon a rock,] where it had not much earth, and immediately it sprang up, because it had no depth of earth. [MAT. XIII. 5. LUKE, VIII. 6.—]

6 But when the sun was up, it was scorched, and [LUKE, as soon as it was sprung up,] because it had no root [LUKE, and lacked moisture,] it withered away,] MAT. XIII. 6. LUKE VIII. —6.]

7 And some fell among thorns, and the thorns [LUKE, sprang up with it,] and choked it, and it yielded no fruit. [MAT. XIII. 7. —LUKE VIII. 7.

8 And other fell on good ground, and did yield fruit that sprang up and increased, and brought forth some

[c] The benefit of my repeated instructions.] As our Lord afterwards explains all the parts of this parable, I thought it sufficient to give this general account of its design in as few words as possible. Dr. Clarke, by taking the contrary method in his paraphrase (though in this he be followed by others,) both renders the apostle's question as to the meaning of this parable very unnecessary and occasions a needless and disagreeable repetition.

[d] At the spring of the year.] Many circumstances below make this probable; and indeed I do not find that in Judea they sowed even wheat sooner; but to conclude from hence, as Sir Isaac Newton does (in his Discourse on Prophecy, p. 153,) that this parable was delivered in the spring, is very precarious. One might as well argue from that of the tares, delivered the same day, that it was harvest.

SECT. LXV.

and plentiful increase, some of them thirty, and some sixty, and even some an hundred fold, for one grain that had been sown[e].

some thirty, and some sixty, and some an hundred [fold.] [MAT. XIII. 8. LUKE, VIII. 8.—]

And when he had said these things, he cried out with a louder voice than before, and said unto them, He that hath ears to hear these important truths, let him hear and regard them with the most diligent attention, and seriously reflect upon that instructive moral[f] which is contained in the parable I have now been delivering.

Luke VIII. 8.

LUKE VIII. 8. And when he had said these things, he cried, [MARK, and said unto them,] He that hath ears to hear, let him hear. [MAT. XIII. 9. MARK IV. 9.]

And when the assembly was broke up (after Christ had delivered many other similitudes of this kind to them, which will be mentioned afterwards), when he had parted with the multitude, and was alone in a retired place, the rest of his disciples[g], with the twelve, who had been with him while he spake these things, came and asked him [concerning] the parable of the sower, saying, We desire thou wouldest more particularly explain to us what may the meaning of the several circumstances of this parable be? [and] give us leave to ask thee, Why dost thou preach in such a manner to the multitude, and speak to them in parables, which probably so few of them can understand?

Mark IV. 10

MARK IV. 10. And when he was alone, they [the disciples] that were about him with the twelve, [came and] asked of him the parable, [LUKE, saying, What might this parable be?] [and why speakest thou unto them in parables?] [MAT. XIII. 10. LUKE VIII. 9.]

And he replying, said unto them, I thus express myself in parables, because, though it is granted, throught he Divine goodness, to you, whose hearts are open to receive the truth in the love of it, to know and understand the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, which have been long concealed; yet it is not granted to others, who are prejudiced against them, but they are justly suffered to continue unacquainted with them: and therefore to them that are without, and who are strangers, through their own neglect and folly, to what they might before have learned, all [these] things are now involved in parables and figures[h]; which,

Mat. XIII. 11

MAT. XIII. 11. He answered, and said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given: [LUKE, but to others [to them that are without, all these things are done] in parables.] [MARK IV. 11. LUKE VIII. 10—] e An hundred fold, &c.] Such an increase, even in those fruitful countries, was not very common, but however sometimes happened. See Gen. xxvi. 12.

f Reflect upon that instructive moral.] This solemn proclamation was sufficient to declare that they also were to regard the following similies as intended to convey some useful instructions, and not as mere matter of amusement.

g His disciples.] This is a very just translation of the phrase οι περι αυτον, which frequently is used in the best authors, for the disciples, or followers of the person it refers to; and as it thus agrees with Matthew, so we may fitly understand it of those who attended Christ in his progress with the twelve apostles. And in this way the style appears more natural and easy than if we read it as it stands in our translation, where it sounds somewhat harsh to speak of those that were about him, when he was alone.

h All these things are now involved in parables and figures.] Here γινεται is plainly put for εστι: I therefore render it all things are in parables. See Mat. vi. 16. x. 16. Mark i. 4. Luke ii. 13. xxiv. 19. John i. 6. and elsewhere.

SECT. LXV.

which, though they affect the mind of the attentive hearer and promote his edification, are disregarded by the rest and only looked upon as an empty amusement. For to every one, who hath any talent committed to him, and shews that he hath it by his diligent improvement of it, yet more shall be given, and he shall have a still greater abundance of means for his further improvement; but even that which he already hath, shall be taken away from the slothful creature and be withdrawn from him who acts like one who hath not any thing to improve. (Compare Luke viii. 18.) Thus wise men deal with their servants; and thus God will generally act in dispensing opportunities of a religious nature.

Mat. XIII. 12.

12 For whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance: but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away, even that he hath.

13 And therefore, on this very principle, do I now speak to them in parables, whereas I have formerly used the plainest manner of discourse: because seeing, they see not; and hearing, they hear not[i], neither do they understand; inasmuch as they do not honestly use the faculties that God has given them, but are like persons that have their eyes and ears, and yet will neither see nor hear. So that it is in just displeasure that I preach to them in this obscure language, that what has been their crime may be their punishment[k]; that seeing my miracles, they may see the outward act, but not perceive the evidence arising from them; and hearing my discourses, they may indeed hear the 13 Therefore speak I to them in parables; because they seeing, see not; and hearing, they hear not, neither do they understand:

Mark IV. 12

Mark IV. 12. That seeing they may see, and not perceive; and hearing they may hear, and not understand: lest at any time they should be converted, and i Seeing, they see not, and hearing they hear not.] This is justly and elegantly paraphrased in the version of 1727, in a few words; they overlook what they see, and are inattentive to what they hear. Yet I cannot think the Hebraism without some peculiar emphasis. Our translators have well expressed the force of it, Gen. ii. 17. Jer. iv. 10. and Zech. vi. 15.

k It is in just displeasure, &c.] A late learned writer has endeavoured to prove that Christ's use of parables was not in displeasure, but in tender condescension to their aversion to truths delivered in a less pleasing manner: but this is in effect supposing both Mark (chap. iv. 12) and Luke (chap. viii. 10) to have reported what our Lord says in a sense directly contrary to what he intended; for they say in so many words it was that the multitude might not perceive, nor understand; and it also makes Mat. xiii. 12. both foreign and opposite to the purpose for which it was spoken. We must therefore submit to the difficulties which attend this natural interpretation; which are much lessened by considering that this happened after Christ had upbraided and threatened the neighbouring places (from whence, doubtless, the greatest part of the multitude came), which was some time before this sermon: (see Mat. xi. 20—24. sect. lviii.) And it is not improbable that the scribes and Pharisees, who had so vilely blasphemed him this very morning (Mat. xii. 24. p. 320), might with an ill purpose have gathered a company of their associates and creatures about Christ to insnare him; which, if it were the case, will fully account for such a reserve.—It signifies little to plead, on the other side, that these parables are plain. Their being so to us is no proof they were so to these hearers; and since the apostles themselves did not understand even that of the sower, it is no wonder if the rest were unintelligible to the careless and captious hearer.—Consistent with all this is what was said of the advantages attending this method to those who were honest and attentive; in the paraphrase on Mark iv. 2. p. 339.

and their sins should be forgiven them. [LUKE VIII.—10.]

SECT. lxv.

Mark IV. 12.

the sound of them, but not understand their true intent and meaning; lest at any time they should be converted, and [their] sins should be forgiven them, which to many of these people they never shall.

MAT. XIII. 14. And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Esaias, which saith, By hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and shall not perceive:

Mat. XIII. 14

And thus in them is the prophecy of Isaiah most exactly fulfilled (Isa. vi. 9, 10.) which indeed was originally intended to include them, and saith, "By hearing you shall hear (or you may still go on to hear with eagerness), but you shall not understand; and seeing you shall see, or you may still go on to see, but you shall not perceive[1]. For, like a wretch who has besotted

15 For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.

15 and stupified himself with riot, the heart, or intellectual faculty of this people is, as it were, grown stiff with fatness[m], and they hear with heavy ears, and draw up their eyes as if they were more than half asleep; so that one would imagine they were afraid lest at any time they should happen so to be roused, so as to see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and understand with their hearts, and should be converted, and I should heal and save them. I therefore justly leave them to their own obstinacy, and direct thee, O Isaiah, to methods which I know will increase it."

16 But blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear.

16 But happy indeed are your eyes, because they see; and your ears, because they hear: you have not only greater opportunities of instruction than others, but greater integrity and seriousness in attending to them: and I congratulate you on so happy an occasion. For verily I say unto you, That many of the most holy prophets, and most singularly righteous men, under the Jewish dispensation, have earnestly desired to see the things which you see, and did not see them, and to

17 For verily I say unto you, That many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see,

[1] Seeing you shall see, but you shall not perceive.] This is a just translation of the original, both here and in Isaiah; and is another considerable argument for the interpretation here given of the whole context. —A pious and learned friend, by whose kind animadversions I have been led to insert some additional notes in this work, has urged several arguments to prove that this clause should be rendered, seeing, &c. you WILL not perceive. But on the maturest review of this passage, both in Isaiah and the several places where it occurs in the New Testament, I cannot apprehend that it was spoken merely by way of complaint, but think it plain that it was intended also as a prediction: (compare Mark iv. 12. Luke viii. 10. John xii. 40. Acts xxviii. 26, 27. Rom. xi. 8.) Now in predictions we generally render the future form, "Such or such a thing SHALL happen," though we only mean to express the certainty of the event, without denying the freedom of the moral agents concerned in it, or detracting from it in any degree.

[m] Grown stiff with fatness.] This is the proper English of παχυνθη, and alludes to a notion the ancients had, that a great quantity of fat about the heart stupified both the intellectual and sensitive powers. Compare Deut. xxxi. 20. xxxii. 15. Psal. cxix. 70. and Isa. vi. 10.

SECT. LXV. to hear the things which you hear, and did not hear them; but only had imperfect intimations of those mysteries which are now revealed with much greater clearness to you, and will, through the Divine blessing, render you singularly useful in this world, and proportionably happy in the next. (Compare Luke x. 23, 24. sect. cvi.)

Mat. XIII. 17

see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

IMPROVEMENT.

Mat. XII. 12. LET us hear with fear and trembling these awful declarations from the lips of the compassionate Jesus himself. Here were crowds about Christ, who indulged such prejudices, and attended with such perverse dispositions, that in righteous judgment he 13 took an obscurer method of preaching to them, and finally left many of them under darkness and impenitency to die in their sins.

Let us take heed lest the bounties of Divine providence should 15 be thus abused by us, as a means of casting us into a stupid insensibility of the hand and voice of the blessed God: or we may otherwise have ground to fear lest he should leave us to our own delusions, and give us up to the lusts of our own hearts. And then the privilege of ordinances, and of the most awakening providential dispensations will be vain; seeing we shall see, and not perceive; and hearing we shall hear, and not understand.

It is our peculiar happiness under the gospel that we see and hear what prophets and princes and saints of old, desired to see and hear, but were not favoured with it. Let us be thankful for our privilege, and improve it well; lest a neglected gospel by the righteous judgment of God be taken away and our abused seasons of grace, by one method of Divine displeasure or other, be brought to a speedy period But if by grace it is given to us to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, let us learn a thankfulness in some measure proportionable to the corrupt prejudices which have been overborne, and the important blessings which are secured to us.

SECT. LXVI.

Our Lord explains the parable of the sower, and exhorts his disciples to a diligent improvement of their knowledge and gifts. Mark IV. 13—25. Mat. XIII. 18—23. Luke VIII. 11—18.

MARK IV. 13.

SECT. LXVI. AND when the twelve apostles, in a retired place (as we observed above, Mark iv. 10. p. 341), asked Jesus the meaning of the parable

Mark IV. 13. of the sower which he had delivered to the multitude

MARK IV. 13.

AND he said unto them, Know ye not this parable? and how how then will ye know all parables?

titude as he sat in the ship, he said unto them, SECT. lxvi.
Know ye not the meaning of this easy and familiar parable, so nearly referring to the prophetic language? (see Jer iv. 3. and Hos. x. 12.) Mark IV. 13.
How then will you understand all the other parables that I have spoken, some of which are much harder than this?

MAT. XIII. 18. Hear ye therefore the parable of the sower.

I shall however yield to your request, and shew myself on all occasions ready to instruct you: hear ye therefore, according to your desire, the explication of the parable of the sower. Mat. XIII. 18

LUKE VIII. 11. Now the parable is this: The seed [which the sower soweth] is the word of God. [MARK IV. 14.]

Now the meaning of the parable is this. It is intended to represent the different success of the gospel in the world; for the seed [which] the sower I spoke of soweth, is the word of God, which I am employed to preach, and which will ere long also be committed to you: but too much of our labour will be lost on three bad kinds of hearers, whom I described in the parable by different kinds of unfruitful ground. Luke VIII. 11

MARK IV. 15. And these are they by the way-side; where the word is sown, but [when any one heareth the word of the kingdom, and understandeth it not, then] Satan [the wicked one] cometh immediately, and taketh away the word [which was sown in his heart, [LUKE, lest they should believe, and be saved:] this is he which received seed by the way-side. [MAT. XIII. 19. LUKE VIII. 12.]

And, in the first place, these are they whom I described as receiving the seed by the way-side, where the word is no sooner sown, but the effect of it is presently lost, and their true character may thus be represented to you: when any one hears of the word of the heavenly kingdom, or of the gospel of the grace of God, and through a careless inattention understands [it] not; then Satan, that wicked one, who is the great enemy of God and souls, flying as eagerly as a bird to his prey, comes immediately, and catches away the word that was sown in his heart, lest they who have heard it should believe, and be saved; and as nothing is like to be long remembered which is not well understood, all trace of it is quickly lost out of such a mind, as grain scattered in the road: this, I say, is he, that received the seed by the way-side in the parable. Mark IV. 15

16 And these are they likewise which [received the seed] on stony ground, [LUKE, on the rock;] who when they have heard the word, immediately receive it with gladness; [MAT. XIII. 20. LUKE VIII. 13.—]

And in like manner, in the next place, these are they who were described as having received the seed in stony soil, or on a rock under a very shallow bed of earth: such, I mean, who having heard the message of pardon, life and glory, which the word of the gospel brings, immediately receive it with a transport of joy, and feel their natural passions elevated and enlarged at the report of such agreeable news; But as they have no root of deep conviction and real love to holiness in themselves, they have no true impression of the power of it on their hearts, and so believe 16

17 And have no root in themselves, and so [LUKE, believe, and] endure but for a time; afterward 17

SECT. LXVI.

it only in a notional, not a vital manner, [and] endure in the profession of it but for a little while; [and] afterwards in a time of sharp trial, especially when any domestic oppression or public persecution arises on account of the word, they are presently offended, [and] apostatize from that warm and eager profession which in times of less difficulty they were so forward to make.

Mark IV. 17.

18, 19 And, in the third place, these are they, whom I described by telling you, that they received seed among thorns: even such as hear the word, perhaps with great constancy and the appearance of serious attention; [but] almost as soon as they have heard [it] go out of the assembly, and, immerging themselves in secular affairs, permit the cares of this world, and the artful delusion of riches[a], or perhaps the pleasures of [this] animal life, or the desires of some other things, which equally tend to alienate the soul from God, to enter [into their minds] and take up all their thoughts and time to such a degree as to choke the word, and so it becomes unfruitful: [yea,] they themselves are choked, as it were, with these fatal incumbrances[b], and whatever purposes or faint efforts they may make towards a partial reformation, they bring no fruit to perfection, but remain destitute of every degree of genuine and prevailing piety.

18, 19 And these are they which [received seed] among thorns; such as hear the word, [Luke, and when they have heard, go forth,] and the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, [Luke, and pleasures of this life,] and the lusts of other things, entering in, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful; [Luke, yea, they are choked, and bring no fruit to perfection.]—[Mat. XIII. 22. Luke VIII. 14.]

20 And once more, these are they, who were said to have received the seed into good ground: even such as do not only hear the word with attention and simplicity of mind, but understand what is spoken and receive it without prejudice and opposition; and when they depart, are solicitous to retain [it] in an honest and good heart, bringing forth the good fruit of substantial holiness, in various degrees, with patience and perseverance, some thirty, some sixty, and some an hundred fold,

20 And these are they which [received seed into] good ground; such as hear the word, [and understand,] and receive, [Luke, and keep it in an honest and good heart,] and bring forth fruit [Luke, with patience], some thirty-fold, some sixty, and some an hundred. [Mat. XIII. 23.—Luke VIII. 15.]

a The artful delusion of riches.] This phrase, απατη του πλουτου, is very elegant, and admirably expresses the various artifices by which people in the pursuit of riches excuse themselves from day to day in putting off religious cares, and the confounding disappointment, which often mingles itself with their labours, and even with their success. Compare Prov. xi. 28. Luke xviii. 24. 1 Tim. vi. 9, 10, 17. 2 Tim. ii. 4. and iv. 10.

b They themselves are choked, &c.] So Luke expresses it, perhaps to intimate the uneasy situation of the mind while clogged and straitened with such incumbrances as these, and rendered, as it were, unfit to breathe its own native air, and to delight itself with celestial and eternal objects.—Choking arises from any thing which straitens the gullet, or wind-pipe, and so obstructs the passage of food or air. And thus young plants or corn, may properly be said to be choked by thorns, which do not leave them room to grow; and the word, which would exert its vital power and principle, is represented as choked when thus pressed with secular cares prevailing in the mind.

c Covers

fold, both to their present joy and to their future glory. SECT. lxvi.

21 And he said unto them, Is a candle brought to be put under a bushel, or under a bed? and not to be set on a candlestick?

And he said farther to them, I appeal to yourselves, and urge it as a proper consideration to engage you to communicate the light you have to others, Is a lamp brought into a room, to be put under a bushel, or under a bed? [and] not to be set on a stand? You know it is not. For no man of common sense will even waste a few drops of oil so: nor is there any one that, having lighted a lamp, covers it with a vessel, or puts it under a couch[c]; but sets it upon a stand in a conspicuous place, that all they who enter in to the house may see the light of it, and guide their motions by it: (compare Mat. v. 15. p. 204, and Luke xi. 33, p. 335.) And can you think it is fit that you should waste the precious oil of my instructions, which I am pouring into your minds, to render you the lamps of my sanctuary? Be not then backward, as occasion offers, to communicate to others what you receive from me; for nothing is now said in secret among us, which shall not be revealed; nor any thing hid, which shall not be made known and published[d]; as we are carrying on no works or counsels of darkness among us, but concerting measures for the public instruction and reformation of mankind.

Mark IV. 21.

Luke VIII. 16. No man when he hath lighted a candle, covereth it with a vessel, or putteth it under a bed; but setteth it on a candlestick, that they which enter in may see the light.

Luke VIII. 16.

17 For nothing is secret, that shall not be made manifest; neither any thing hid, that shall not be known and come abroad.—[Mark IV. 22]

17

Mark IV. 23. If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

If any man therefore hath ears to hear, let him hear; and if you have intelligent powers, let it be your peculiar care to exert them to this important purpose.

Mark IV. 23.

24 And he said unto them, Take heed [therefore] what [and how]

And he said also to them, Do you above all take heed therefore, and carefully attend to what you

24

[c] Covers it with a vessel, or puts it under a couch.] Mark expresses it as a question, and Luke as a direct negation. I have given it in both the forms, as what seemed most effectually to secure the credit of both the evangelists: and I humbly submit it to better judgments, whether, in some of these instances, Christ might not immediately repeat the thought a second time in nearly the same words, in order to fix some very memorable passage on the minds of his hearers, who to be sure needed line upon line, and precept upon precept. In this view he will appear, if less like a polite orator, yet more like a father instructing his children; and perhaps if more of this familiar and condescending method was practised in our sermons, though the delicacy of a few might be less amused, the souls of the people might be more edified; and consequently the end of Christian ordinances (which is by no means the applause of those who administer them), might be more effectually answered.

[d] Nor any thing hid, which shall not be made known and published.] Though a prospect of the final discovery of the great day would contain a strong argument, both in compassion to others, and from a prudent regard to their own happiness, to engage his disciples to make a faithful report of the gospel committed to their trust; yet I think the words will contain an important sense, without supposing them to refer to that. Compare Mat. x. 26, 27, sect. lxxv. and Luke xii. 2, 3, sect. cxi. in which two places the same words seem, as often elsewhere, to have a different sense.

[e] To

SECT. LXVI.

you hear from me, [and] how you hear it: for in this sense I may say, as formerly on another occasion, (Mat. vii. 2, p. 231, and Luke vi. 38, p. 289), The measure with which you mete to others, shall be used to you; and to you that attentively hear, more shall be given[e], and those who are most diligent in teaching others shall be taught most themselves. For, as I said before in this discourse, (Mat. xiii. 12, p. 342,) to him that improves what he hath, more shall be given; but from him that acts as one who hath not, from him shall be taken away even that which for the present he hath, [or] seemeth to have[f]: but which he shall soon find was not accurately speaking, his own, and must be strictly accounted for to the real proprietor.)

Mark IV. 24.

how] you hear: With what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you: and unto you that hear, shall more be given. [LUKE VIII. 18.—]

25 For he that hath, to him shall be given: and he that hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he hath [or seemeth to have.] [LUKE VIII.—18.]

IMPROVEMENT.

Luke viii. 18.

LET us apply to ourselves this charge of our blessed Redeemer, and take heed how we hear. Especially let us be very careful that we despise not him that now speaks to us from heaven; and remember the authority, which his exaltation there gives to the words which he spake in the days of his flesh.

Mat. xiii. 18 & seq.

Let us attentively hear the parable of the sower and its interpretation. Still is Christ by his word and ministers, sowing among us the good seed. Still is the great enemy of souls labouring to snatch it away. Let us endeavour to understand, that we may retain it; and to retain, that we may practise it. Still do the cares of this world press us; still do its pleasures solicit us; still do our lusts war in our members; and all unite their efforts to prevent our fruitfulness in good works: but let us remember, that with having our fruit unto holiness, everlasting life is connected as the end; and that in due season we shall reap, if we faint not. (Rom. vi. 22, and Gal. vi. 9.)

Ver. 19

Mark iv. 20

Ver. 18

17 Let us therefore be concerned that the seed may take deep root in our minds, that we may not rest in any superficial impression on the passions; but, feeling the energy of that living principle, may flourish under the circumstances which wither others, and may

[e] To you that hear, more shall be given.] I know there may be some room to doubt whether these three verses in Mark, at the close of this section, were spoken to the disciples apart, or to the multitude; but I think these words make the former much more probable.

[f] Seemeth to have.] I know δοκει εχειν, seemeth to have, is sometimes a pleonasm, which signifies to have; yet the paraphrase shews it is not necessarily so here, which is also favoured by Luke xvi. 12, sect. cxxiv. (See also 1 Cor. iii. 18. Gal. vi. 3. and James i. 26.) However, as I confess it may possibly be a pleonasm, if any chuse to take it thus, then the last clause, which is included in a parenthesis, must be left out.

may in due time be gathered as God's wheat into his garner. Nor let us repine if we now go forth weeping, bearing this precious seed, while we have such a hope of coming again rejoicing, bringing our sheaves with us. (Psal. cxxvi. 6.) SECT. LXVI.

SECT. LXVII.

Our Lord delivers the parable of the tares in the field; and afterwards explains it at large to his disciples. Mat. XIII. 24—30, 36—43.

MAT. XIII. 24.

ANOTHER parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field:

MAT. XIII. 24.

NOW to return to the story of our Lord's teaching the multitude from the ship: he likewise at the same time proposed another parable to them, to intimate that persons of various characters should come into the gospel-profession; but that there should be a final separation between them in the other world, however they might be blended together in this. And he taught them, saying, the kingdom of heaven[a], or the success of the gospel dispensation, may be compared to that which happened to a man[b] who had sown[c] good seed in his ground: But one night, while the men who were set to watch it slept, an ill-natured neighbour, who was his enemy, with a malicious view to spoil the crop, came and sowed a quantity of tares among the wheat, which had just been thrown into the ground, and went away without being discovered. But afterwards, when the blade was sprung up, and produced fruit, then the tares also appeared among the ears of wheat in a manner easily to be distinguished. And the servants of the proprietor of the estate[c] came in a surprise, and said to him, Sir, didst thou not sow good seed of pure wheat in thy field? whence then hath it these tares, which now appear mingled with the crop? And he said unto them, Some ill-natured and malicious person in the neighbourhood has undoubtedly done this, taking advantage of your absence or negligence. And the servants, willing to make

SECT. LXVII. Mat. XIII. 24

25 But while men slept, his enemy came, and sowed tares among the wheat, and went his way.

26 But when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also.

27 So the servants of the householder came, and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? from whence then hath it tares?

28 He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants a The kingdom of heaven.] That this is frequently to be understood of the gospel dispensation has been observed before in note h on Mat. iii. 2, p. 96.

25 26 27 28

b May be compared to that which happened to a man.] Or may be illustrated by the following similitude. See note i on Luke vii. 32, p. 307.

c The proprietor of the estate.] So οἰκοδεσπότης seems to signify in this connection. He is supposed to be the master of the field, and of some lodge, or farm-house, in which these servants dwelt.

d May

SECT. lxvii.

Mat. XIII. 29.

make the best amends they could, said to him, Wilt thou then have us go directly to root them out, and gather them up before they get any farther head? But he said, No, I do not think that proper; lest while you endeavour to gather up the tares, you should, before you are aware, 30 root up some of the wheat also with them: It will be better to permit both to grow together till the harvest come; and in the time of the harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles, that they may afterwards be burnt for fuel[d]; but gather ye the wheat into my barn, that it may there be ready for my use.

36 Then Jesus, after he had spoken some other parables[e], having dismissed the multitude, went from the vessel where he had been preaching into an house, to refresh himself a little before he crossed the lake[f]: and his disciples who constantly attended him, came to him, saying, We desire thou wouldest explain to us the parable of the tares in the field, for we do not perfectly understand it. 37 And he answered and said unto them, He, in the parable, that sowed the good seed, is intended to represent the Son of man, the great preacher of the gospel, which is ordained as the most illustrious instrument for the reformation and happiness of mankind. 38 The field is indeed the whole world, in which the gospel is to be preached, and not to be confined to the Jewish nation alone: the good seed are the children of the kingdom, or those truly pious men who, being formed on the model of the gospel, and as it were assimilated to it, are the heirs of future glory, as well as entitled to the present privileges of my church: but, on the other hand, the tares are wicked men, who are indeed the children of the wicked one, though many of them may profess themselves my disciples, and for their own unworthy vants said unto him, Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up?

29 But he said, Nay, lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them:

30 Let both grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn.

36 Then Jesus sent the multitude away, and went into the house: and his disciples came unto him, saying, Declare unto us the parable of the tares of the field.

37 He answered and said unto them, He that soweth the good seed, is the Son of man:

38 The field is the world: the good seed are the children of the kingdom: but the tares are the children of the wicked one:

d May afterwards be burnt for fuel.] This plainly proves that the word ζιζανια, which we render tares, does not exactly answer to that vegetable among us, which is a kind of pulse too good to be used merely for fuel.

e After he had spoken some other parables.] Some of these are contained in the intermediate verses (ver. 31—35); but I apprehend the explication of the parable would appear with some peculiar advantage thus immediately after it.

f A little before he crossed the lake.] I am sensible that Mark iv. 36, may seem some objection to this; but the reader may see in my paraphrase there, sect. lxix. that I apprehend it may be reconciled with this interpretation and order of the story; yet I acknowledge it possible that the house here spoken of might be on the other side of the lake, and that they might go into it the next day.

g Shall

worthy ends pretend a great zeal for my cause and church. The enemy that sowed them is the devil, who studies by all means to corrupt men's principles and debauch their lives, and puts those on a hypocritical profession of religion who are utter strangers to its power. The harvest I mentioned is the end of the world, the great day of judgment and retribution; and the reapers are the angels, who are to be employed in the services of that day. As therefore the tares in the parable are ordered by the owner of the field to be gathered together, and burnt in the fire; so likewise shall it be at the end of this world. The Son of man shall then send forth his attendant angels[g], and they, in obedience to his command, shall gather out of his kingdom all things which have been an offence to others, even all those that practise iniquity, and thereby bring a reproach on their profession, and lay stumbling-blocks in the way of others: And these blessed spirits, as the executioners of the divine vengeance, shall cast them into hell, the furnace of unquenchable fire: and dreadful indeed will their condition be; for there shall be lamentation, and gnashing of teeth for ever[h], in the height of anguish, rage, and despair; a despair, aggravated by all the privileges they once enjoyed, and the vain hope which, as my professed disciples, they once entertained. But then shall the righteous be publicly owned and honoured, and with a joyful welcome be received into the heavenly world, where they shall shine forth with divine radiancy and glory, like the sun itself, and be fixed for ever in the kingdom of their Father, to enjoy the transforming visions of his face.

This misery, or this felicity, is the end of all the living; nor can I ever declare a truth of greater importance to you. See to it therefore, that you regard it with becoming attention; and every one who hath ears to hear, let him hear it, and govern his life by its extensive influence.

IMPROVE-

SECT. LXVII.

Mat. XIII. 39

39 The enemy that sowed them, is the devil: the harvest is the end of the world: and the reapers are the angels.

40 As therefore the tares are gathered, and burnt in the fire, so shall it be in the end of this world.

41 The son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity;

42 And shall cast them into a furnace of fire; there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

43 Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun, in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.

[g] Shall send forth his attendant angels.] The reader will observe how high an idea our Lord here gives of himself, when he speaks of the angels as his attendants, who were at the last day to wait on him, and at his order to assemble the whole world before him.

[h] Gnashing of teeth.] Since what is here spoken of is supposed to pass in a furnace of fire, it is strange that any should have imagined that ὁ βρυγμὸς τῶν ὀδόντων signifies the knocking, or, as we commonly express it, the chattering of the teeth, through excess of cold. Yet some have been weak enough to argue from hence that (according to the Mahometan notion) the alternative extremities of heat and cold should constitute the torment of the damned. See Archbishop Dawes's Sermons on Hell, serm. iii. p. 14.

IMPROVEMENT.

SECT. lxvii.

Oh that these important instructions might, as it were, be ever sounding in our ears! It is matter of great thankfulness that this earth, which might have been abandoned by God as a barren wilderness, is cultivated as his field, and that any good seed is to be found in it; but grievous to think how many tares are intermingled, so as almost to over-run the ground, and hide the wheat from being seen. Let not a forward zeal prompt us, like these over-officious servants, to think of rooting them out by violence; but let us wait our master's time and be patient till the day of the Lord.

Mat. XIII. 38, 27, 29

41 The separation will at length be made; nor shall one precious grain perish. Awful important time! when the angels shall perform their great office with a sagacity too sharp to be eluded, and a power too strong to be resisted! Gather not our souls, O Lord, with sinners! but may they be bound up in the bundle of life! that when the day cometh, which shall burn as an oven, and when the 42 wicked like chaff shall be thrown in to be consumed, we may survey the execution of the Divine judgment with awful triumph; being owned by God as his while he is making up his jewels, and spared by him as his obedient children. (Mal. iii. 17, and iv. 1.) Then 43 shall we not only be spared, but honoured and adorned, and shine forth like the sun in our father's kingdom; for these vile bodies shall be fashioned like to the glorious body of our Redeemer (Phil. iii. 21), and our purified and perfected spirits shall be clothed with proportionable lustre, and reflect the complete image of his holiness. Amen.

SECT. LXVIII.

Our Lord adds other parables relating to the speedy progress of the gospel and the importance of the blessings it proposes. Mark IV. 26—34. Mat. XIII. 31—35, 44—53.

MARK IV. 26.

SECT. lxviii.

AND after Jesus had delivered the foregoing parable, he went on with his discourse to the multitude, and farther said, So is the kingdom of God, and such the nature of the dispensation of the gospel in its progress, that it is like the growth of vegetables, and may fitly be illustrated by the case of a husbandman: for it is as if a 27 man should throw his seed upon the earth; And after it is sown, should take no farther thought about it, but sleep by night, and rise by day, and apply himself to other business; and in the mean time

Mark 26

MARK IV. 26.

AND he said, So is the kingdom of God, as if a man should cast seed into the ground, 27 And should sleep and rise night and day, and the seed should spring and grow up, he knoweth not how.

time, without his thought and care, the seed should spring up and increase he knows not how. SECT. Ixviii.

28 For the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear.

For the earth, by a certain curious kind of mechanism, which the greatest philosophers cannot fully comprehend[a], does, as it were, spontaneously, without any assistance from man, carry it through the whole progress of vegetation; and produces first the blade, then the ear, and afterward the full grain in the ear. Mark IV. 28

29 But when the fruit is brought forth, immediately he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come.

But at the proper season for it, as soon as the fruit is ripe, he immediately puts in the sickle, because the harvest is come; and all that remains is to receive the bountiful provision which the great Lord of all has produced by his own power. By such insensible degrees shall the gospel gain ground in the world, and ripen to a harvest of glory: and therefore let not my faithful servants be discouraged if the effect of their labours be not immediately so conspicuous as they could desire[b]; a future crop may spring up, and the Son of man will in due time appear to gather it in. 29

30 And he said, Whereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God? or with what comparison shall we compare it?

And he made a pause in his discourse, and then said, I am thinking, whereunto shall we compare the kingdom of God? or with what parable shall we place it in such a point of light as farther to illustrate it. 30

Mat. XIII. 31. Another parable put he forth unto them, saying,

After which reflection, he proposed another parable to them, saying, The kingdom of heaven, of which I am speaking, or the interest of the gospel in the world, is like a grain of mustard seed, which Mat. xiii. 31.

a By a curious kind of mechanism, &c.] The word αὐλομαῖη, which is generally in good authors applied to artificial machines, so naturally suggested this thought, that I could not forbear hinting at it. The reader may see a very elegant illustration of it in Dr. Watts's Philosophical Essays. No. ix. § 2.

b Let not my faithful servants be discouraged, &c.] It cannot be the design of this parable to encourage private Christians to imagine that religion will flourish in their own souls without proper cultivation; nor to lead ministers to expect that it will flourish in their people while they neglect due application in private as well as public. I hope therefore the reader will acquiesce with me in the paraphrase given above; supposing that our Lord meant to intimate that his apostles and other ministers were not to estimate their usefulness merely by their immediate and visible success; but might hope that by their preaching a seed would be left in the hearts of many which might afterwards produce happy fruit. On these principles, I doubt not but our Lord's preaching greatly promoted the signal success of the apostles (to which he might in part refer, John iv. 38, p. 170), and I hope the remark may sometimes be applicable to our labours, especially with respect to those who, have enjoyed a religious education, and being restrained from grosser irregularities, have not been so far as others from the kingdom of God. There can be no reason to interpret this (as Grotius and Dr. Clarke have done) of Christ only: he does not go away and sleep; and he perfectly knows how the seed springs up: on the other hand every faithful minister may be said to put in his sickle, as having his part in the final harvest. (See John iv. 36, p. 169.)

c The

SECT. lxviii.

which a man took and sowed in his field to raise and propagate the plant: It is, I say, like this grain, which indeed, when at first it is sown in the earth, is very small and inconsiderable, and [one of] the least of all the seeds, that are cast in the 32 ground[c]: But when it is sown some time in the earth, it grows up to a surprising degree, and becomes greater than all other herbs; yea, I may even say, it becomes a tree, and shoots out great branches, so large and thick, that the birds of the air may build their nests in it, and come and lodge in its branches[d], [and] harbour under its shadow. In such a remarkable manner did our Lord intimate, that his gospel should prevail amidst all opposition; and, inconsiderable as its beginnings were, should spread itself abroad through the whole world, so as to afford weary and fearful souls a grateful and secure retreat.

Mark IV. 31.

Mark IV. 32.

saying, The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard-seed, which a man took and sowed in his field; [MARK IV. 31.—]

MARK IV. —31. Which [indeed] when it is sown in the earth, is [the least of all seeds] that be in the earth: [MAT. XIII. 32.—]

32 But when it is sown, it groweth up, and becometh greater than all herbs; [and becometh a tree,] and shooteth out great branches, so that the fowls of the air may [come and lodge in the branches, and] under the shadow of it. [MAT. XIII.—32.

He also spake another parable to them, to the same purpose with the former, which, like the rest, was taken from a very familiar circumstance daily occurring in life: The kingdom of heaven, said he, or the cause of the gospel, is like a little leaven, which a woman took and covered up in three measures of meal; and though it seemed lost for a while in the mass of dough, it secretly wrought through it by a speedy though insensible fermentation till at length the whole was leavened. Thus shall the gospel spread in the world, and influence and assimilate the temper and conduct of men.

MAT. XIII. 33. Another parable spake he unto them: The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

34 All these things Jesus spake to the multitude in parables; and with many other such parables spake he the word unto them as they were able to hear and receive [it;] well knowing that so many enemies were then hovering round him, that, had he declared the mysteries of his kingdom in plainer terms, he would have been in continual danger, and must, without a series of repeated miracles, have been cut off by their malice: and upon this account, without a parable he spake not any thing in all that he delivered to them on that day;

34 All these things spake Jesus unto the multitude in parables; [and with many such parables spake he the word unto them, as they were able to hear it;] and without a parable spake he not unto them: [MARK IV. 33, 34.—]

c The least of all the seeds, &c.] Or one of the least; and so small that it was proverbially used to signify a very little thing. (Compare Mat. xvii. 20, sect. xci.) See Lightfoot's Hor. Heb. on Mat. xiii. 32.

d Come and lodge in its branches.] The Talmud mentions a mustard-tree so large that a man might with ease sit in it; and another, one of whose branches covered a tent: (see Tremell. Not. in loc. and Lightfoot's Hor. Heb.) And it is certain we shall be much mistaken if we judge of vegetables or animals in the eastern and southern countries, merely by what those of the same species are among us. See Raphel. Annotat. ex Herodoto. p. 163.

e That

35 That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, I will open my mouth in parables, I will utter things which have been kept secret from the foundation of the world.

day; That so it might be seen that passage was remarkably fulfilled in him[e], which was spoken by the prophet (Psal. lxxviii. 2), and that he might with the utmost propriety adopt those words that Asaph had delivered, saying, "I will open "my mouth in parables, I will give vent to dark "sayings of old, even to things which have "been hid from the foundation of the world." For thus did Jesus teach important truths that were before unknown, in manner something obscure, though to the attentive mind peculiarly impressing.

SECT. lxviii.

Mat. XIII. 35

Mark IV.—34. And when they were alone, he expounded all things to his disciples.

And after he had sent away the multitude, and was retired from them, he freely expounded all these things to his disciples when they were alone with him.

Mark IV. 34.

Mat. XIII. 44. Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field; the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field.

And when he had given them the foremen- tioned explication of the parable of the tares, he again added some other parables to the same purpose, to promote the diligence, zeal and resolution of his disciples, in searching into and teaching these great and important truths, in which the glory of God and the salvation of souls were so much concerned. Particularly, he said to them, The happiness to which the kingdom of heaven, or the gospel-dispensation, is designed to conduct men, is like an immense treasure hid in a field, which when a man has found, he hides and covers up again with all possible care; and, in the transport he is in for joy of it, goes and sells all that he has, and buys that field at any rate, as being sure that it will abundantly answer the price.

Mat. XIII. 44.

45 Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant-man, seeking goodly pearls;

Or again, to represent the matter in a like instance, that I may fix it yet more deeply on your minds[f], The kingdom of heaven is in this respect like, or may be illustrated by the similitude of a merchant, who goes about from one country to another, seeking the largest and most beautiful pearls[g], and other fine jewels; Who finding

45

46 Who when he had one

[e] That it might be fulfilled.] So many scriptures are thus quoted by way of allusion, that I cannot think it necessary to suppose, as some late ingenious writers have done, that these words did not originally belong to the seventy-eighth Psalm, but are a fragment of some other, describing the manner in which the Messiah was to preach. See Jeffreys's Review, p. 117.) They have a plain connection with the following verses, and might, perhaps, be a kind of preface to all Asaph's psalms, in which there are some dark sayings, though the greatest part of the seventy-eighth is very clear.

[f] Fix it yet more deeply on your minds.] Considering the many trials they were shortly to expect, it was proper the thought should thus be inculcated upon them by a variety of figures.

[g] Beautiful pearls.] The sacred writers elsewhere compare and prefer wisdom to jewels. See Job xxviii. 15—19; Prov. iii. 15: and viii. 11.

But

SECT. lxviii.

one pearl of an exceeding great value, offered to him on very advantageous terms, would by no means slip the opportunity, but presently went away, and sold all that he had, and bought it; as well knowing he should be a considerable gainer, though he should part with all he was possessed of for it. Thus, though a resolute profession of my gospel may indeed cost you dear, yet it will, on the whole, be infinitely for your advantage and richly repay all your losses.

had found one pearl of great price, he went and sold all that he had, and bought it.

Mat. XIII. 46.

47 But see to it, that you are in good earnest in your religion, and do not impose upon yourselves by an empty profession: for, to add one parable more, which I shall again borrow from an object with which some of you have been very conversant: The success of the kingdom of heaven in the world is like that of a net thrown into the sea, which gathered in [fishes] of all sorts;

47 Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind;

48 Which, when the fishermen perceived that it was full, they dragged to the shore, and sitting down there, to survey the draught that they had made, gathered the good into proper vessels, but threw 49 away the bad[h], as not worth their regard. So mixed and undistinguished here are the characters of those who profess the gospel, which, as it is preached promiscuously to all, gathers in persons of all sorts, and hypocrites as well as true believers are brought into the visible church. But an exact survey will finally be taken of the whole; and so it will be shewn at last how great a difference there is between them by the assignment of their state: for at the end of the world the angels shall come forth in the general resurrection and separate the wicked from among the just, with whom they often have been joined before, even in the same religious society and in the participation of the same external privileges;

48 Which when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down, and gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away.

49 So shall it be at the end of the world: the angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the just;

50 And they shall cast them into a furnace of fire, the seat of the damned; where their torments shall never end, but there shall be incessant wailing, and gnashing of teeth, for rage and despair.

50 And shall cast them into the furnace of fire; there shall be wailing, and gnashing of teeth.

51 Then Jesus saith unto them, Have ye, with the key to them which I before gave you, understood all these things? They say unto him, Yes, Lord, we clearly understand them. And he said

51 Jesus saith unto them, Have ye understood all these things? They say unto him, Yea, Lord.

h But threw away the bad.] The word σαπρα, which we render bad, generally signifies corrupt or putrid, and seems an allusion to the drawing up some dead fish in a net with the living. Mr. Horberry justly observes that this in the strongest terms represents the hopeless state of sinners at last. See his Discourse of future punishment, p. 29.

52 Then said he unto them, Therefore every scribe which is instructed unto the kingdom of heaven, is like unto a man that is an householder, which bringeth forth out of his treasure things new and old.

said to them. See therefore, that as you understand them, you make a good use of them, for your own advantage, and that of others: for every scribe who is disciplined in the mysteries and has attained to the knowledge of the kingdom of heaven, or every faithful minister who is fit for his work, is like a housekeeper, who lays in a variety of goods for use, and keeps them in such order, that he readily brings forth out of his store things new and old, as the several occasions of life require, dispensing them in such a manner as may best suit the case of those who are under his care. SECT. lxvii. Mat. XIII. 52.

53 And it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these parables, he departed thence.

And it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these parables, which he added to those he had spoken in public, he departed thence that evening, to shun the farther importunity of the people, and crossed the sea with some remarkable circumstances, which will be mentioned below. 53

IMPROVEMENT.

Let us be concerned to gather up these fragments, that nothing may be lost; and to lay them up in our memories and our hearts, that, according to our respective stations in life, we may have them ready for use. Mat. XIII. 52.

Let us remember that sometimes the growth of piety in the heart is like that of vegetables in the earth. The seed of the word may for a while seem lost; or when the fruit appears, it may advance and ripen but slowly. Let not ministers therefore too confidently conclude they have laboured in vain, and spent their strength for nought, because the fields are not immediately white to the harvest, but with believing hope and humble patience let them recommend the seed that they have sown to Him, who by the secret energy of his continued influences, can give at length a sure and plentiful increase. Mark IV. 26—29.

When Jesus took to himself his great power, and reigned, the gospel, which had gained so little ground under his personal ministration, ran, and was greatly glorified in the hands of the apostles. The grain of mustard seed shot up and branched forth into a spreading tree, and birds of every wing took shelter there; (Oh that there had been none of the ravenous and the obscene kind! Thus when the Lord shall please to hasten it in his time, a little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation, (Isa. lx. 22.) Mat. XIII. 31, 32.

Let us pray that the triumphant progress of his kingdom may come. In the mean time let it be our desire that the principles of 33

SECT. LXVIII.

the gospel may, like a sacred kind of leaven, diffuse themselves through our whole souls; that all our powers and faculties, that all our thoughts and passions, may be, as it were, impregnated and elevated by them. Let us remember the value of the blessings it proposes; and regarding Christ as the pearl of great price, and heaven as that immense treasure in which alone we can be for ever rich and happy, let us be willing to part with all to secure it, if we are called to such a trial.

Ver. 44—46.

It is not enough that we are nominal Christians, or possessed of the common privileges of the church: the day of final separation will come, and the angels employed in the work will not overlook us, but conduct us to the abodes of the righteous or the wicked. Oh that we may not then be cast with abhorrence into the furnace of fire! but now seriously realizing to ourselves this awful day, of which our Lord has given such repeated prospects, may we so judge ourselves that we may not then be condemned of him!

47—50.

SECT. LXIX.

Our Lord, having given some remarkable answers to some who seemed disposed to follow him, passes over the lake, and stills a mighty tempest, as he was crossing it. Mat. VIII. 18—27. Mark IV. 35, to the end. Luke VIII. 22—25. IX. 57, to the end.

MARK IV. 35.

SECT. LXIX.

NOW in the evening of the same day[a] on which the parables that we have been relating were delivered, when Jesus saw great multitudes still waiting about him[b], purposing for a little while to retire from them, he came out of the house

Mark IV. 35.

MARK IV. 35.

AND the same day when the even was come, [when Jesus saw great multitudes about him, [LUKE he went into a ship with his disciples; and he a In the evening of the same day,] Or, that very day, when it was evening: for these are the express words of the evangelist; εν εκεινη τη ημερα, οψιας γενομενης: and indeed they are so express, that I am amazed any critics, who do not suppose he was mistaken, can pretend it was not the same day; which yet Dr. Clarke does, as if the phrase meant nothing more than one day towards evening. I dare not take so great a freedom with the sacred author, and have therefore been obliged to transpose, though not to contradict, Matthew.—This indeed appears one of the busiest days of Christ's life, as all the events and discourses recorded from his miraculous cure of the demoniack who was blind and dumb (sect. lxi. p. 320) happened in it; nevertheless, I see no absurdity in supposing that all these things might pass in less than twelve hours. Compare note c on Mat. xii. 22. p 320.

b Great multitudes still waiting about him.] They sometimes staid with or near him several days together: (compare Mat. xv. 32. sect. lxxxvi.) And it seems that now they staid a while after Christ had dismissed them, perhaps with a prayer or benediction (Mat. xiii. 36, p. 350.) for, on his coming down again to the shore, the disciples joined with him in persuading them to disperse; which, when they saw him determined to cross the sea, they would the more readily do: for so we may conclude from what Mark says above, ver. 36. that just as he took shipping, they (that is, Jesus and his disciples) sent them away. And this appears to me to be the easiest way to reconcile this difference, which is none of the least.

They

he said unto them, Let us go over unto the other side of the lake.] [MAT. VIII. 18.—LUKE VIII. 22.—]

36 And when they had sent away the multitude, they took him even as he was in the ship.

SECT. lxix.

house, and went into a ship, which stood by the neighbouring shore, with those of his disciples with whom he had just been discoursing; and said unto them, Let us go over unto the other side of the lake. And when they had dismissed the multitude, and had at length persuaded them to withdraw, they took him just as he was in the ship[c], without any farther provision for their passage. Mark IV. 35. 36

But before we relate the particulars of their voyage, we shall here take occasion to add two or three little occurrences, one of which happened at this time.

MAT. VIII. 19. And [it came to pass, that as they went in the way,] a certain scribe came, and said unto him, [Lord and] Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest. [LUKE IX. 57.]

And first it came to pass, that as they went in the way[d] from the house out of which he came, to the shore were he proposed to embark, a certain scribe, pleased with his entertaining parables, and concluding from the tenor of some of them[e], as well as from the zeal with which the people flocked about him, that he would soon become a mighty prince, on declaring himself the Messiah, came with all the appearance of profound respect and said unto him, O thou great Lord [and] Master, who hast another kind of authority than we scribes can pretend to (Mat. vii. 29, p. 240.) I beseech thee to give me leave to attend thee in thy passage: for I am determined that I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest, and Mat. VIII. 19

[c] They took him as he was in the ship.] This may seem an objection against the solution proposed in the last note; but I think the turn given in the paraphrase may remove it. If any are not satisfied with that answer, they must suppose that Christ's going into an house, mentioned by Matthew, was some time after; which seems not so natural a sense of Matthew's words. (See Mat. xiii. 36, with note f, p. 350.) But had that appeared to me the meaning of them, it would only have occasioned the alteration of a clause or two in the paraphrase; for it would have been improper to have divided the explication of the parable of the tares from the parable itself.

[d] As they went in the way.] As this and the next story are inserted by Matthew between his account of Christ's giving commandment to cross the lake, and his entering into the ship to do it (see Mat. viii. 18—23,) I cannot but conclude they both happened at this time; and consequently, that when Luke introduces it by saying it was as they went in the way, his meaning must be at large, one day as Christ and his disciples were walking, and not (as Sir Isaac Newton supposes) as they went on in that journey in which the Samaritans had refused him a lodging. The following words would indeed have been proper on that occasion: but they had also an universal propriety, as Christ had no house or stated lodging of his own, and was now going over to a place where we do not find he had any acquaintance. But if any think St. Luke's expression too strong to bear this interpretation, they must, if they will not impeach St. Matthew's account of it, conclude that this little occurrence happened twice, as it is very possible it might.

[e] Concluding from the tenor of some of them.] The parables of the mustard-seed and the leaven were both spoken before the multitude (Mat. xiii. 31. 34, p. 353, 354,) and they were both so plain that the disciples did not ask Christ to expound them; as indeed one can hardly imagine how any explication could have made them more intelligible.—The scribe's forsaking Christ, on the declaration he made of his destitute circumstances, makes it evident he was actuated by these views.

SECT. lxix.

and devote myself entirely to the service of thy kingdom. And Jesus, knowing the motives which engaged him to this resolution, saith unto him, Do not flatter yourself with the expectation of any temporal advantages from such an attendance; for I plainly tell you, that whereas (not to speak of domestic animals, which are under the care of man) even the very foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, for themselves and their young; yet the Son of man, successful as his kingdom must at length be, does now appear in such low circumstances, that he has not so much as a place where he may lay his head: he knows not one day where he shall find food and lodging the next; and his followers must expect no better a condition. A declaration sufficient to deter a person who sought nothing but his present interest and advantage.

Mat. VIII. 20.

20 And Jesus saith unto him, The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head. [LUKE IX. 58.]

21 And to another of his disciples, who had for some time attended his discourses, he said follow me statedly, as these my servants do, that thou mayest be trained up to take thy part with them in the ministry of the gospel. But he said unto him, Lord, I will most gladly do it; yet I beg thou wouldest first permit me to go home and bury my aged father[f], to whose remains I am going to pay my last duty. But Jesus, who thought it proper on this occasion to make an extraordinary trial of his faith and obedience, said again unto him, Follow thou me immediately and leave the dead to bury their dead: let those who are themselves spiritually dead, perform the rites of funeral; yea, let the dead remain unburied, rather than disobey my word when I give thee so great a commission; or than neglect it but one day when I say, as I now do, Go thou and preach this gospel of the kingdom of God[g], which

21 And [he said unto] another of his disciples, [Follow me: but he] said unto him, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father. [LUKE IX. 59.

22 But Jesus said unto him, Follow me, and let the dead bury their dead; [but go thou and preach the kingdom of God. [LUKE IX. 60.

f To go home and bury my aged father.] Some think that this expression only intimates, his father was so old that he could not live long; but Christ's answer seems to take it for granted he was already dead.

g Go thou and preach the kingdom of God.] As our Lord called him now to follow him, we must conclude that this commission which he gives him to preach was not directly to be put in execution. The circumstance was plainly extraordinary, and might turn on reasons unknown to us. Christ might, for instance, foresee some particular obstruction that would have arisen from the interview with his friends at his father's funeral, which would have prevented his devoting himself to the ministry; to which he might refer in saying, Let THE DEAD bury their dead. I see no reason to suppose any regard to the priests being forbidden some usual ceremonies of mourning, which some have thought to be intended here.

h At which thou hast heard, and shalt farther hear from me. SECT. LIX.

LUKE IX. 61. And another also said, Lord, I will follow thee; but let me first go bid them farewell which are at home at my house.

And, at a certain time[h] another also said, Lord I will presently follow thee; but permit me first to go and settle the affairs of my family, and take my leave of them which are at my house[i], as Elisha was permitted to do when called in so extraordinary a manner to the prophetic office,) 1 Kings xix. 20.) And Jesus said unto him, Take heed that no fond affection for any, who may stand related to thee, nor any solicitous concern about thy temporal affairs, prevent thee from executing the important purpose thou hast formed of devoting thyself to my service; for no man having once laid his hand on the plough, and afterwards looking back, is fit for the service of the kingdom of God[k]; as indeed, if the work of ploughing the ground require that a man should look before him and resolutely mind what he is about, you may easily imagine that the duties of a gospel minister will require a much more steady attention and more firm resolution. Luke IX. 61. 62

62 And Jesus said unto him, No man having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.

MAT. VIII. 23. And when he was entered into a ship, his disciples followed him: [LUKE, and they launched forth:] [and there were also with him other little ships.] [MARK IV. — 36. LUKE VIII. 22.]

And now, as it was said before that Jesus was about to cross the lake, when he was entered into the ship, his disciples followed him; and they directly launched forth, even as many as could conveniently get a passage in that vessel, or any others that were thereabouts; for they were all desirous to attend him; and several other little ships were also with him. And as they were sailing over the lake, Jesus laid himself down in the Mat. viii. 23 24

24 And behold, [LUKE,

h At a certain time.] This probably happened at another time; for it would have been very improper to have asked permission to go and bid his domestics farewell, when Christ had just made such an answer to the former: but the story is so short, and so much resembles the former that I chose (as St. Luke also does) to join them together. Nor do I think it any reflection on the evangelists, that they did not follow the order of time provided they do not assert a regard to it where they vary from it.

i Permit me first to settle the affairs of my family, and take my leave, &c.] In this latitude I doubt not but the phrase αποταξασθαι τοις εις τον οικον μου is to be taken here, though it has something of a different signification, Luke xiv. 33. sect. cxxi. Intending to give up his possessions, he probably designed to order how they should be distributed among his friends; as Heinsius has very well explained the passage.

k No man having laid his hand on the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God.] Hesiod has given it as the character of a good ploughman, that he keeps his mind intent on his work, that he may make a straight furrow and does not allow himself to gaze about on his companions. (Hesiod. Εργ. lib. ii. ver. 61—63.) Our Lord, on the like obvious principles, may use the phrase of one that looks behind him while his hand is on the plough, as a kind of proverbial expression for a careless irresolute person, who must be peculiarly unfit for the Christian ministry. How happy had it been for his church had this lively admonition been regarded, without which it is impossible ορθοτομειν τον λογον της αληθειας, to divide, or rather direct the word of truth aright, 2 Tim. ii. 15. See Bos, Observ. cap. vi. p. 28—32.

l A great

SECT. lxix. the ship; and being wearied with the various labours of the day, he fell asleep: and behold, there

Mat. VIII. 24. came down a violent storm of wind on the lake; and on a sudden it was so tempestuous, that there arose a great and unusual agitation in the sea[l], insomuch that the vessel was even covered with the swelling waves, which beat into the ship, so that it was now full of water, and they were in

Mark IV. 38. extreme danger of being cast away. And [Jesus] in the mean time, for the refreshment of his weary body, as well as for the trial of their faith, was asleep on a pillow in the stern of the ship, being greatly fatigued with the labours of the day[m]. And when to all human appearance they were just sinking, his disciples came to him, and awakened him, saying, with great surprise and importunity, Master, Master, is it no manner of concern to thee that we are all of us in the utmost danger, and hast thou no regard to what we are exposed to in such a terrible extremity as this? Lord, save us, for we are just perishing!

Mat. VIII. 26 And he says to them, Why are ye so exceeding timorous, O ye of little faith? Can you imagine that God would suffer Me to be lost in a tempest? or that I would consult my own safety in the neglect of yours? Where is your faith? and how is it that you have no faith in exercise on such an occasion, when you have had so many signal evidences both of my power and my tender care? And then rising up, with an air of Divine majesty and authority he rebuked the winds and the raging of the water, and said to the sea, as a master might do to a company of turbulent servants, Peace, be still: and he had no sooner spoken, but the wind rested, and there was pre-

27 sently a great calm. And the men that were with him were greatly amazed, and struck with such a reverential awe that they feared exceedingly, saying, to each other, What a wonderful person is this, who has not only power over diseases, but commandeth even the most tumultuous elements, the winds and the sea; and amidst all their rage and confusion they humbly obey him, and are immediately composed at his command!

[LUKE, as they sailed, he fell asleep; and there came down a [great] storm of wind on the lake; and] there arose a great tempest in the sea, insomuch that the ship was covered with the waves; [and the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full;] [LUKE, and they were in jeopardy.] [MARK IV. 37. LUKE VIII. 23.]

MARK IV. 38. And he was in the hinder part of the ship, asleep on a pillow:] [and his disciples came to him, and awoke him, saying,] Master, [LUKE, Master,] carest thou not, [Lord, save us; we perish.] MAT. VIII. 25. LUKE VIII. 24.—]

MAT. VIII. 26. And he saith unto them, Why are ye [so] fearful, O ye of little faith? [LUKE, Where is your faith?] [How is it that ye have no faith?] Then he arose and rebuked the winds, [LUKE, and the raging of the water:] [and said unto the sea, Peace, be still: and the wind ceased,] and there was a great calm. [MARK IV. 39, 40. LUKE VIII. —24, 25.]

27 But the men marvelled, [and they feared exceedingly, and said one to another,] What manner of man is this, that [LUKE, commandeth] even the winds and the sea, [LUKE, and they] obey him? [MARK IV. 41. LUKE VIII. —25.]

IMPROVE-

[l] A great agitation in the sea.] Σεισμὸς μέγας properly signifies a mighty agitation; probably it was something of a hurricane.

[m] Fatigued with the labours of the day.] This we may reasonably conclude from a review of the preceding sections. See also the latter part of note a, in the beginning of this section.

IMPROVEMENT.

SECT. lxix.

How great and glorious does our blessed Redeemer appear, as having all the elements at his command, and exercising his dominion over the winds and seas! He stills the very tempests when they roar, and makes the storm a calm, (Psal. cvii. 29.) He silences at once the noise and fury of the tumultous waves: and, in the midst of its confusion, says to the raging sea, Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further; and here shalt thy proud waves be stayed, (Job xxxviii. 11.) Who would not reverence and fear him! Who would not cheerfully commit themselves to him! Under such a protection, how courageously may his church ride through every storm and weather every danger! Christ is still with her, and she is safe even while he may seem to be sleeping. Blessed Jesus! that power of thine which here commanded the tempest into a calm, can easily silence all our tumultuous passions, and reduce our souls to that blessed tranquillity in which alone we can be capable of enjoying thee and ourselves.

Mat. VIII. 27

24

May we still be applying to Christ with such importunate addresses; and, sensible how much we need his help, may we cry out, Lord, save us, or we perish! And may it be the language, not of suspicion and terror, but of faith; of a faith determined at all adventures to adhere to him, whatever dangers are to be encountered, or whatever advantages are to be resigned!

25

Did his compassion for us, and his desire of our salvation, engage him to submit to such destitute and calamitous circumstances, that when the foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, the Son of man himself had not a place where he might lay that sacred head which with infinite mutual complacency and delight he had so often reposed in the bosom of the Father! May our zeal and love animate us cheerfully to take our part in his indigence and distress, if he calls us to it! May no considerations of ease or interest, or even of human friendship, lead us to turn a deaf ear to the calls of duty; or suffer us, when we once have engaged in his service, to think of deserting it, lest on the whole we should be judged unfit for the kingdom of God! May thy grace, O Lord, animate our souls, that nothing may prevent our faithfulness unto death, and so deprive us of that crown of life which thy grace has promised to such a character! (Rev. ii. 10.)

20

21

Luke IX. 62.

SECT.

SECT. LXX.

Christ being arrived at the country of the Gadarenes, dispossesses two demoniacs; and permitting the evil spirits to enter into a herd of swine, is desired by the inhabitants to withdraw; and so returns to the western side of the sea. Mat. VIII. 28, to the end. IX. 1. Mark V. 1—21. Luke VIII. 26—40.

MARK V. 1.

SECT. LXX.

Mark V. 1.

AND after they were thus delivered from the danger of the storm, they came over to the other side of the sea of Tiberias, and arrived at the country of the Gadarenes; a territory belonging, [or] at least adjacent to that of the ancient Gergesenes, or Girgashites, (see Gen. x. 16. xv. 21. Deut. vii. 1. and Josh. iii. 10) which is situated over-against Galilee; being that tract of land which fell to the half-tribe of Manasseh beyond Jordan, and was afterwards called Trachonitis.

2 And when he was landed out of the ship, he was no sooner got ashore, but there immediately met him two men[a] possessed with demons, coming out of the sepulchres[b], which were in a burying-place near the city, whither they had fled as to a place affording them some shelter, and suiting their gloomy imaginations; and they were both of them exceeding fierce and mischievous, so that no one could safely pass by that way: and [one of these was] a certain man of the city with an unclean spirit, that had been known to be possessed 3 with demons for a long time; Who was so terribly outrageous that he wore no clothes, nor would abide in any house, but had his dwelling sometimes in the burying ground, among the tombs, and sometimes in a desart, or a common, that

MARK V. 1.

AND they came over unto the other side of the sea, [LUKE, and arrived at the country of the Gadarenes, [or Gergesenes] which is over-against Galilee.] [MAT. VIII. 28.—LUKE VIII. 26.]

2 And when he was come out of the ship, [LUKE, to land,] immediately there met him [two possessed with devils, coming out of the tombs, exceeding fierce, so that no man might pass by that way;] [LUKE, a certain man out of the city,] with an unclean spirit, [LUKE, which had devils a long time;] [MAT. VIII.—28.—LUKE VIII. 27.—]

3 Who [wore no clothes, neither abode in any house, but] had his dwelling among the tombs, and no man could a There met him two men.) Mark and Luke mention only one, who probably was the fiercer of the two; but this is no way inconsistent with the account that Matthew gives.—I cannot but observe here, that Mark tells this story in all other respects so much more circumstantially than Matthew, that it abundantly proves that his gospel was not (as Mr. Whiston maintains in his Harmony) an abridgment of Matthew. The same remark may arise from comparing Mark v. 22---43 with Mat. ix. 18---26. and Mark ix. 17---27. with Mat. xvii. 14---18, and some other parallel passages; not to mention histories recorded by Mark, and not to be found in Matthew. See Mr. Jones's Vindication of St. Matthew's Gospel, chap. vii. and ix.

b Coming out of the sepulchres.] Grotius supposes that the demons chose to drive the men that they possessed among the tombs, to confirm some superstitious notions of the Jews relating to the power of evil spirits over the dead. The heathens had undoubtedly such notions: but I rather think, with Elsner, the demoniacs chose the caves of this burying-ground as a kind of shelter; and he has shewn that wretches in extremity sometimes did the like. See Elsner. Observ. Vol. I. p. 66---68.

c A desart, could bind him, no not with chains:—[Luke VIII.—27.]

4 Because that he had been often bound with fetters and chains, and the chains had been plucked asunder by him, and the fetters broken in pieces; neither could any man tame him.

5 And always night and day he was in the mountains, and in the tombs, crying, and cutting himself with stones.

6 But when he saw Jesus afar off, he ran, [and fell down before him,] and worshipped him; [Luke VIII. 28.—]

7 And cried [Luke, out] with a loud voice, and said, What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of the most high God? [Luke, I beseech thee,] I adjure thee by God, that thou torment me not: [art thou come hither to torment us before the time?] [Mat. VIII. 29. Luke VIII.—28.]

Luke VIII. 29. (For he had commanded the unclean spirit, [and said unto him, Come out of the man, thou unclean spirit.] For oftentimes it had caught him; and he was kept bound with chains, and in fetters; and he brake the bands, and was that lay near it[c]; and was under so strong an operation of the diabolical power, that no one could confine him even with chains: For he had often been bound with fetters and chains; yet in a most surprising manner the chains were broken asunder by him, and the fetters were beaten to pieces; and, after all the methods that had been taken with him, no one was able to tame him, either by force or entreaties, or any kind of exorcism that had been tried upon him. And 5 he was always night and day upon the mountains, and among the tombs, crying out in a terrible manner: and, when there was no body else to spend his rage upon, cutting himself with sharp pieces of the stones he found there.

And when he saw Jesus afar off, the demon 6 that possessed him was so over-awed, that he immediately ran and fell down upon his face before him, with all the appearance of the greatest reverence, and worshipped him: And crying out 7 with a loud voice, he said, What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of the most high God? I am not come here to enter into any contest with thee, and I beseech [and] adjure thee by that God whose Son thou art, that thou do not exert the power which thou hast to torment me: I know there will be a season, when thou wilt have an ample triumph over me; but art thou come hither to torment us before the time allotted for our final punishment[d]? And this he spoke, as he was actuated by the demon that possessed him, who was afraid of being driven away: For Jesus was so Luke moved with pity and compassion at the sight of VIII. 29. such a miserable spectacle, that he already had commanded the unclean spirit, [and] said with an air of authority to him, Come out of the man, thou unclean spirit. For (as it was observed before) it had often seized him in a most violent manner; and notwithstanding he was bound with chains, and kept under the closest confinement in fetters, yet none of them were strong enough to hold him, but he would still break loose; and having broke and torn off all the bonds that they

sect. lxx.

Mark V. 4.

[c] A desart, or a common, that lay near it.] So it is said by Luke, ver. 29, that he was driven into the wilderness.

[d] Art thou come hither to torment us before the time?] Here was such a reference to the final sentence which Christ is to pass upon these rebel spirits in the judgment of the great day, to which they are reserved (Jude ver. 6.) as could not be dictated by lunacy; and it is much to be questioned whether either the person speaking, or any of the hearers, but Christ himself, understood the sense and propriety of it.

SECT. lxx. they could fix upon him, he was driven by the impetuous impulse of the raging demon into the desart places, where the burying ground lay.

was driven of the devil into the wilderness.) [MARK V. 8.]

Luke VIII. 29

30 And Jesus asked the evil spirit that was in him, saying, What is thy name? And he answered, saying, My name is Legion; for we are many[e]. And this reply was not without some reason, because the evil spirit, that possessed the man, had many others with him, and a multitude of demons had entered into him, and had been suffered to unite their malice and power in harassing and tormenting the wretched creature.

30 And Jesus asked him, saying, What is thy name? [and he answered, saying, My name is Legion; for we are many:] because many devils were entered into him. [MARK V. 9.]

31 And as they found that Jesus was determined to dislodge them, they earnestly entreated him that he would not send them quite away out of the country[f]; hoping, that if they had permission to hover still about it, they might do something to obstruct the progress of the gospel, against which their chief efforts were centered: [and] they particularly were importunate, that he would not command them to go out into the bottomless abyss, the prison in which many of the fallen spirits are detained, and to which some who may, like these, have been permitted for a while to range at large, are sometimes by divine justice and power remanded. (Compare Rev. xx. 1—3. 2 Pet. ii. 4. Jude ver. 6. and see Grotius in loc.)

31 And they besought him [much,] that he would not [send them away out of the country, and] command them to go out into the deep.—[MARK V. 10.]

Mark V. 11.

Now there was there within their view, at a considerable distance from them, on the mountains near the sea-shore, a great herd of many swine feeding on the mountain; for, unclean as those animals were, the Jews in that country bred up great numbers of them out of regard to the gain of such merchandise, which they sold to the Roman soldiers and other Gentiles, who were very numerous

MARK V. 11. Now there was there [a good way off from them,] nigh unto the mountains, a great herd of [many] swine feeding [LUKE, on the mountain.] [MAT. VIII. 30. LUKE VIII. 32.—]

e My name is Legion, for we are many.] There is no need of concluding from hence that the number of these evil spirits was exactly the same with that of a Roman legion, which was now upwards of six thousand. (See Pitisc. Lex. de Legione.) It was a phrase that was often made use of to express a great number; (see Lightf. Hor. Heb. on Mark v. 9.) – It is observable that Luke here adds, that many demons were entered into him; so that it is evident he thought it not merely a lunacy, but a real possession. Probably a band of evil spirits united in the vexation of this wretched creature; but, in what manner and order, it is impossible for us to say, who know so little of invisible beings.

f That he would not send them out of the country.] It seems from Dan x. 13, 20, that different evil genii preside over distinct regions by the direction of Satan their prince. These, who perhaps were spirits of distinguished abilities, might be appointed to reside thereabouts, to oppose as much as possible the beneficial designs of Christ; and having made their observations on the characters and circumstances of the inhabitants, they might be capable of doing more mischief there than elsewhere, and on that account might desire leave to continue on the spot.

g Which

12 And all the devils besought him, saying, [If thou cast us out,] send us [or suffer us to go away] into the [herd of] swine, that we may enter into them. [MAT. VIII. 31. LUKE VIII.—32.]

numerous in these parts[g]. And all the demons which had possessed this miserable creature (set upon doing all the mischief that they could, though they were under such a sensible restraint, and desirous to bring an odium upon Jesus as the author of mischief) entreated him again, saying to him, If thou art determined, after all we have said, that thou wilt cast us out of this man, send us, [or] give us leave to go away to the herd of swine which is feeding yonder, that we may enter into them; for we have no power of hurting even them without thy leave. And 13 immediately Jesus permitted them to do it; partly to punish those who dealt in so infamous a commodity, and chiefly to prove the reality of a diabolical agency in these cases[h], and to display the malice of those evil spirits: he therefore said unto them, You may go, since you desire it, and operate on those creatures as you please. And upon this the unclean spirits went directly out of the man whom they had possessed, and entered into the herd of swine: and such was the strange effect of their power, that, behold, the whole herd immediately grew mad, and ran violently down a precipice into the sea[i], and were all suffocated

SECT. LXX.

Mark V. 12.

13 And forthwith Jesus gave them leave, [and said unto them, Go.] And the unclean spirits went out [LUKE of the man,] and entered into the [herd of] swine: and [behold], the [whole] herd ran violently down a steep place into the sea, and were choked in the sea, [and perished in the waters:] and they were about two thousand. [MAT. VIII. 32. LUKE VIII. 33.]

[g] Which they sold to the Roman soldiers, and other Gentiles, &c.] The laws of Hyrcanus had indeed prohibited the Jews from keeping swine (which shews it had been much practised among them); but these Gadarenes who had so many Gentiles in the neighbourhood, having long been under Heathen government (Joseph. Antiq Jud. lib. xv. cap. 7. (al. 11), § 3; & Bell. Jud. lib. i. cap. 20 (al. 15), § 3), and living in the extreme part of the country, presumed to do it, scandalous and illegal as the employment was. See Miracles of Jesus vindicated, p. 34, 35.

[h] To prove the reality of a diabolical agency in these cases.] The cavils against this miracle are equally malicious and weak. Our Lord's permitting the evil spirits to enter into the swine was not properly sending them into those beasts, or if he had done it, the punishment to the owners would have been just; or had it been less apparently so, his extraordinary character as a prophet, and the proof he gave of a Divine co-operation, would have set him above our censure in an action, the full reasons of which we might not perfectly have known.—But though this solution is to me very satisfactory, it is not necessary to have recourse to it: for this action evidently appears both wise and gracious; inasmuch as it unanswerably demonstrated at once the malice of Satan and the extent of Christ's power over him. No miracles are more suspicious than pretended dispossessions, as there is so much room for collusion in them; but it was self-evident that a herd of swine could not be confederates in any fraud: their death, therefore, in this instructive and convincing circumstance, was ten thousand times a greater blessing to mankind than if they had been slain for food, as was intended

[i] The whole herd ran violently down a precipice into the sea.] This story is an unanswerable demonstration of the error of the hypothesis advanced by the author of the late Enquiry into the Case of the Demoniacs, &c. (mentioned before in note c on Luke iv. 33, p. 191.) That ingenious writer is forced to suppose these swine frighted by the two madmen, and so driven down the precipice: but, not to mention the absurdity of supposing their lunacy thus to rage after Christ had spoken the healing word, one might venture to appeal to any body that has observed what awkward creatures swine are to drive, whether it would be possible, without a miracle, for two men to drive twenty, and much less two thousand of them into the water. It is a pitiable thing to see a writer of such a character reduced to so hard a shift. He seems indeed to think the common notion suffocated in the sea, and perished in the waters[k]; being in number about two thousand.

SECT. lxx.

Mark V. 14. And the swine-herds, seeing what was done, fled in great amazement, some one way and some another, and told all the story, both in the city and country; and circumstantially related what had happened to the two demoniacs, and how the demons had been ejected from them. And when the people heard it, they were so much impressed with the report, that they went out in crowds to see what was done, and to satisfy themselves, on the testimony of their own senses, as to the truth
15 of so unparalleled a fact. And when they came to Jesus, and saw the demoniac (even him that had been tormented by the legion, and out of whom the demons were departed) calmly sitting at the feet of Jesus to receive his instructions, and now decently clothed and perfectly composed, as being restored to his right mind, they were struck with such a mixture of astonishment and reverence, that they were afraid of conversing with so great a Prophet, and dreaded the farther effects of his power. (Compare Luke v. 8. sect. xxxiv.)
16 And they also who were present, and had seen all that passed from the beginning, gave them a particular account of [it] and told them, more largely than the swine-herds had done, by what means the demoniac had been recovered; and also told them concerning the swine, how they had been so strangely destroyed by the apparent agency of those evil spirits by which the men had before been possessed.

Mat. VIII. 34 And behold, all the inhabitants of the whole city of Gadara[l], as the rumour increased, came out to meet Jesus; [and] indeed the whole multitude of the country of the Gadarenes round about flocked to see so wonderful a person: and when they saw him, they presently began, with all submission, to entreat him that he would please to depart from them

14 And they that fed the swine, [LUKE, when they saw what was done,] fled, and told [every thing] in the city, and in the country, [and what was befallen to the possessed of the devils.] And they went out to see what it was that was done. [MAT. VIII. 33. LUKE VIII. 34, 35.—]

15 And they come to Jesus, and see [the man] that was possessed with the devil, and had the Legion, [out of whom the devils were departed,] sitting [at the feet of Jesus,] and clothed, and in his right mind; and they were afraid. [LUKE VIII.—35.]

16 And they [also] that saw it, told them [by what means he that was possessed of the devils was healed,] and also concerning the swine. [LUKE VIII. 36.]

MAT. VIII. 34— And behold, the whole city came out to meet Jesus [LUKE, and the whole multitude of the country of the Gadarenes round about;] and when they saw him, they [began to pray him] that he would of possessions absurd and dangerous, and certainly opposes it with a very good design: but it is hard to say, how Christ could have encouraged that notion more than by his conduct on this occasion; and I doubt not but this extraordinary occurrence was permitted chiefly to prove the reality of these possessions, and will always be effectual for the conviction of every impartial enquirer.

[k] And were all suffocated, and perished in the waters.] The display of the malignity of these demons, in this instance, served to illustrate the value of every miracle of this kind, and to display the grace as well as power of Christ in every dispossession; in which view this circumstance appears to have been determined with great wisdom and goodness, though folly and perverseness have so strangely disguised it.

[l] The whole city of Gadara.] Josephus describes it as a very considerable place. It was by the righteous judgment of God, the first Jewish city that fell into the hands of the Romans in the fatal war under Vespasian, and suffered great extremities. Joseph. Bell. Jud. lib. iv. cap. 7. (al. v. 3.) § 3, 4. See Wits. de Decem Trib. cap. 8. § 2.

Lest

would depart [Luke, from them] out of their coasts; [Luke, for they were taken with great fear: and he went up into the ship, and returned back again.] [Mark V. 17. Luke VIII. 37.]

them out of their coasts; pretending that they, who had so great a number of Gentiles round them, were not fit to receive so great and holy a person: for they unreasonably looked on him as the author of the calamity which befel the swine, and were seized with great fear, lest he should send some farther judgments upon them, which they were sensible, the great irregularities of their behaviour well deserved [m]: and he, by no means willing to obtrude his presence on those who were so insensible as not to desire it, went into the ship again, and returned back to the western shore of the sea.

sect. lxx.

Mat. VIII. 34

Mark V. 18. And when he was come into the ship, he that had been possessed with the devil, [out of whom the devils were departed,] prayed him that he might be with him. [Luke VIII. 38.—]

And when he was come into the ship, the demoniac, out of whom the demons were now departed, fearing lest, after this (as it had been supposed of some, Mat. xii. 43—45, sect. lxiii.) he might be in danger of a relapse, and, dreading the terrors of his former condition, entreated him that he might be allowed to continue with him, to enjoy the farther benefit of his instructions.

Mark V. 18.

19 Howbeit, Jesus suffered him not, but [sent him away, saying, Return to thine own house, and] go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord [God] hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee. [Luke VIII.—38, 39.—]

Yet Jesus did not permit him to do it, but sent him away, saying, Return to thine own house, [and] go to thy friends and relations at home, and fail not particularly to tell them how great things the Lord God of Israel, whose messenger I am, has by his Almighty power performed for thee; and how graciously he has had compassion on thee in those deplorable circumstances which rendered thee a spectacle of horror to them, and all that saw thee.

19

20 And he departed, and began to publish [throughout the whole city, and] in Decapolis, how great things Jesus had done for him; and all men did marvel. [Luke VIII. —39.]

And upon this he went away, and began to publish through the whole city of Gadara, in which he dwelt, [and] in all the neighbouring region of Decapolis, what great and wonderful things Jesus had done for him: and all men were amazed at so stupendous a miracle.

20

Mat. IX. 1. And he entered into a ship, and passed over, and came into his own city.

And Jesus, having entered into the ship, departed thence as soon as the demoniac was dismissed: and, leaving those ungrateful people who had no greater value for his presence, he passed over the sea of Galilee, and shortly after came to his own city of Capernaum, where he had dwelt after his leaving Nazareth. (See Mat. iv. 13, p. 182.

Mat. IX. 1.

And

m Lest he should send some farther judgments upon them, &c.] Some have imagined, that they thought Christ a magician, and feared the effects of his art; but the cause assigned in the paraphrase seems to me much more decent, and, all things considered, more likely. They were probably a licentious sort of people, and might naturally, from what they saw, fear some farther chastisement from so holy a Prophet.

n Gladly

SECT lxx.

Mark V. 21.

And it came to pass, that when Jesus had passed over again in the ship to the other side of the lake, he was no sooner landed, but a great multitude gathered to him; [and] the people most gladly received him[n]; for they expected his speedy return, and were all impatiently waiting for him: and he continued some time on the sea-coast, teaching and working miracles.

MARK V. 21. And [it came to pass, that] when Jesus was passed over again by ship unto the other side, much people gathered unto him; [and the people gladly received him; for they were all waiting for him:] and he was nigh unto the sea. [LUKE VIII. 40.]

IMPROVEMENT.

Mark V. 3, 13.

FROM the remarkable story which is here before us, we must surely see the most apparent reason to adore the good providence of God, which restrains the malignant spirits of hell from spreading those desolations among beasts and men, which would otherwise quickly turn the earth into a wilderness, or rather into a chaos. But what matter of joy is it to reflect, that all their fury and rage 12 is under a Divine control, and that they cannot hurt even the meanest animal without permission from above!

The unhappy creature, whose state is here described in such lively colours, is an affecting emblem of those who are in a spiri-
4,5 tual sense under the power of Satan. Thus do they break asunder the bonds of reason and gratitude, and sometimes of authority and even of shame; and, thus driven on by the frenzy of their lusts and passions, they are so outrageous as to injure others and to wound themselves. Human attempts to moderate and reform them may 15 be vain; but let us remember that the Almighty Saviour has a voice, which can put this worst kind of demons to flight, and restore those that have been agitated by them to their right mind, so as so place them at his feet in holy composure, and in calm rational attention.

7 We see here a legion of devils trembling before the Son of God, confessing his superior power, howling as it were in their chains, and entreating the delay of their torments. And can human pride stand before him, and rebellious mortals triumph over him? Happy souls, that are listed under his banners! They shall share the victories of the great Captain of their salvation, and the God of peace shall bruise Satan under their feet shortly. (Rom. xvi. 20.)

17 But oh, how stupid and how wretched were these Gadarenes who preferred their swine to their souls, and besought him to depart out of their coasts, whose presence was their defence and their glory! May Divine grace preserve us from a temper like theirs! And may may those of us, who have ourselves experienced the restoring power of Christ and his gospel, be engaged to adhere to our great Benefactor and gratefully to devote those powers to his service, which he has rescued from dishonour, mischief, and ruin! SECT. LXX. Mark V. 18, 20.

[n] Gladly received him.] This Grotius has observed to be the meaning of the word (απεδεξαλο), and in this sense it may likewise be understood, Acts xv. 4, and xviii. 27.

SECT. LXXI.

Christ, being entertained at Matthew's house, justifies his conversing with publicans and sinners; and vindicates his disciples for not keeping so many fasts as the Pharisees and the disciples of John did. Mat. IX. 10—17. Mark II. 15—22. Luke V. 29, to the end.

LUKE V. 29.

AND Levi made him a great feast in his own house: [MARK, and it came to pass, that as Jesus sat at meat,] [behold,] a great company of publicans [and sinners came, and] [MARK, sat also together with Jesus and his disciples,] and others; [MAT. for there were many, and they followed him.] MAT. IX. 10. MARK II. 15.

LUKE V. 29.

NOW, after Jesus had continued for a while on the sea-shore (as was observed, Mark v. 21,) he entered into Capernaum: and Matthew, or Levi, who dwelt there, and who had some time since been called from his former office of a publican into the number of his stated attendants (see sect. xlv. p. 249), desirous at once to shew his respects to Christ, and to give his former companions and acquaintance an opportunity of enjoying his instructive conversation, made a great entertainment for him in his own house[a]: and it came to pass that, as Jesus sat at table there, behold, a great number of the publicans, and such as had the general character of sinners, being invited by Matthew, came, and sat also at the table with Jesus and his disciples; and several others at that time were present; for there were many of the character above described in Christ's train (compare Mat. xi. 12, and Luke xv. 1), and they followed him with great eagerness, being charmed with the condescension with which he SECT. LXXI. Luke V. 29.

a A great entertainment for him in his own house.] Nothing has perplexed the generality of harmonies more, and nothing has thrown the authors of them into greater inconsistency with the sacred writers, than their taking it for granted, that Matthew made this entertainment on the very day that Christ called him to attend upon him. The early harmonies of Tatian and Ammonius very justly separated them. (See Chemnit. Harm. cap. 43.) And, to the many convincing arguments which Mr. Jones has brought to prove, that they ought to be separated (which see in his Vindication of Matthew, p. 129—137), I will add, that it seems to me very evident, they were not both on the same day, from this consideration (so obvious, that I wonder none should have mentioned it): so many things happened before the calling of Matthew, that the day must be far advanced, and there could not have been time to prepare a great feast, and invite a number of guests, at least till supper (see sect. xlv); and so many things happened after the feast (see sect. lxxii) that we cannot suppose them to have been crowded into the little remainder of the evening after supper: on which account it is certain the feast was after the day of his calling, perhaps, (as it seems by the intermediate stories) some months after, when he had made up his accounts, and regularly passed his business into other hands, which, to be sure, from a principle of justice, as well as prudence, he would take care to do.

SECT. lxxi. he treated them, while many others shunned them with abhorrence.

Luke V. 30. But when the more reserved and stricter sort of people in that place, and in particular their scribes and Pharisees, who pretended to be most exact and scrupulous in their conduct, saw him thus openly converse and eat with publicans and sinners, they were offended, and murmured at his disciples on that account, saying, Why do you, who should be examples to others, eat and drink in such scandalous company as this? [and] especially, how is it, that your Master, who sets up for such an extraordinary Prophet, will allow himself to do it? for, while our traditions teach even the students, and much more the teachers of the law, to avoid all commerce with such polluted and infamous persons, you see that he publicly eats and drinks with a considerable number of publicans and sinners, as if there were no scandal in being accounted their friend and companion.

30 But [when] their scribes and Pharisees [MARK, saw him eat with publicans and sinners, they] murmured against his disciples, saying, Why do ye eat and drink, [MARK, and how is it, that [your Master] eateth and drinketh] with publicans and sinners? [MAT. IX. 11. MARK II. 15.

Mark II. 17. And Jesus, having heard that they were so offended at [it,] answered them, saying, They that are in perfect health have no need of the converse and advice of the physician, but those that are sick; and therefore, out of compassion to their need of him, he visits and converses with them, though it cannot otherwise be agreeable to him to do it: and I act on the same principles: for I am not come to call the righteous, as you arrogantly imagine yourselves to be, but such poor sinners as these, to repentance and salvation.

MARK II. 17. When Jesus heard it, he [LUKE, answering] saith unto them, They that are whole, have no need of the physician, but they that are sick: I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance. [MAT. IX. 12,—13, LUKE V. 31, 32.]

Mat. IX. 13. But, if you are offended at it, you may go your way, and would do well to set yourselves to learn the meaning of that instructive [scripture,] (Hos. vi. 6.) which I cited on a former occasion (see Mat. xii. 7, p. 270), and which you Pharisees are so ready to forget, "I require mercy, and not sacrifice." For, had you understood this saying, you would have seen that a ceremonial institution of Divine authority, and much more a mere human tradition, is to give way to the great duties of humanity and charity, even where men's bodies, and much more where their souls are concerned.

MAT. IX. 13.—But go ye, and learn what that meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice.

Mark II. 18. Another occurrence which happened at the same time, and bore some resemblance to the former, was this, The disciples of John the Baptist, who had himself lived so austere a life, and was now in a calamitous state of confinement, as well as the disciples of the Pharisees, used to fast often; and the latter particularly twice a week; (compare

MARK II. 18. And the disciples of John, and of the Pharisees, used to fast: and [the disciples of John] come and say unto him, Why do [we] the disciples of John, and [LUKE, likewise the disciples] of of the Pharisees fast often, and make prayers,] but thy disciples fast not, and drink?] [MAT. IX. 14, LUKE V. 33.

pare Luke xviii. 12, sect. cxxix). Now, seeing Jesus at a publican's table on a festival occasion, surrounded with so many of his stated followers, some of the disciples of John come and say unto him, Whence is it that we the disciples of John, and also those of the Pharisees, have frequently our days of solemn devotion, in which we fast, and make many prayers and supplications to God for ourselves and the people? whereas thy disciples fast not at all, that we can perceive; but, on the contrary, eat and drink freely, though thou professest a righteousness superior to that of the scribes and Pharisees. (Mat. v. 20, sect. xxxviii.)

SECT. LXXI.

Mark II. 18.

19 And Jesus said unto them, Can the children of the bride-chamber [mourn and] fast, while the bridegroom is with them? As long as they have the bridegroom with them, they cannot fast. [MAT. IX. 15. —LUKE V. 34.]

And Jesus said unto them, Can the children of the bride-chamber, who are invited to attend the nuptial ceremony, with any decency mourn [and] fast, while the bridegroom is yet continuing with them? As long as they have the pleasure of the presence and company of the bridegroom among them, they cannot reasonably be expected to fast, and every one would then account it to be out of season. Now my presence and converse renders this a kind of festival to my disciples: for as John taught you but a little before his confinement, I am the great Bridegroom of my church[b]; you cannot therefore in reason expect I should command them to fast now, or that they should do it without such a command. 19

20 But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them, and then shall they fast in those days. [MAT. IX. —15, LUKE V. 35.]

But, I assure you, the days will quickly come, when, as your master is separated from you, so even I, the bridegroom, shall be taken away from them; and then they, must expect to undergo a great deal of hardship, and particularly shall be obliged frequently to fast in those days; as those whom I have mentioned, might do, if their festival was interrupted by the removal of their beloved friend, whose joys they were sharing[c]. (Compare 1 Cor. iv. 11; 2 Cor. xi. 27.) 20

LUKE V. 36. And he spake also a parable unto them, No man putteth

Nor do I now think fit to lay such rigorous commands upon them, because prudence will require me at present to accommodate their trials to their strength. And, farther to illustrate this, Luke V. 36.

b I am the great bridegroom of my church.] Some have supposed there is, in this similitude which Christ has used, a reference to the book of Canticles; and it is possible there may. See Carpzov. Defence of the Hebrew Bible, p. 220, 221.) There is no doubt a reference to what John had lately said to his disciples so expressly on that head. John iii. 29, p. 153.

c If their festival was interrupted, &c.] our Lord seems here, with a beautiful propriety seldom observed, to suppose some hostile invasion to happen during the time of a nuptial feast, in which the bridegroom should either be slain or taken prisoner, which would damp all the joy of his friends, and change the scene into lamentation, fasting, and mourning.

SECT. LXXI.

this, he spake also a parable, or proposed another similitude to them, saying, No man, when he is mending clothes, will of choice sew a piece of new cloth on an old garment [d]; but rather chooses what is a little worn: for otherwise it will be found that both the new, being stronger than the other, makes a rent in the edges of it when it comes to be stretched; and the piece that was [taken] out of the new, [and] put in to mend the former rent and fill it up, agrees not in colour and form with the old; and, being improperly put together, is of no service to the garment, [but] takes away more from the old than it adds to it; and thus the rent is increased and made worse than it was before.

Luke V. 36. putteth a piece [of new cloth unto an old garment;] if otherwise, then both the new maketh a rent, and the piece that was taken out of the new, [and put in to fill it up,] agreeth not with the old, [MARK] but taketh away from the old, and the rent is made worse.] [MAT. IX. 16. MARK II. 21.]

37 And again, on the same principles, no wise man puts new wine into old bottles, where the leather is weakened and almost worn out, (compare Josh. ix. 4, 13, and Psal. cxix. 83); for else, if he should, the fermentation of the new wine will soon burst the bottles, and so the wine 38 will be spilt, as well as the bottles destroyed: But new wine must be put into new bottles, and by this means both are preserved. Now, as in the ordinary affairs of life, common sense dictates a regard to the mutual agreement and disagreement of things, it is necessary that I should attend to them in my conduct towards my disciples; and, as they have not been inured to such severities as you and the Pharisees have long practised [e], I do not therefore choose immediately to impose them, lest otherwise, to the great detriment of the world, they should be discouraged from attending upon me.

37. And no man putteth new wine into old bottles; else the new wine will burst the bottles, and [MARK the wine] be spilled; and the bottles shall perish: [MAT. IX. 17.—MARK II. 22—]

38 But new wine must be put into new bottles; and both are preserved. [MAT. IX. 17. MARK II.—22.]

And you cannot surely blame me for this, when d New cloth on an old garment.] The proper meaning of the words ῥάκος ἀγνάφου, by which new cloth is here expressed in the original, is cloth that has not passed through the fuller's hands, and which is consequently much harsher than what has been often washed and worn; and therefore, yielding less than that, will tear away the edges to which it is sewed. This sense Albert has vindicated from exceptions not worth mentioning here. See Albert. Observ. p. 71—76.

e As you and the Pharisees have long practised.] That the Pharisees used to fast twice a week is plain from Luke xviii. 12; and, no doubt, their young people were trained up to it. But it may be objected, that John's disciples were not so trained up, and consequently might have answered, that the disciples of Christ might as well, and as soon as they, have been brought under such severities and restraints. But the truth is, it was not divinely required of the one or the other. The character and circumstances of John laid them under some engagements not common to Christ's disciples, as he intimates; and, considering where and how the Baptist appeared, it is very probable many of his stated disciples were Essenes, who (as it is well known) were a kind of hermit Jews, educated in great abstinence and more frequent fastings than any of the rest of them. See Prideaux's Connection, Part II. p. 358.) And if so, nothing could have been more convincing than this reasoning.

when you consider, how difficult it is to alter the ways of living, to which people have been accustomed, even in less things than these now in question. As for instance, though some may be fond of new wine, while it is yet fermenting in the vessel, yet those that have been used to drink another sort, will have no liking to it: and no man who has generally drunk good old [wine] that is well ripened and refined, will immediately choose to drink new; for he says, The old is better, as being both more pleasant and more wholesome. Judge then how fit it is that I should not oblige my disciples to a new course of severities at once, but gradually form their characters to what the honour of their future profession and the usefulness of their lives may require. SECT. LXXI. Luke V. 39.

39 No man also having drunk old wine, straightway desireth new: for he saith, The old is better.

IMPROVEMENT.

THERE is no reason to wonder that Matthew should gladly embrace so proper an opportunity of introducing other publicans and sinners into the presence of that condescending Saviour, from whom, though he once was numbered among them, he had received grace and the apostleship. Let us with pleasure observe how ready our blessed Lord was to receive them. Surely, whatever offence the proud Pharisees might take on such an occasion, Jesus will appear peculiarly amiable in such a circle as this. Compassionate Redeemer! thou didst, as the great Physician of souls, willingly converse with objects that must have been most hateful to thy pure and holy nature! May we, each of us, have a due sense of the malignity of sin, that fatal disease of the soul, that we may with a becoming temper apply to Christ for a cure! May we also, like him, be willing to condescend to the meanest and vilest, if it may be the means of winning them over to true religion and happiness! ever preferring mercy to sacrifice, and choosing rather to govern ourselves by the dictates of a benevolent heart than by the maxims of proud and censorious men. Luke V. 29. 30 31, 32 Mat. IX. 13.

Christ would not discourage his disciples by over-rigorous institutions: and it is unfit that his religion should be burthened with them. He suits the duties of his people to their circumstances, and kindly proportions their work to their strength, with a tender reward to their weakness, till by degrees they may be fitted for the more difficult and humbling services. From his example, and the whole genius of his gospel, let us learn to make all proper allowances to those about us, that we may teach them, and train them up as they are able to bear it; not crushing them under any unnecessary load, nor denying them any indulgence which true friendship will permit us to grant them; lest the good ways of God should be misrepresented, disgraced, and abandoned, through Luke V. 36—39.

SECT. LXXI. our imprudent, though well-meaning, severity: a caution to be peculiarly observed in our conduct towards young persons; and not to be forgotten with respect to those who, like the disciples here in question, are training up for the ministerial office.

SECT. LXXII.

Christ, having in the way cured a woman by the touch of his garment, raises the daughter of Jairus from the dead, and afterwards performs some other miracles. Mat. IX. 18—34. Mark V. 22, to the end. Luke VIII. 41, to the end.

MAT. IX. 18.—

SECT. LXXII. Mat. IX. 18. WHILE he was speaking these things to them in Matthew's house[a], behold a very remarkable circumstance happened, which opened the way to one of the most signal miracles which Christ ever performed: for, though it was an uncommon thing for persons in an elevated rank of life to pay any regard to him (see John vii. 48), there came a certain ruler of the synagogue in that city of Capernaum, whose name was Jairus: and when he was entered into the room where Jesus was, and saw him, he fell down at his feet with the profoundest humility, and worshipped him in the presence of all the company, and entreated him to come immediately to his house: For he had one only daughter, about twelve years old, and, having in the bloom of life been seized with a very dangerous distemper, she then lay, to all human appearance, at the very point of death. And he applied himself to Jesus with the utmost importunity, and earnestly entreated him, saying, My dear little daughter is in the last extremity, [or] is perhaps, as she was just expiring, when I left her, even now dead[b]; [I beseech

Luke VIII. 42.

Mark V. 23.

MAT. IX. 18.— WHILE he spake these things unto them, behold, there came a certain ruler [of the synagogue, Jairus by name; and when he saw him, he fell at his feet] and worshipped him; [LUKE, and besought him, that he would come into his house:] [MARK V. 22.—— LUKE VIII. 41.]

LUKE VIII. 42.— For he had one only daughter, about twelve years of age, and she lay a-dying.

MARK V. 23. And he besought him greatly, saying, My little daughter lieth at the point of death, [or is even now dead;] I pray a While he was speaking these things to them in Matthew's house.] These words fix the order of this section so plainly, that it is surprising Mr. Le Clerc should suppose that many events happened between the discourses recorded just above, and this application of Jairus to Christ, which St. Matthew so strongly connects. That critic is driven to the hard expedient of paraphrasing this clause thus: "While he discoursed with them on the same subject, which he had been upon, the beginning of the year;" which is extremely unnatural, and, so far as I can recollect, quite unexampled in any author ancient or modern. (See Le Clerc's Harmony. p. 197.) Had he thought of what is suggested above, sect. lxxi. note a, p. 371. to prove Matthew's feast did not immediately follow his calling, he would have seen this criticism as unnecessary as it is forced.

b Or is perhaps,—even now dead.] It is certain, from Mark's expression, εσχατως εχει, which is literally rendered, is in the last extremity, as well as from the message relating to her death, which both he and Luke afterwards mention, that the young lady was not dead when her father came out; and consequently that Matthew's phrase, αρτι ετελευτησεν (if not Luke's αυτη pray thee come and lay thine hands on her, that she may be healed, and she shall live. [Mat. IX.—18.]

Mat. IX. 19. And Jesus arose, and followed him, and so did his disciples. [Luke, But as he went,] [much people followed him, and thronged him.] Mark V. 24. Luke VIII.—42.]

Mark V. 25. And [behold] a certain woman [which was diseased with] an issue of blood twelve years, [Mat. IX. 20. Luke VIII. 43.]

26 And had suffered many things of many physicians, and had spent all [her living] that she had [upon them, neither could be healed of any;] and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse; [Luke VIII.—43.]

27 When she had heard of Jesus, came in the press behind, and touched [Luke, the border of] his garment: [Mat. IX. —20. Luke VIII. 44.—]

28 For she said [within seech thee] therefore, that thou wouldest be pleased to come, and lay thine hands on her, that she may recover; and I doubt not but, extreme as the case is, if thou wilt interpose in her behalf, she shall live. SECT. lxxii. Mark V. 23.

And Jesus arose and followed him, and [so did] his disciples. Now, as he was going to the ruler's house, much people followed him to see the event; and they pressed upon him in such a manner that he could not walk without some difficulty. Mat. IX. 19.

And behold, among those that were crowding about him, there was a certain poor unhappy woman who had been long afflicted with a grievous disorder, having laboured under a flux of blood for no less than twelve years: And she had 26 suffered a great deal from the many physicians she had consulted, by disagreeable medicines and uneasy restraints, as well as by the great expence she had been at in applying to them: for indeed she had wasted all her substance, and spent all that she had upon them[c]: but her distemper was so inveterate, that she could not be healed by any; and, on the whole, she was not at all the better for their prescriptions, but rather grew worse, and weaker than before; And, having heard 27 of Jesus, and the extraordinary cures he had wrought, being ashamed publicly to mention her case, she came in the crowd behind him, and touched the fringe which, according to the Divine commandment (Numb. xv. 38, and Deut. xxii. 12), he wore upon the border of his garment. For, as she knew that many had be- 28 fore Mark V. 25.

before

αὐτὴ ἀπεθνησκεν), is to be taken in this extent. She had been given over when her father left her, and actually was dead before he could return; and he might therefore, when he applied to Christ for his miraculous assistance, be ready to fear she was by this time dead, and might accordingly express himself in such a manner as to intimate his apprehension of it. Nor is it necessary, after all, that we should understand the phrase in Matthew as implying she was now actually dead; for ἀρτι does not only signify what is now come to pass but what is just at hand (as may be seen in Phavorinus); and so it may imply no more than that she was considered as just dead, and that there was no hope of her recovery but by a miracle.

c Spent all that she had upon them.] The ingenious Dr. Freind imagines that he discovers something remarkable in the difference of those seemingly synonymous terms which Mark and Luke make use of upon this occasion, and pleads that δαπανησασα, in the former, signifies to squander away; whereas προσαναλωσασα, in the latter, signifies a more gradual consumption of her stock, by taking a little at a time from it; (see Dr. Freind's History of Physic, p. 57.) But, with submission to so great a name, I am not satisfied of the justice of the remark, since, on the one hand, δαπαναω is used in a better sense, 2 Cor. xii. 15. (and δαπανη, in Luke xiv. 28, is the necessary expence of building as a prudent man would compute it); and, on the other hand, αναλισκω plainly signifies to destroy or consume, however that destruction or consumption be accomplished. (See Luke ix. 54, and 2 Thess. ii. 8.) Nor does it seem altogether certain that a readiness in speaking of others of the faculty is any sure diagnostic of a physician's writings.

d I shall

SECT. LXXII.

fore been healed by touching him (see Luke vi. 19. p. 283, she had such a firm persuasion of the virtue that was in him, and of his power to cure her, that she said within herself, If I may but touch any part of his clothes I shall be recovered.[d] And immediately on her having done it, the fountain of her blood that issued from her was at once staunched and dried up; and she felt such an unusual vigour and flow of spirits, that she plainly perceived in her body that she was healed of that wasting and dangerous distemper with which she had been chastised for so long a time[e].

Mark V. 28.

[within herself,] If I may touch but his clothes, I shall be whole. [MAT. IX. 21.]

29 And straightway the fountain of her blood was dried up; and she felt in her body that she was healed of that plague. [LUKE VIII. —44.]

30 And upon this she would have retired unobserved: but Jesus, who had secretly performed the cure by the concurring efficacy of his will, immediately knowing in himself that healing virtue was gone out of him, thought fit on this occasion to shew that it had not escaped his notice,[f] as well as to illustrate and commend the faith of the patient; and therefore he immediately turned himself about in the crowd, and, looking round him, said, Who is it that has just now touched my clothes? And all the rest that were near him denying it[g], Peter, and his disciples that were near him, said unto him, Sir,[h] Thou seest that the multitude are crowding around thee, and press thee on every side, and dost thou say, Who has touched me? One might rather ask, Who that has walked near thee has not done it? or which way is it possible, in such a crowd as this, to avoid

Luke VIII. 45.

30 And Jesus immediately knowing in himself, that virtue had gone out of him, turned him about in the press, and said. Who touched my clothes? LUKE VIII. 45.—]

LUKE VIII.—45. When all denied, Peter, and [his disciples] that were with him, said [unto him,] Master [thou seest] the multitude throng thee, and press thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me? [MARK V. 31.]

d I shall be recovered.] It is in the original σωθησομαι, I shall be saved; and there are many other places in which the word is used in the same sense; as to be sure it may with great propriety be applied to a rescue from any imminent danger or pressing calamity, especially in an extraordinary way. Compare Mark v. 23. vi. 56. Luke viii. 36. xvii. 19. xviii. 42. John xi. 12. and Acts iv. 9.

e Of that distemper with which she had been chastised, &c.] This being the plain meaning of μαστιγος here, I did not think it necessary to render it plague or scourge, as I have done in some other places.

f To shew that it had not escaped his notice.] And perhaps also to prevent a superstitious regard to any thing which might look like a relic of his, and from which weak people might, without any warrant, have expected benefit.

g All denying it.] The phrase not necessarily implying that the woman herself denied it, it would be unjust to suppose she was base or foolish enough immediately to deny what she had done; especially as the next moment we find her owning it at large with all possible candour.

h Peter, and his disciples—said unto him, Sir.] Our English word Master, which we indifferently apply to almost any man to whom we speak, whether learned or unlearned, and which modern usage in common converse generally appropriates to inferiors, does by no means answer either to the Greek διδασκαλε, which signifies teacher, and would be most literally rendered doctor (a word just of the same import in its original language,) or to επιστατα, the word here used, which denotes at least a presiding authority. I have therefore here chose to render it Sir; and should think διδασκαλε might as well be rendered Rabbi, as by any other word I can recollect. It is no wonder that titles of honour and respect cannot be perfectly translated from one language into another, considering the diversity of ranks and of ceremonies in different nations.

46 And Jesus said, Somebody hath touched me; for I perceive that virtue is gone out of me.

avoid it? And Jesus said, I am well aware that somebody here has touched me, not merely by accident, but on some important design: for I perceive that a healing virtue and efficacy is gone out of me, and am not ignorant of the particulars of the cure it has produced. SECT. lxxii. Luke VIII. 46.

MARK V. 32. And he looked round about to see her that had done this thing.

LUKE VIII. 47. And when the woman saw that she was not hid, she [knowing what was done in her,] came [fearing and] trembling, and falling down before him, she [told him all the truth, and] declared unto him before all the people, for what cause she had touched him, and how she was healed immediately. [MARK V. 33.]

And upon this he looked round about again, to see her who had done this; and directed his eye towards her with some particular regard. And when the woman saw that she was not concealed from his all-penetrating view, knowing (as we before observed) what a marvellous work was wrought in her, she came fearing and trembling, lest he shoul I be displeased with this surreptitious method she had taken; and falling down before him, she candidly told him all the truth; [and] declared to him before all the people, without any reserve, for what reason she had thus touched him, and how she had been immediately healed by that touch, of the grievous distemper she had been so many years afflicted with, which no force of medicines could remove or abate. Mark V. 32. Luke VIII. 47.

MAT. IX. 22. But Jesus turned him about, and when he saw her, he said [unto her,] Daughter, be of good comfort; thy faith hath made thee whole; [go in peace, and be whole of thy plague.] And the woman was made whole from that hour. [MARK V. 34. LUKE VIII. 48.]

But Jesus having thus turned about and seen her, instead of reproving her with the severity she expected, said to her, in a most gentle and condescending manner, Daughter, take courage, and be comforted, for I am not offended with thee: I know the sincerity of thy faith, in the regard which thou hast shewn to me, though mingled with some infirmity; and it has made thee well, and fitted thee for a cure thou couldest not otherwise have received: and therefore go home in peace and cheerfulness; for I dismiss thee with my blessing (see note l on Luke vii. 50, p. 317,) and assure thee thou shalt continue to be free from any return of thy distemper. And accordingly the woman was perfectly well from that hour, and the malady never returned upon her as long as she lived. Mat. IX. 22.

MARK V. 35. While he yet spake, there came from the ruler of the synagogue's house, certain which said [to him,] Thy daughter is dead: Why troublest thou the Master any further? [trouble him not.] [LUKE VIII. 49.]

In the mean time, while he was yet speaking to the woman, [some] messengers came from [the house of] Jairus, the ruler of the synagogue, whom we mentioned above: and they said unto him, Thy daughter, in whose behalf thou art applying to Jesus, is now actually dead, and consequently beyond the reach of prayer and of help: why therefore dost thou trouble the great Master in our Israel to come any farther? Do not trouble him Mark V. 35.

SECT. lxxii.

hint[i] to come into the house of mourning, where he can only renew their sorrows by the lateness of his arrival there. But as soon as Jesus heard

Mark V. 36. the word which was spoken by these messengers in which they related this melancholy news, he says to the afflicted ruler of the synagogue, Be not discouraged by these mournful tidings; and notwithstanding they have brought thee such a sad account, be not afraid, as if there were no hope; only believe in the Divine power and goodness operating by me, and I will answer for it, that desperate as thy daughter's case may now appear to a human eye, she shall still be recovered.

36 As soon as Jesus heard the word that was spoken, he saith unto the ruler of the synagogue, Be not afraid, only believe, [and she shall be made whole.] [LUKE VIII. 50.]

Luke VIII 51. And when he came to enter into the ruler's house, he permitted none of the company to follow him in, except his three most intimate friends, Peter, and James, and John the brother of James, whom he was pleased to distinguish on this, as he did afterwards on other occasions; and these with the father and mother of the deceased maiden were the only persons whom he permitted to be eye-witnesses of the miracles he was about to

52 perform. And, as she was an only daughter, all their relations and friends who were present wept bitterly, and lamented her: and, as soon as Jesus was entered, he saw the tumult and the crowd of people who wept and cried out aloud[k]; and there were also the flute-players, as usual on such occasions[l], making a mournful noise with their

LUKE VIII. 51. And when he came into the [ruler's] house, he suffered no man [MARK to follow him, save Peter, and James and John the brother of James,] and the father and the mother of the maiden. [MAT. IX. 23.—MARK V. 37, 38.—]

52 And all wept and bewailed her: [MARK and he seeth the tumult, [and the people] that wept and wailed greatly,] [and the minstrels making a noise.] [MAT. IX. —23. MARK V.—38.]

i Why dost thou trouble the Master any farther? Do not trouble him.] As several persons came, one might say, Why dost thou trouble him? as Mark has it; and another, as Luke, Do not trouble him. I am sensible the mention of both together is no ornament to the story: and perhaps it might have been as agreeable to our taste and manner had both been expressed by saying, Messengers came, who would have persuaded him not to have given Jesus the trouble of coming. But I endeavour in this work to give the reader as exact a view as possible of the (very consistent) varieties with which different evangelists record the same facts; and it seems an end considerable enough to excuse some little inelegancies of style which the execution of such a design must occasion. This remark is to be applied to many preceding and following passages.

k Cried out aloud.] A late version renders αλαλαζοντας, howling; which is indeed a sense that the original will bear, yet it is not always to be so translated: (see 1 Cor. xiii. 1. Gr.) And as the word howling is seldom used among us but in the case of brutes, or where great contempt is designed, I rather chose to drop a little of the emphasis of the word, than to shock a compassionate reader by so harsh an expression. To lift up the voice in weeping was common in the eastern countries: see Gen. xxi. 16. Jud. ii. 4. and 1 Sam. xxx. 4.

l The flute players, as usual on such occasions.] It is well known that musical instruments were used by the Jews as well as the heathens in their lamentations for the dead, to soothe the melancholy of surviving friends by soft and solemn notes. There were persons who made it their business to perform this office, and to sing to their music. (See Jer. ix. 17. xlviii. 36. 2 Chron. xxxv. 25. and the notes of Drusius and Wolfius on this place.) Many have observed that flutes were used especially on the death of children, and larger and louder instruments on the death of the adult.

m With their musical instruments, to soothe the grief of the afflicted family. And when he was come in to the house, he says to them, Retire, and make way that I may see her; [and] do not weep in this abandoned and inconsolable manner: for why do you lament and make a noise? and where is the need of all this hurry and disturbance? The damsel, whose departure you so bitterly bewail as if her loss was irretrievable, is not finally dead, but is fallen asleep; and if you have a little patience you shall see her awakened: (by which he intimated that this death should be but like a transient sleep; see John xi. 11, 13, sect. cxxxix.) And they, not understanding his true meaning, were so rude that they derided him, as if the assertion had been altogether wild and ridiculous, well knowing that she was really and certainly dead. But he, too wise to enter into a clamorous debate with them, desired them to withdraw; and when he had put them all out of the way, he takes the father and mother of the deceased maiden, and those three disciples that were with him, and enters in to the chamber where the damsel lay dead. And, approaching the bed on which the corpse was laid out, he took hold of her hand; and, to express his power over death itself, called with a loud voice, saying to her, (as if she had indeed been only asleep,) Talitha cumi; which Syriac expression, being translated into our language, signifies, Maiden, (I say unto thee) rise up. And he had no sooner spoke these words, but presently her spirit came back again to animate the body which it had deserted, and she was so perfectly recovered that she arose and walked, which she was well able to do, for she was twelve years old. And, as the life to which she was restored was not to be supported by a continued miracle, but must have food to nourish it in a natural way, he ordered that something should be given her to eat; which on account of her late illness, she had not been able to do for some time.

And her parents, and they [all] who were present, were exceedingly astonished, as well as filled with joy and gratitude: but [Jesus] behaved with his usual modesty[m], and strictly charged them,

SECT. LXXII.

Mark. V. 39.

40

41

42

43

Luke VIII. 56.

MARK V. 39. And when he was come in, he saith unto them, [Give place, and] [LUKE, weep not;] Why make ye this ado, and weep? the damsel is not dead, but sleepeth. [MAT. IX. 24. LUKE VIII. —52.

40 And they laughed him to scorn, [LUKE knowing that she was dead] But when he had put them all out, he taketh the father and the mother of the damsel, and them that were with him, and entereth in where the damsel was lying.—[MAT. IX.—24, 25. —LUKE VIII. 53, 54.—]

41 And he took [her by the hand, and called, saying] unto her, Talitha cumi, which is, being interpreted, Damsel, (I say unto thee,) arise. [LUKE VIII.—54.]

42—And straightway [LUKE, her spirit came again, and she] arose, and walked; for she was of the age of twelve years. [MAT. IX.—25. LUKE VIII. 55.—]

—43 And [he] commanded that something should be given her to eat. [LUKE VIII.—55.]

LUKE VIII. 56. And her parents [and they all were astonished with a great astonishment:] but

[m] With his usual modesty.] It is well worth the reader's observation, with what perfect decorum our Lord conducted himself on this occasion; and how entirely he appears them, that they should tell no man the particulars of what was done, nor make it their business to blaze abroad an event which would of itself become more public than he would have desired. And indeed it soon did so; for such numbers knew that she was really dead, and saw her alive again, that the fame of it, as of a most illustrious and extraordinary miracle, went abroad into all that country; and, being made the common subject of discourse, greatly increased the reputation he had before acquired by so long a series of wonders that he had wrought among them.

SECT. lxxii.

but he charged them [straitly] that they should tell no man what was done. [MARK V. 42, 43.—]

Luke VIII. 56. Mat. IX. 26.

MAT. IX. 26. And the fame hereof went abroad into all that land.

27 And as Jesus passed on from thence out of the ruler's house, Two blind men, who had heard of his being there, and waited for his coming out, followed him, as he went through the street, crying out, with great importunity, and saying, O thou Son of David, have compassion on us in the miserable darkness that distresses us, and restore to us that precious sight which we have lost.

27 And when Jesus departed thence, two blind men followed him, crying, and saying, Thou son of David, have mercy on us.

28 And he took no notice of them as he walked on; but when he was come into the house to which he was going, the two blind men, by his permission, came unto him: and Jesus says to them, Do you indeed seriously believe that I am able to do this? They say unto him, Yes, Lord, we have not the least doubt of it. Then he touched their eyes, and said, Since you have that persuasion, be it unto you according to the sincerity of your faith.

28 And when he was come into the house, the blind men came to him: and Jesus saith unto them, Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord.

29 Then touched he their eyes, saying, According to your faith, be it unto you.

30 And immediately they both found that their eyes were opened, and they saw strongly and distinctly. And Jesus gave them a strict charge, that they should not report it publicly abroad, and should tell no man[n] of the cure they had received. But they were so transported at what he had done for them, that when they were gone out, they were not able to refrain from publishing the miracle, but immediately began to spread his fame over all that country.

30 And their eyes were opened; and Jesus straitly charged them, saying, See that no man know it.

31 But they, when they were departed, spread abroad his fame in all that country.

32 And when he had thus cured the two blind men, just as they went out of the house where Jesus

32 As they went out, behold, they brought appears master of himself, and superior to any views of human applause. Dr. Lardner has illustrated this with a just and lively spirit of criticism. See his Answer to Woolston, p. 89.

[n] Jesus gave them a strict charge, that they should tell no man.] Our version is more literal, but the sense is perfectly the same. I intended the variation only as a specimen of several of the like kind, which I think might be made in a manner which would better suit the genius of our language, though (perhaps through an excess of tenderness) I have not often ventured to take even such little liberties as these. See Mr. Pope's note on Homer's Iliad, Vol. II. Book vi. ver. 665.

[o] It brought to him a dumb man, possessed with a devil.

33 And when the devil was cast out, the dumb spake: and the multitudes marvelled, saying, It was never so seen in Israel.

34 But the Pharisees said, He casteth out the devils through the prince of the devils.

Jesus was, behold, they brought to him a dumb person, who had been for some time deprived of his speech by being possessed with a demon. And when by the victorious word of Jesus the demon was expelled, the man, who had so long been dumb, spake readily and distinctly; and the multitudes were astonished, saying, It was never seen so, even in Israel itself[o], though it be a people among whom God has wrought such unparalleled wonders. But the Pharisees continued their senseless and blasphemous charge against him as a magician; and, not being able to deny facts that were so notorious, in order to prevent the effect which they might have upon the people, they said, He certainly casts out these inferior demons by a wicked confederacy with Beelzebub himself, the prince of the demons[p], whose interest gains far more than it loses by dispossessions wrought by such a hand.

SECT. lxxii.

Mat. IX. 33.

34

IMPROVEMENT.

We have here a scene of complicated wonders, worthy to be had in everlasting remembrance. Any single story of this kind might justly move our admiration; but when we are reading the life of Christ, such a constellation of miracles rises, that the number renders us less sensible of the lustre and glory of each.

We may observe in the story of the distempered woman a mixture of weakness and of faith. She could not reasonably think to steal a cure, without the knowledge of him by whom it was wrought; or imagine a charm in the garment that Christ wore, which could produce so glorious an effect, independent of his agency and will. Yet she acted as if she had thought thus; and a compassionate Redeemer commended her faith, and excused her infirmity. Such candour should we exercise towards those in whom we find any thing truly valuable; not despising the day of small things, but ready to encourage and support the weak, and to commend whatever good we may discover in them.

Mark V. 25, & seq.

Ver. 28

34

We have already beheld Christ frequently giving sight to the blind, and casting out evil spirits: but we have here a second instance of his power over death, and behold one under its dominion hearing

Luke VIII. 51 & seq.

o It was never seen so, even in Israel itself.] This reflection was perfectly just; for no one of the prophets that we read of in the Old Testament, appears to have wrought so many beneficial miracles in his whole life, as our Lord did in this one afternoon.

p He casts out demons by the prince of the demons.] Our Lord had in an unanswerable manner confuted this base calumny before: (see sect. lxi. p. 320, & seq.) Yet they had the assurance to advance it again, without any regard to that confutation. Such were the infidels of those days, as well as of these.

SECT. lxxii. ing the voice of the Son of God! In how majestic, and yet in how gentle a manner, does he address himself to this admirable work!

54 Damsel, I say unto thee, Arise. And immediately she heard and obeyed. Thus shall he, with equal ease, call forth myriads of his saints, who now seem perished in the dust: and it may be said with

52 regard to them also, in reference to that day, They are not dead,

55 but sleep. The maiden, of whom we here read, arose only to a dying life; a life which needed the support of food, and was in no respect more noble or more secure than that of other mortals: but we look for a better resurrection, in which all the infirmities of the body shall be left behind in the grave; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying. (Rev. xxi. 4.)

Mark V. 39 In expectation of this, let us restrain immoderate sorrow when our pious friends are taken away: let us not make too much ado on the occasion, nor allow ourselves to be thrown into a tumult of passion, even when our children are stretched on the bed of death;

36 but believing in Christ, and governing ourselves by his precepts and maxims, let us in humble resignation, and submissive, though mournful silence, wait the issues of his providence and grace; since he knows how, as in this instance, to over-rule the calamities of our families to the good of our souls, and even to strengthen our faith by those exercises, which might seem most likely to overthrow it.

SECT. LXXIII.

Christ renews his visit to Nazareth, where he is again rejected by the inhabitants; and thence takes a circuit through the neighbouring country. Mat. XIII. 54. to the end. IX. 35. to the end. Mark VI. 1—6.

MARK VI. 1.

SECT. lxxiii. AND Jesus, when he went out from thence[a], and was departed from Capernaum, where Mark VI. 1. he had raised the daughter of Jairus and performed the other miracles which have just been mentioned, came again into his own country and town of Nazareth, and there renewed the gracious proclamations which they had several months before so ungratefully rejected; and his disciples, as usual, followed him thither.

2 And when the sabbath was come, he began to teach in the synagogue, as he had formerly done, though

MARK VI. 1.

AND he went out from thence, and came into his own country, and his disciples follow him. [MAT. XIII. 54.—]

2 And when the sabbath-day was come, he began to teach in the

[a] And he went out from thence.] These words of Mark do plainly shew, that this visit to Nazareth is to be placed here: I say, to Nazareth, that being called his own country, by way of distinction from the rest of Galilee, and particularly from Capernaum, whence he now went out. See Luke iv. 23, p. 179.

b And the synagogue: and many hearing him, were astonished, saying, From whence hath this man [this wisdom, and these mighty works?] and what wisdom is this, which is given unto him, that even such mighty works are wrought by his hands? [MAT. XIII.—54.]

though they had then attempted in a tumultuous manner to destroy him on the same occasion: (sect. xxxii. p. 180.) And many of his townsmen hearing him, were struck with amazement and said, as several had done before[b], From whence hath this man, whose birth and education we know, this wisdom which he manifests in these excellent discourses, and the power of performing these mighty works? And what supernatural wisdom is this which is given to him, that even such amazing miracles as these are done by his hands? Is not this Jesus, the man who but a while ago wrought among us as a carpenter[c], and was the son of Joseph the carpenter? And is not his mother, who is called Mary, still living? And [are not] our neighbours, James and Joses, and Simon and Judas, whom we all know and daily converse with. his brethren or near kinsmen[d]? And are not all his sisters, or kinswomen, here at Nazareth with us? From whence then hath this man all these extraordinary things[e] which furnish him for this illustrious character, which he assumes superior to that of the greatest teachers and princes of our nation? And they were offended in him, and stumbled at the poverty of his education and family; so that they paid very little regard to what he preached.

SECT. lxxiii.

Mark VI. 2.

3

57

But Jesus said unto them, This is indeed a most unreasonable treatment that I meet with from you: but it is obvious, even to a proverb, That a prophet is no where less esteemed than in his own country, and among his nearest relations, even in his own family[f]; who form their judgment of him

3—Is not this the carpenter? [the carpenter's son? Is not his mother called Mary? and his brethren, James and Joses, and Simon, and Judas?] [MAT. XIII. 55.]

MAT. XIII. 56. And his sisters, are they not all [here] with us? Whence then hath this man all these things? [MARK VI.—3.—]

57——And they were offended in him. [MARK VI,—3.]

Mat. XIII. 56.

MARK VI. 4. But Jesus said unto them, A prophet is not without honour, but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house. MAT. XIII.—57.

Mark VI. 4.

b And said, as several had done before.] Luke plainly asserts, that visit to Nazareth which he mentions, to have been before many occurrences which Mark tells us happened before this. It is evident therefore they are different visits; nor is there any difficulty in supposing, that some now present, who perhaps had not heard him before, might repeat so natural a reflection as this. Compare Luke iv. 22, p. 178.

c Wrought among us as a carpenter.] The Jews tell us, he made rakes and yokes. Their canons required, that all parents should teach their children some trade; and probably the poverty of the family engaged Christ, while he was at home with his parents, to work at his. See Grotius on Mat. xiii. 55.

d His brethren or near kinsmen.] Whether they were the children of Joseph by a former marriage, or the children of some brother or sister of Joseph or Mary, is not material. Every one knows, that it was common with the Jews to use the name of brethren in a larger sense, and to apply it to cousins and near kinsmen, as well as those that were brethren in the proper sense of the word.

e Whence hath this man all these extraordinary things?] This, like many other things which have since been objected against the gospel of Christ, is as much the language of stupidity as of infidelity; for the meanness of Christ's education was a demonstration that his teaching in so excellent a manner must be the effect of some extraordinary divine influence on his mind.

f A prophet is no where less esteemed, &c.] This is plainly the sense of the words (though him by the mean appearance which they remember he made formerly in private life, and are regardless therefore of the excellence of his doctrine, and of the plainest evidences of his Divine authority and mission.

SECT. LXXIII.

Mark VI. 4.

5 And this was verified in their conduct to him: for notwithstanding all that he had done in other places, they were so strongly prejudiced against him by the meanness of his outward circumstances, that they were openly regardless of the favour of his presence, and would not come to him for help; for which reason he could not there have any opportunity to exercise his power, or to do any miracle of note [g], excepting only that he laid his hands upon a few sick people, and cured them; [but] he did not perform many mighty works among them, on account of their unbelief.

5 And he could there do no mighty work, save that he laid his hands upon a few sick folk, and healed them; [but did not many mighty works, because of their unbelief.] [MAT. XIII. 58.]

6 And he wondered at the continuance of their infidelity, especially considering the many additional evidences they had received of his Divine power in his late signal operations.

6—And he marvelled because of their unbelief.

Mat. IX. 35.

And upon this Jesus left them [h], and departing from Nazareth went round about to all the neighbouring cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the good news of the kingdom which God was about to erect; and wherever he came, he gave abundant testimonials of the truth of his doctrine, by healing every disease, and every malady among the people.

MAT. IX. 35. And Jesus went [round] about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness, and every disease among the people. [MARK VI. 6.]

36 And beholding the multitudes which flocked around him, he was moved with tender compassion for them, because they were faint with the fatigue of frequent journeyings, and exposed to continual

36 But when he saw the multitude, he was moved with compassion

(though our translation is more literal:) for a prophet may be, and often is, affronted at a distance from home; as Christ himself found by frequent experience. (Compare John iv. 44. p. 173, and Luke iv. 24, p. 179.)—I have rendered the last words, και εν τη οικια αυτου, even in his own family; as και often has such a signification, and here seems most forcible if it be so interpreted.

g He could not there do any miracle.] We are not to understand these words so strictly, as if the power of Christ was here disarmed; but only, that as they brought but few sick people to him for a cure, he did not judge it convenient to obtrude his miracles upon them, and so could not honourably and properly perform them. On the same principle it is, that faith in some cases, though not in all, is made the condition of receiving a cure: (compare Mark ix. 23; Mat. ix. 28; and Acts xiv. 9.) And Christ saw it proper to make it so here; as he well might, considering what they must undoubtedly have heard of him from other places, and what they had confessed themselves but just before, of mighty works being wrought by his hands: which shews indeed, that their unbelief did not so much consist in a doubt of his miraculous power, as of his Divine mission, which to any unprejudiced person's mind that power so abundantly proved. In this view therefore it is hard to say, how he could with honour and decency have lavished away his favours on so unworthy a people.

h Jesus left them.] So far as we can learn from the gospel history, he never after this returned any more to Nazareth.

i Faint

sion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd.

37 Then saith he unto his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few:

38 Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest.

continual danger [i], as sheep that had no shepherd to feed them with spiritual food, or to watch for the safety and edification of their souls. Then, as he intended immediately after this to send out his twelve apostles, he says to them and his other disciples, to quicken their devotion and zeal, The harvest of souls to be gathered in is indeed great, but the faithful labourers who assist in it are few: And therefore let me urge you to make your importunate supplications to the great Lord and Master of the harvest, that he would by the secret but powerful energy of his spirit on men's hearts, conquer their natural disinclination to this excellent work, and so thrust forth a sufficient number of active indefatigable labourers into his harvest [k], by whom it may successfully be carried on, to his own greater glory, and the edification and salvation of souls.

SECT. LXXIII.

Mat. IX. 37.

38

IMPROVEMENT.

SINCE the blessed Jesus vouchsafed to renew his visit to Nazareth, where they had attempted to murder him on his first preaching among them, let us not be weary of well-doing, nor refuse to renew our attempts on the most obstinate sinners, where the interests of their immortal souls are concerned.

Mark VI. 1.

But though they were astonished at his wisdom, and could not but allow the mighty works that he had wrought; yet these ungrateful creatures went on to reject him, and in so doing were condemned out of their own mouth: nor can we be at any loss for instances of those who in later ages have fallen under the like condemnation.

2

He is spoken of as the carpenter; which intimates that he once wrought at that mean employment. What amazing condescension was this in the Son of God, and the Heir of all things, by whom also the worlds were made! (Heb. i. 2.) Yet surely while the hands of Christ were employed in these daily labours, his soul was rising in holy

3

[i] Faint and exposed.] Though the learned Elsner has taken a great deal of pains to prove in his note on this text, (Observ. Vol. I. p. 49, 50) that ἐκλελυμένοι signifies scattered, or wandering; yet I still chuse to render it, they were faint; which sense of the word is sufficiently vindicated by Wolfius, (in loc.) and Albert, (Observ. p. 76, 77), and is established by the use of it in other places of the New Testament. Compare Mat. xv. 32; Mark viii. 3; Gal. vi. 9; and Heb. xii. 3, 5.—But I think Elsner has advanced enough to justify the rendering of ἐρριμμένοι, exposed to every invading danger, as sheep are when thrown up or abandoned by their shepherd.

[k] Thrust forth labourers into his harvest.] The word ἐκβαλη so plainly imports this, that I am sorry I retained our less emphatical translation in the first edition. Whoever considers the immense difficulties and oppositions with which every minister of Christ's kingdom was sure to encounter in those early days of it, will see the necessity of some unusual energy and impulse on the mind to lead any to undertake it.

SECT. LXXIII.

holy contemplations and devout affections. So may we intermingle pious meditations with our secular cares, and have our conversation in heaven, while our dwelling is on earth!

Mark VI. 5. How much did these Nazarenes lose by their obstinate prejudices against Jesus! How many diseased bodies might have been cured, how many lost souls might have been recovered and saved, had they given him a better reception! May Divine Grace deliver us from that unbelief, which does as it were disarm Christ himself, and render him a savour of death, rather than of life, to our souls!

Mat. IX. 35 Still he continued his gracious labours, and, when rejected in one city, went and preached in another; still surrounded with a crowd of admirers, whom he viewed with tender regard. Let his 36 ministers, learn of him, tenderly to pity those, who are faint and exposed to danger, and are as sheep having no shepherd. The extreme necessities of his churches in many places are but too appa-
37 rent: let us earnestly pray, that God would behold them with compassion; that he would graciously provide for their instruction, 38 and would thrust forth such labourers among them as may be diligent and faithful in their work, and prove the happy instruments of gathering in fruit to everlasting life. (John iv. 36.)

SECT. LXXIV.

Our Lord sends forth his apostles with a commission, and gives them instructions to preach the gospel. Mat. X. 1—15. Mark VI. 7—11. Luke IX. 1—5.

MAT. X. 1.

SECT. LXXIV. AND Jesus having called his twelve disciples together[a], whom (it has been observed before, Luke vi. 13, p. 280.) he had chosen some time since to be his constant followers and attendants, and who were named apostles from their mission; he endowed them with the gift of working miracles, and gave them power and authority over all kinds of demons, [or] unclean spirits, to cast them out of those unhappy persons whom they had possessed, and to cure every distemper, and every malady, how malignant and dangerous soever.

Mat. X. 1.

2 Now the names of the twelve apostles are these: The first of them, who was one of the most early followers

MAT. X. 1.

AND when he had called [LUKE, together] unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power [LUKE, and authority over all devils or] unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness, and all manner of disease. [MARK VI. 7. —LUKE IX. 1.]

2 Now the names of the twelve apostles are these: The first, Simon,

[a] Having called his twelve disciples together.] There can be no room to doubt that this is the proper place of the mission of the apostles, considering its connection with the preceding stories in all the evangelists that mention it.

[b] The

Simon, who is called Peter, and Andrew his brother; James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother; followers of Christ, and the first that was called to a stated attendance upon him (p. 184), and whose remarkable zeal and piety rendered him a kind of leader among them, was Simon, who is also called Peter[b], as Christ had honoured him with that sirname, (see John i. 42, p. 125): and Andrew his brother, who was called the same day with him: James [the son] of Zebedee the fisherman, and John his brother, that beloved disciple; who were also called at the same time with the two former, as they were fishing at the sea of Galilee, (p. 185): Philip of Bethsaida, and Bartholomew: Thomas called Didymus; and Matthew, who had been the publican: James [the son] of Alpheus; and Lebbeus, whose sirname was Thaddeus, and who was also called Judas or Jude, the brother of James: Simon the Canaanite, a native of Cana[c]; and Judas Iscariot, or a man of Carioth, that wicked and miserable creature, who afterwards even betrayed him, and then laid violent hands on himself.

SECT. lxxiv.

Mat. X. 2.

3 Philip, and Bartholomew; Thomas, and Matthew the publican; James the son of Alpheus, and Lebbeus, whose sirname was Thaddeus;

4 Simon the Canaanite, and Judas Iscariot, who also betrayed him.

These twelve disciples Jesus sent forth by two and two in pairs[d], that they might be agreeable companions and assistants to each other in their work; and he commanded them to go into those places which he himself purposed shortly to visit[e]; and to preach there the gospel of the kingdom of God, or to proclaim the joyful tidings of the approaching kingdom of the Messiah; and,

5 These twelve Jesus sent forth [by two and two] and commanded them [Luke, to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick,]

b The first, Simon, who is called Peter.] The reasons assigned in the paraphrase are so apparently sufficient to account for Peter's being named first, that it is strange any should have attempted to prove from this text the authority of Peter over his brethren, when we never find it declared by Christ, or claimed by Peter, or owned by any of the rest of the apostles, but rather find so many scriptures which appear to look a contrary way. See Mat. xxiii. 8—12. Acts xv. 13, & seq. 2 Cor. xii. 11. and Gal. ii. 11.

c Simon the Canaanite, a native of Cana.] The reader may see an illustration of this title and that of Lebbeus, sect. lii. p. 282, notes f and g.

d By two and two.] It is obvious this would conduce to the confirming of their testimony, as in the mouth of two witnesses every word is established (Mat. xviii 16.) as well as make their mission much more comfortable than if each had been sent alone. Mr. Fleming has taken pains to shew, that there was great wisdom in joining them together in such pairs as are here intimated, on account of the resemblance or contrast of their characters. The discourse is very ingenious; but the memoirs of some of the apostles are so short, that much of it is uncertain conjecture, rather than convincing argument. See Fleming's Christol. Vol. II. p. 167, & seq.

e Which he himself purposed shortly to visit.] Our Lord was now entering at least on the third year of his ministry, and therefore purposed to take a larger tour than he had formerly done; concluding, that the fame of so many miracles would make way for his being heard with greater regard than before. (Compare sect. xxxi. p. 172, and sect. xxxvi. p. 194.) The time they had spent with him in an immediate attendance on his ministry, since their first call to the work, would no doubt conduce much to their fitness for it; and the notice taken of them by multitudes who had often seen them near Jesus would promote their acceptance in it. See Mark iii. 13, 14, p. 281.

SECT. lxxiv.

and, in confirmation of it, to heal the sick, and exert the other miraculous powers which he had given them. And upon this occasion he made an excellent discourse to them, saying, In this circuit which I now send you, do not go into the way of the Gentiles; for the glad tidings of the gospel are not yet sent to them: nor enter into [any] city of the Samaritans, if you should be obliged to pass through their country; though I once did it, and preached among them with considerable success. (See John iv. 40, 41, sect. xxx.) But my message is chiefly to be delivered to the Jews (compare Mat. xv. 24. and Rom. xv. 8): and therefore go ye rather to them, the poor lost sheep of the house of Israel, who are generally wandering in the paths of error and sin; yet they shall receive this farther token of my regard, that the first notices of my kingdom shall be sent to them. And as ye go from one place to another, wherever you come proclaim this good news, saying, with that ardour and zeal which becomes my heralds [f], The long expected kingdom of heaven is approaching; prepare yourselves therefore to receive the blessings of it. And that a declaration of so great importance may not want suitable testimonials, and the meanness of your personal appearance may not render the truth of it suspected (as any proper occasion offers), heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, yea, raise the dead [g], and cast out demons: for such a power I have given to you, and see that you exert it in a manner most honourable to yourselves and me; [and as] you have received it freely, freely give unto others the assistance which it enables you to impart, and scorn the thought of making any gain of those for whom these works of mercy and power are performed.

Mat. X. 5.

6

7

8

Mark VI. 8

And he commanded them, that they should take nothing for [their] journey, except only a staff, which sick,] saying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not: [MARK VI.—7. LUKE IX. 2.]

6 But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

7 And as ye go, preach, saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand.

8 Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils; freely ye have received, freely give.

MARK VI. 8. And he commandeth them, that they should take nothing for their journey, save a staff only; [LUKE, f Proclaim—with that ardour and zeal which becomes my heralds.] This is the proper import of the word κηρυσσειν, which is derived from κηρυξ, a herald. Probably they were to make this proclamation with a loud voice as they passed through the streets of the towns they went to; as Jonah delivered his message to Nineveh. See Jonah iii. 4.

g Raise the dead.] Though many ancient copies have not this clause, and though we do not find that the apostles exerted any such power whilst Christ lived; yet since the oldest versions have it, and it is certainly much easier to drop than to insert a clause by accident, I chuse, with Dr. Whitby, to retain it, though there are great authorities on the other side. It is to me very evident that some passages in this discourse refer to events which did not immediately take place. See Mat. x. 18, 21, 23, in the next section.

h Except

[Luke, and he said unto them,] [Provide] no bread, no money, [neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses;] [Mat. X. 9. Luke IX. 3.—] which they had in their hands[h]: and, to prevent any solicitude as to the means of their support, he said unto them, Disburden yourselves of all anxious cares on this occasion, and provide neither bread, or any other kind of food for your subsistence, nor money to purchase provisions; neither gold, nor silver, nor brass coin, in your purses[i]: Nor even take so much as a scrip to carry any manner of provisions for [your] journey; nor think it needful you should have two coats a piece, or any change of raiment; nor, what might seem more necessary still, even another pair of shoes, any stronger than ordinary, but be shod just as you are with sandals[k]; nor yet take any staves, but only those that you are used to walk with. For the labourer is surely worthy of his food: and as you may freely accept the necessary supplies of life when offered by those to whom you preach, so you may cheerfully trust the Providence of God to take care of you while engaged in so good a cause; and he would rather support you by a miracle, than suffer you to want what shall be necessary for your sustenance[l].

SECT. lxxiv.

Mark VI. 8.

Mat. X. 10,

Mat. X. 10. Nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats [Luke, a piece,] neither shoes, [but be shod with sandals,] nor yet staves: for the workman is worthy of his meat.—[Mark VI. 9. Luke, IX.—3.]

11 And [he said unto them,] Into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, enquire who

11 And he farther said unto them, Go forth therefore with a holy alacrity; and into whatever city or village you enter, make it your first business to enquire who in it is of a worthy character for hospitality

h Except only a staff, which they had in their hands.] There is no difficulty thus to reconcile this clause with what is said in Matthew (ver. 10), that they should not provide a staff (as it is there expressed in the original, μηδὲ ῥάβδον); for many copies read it in the plural number, μηδὲ ῥάβδους, nor yet staves; which reading is confirmed by Luke (ver. 3), where it is so expressed. Nor is there any need we should suppose, with Heinsius, that α is put for αντι here in Mark, as if they were commanded to take nothing with them, not even so much as a staff. For all that Christ intended was, that they should so entirely depend upon the providence of God, that they should set out with nothing but the staff in their hands; and that, however common it might be for those who were to travel a long way to be provided with two staves as well as with two coats, they need not be solicitous to have another ready in case one should fail.

i In your purses.] The original word, ζωναις, expresses the custom they had of carrying money in a kind of fob-pocket, or purse, which was made in the duplicature of their girdles. See Dr. Shaw's Travels, p. 292.

k Nor shoes, but be shod with sandals.] I apprehend the word υποδημαλα, shoes, must here signify a kind of short boots, which they used in long journeys, that covered the whole foot and small of the leg; whereas their sandals were pieces of strong leather, or wood, tied under the sole of the foot by strings, and something resembling modern clogs. See Calmet's Dictionary, Vol. II. p. 615, on the word sandals; and Lightfoot's Hor. Heb. on Mat. x. 10.

l He would rather support you by a miracle, &c.] Our Lord intended this mission in part, as an initiation into their apostolic work; and it was, no doubt, an encouragement to them during all the remainder of life to recollect the singular care which Providence now took of them, though they had abandoned their families, and with them the means of subsistence, and went out wholly unfurnished for such an expedition. In this view Christ leads them to recollect it, Luke xxii. 35, sect. clxxii.

SECT. lxxiv.

hospitality and piety; for I would not have you endanger your own reputation, by taking up your lodging in any disreputable family: And whatever house you thus enter into, continue there till you leave the place; that you may not seem to have too great a regard to the little circumstances of domestic accommodation, which it is beneath your character as my ministers to be very solicitous about.

Mat. x. 11.

who in it is worthy; and [LUKE, whatsoever house ye enter into,] there abide, [till ye depart from that place.]—[MARK VI. 10. LUKE IX. 4.]

12 And, as an early intimation of the friendly intention of your visit, when you first enter into any family, salute it in a courteous and religious manner, saying, according to the usual custom of friends when they enter the dwellings of each other, "Peace be upon this house[m]." And if the family be worthy the Divine regard, your good wishes for its peace and prosperity shall come upon it[n], and I will make the blessing that you pronounce effectual: but if it be not worthy, even then your kind wishes for its peace and happiness shall not be lost, but shall return unto you in blessings on your own heads, as being the genuine workings of that pious and benevolent temper which God always approves and rewards.

12 And when ye come into an house, salute it:

13 And if the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it: but if it be not worthy, let your peace return to you.

14 And whosoever shall not receive you, nor in an obedient manner hearken to your words; as for such unhappy persons, when you come out of that house or city in which they dwell, shake off the very dust of your feet, as a testimony against them[o], or as a token that you look upon them as devoted by God to destruction, and therefore desire to separate yourselves entirely from them, that you may not be partakers of their plagues. (Compare Rev. xviii. 4, and Acts xviii. 6.)

14 And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words; when ye depart out of that house, or city, shake off the [LUKE, very] dust of your feet, [for a testimony against them.] [MARK VI. 11.—LUKE IX. 5.]

15 And indeed you have reason to do it: for verily I say unto you, That whatever profession they

15 Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable

m Peace be upon this house.] This custom of saluting friends after this manner is still retained among the Turks and other eastern nations; and I thought it not improper to express it for the illustration of what follows.

n Your peace shall come upon it.] This is one of those many passages in which (as the grammarians speak) the imperative is put for the future; that is, Let it come, for It shall come: (so 1 Cor. xvi. 22.) And perhaps many seeming imprecations in the Old Testament may most easily be accounted for, by such an explication, as prophetic predictions of what should happen to the enemies of God and his people.

o Shake off the very dust of your feet, &c.] The Jews thought there was something of so peculiar an holiness in the land of Israel, that when they came home from any heathen country they stopped at its borders and wiped the dust of it from their shoes, that the sacred inheritance might not be polluted with it; nor would they permit herbs to be brought to them from their neighbours, lest they should bring any of the dust of their land upon them. So that the action enjoined to the apostles here was a lively intimation, that when the Jews had rejected the gospel, they were no longer to be regarded as the people of God, but were on a level with heathens and idolators. See Mr. Fleming's Christol. Vol. II. p. 160.

tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrah, in the day of judgment, than for that city. [MARK VI. 11.]

they may make of their regard to the true God, and however they may continue to boast of their national privileges, it shall be more tolerable not only for the generality of Gentile sinners, in the day of final judgment, but even for the natives of the land of Sodom and Gomorrah, those monsters of unnatural wickedness who were consumed with fire and brimstone from heaven, than for the inhabitants of that wretched city; for the people of Sodom and Gomorrah never sinned against such extraordinary light and such singular favours as they. SECT. LXXIV. Mat. X. 15.

IMPROVEMENT.

WHAT abundant reason is there for humble thankfulness that the ambassadors of Christ were thus sent forth to preach the gospel, and that at length their number was increased, and their commission enlarged; so that instead of their being thus confined to the lost sheep of the house of Israel, their instructive line is gone out through all the earth, and their words have resounded even to the end of the world; (Psal. xix. 4) May the purport of their message be seriously attended to! since it will so certainly be a savour of life or of death, of eternal salvation or aggravated condemnation and ruin. Mat. X. 1. 5, 6.

Let us tremble to think, that it will be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrah in the day of judgment than for those by whom the gospel is rejected: and let us earnestly pray that Divine Grace may enable us to receive it in the love of it, and to obey the truth, that we may be saved; (2 Thess. ii. 10.) 15

They who have the honour in this respect to succeed the apostles as ministers of this gospel, may learn most useful instructions from this discourse of our Divine Master. Let them speak and act as the messengers of peace and the friends of mankind, who cordially wish well to all around them; and gratefully acknowledge the kindness which, as faithful labourers, they have justly deserved. 12, 13 10

Let them shew a true greatness of mind in an apparent superiority to temporal interests and present gratifications; easy in whatever accommodations they find where Providence leads them; and forgetting themselves, to remember their Master, and the souls he has committed to their care.

Let them faithfully warn all around them of the importance of their eternal concerns, and of the unutterable danger of receiving the grace of God in vain, that, whether men will hear or forbear, they may be clean from their blood. And, while we preserve such a temper and conduct, we may cheerfully hope that God will be with us in the way that we go, and, how precarious soever our circumstances may seem, will give us food to eat, and raiment to put on. 9, &c.

May

SECT. LXXIV. May we all have this token for good, that God will take care of our interests; even the consciousness of our being faithfully engaged to promote his glory, and our joyful readiness to spend and be spent for the service of souls! (2 Cor. xii. 15.)

SECT. LXXV.

Our Lord faithfully warns his apostles of the danger and opposition they might expect to encounter in his service. Mat. X. 16—28.

MAT. X. 16.

SECT. LXXV. WHEN our Lord had thus instructed his apostles as to their behaviour and office in general, he went on faithfully to lay before them the difficulties and trials they were to expect in the execution of it; and added, Behold, I send you out as so many innocent and defenceless sheep, in the midst of a whole multitude of fierce and ravenous wolves [a], who will not fail to watch every opportunity to attack and even devour you: be ye therefore continually on your guard against them, and labour to approve yourselves prudent as serpents, in avoiding unnecessary dangers [b]; but far from imitating the malignity and revengeful nature of that animal, maintain at all times a holy simplicity of soul, and be harmless and inoffensive as doves, those gentle creatures 17 who are innocent and loving to a proverb. But be upon your guard against the men of the world with whom you converse, that you do not by any inadvertency give them advantage against you; for they will seek occasions of mischief, and betray you to the councils, and deliver you up to the sanhedrim and other inferior courts of judicature, and will also scourge you in their synago-
18 gues [c]. And, in some cases, the persecution shall be carried yet farther; for you shall be brought before governors and kings on my account [d], for a witness

Mat. X. 16.

Mat. X. 16. BEHOLD, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves; be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves.

17 But beware of men; for they will deliver you up to the councils, and they will scourge you in their synagogues:

18 And ye shall be brought before governors and kings for my sake,

[a] As sheep in the midst of wolves.] So frankly did our Lord warn his apostles of the hardships and dangers with which they should be surrounded. Nothing could be more fair; nothing more generous.

[b] Prudent as serpents.] Pliny has given us some very remarkable stories of the sagacity of serpents, some of which, I confess, have the air of fables: (see Plin. Nat. Hist. lib. vii. cap. 23, 27.) But it is certain there is a peculiar vivacity in their eyes; so that to be as sharp-sighted as a serpent was a proverb both among the Greeks and Romans. See Erasm. Adag. p. 580.

[c] Scourge you in their synagogues.] Compare Mat. xxiii. 34. and Acts xxii. 19. This is a sort of discipline which has long since been used in their synagogues, where they keep their courts; and which the wretched Acosta tells us he himself underwent. See Acost. de Vit. Hum. ad fin. Limborch Coll. p. 349; Wits. Vit. Pauli, sect. 1, § 19—21; and Vitring. de Synogog. Vet. lib. iii. par. 1, cap. 11.

[d] Before governors and kings, &c.] Accordingly take, for a testimony against them and the Gentiles.

19 But when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak; for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak.

20 For it is not ye that speak, but the spirit of your Father which speaketh in you.

21 And the brother shall deliver up the brother to death, and the father the child; and the children shall rise up against their parents, and cause them to be put to death.

22 And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: but he witness to them, and to the heathen, as this will give you an opportunity of testifying my gospel more solemnly both to Jews and Gentiles. SECT. LXXV.

Matt. X. 19.

But when they shall accuse you with the utmost virulence, and deliver you up to appear before such high personages, be not anxiously solicitous about your defence there, how you shall answer for yourselves, or what you shall speak: but cheerfully throw yourselves upon the Divine assistance which shall be abundantly sufficient for you; for it shall be given you in that very hour what you shall speak; proper thoughts and words shall be suggested to you, and your minds shall be maintained in that composure and dignity which is necessary for the honour of the cause you assert[c]. For indeed, when you appear on 20 these occasions, and are called to answer for yourselves, it is not [so much] you that speak, as the spirit of your Father that speaketh in you, in defence of that gospel which it is his peculiar office to promote in the world.

Nevertheless, all the wisdom and justice of 21 your apologies, though divinely inspired, will not disarm the malice of your unreasonable enemies, which shall prevail to such a degree as even to triumph over natural affection, and break asunder the strictest bonds of social life: for one brother shall betray another, not only to some slighter punishment, but even to a violent and tormenting death; and the father shall thus become the murderer, instead of the guardian and protector of the son; and children, on the other hand, forgetting all the obligations of filial duty and affection, shall rise up as witnesses against their own parents, and cause them to be put to death. And you, my apostles, notwithstanding 22
all the humanity of your character, and the benevolent design of your office, shall be the objects of such general aversion, censure and persecution, that you shall in a manner be hated of all men cordingly the apostles were several of them obliged to appear before princes, and were severely prosecuted by their malicious enemies before Herod, Agrippa, Felix, Festus, Nero, Domitian, &c. as we learn from sacred or profane history.

[c] For the honour of the cause you assert.] Persons of so low an education as the apostles generally were, might have been much terrified at the thought of appearing before such great personages; and might have feared, lest, in the hurry of their spirits, they should have been betrayed into any impropriety of language or behaviour, by which the cause of the gospel might have suffered: so that nothing could have been more suitable than the promise which our Lord here makes them, which was sufficient to prevent a thousand anxious apprehensions.

SECT. lxxv.

Mat. X. 22.

men for the sake of my name[f]; when your calling yourselves by it shall appear, to your enemies themselves, the only crime chargeable upon you: but be not discouraged at these trials; for he that courageously endures to the end, shall on the whole be saved; and whatever extremities he may suffer in this world, God will not only deliver him from the destruction that shall come upon the wicked, but will amply repay his fidelity in the next. (Compare Mat. xxiv. 13. and Rev. ii. 10.)

he that endureth to the end, shall be saved.

23 But I say not this to encourage you to rush upon martyrdom, before you have a plain and lawful call to it: for, on the other hand, it will rather be your duty to prolong such useful lives to the utmost limits you lawfully may, and when they persecute you in one city, to flee to another: and though this may contract the time of your abode in each, be not discouraged at that, which may, on the whole, be no inconvenience; for verily I say unto you, You shall not have had time to finish [your progress through] all the cities of Israel, and to preach the gospel in every place, until the Son of man shall come[g] in a yet more awful appearance, to fulfil your prediction concerning the manifestation of his kingdom and to take vengeance on your cruel persecutors.

23 But when they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another: for verily I say unto you, Ye shall not have gone over the cities of Israel, till the Son of man be come.

24 And as for the unkind usage I have warned you to expect, you have no reason to be surprised at it; for, as I have formerly observed (Luke vi. 40, sect. liv). The disciple is not above his teacher, nor the servant above his lord: It is abundantly sufficient, if the disciple be as his teacher

24 The disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his lord:

25 It is enough for the disciple, that he be as his master and the servant

[f] You shall be hated of all men for the sake of my name.] They who believed the testimony of the apostles, as multitudes did, could not but ardently love them, as their fathers in Christ: (see Gal. iv. 15.) This therefore is plainly one of those many scriptures in which the universal term all is to be taken with great restrictions. See John xii. 32. Phil. ii. 21. and Rom. v. 18.—As there seems in this text a peculiar emphasis in the phrase, for the sake of my name, I chuse in this edition to render it more literally than in the first; though (as I had there observed) it is apparent that the name of a person is sometimes put for the person himself. See note 1 on John ii. 23. sect. xxiv.

[g] Until the Son of man shall come.] I do not find that the apostles met with any persecution in this first progress, from which they soon returned to Christ, and told him all that they had done, (see Mark vi. 30. and Luke ix. 10. sect. lxxviii.) and therefore, as well as for many other reasons, I cannot understand the coming of the Son of man to signify his overtaking them in this journey before they came to the end of it: nor does it appear natural, with Dr. Sykes (in his Essay on the Truth of Christianity, p. 85, & seq.) to refer it to Christ's coming to judgment. It is rather, as Mr. Whiston observes (in his discourse of Prophecy, p. 63), to be explained of their being driven out of Judea by persecution, so that they had not time to visit all the parts of it before the destruction of Jerusalem by Titus, which is often called the coming of the Son of man. See Mat. xxiv. 27, 37, 39, 44. and Luke xviii. 8.

[h] Cannot servant as his lord: if they have called the Master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his houshold?

teacher, and the servant as his lord, and in such a circumstance the disciple and the servant have cause for thankfulness rather than complaint. If then, as you have already heard and found, they have called me, who am the Master of the family, Beelzebub, and reviled me as a magician, whom they should have received as the Messiah (see p. 321), how much more will they be likely thus to abuse his domesties, whose character and station are so much inferior to his?

Mat. X. 25.

26 Fear them not therefore: for there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known.

Since therefore you have my example before you, and suffer in my cause, fear them not, but courageously sustain the utmost efforts of their rage; and assure yourselves that I will support you till you have finished your testimony: for there is nothing now hid, which shall not be revealed: nor has any thing passed in secret between us which shall not be universally made known. See to it then, that you remember to what purpose I have admitted you to so great an intimacy with me, and discoursed so largely concerning my kingdom; and what I say to you in darkness, speak [it] in the light of open day; and what you hear as it were whispered in the ear, proclaim publicly with a loud voice as from the house-tops.

26

27 What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light: and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the house-tops.

27

28 And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell.

And though the boldness of your testimony may indeed at length cost you your lives, yet be not afraid of them who can only kill the mortal body, and cannot kill or hurt the immaterial soul, which will still survive in all its vigour while its tabernacle lies in ruins[h]; but much rather fear, lest, by being unfaithful in so important a trust, you should incur the displeasure of him who is able to destroy both soul and body in hell, and has power to fill the separate spirit with anguish, or at the final judgment to re-unite it to the body, and condemn both to everlasting misery in that infernal prison.

28

IMPROVE-

[h] Cannot kill the soul, &c.] I have paraphrased the words so, as to illustrate the certain argument they contain to prove the existence of the soul in a separate state, and its perception of that existence; else the soul would be as properly killed as the body. Grotius has an excellent note here.

IMPROVEMENT.

SECT. lxxv. How apparently fit is it, that this eternal and almighty God should be the object of our humble fear, and that in comparison with him we should fear nothing else! All the terrors of the world are disarmed by this; and by this are its flatteries also disarmed. In whatever stations of life we are fixed, let this engage us to be faithful to God in them: so shall we be most truly faithful to ourselves!

Mat. X. 28.

The apostles were exposed to peculiar dangers and trials; but all that will live godly in Christ Jesus must expect some degree of persecution, (2 Tim. iii. 12.) let us therefore arm ourselves with the same mind, that we may bear it with a truly Christian forti-

16 tude. May Divine grace teach us to mingle the wisdom of the serpent with the innocence of the dove, and to shelter ourselves from the ill usage of a perverse and sinful generation, so far only as we can do it without offering any violation to our consciences!

21 It is indeed matter of great lamentation, that the sentiments of benevolence and goodness, which seem so natural to the human mind, and are always so ornamental and delightful, should prevail no more: and it is shameful that the name of religion, so well calculated to cultivate these sentiments, should be made use of as an engine to destroy them; and instead of cementing kingdoms and families in closer and more affectionate bonds, should inspire them even with mortal animosity. Let us bless God for our public liberties; and earnestly pray, that where persecution reigns in its utmost terror, the wrath of man may praise him, and the remainder of that wrath be restrained! (Psal. lxxvi. 10.)

24, 25 The ill usage which the blessed Jesus endured from an ungrateful world, may surely prevent our being surprised or offended, if we meet with some share of it too. May we be willing to suffer with him, that we may at length reign with him! (2 Tim. ii. 12.) And if by unexpected revolutions in providence we should be called out to the severest trials, may the spirit of glory and of God rest upon us! and may we not account even our lives dear unto us, that, approving our fidelity to him, we may finish our course with joy! (1 Pet. iv. 14. and Acts xx. 24.)

SECT.

SECT. LXXVI.

Our Lord concludes his charge to his apostles with an assurance of God's providential care for their encouragement; and with a promise of abundant future rewards to all that should faithfully serve him, or assist others in his work: and, after this, they separate from one another and go to different parts to preach the gospel. Mat. X. 29. to the end. XI. 1. Mark VI. 12, 13. Luke IX. 6.

MAT. X. 29.

ARE not two sparrows sold for a farthing? and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father.

MAT. X. 29.

SECT. LXXVI.

AFTER these faithful warnings of the dangers to which the apostles would be exposed in his service, our Lord went on to lay before them such encouragements as might animate their courage and pious zeal; and began with reminding them of the universal extent of the Divine Providence: are not two young sparrows, said he, sold for a single farthing? yet there is not one of them that by any accident shall fall to the ground and die without the observation and permission of your heavenly Father[a]. And not only are the more noble and vital parts of your animal frame regarded by God, but even the very hairs of your head are all numbered by him. Fear not, therefore, that you should be overlooked; for, even as men, and especially as my servants and ambassadors, you are more valuable than many sparrows, or than the whole species of them; and therefore may assure yourselves that providence will watch over you.

Mat. X. 29.

30 But the very hairs of your head are all numbered.

30

31 Fear ye not therefore: ye are of more value than many sparrows.

31

32 Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven.

And let it be a farther encouragement to you to remember, that whatever you may now suffer for your fidelity to me, it will on the whole be most amply rewarded; for the regard that every one expresses to me here, shall be publicly remembered

32

[a] Not one of them shall fall to the ground, &c.] Some have supposed, there is a reference here to the two birds which made a part of the leper's offering. (Lev. xiv. 4—7.) As if the sense of what our Lord expresses were, that providence determines, which of those two insignificant animals shall live, and which be killed. But as the words are capable of a more extensive sense, and our Lord elsewhere mentions five sparrows just to the same purpose, (Luke xii. 6. sect. cxi.) I see no reason for paraphrasing them with any particular view to that rite. They are a full proof of the universality of the Divine Providence; but the singular interpositions of it in favour of good men, may in a much more convincing manner be argued from the prayers and praises offered in scripture with regard to particular events, and the promises of temporal blessings made to those that fear and serve God. Nor can I think we are much concerned to determine how far any of these are miraculous, and how far the result of general laws settled in an exact congruity to the temper and conduct of every individual affected by them, which an omniscient God foresaw, and which his perfect schemes might easily provide for, by methods to us unsearchable. It is plain, Homer thought Divine Providence interested itself in the lives of brute animals. See Iliad. lib. xv. ver. 274. See also Grotius, in loc.

SECT. LXXVI.

membered and acknowledged hereafter: whosoever, therefore, shall courageously confess me before men, be he ever so mean in the eyes of the
Mat. X. 32. world, I also will not fail to confess him in all the glories of my final appearance, not only before the assembled world, but even in the immediate presence of my Father in heaven, to whose everlasting favour all my faithful servants 33 shall be introduced: But whosoever shall renounce me before men, as ashamed or afraid to acknowledge his relation to me, I will also renounce him before my Father in heaven as a mean and unworthy creature, who has forfeited all claim to my patronage and favour in that awful day.

33 But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven.

34 But, to prevent the mistaken expectations which the apostles might form of the immediate temporal prosperity of his kingdom, our Lord farther added, Do not suppose that I am come to send and establish peace on the land in which we dwell;[b] for, though the general purport of my gospel has so powerful a tendency to promote it, yet the prejudices and lusts of men will so oppose and pervert it, that it will rather seem, from the event of it, that I came not to send peace, but a 35 sword. For a few will indeed embrace it; but they will be so cruelly persecuted even by their nearest relations, that I may say, I am come to set a man at variance against his own father, and the daughter against her own mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law[c], when the circumstances of the family were such, that 34 Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword.

35 For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law:

b To send peace on the land in which we dwell.] That the word ץרא often signifies some particular land, and especially Judea, rather than the whole earth, is undeniably plain; (compare Mat. xxiii. 35. and Luke iv. 25.) And I have given it that turn here, because there was no part of the world where Christianity occasioned so much dissension, and none where peace was so much expected from the kingdom of the Messiah. Yet how very unjust it is, that any of those contentions which the gospel has accidentally occasioned should be urged as an argument against its Divine authority, the reader may see in the excellent sermons of the present Bishop of Winchester on this subject, in his Miscellaneous Tracts. In one word, the matter will issue in this; that if Christianity has occasioned more discord than any other religion, the only reason is, because it animates its professors to greater zeal for the truth, and better proves it to be worth their while to suffer for conscience sake.

c And the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law.] The thought seems to sink here, as it is much more usual for mothers and daughters-in-law, in whatever relation, to quarrel, than natural parents and children: but if we consider, that our Lord speaks of this as the first occasion of a quarrel between them, it may intimate a supposition, that they were persons of a friendly temper, who, even in such a relation, might otherwise have lived together on easy terms: a thought which seems to me to enliven the discourse, and which may lead us to reflect how often bigotry entirely transforms a natural disposition, that in itself was mild and amiable. Compare Luke xii. 53, note d, sect. cxv.

d He

sect. lxxvi.

Mat. X. 36.

36 And a man's foes shall be they of his own household.

that they might otherwise have agreed. So that the ties of blood shall be forgotten, and the bonds of friendship violated; and a man's enemies, yea oftentimes the most severe and inveterate of them, [shall be] those of his own family, and it may be, the nearest of his relations, from whom he might justly have expected the greatest friendship.

37 He that loveth father or mother more than me, is not worthy of me; and he that loveth son or daughter more than me, is not worthy of me;

Prepare yourselves then for such severe trials as these, by remembering, that he who loves his father or mother more than me, and is induced by his regard to them to disobey my precepts, or to renounce my doctrine, is not worthy of me, nor shall have any interest in my saving benefits; and he that loves even his son or daughter more than me, is not worthy of an interest in me and my friendship, though it should be an only child that he prefers to me, and for the sake of whom he abandons my gospel. 37

38 And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me:

And, in a word, he that is so concerned for his own ease and safety that he will not suffer for my sake, and does not resolutely take up his cross when providentially laid in his way, and follow after me,[d] even to die upon it, when the honour of my name and cause requires it, and I, as the captain of his salvation, lead him on to it, cannot be owned as my faithful disciple, and is not worthy of an interest in me. (Compare Mark viii. 34. sect. lxxxix.) 38

39 He that findeth his life, shall lose it: and he that loseth his life for my sake, shall find it.

Be assured however, that you shall find it to be well worth your while to endure all these extremities for my sake; for he that finds and saves his life, by deserting my cause, shall lose it on the whole, as he will thus incur a sentence of final condemnation and destruction[e]; but he that out of faithfulness to me loses his life, and lays it down for my sake, shall find it in a far more noble state of being, which infinitely better deserves the name of life. 39

And

d He that does not take up his cross, and follow after me.] This alludes to the custom of persons carrying the cross to which they were to be fastened; and was a strong intimation, that he should himself be crucified; and that none could be a sincere Christian without a willingness to bear even that shameful and cruel death for his sake, if he was called to it. See Grotius, in loc.

e He that finds his life shall lose it, &c.] The sense that I have given in the paraphrase, as it is much more general, and more important, appears to me much preferable to that of Dr. Hammond, who interprets the text, of the Christians saving their lives by leaving Jerusalem in the last siege of that place by the Romans, and the Jews losing theirs by crowding into it. The beauty and energy of Christ's discourse in a parallel place) Mat. xvi. 24—26, sect. lxxxix.) would be quite lost by this interpretation; and indeed many Christians had actually lost their lives for the gospel many years before that siege commenced.

[1] Hospitably

SECT. lxxvi.

Mat. X. 40.

And as for you, my servants, let none be afraid of shewing kindness to you, lest they should share with you in your sufferings for my sake; for he that entertains you, does in effect entertain me, whose ministers you are; and he that entertains me, does also entertain him that sent me, and my heavenly Father will regard it as done to himself; as, on the other hand, all the slights and injuries which are offered to you will be considered as reflecting not only on me, but on him. And did men truly understand their own interest, they would rejoice to assist you in that noble work in which you are engaged: for he that hospitably entertains a prophet[f] in the name of a prophet, or with a pious regard to the office he bears, shall receive the reward of a prophet himself, or a reward proportionable to the worth of the person he shelters and accommodates in a time of danger and difficulty; and he that entertains [any] righteous man in the name of a righteous man, or with a cordial regard to the virtues of his character, shall himself receive the reward of a rightcous man. Nor shall even the smallest and cheapest favour to the least of my servants be forgotten; for whosoever, being able to do no more, shall give to drink unto one of these little ones, or to one of these my followers, who makes the meanest appearance, even so much as a cup of cold water only, to refresh him in the fatigue to which he is exposed in my service, if he shall give it to him in the name of a disciple, or with a real affection to him on account of his relation to me, verily I say unto you, he shall by no means lose his proportionable reward, but shall find himself abundantly repaid both with present and future blessings.

40 He that receiveth you, receiveth me; and he that receiveth me, receiveth him that sent me.

41 He that receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet, shall receive a prophet's reward: and he that receiveth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man, shall receive a righteous man's reward.

42 And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones, a cup of cold water only, in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward.

Mat. XI. 1.

And it came to pass after this solemn and instructive charge had been delivered, that when Jesus had made an end of giving instructions to his twelve disciples, and had prepared them for the service they were now to undertake, he did not lay aside the work himself, but still pursued it with an unwearied diligence and zeal, and departed thence to teach the Jews, in other parts, the

MAT. XI. 1. And it came to pass, when Jesus had made an end of commanding his twelve disciples, he departed thence to teach teach and to preach in their cities.

[f] Hospitably entertains a prophet.] The word δεχομενος here plainly signifies to entertain in a hospitable way, as it does likewise Heb. xi. 31. Jam. ii. 25. and elsewhere: nor can the gradation in the following words be understood without such an interpretation. The apostles were, no doubt, regarded as a kind of divinely inspired prophets; though that title, by way of distinction, was afterwards appropriated to persons of an inferior rank. 1 Cor. xii. 28, and Eph. iv. 11.

the doctrines of his gospel, and to preach in their cities. SECT. lxxvi.

MARK VI. 12. And they [departed, and] went out [through the towns,] and preached [the gospel,] that men should repent. [LUKE, IX. 6.—]

The twelve apostles also, in pursuance of the commission they had now received, set out at the same time; and they departed from the presence of their Master, and went through the towns of Galilee, and the neighbouring places, and preached the gospel wherever they came; insisting with great earnestness upon it, that men should repent of their sins, and prepare for that glorious manifestation of his presence, which God was about to favour them with. Mark VI. 12.

13 And they cast out many devils, and anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them. [every where.] [LUKE IX. —6.]

And in consequence of that miraculous power with which Jesus had invested them, they expelled many demons, and anointed many sick persons with oil, as a signal of healing which he had been pleased to direct (compare Jam. v. 14), and perfectly cured them, whatsoever their malady was; and this they did every where as they went on in their progress. 13

IMPROVEMENT.

JUSTLY may the blessed Jesus set so high a value on himself, and on the blessings of his grace: justly may he insist upon our readiness to abandon all for him, who is so just an equivalent for all. May his grace teach us to love him more than the dearest of our relations, and even to be ready for his sake to sacrifice our lives! May it make us willing to take up and bear any cross for him, who bore his cross and expired upon it for us! Mat. X. 37, 38

The gospel has indeed been the occasion of much contention and persecution, not only in Judea but elsewhere. yet let us not charge it upon any malignity, or any deficiency in that, but on the lusts and corruptions of men, who have either directly opposed or grossly perverted it. Let us endeavour to arm ourselves with courage to encounter, and resolution to endure, whatever persecutions or injuries our adherence to it may cost us; ever confiding in that gracious Providence which extends itself even to the meanest creatures: reposing ourselves on the support of Divine consolations, and esteeming ourselves happy, even in losing our lives in this world, if we may find them in that which is ever lasting. 34, 35 36 29, 30 39

In the mean time, may this excellent discourse of our blessed Redeemer animate us to every work of faith, and every labour of love! Let not the poorest be discouraged from some charitable attempt for the good of others; since the munificence of our heavenly Master will remember even a cup of cold water given to the least of his servants under that character. Yet since there will 42

be

SECT. LXXVI.

be such a variety of rewards proportionable to different degrees of liberality and zeal, let us indulge a generous ambition of abounding in the work of the Lord, that we may shine with distinguished glory in the day of retribution, and have an abundant entrance into his kingdom.

SECT. LXXVII.

Herod hears of Jesus, and suspects him to be John the Baptist, whom he had lately murdered in a manner which is here recounted. Mat. XIV. 1, 2, 6—12. Mark VI. 14—29. Luke IX. 7—9.

MAT. XIV. 1.

SECT. LXXVII.

Mat. XIV. 1.

NOW at that time[a], while the apostles were making their circuit about the country, proclaiming every where the glories of their great Master, and working miracles in his name, king Herod (as the tetrarch we mentioned above[b] was generally called) heard of the fame of Jesus, [and] was informed by many of all the marvelous things that were done by him and his apostles; for, by the account they gave concerning him in their mission, concurring with his own miracles and preaching, his name was every where spread abroad, and had reached many places far more distant than the court of Herod[c].

MAT. XIV. 1.

AT that time [king] Herod the tetrarch heard of the fame of Jesus, [LUKE, and of all that was done by him;] [for his name was spread abroad:] [MARK VI. 14. LUKE IX. 7.—]

2 And immediately his own guilty conscience suggested a fear that he could not forbear disclosing to those that were about him; and such was his surprise and terror, that he said even to his own servants, This is John the Baptist, whom I put to death; he is undoubtedly risen from the dead, and for this reason he appears with greater honour than ever, and these extraordinary powers now operate in him, though before he wrought no miracles.

2 And [he] said unto his servants, This is John the Baptist; he is risen from the dead, and therefore mighty works do shew forth themselves in him. [MARK VI. —14.]

And

[a] At that time.] Both Mark and Luke so expressly connect this with the preceding section, that there can be no room to doubt that this is its true place.

[b] The tetrarch we mentioned above.] Though he was called tetrarch for a particular reason, as heir to only a fourth part of his father's dominions; yet in this district (which was that of Galilee) he was properly a king. See note n on Mat. ii. 22. sect. xiii. and Luke iii. 1. sect. xv.

[c] More distant than the court of Herod.] The letters pretended to have passed between Christ and Abgarus, king of Edessa, and preserved by Eusebius (Hist. Eccles. lib. 1, cap. 13), are probably spurious; though Dr. Cave, the learned Dr. Grabe (Spicileg. Vol. 1. p. 1—6), and the celebrated Mr. Addison (in his Discourse on Christianity, sect. 1), seem inclined to receive them.—They might however have their foundation in some message from that prince to Jesus. But the remark in the paraphrase is much more certainly confirmed by Mat. iv. 24, 25. sect. xxxvi.

[d] Herod

LUKE IX.—7. And he was perplexed, because that it was said of some, that John was risen from the dead;

And notwithstanding Herod had imbibed the principles of the Sadducees [d], which were directly opposite to such a supposition, he was exceedingly anxious [e] on account of the reports he heard; for the notion was not merely his own, but it was said too by some others, that John was risen from the dead, and would undoubtedly use his miraculous power to punish those who had murdered him. And it was also conjectured by some, that Elijah had appeared, according to the general expectation, as the fore-runner of the Messiah (compare Mal. iv. 5. Mat. xi. 14. and xvii. 10—12.) and by others, that one of the ancient prophets was risen again from the dead: and others also said, It is certainly a prophet of the former generations, or [a person] at least like one of the prophets [f]; for such miraculous works do as evidently speak a Divine mission as any of theirs ever did. But in the midst of this variety of opinions, when Herod heard what was discoursed [of Jesus] he was exceedingly distressed, and said with great anxiety, John I have certainly beheaded, and received the strongest proofs that the execution was performed; but, who is this, of whom I hear such things? I would not willingly believe it, yet I cannot but suspect that whatsoever be the name he now assumes, it is John, that venerable holy man whom I beheaded and greatly fear he is risen from the dead. And he was so uneasy under the consciousness of the enormous crime he had committed in putting him to death, that, licentious as his principles and character were [g], he was alarmed and terrified with the apprehension of his being actually returned

SECT. LXV.

Luke IX. 7.

8 And of some, that Elias had appeared; and of others, that one of the old prophets was risen again: [and others said, that it is a prophet, or as one of the prophets.] —— [MARK VI. 15.]

8

MARK VI. 16. But when Herod heard thereof, he said, [John have I beheaded; but who is this, of whom I hear such things?] It is John whom I beheaded, he is risen from the dead. [And he desired to see him.] [LUKE IX. 9.]

Mark VI. 16.

d Herod had imbibed the principles of the Sadducees.] See note g below.

e He was exceedingly anxious·] διηπορει strongly expresses a mixture of doubt and fear, which must necessarily throw the mind into a very uneasy situation.

f A prophet, or a person at least like one of the prophets.] This plainly proves that by the word prophet they generally meant one of the holy men whom God had raised up to his people in former ages; and if the particle η be omitted, as it is in some manuscripts, the argument is equally conclusive. See note c, sect. xx.

g Licentious as his principles and character were.] Josephus tells us that the Sadducean principles prevailed much among the rich and great; (Antiq. lib. xviii. cap. 1, (al. 2) § 4.) And it is very probable Herod was of this sect, as what is called in one text the leaven of the Sadducees, is in another called the leaven of Herod (compare Mat. xvi. 6, with Mark viii. 15.) not to mention a kind of hereditary quarrel which there seems to have been between the Herodian family and the Pharisees. (See note f on Mark iii. 6, sect. 1.)—But it is no easy matter to arrive at a steady belief of so great an absurdity as the mortality of the soul. The existence of the soul after death and a state of future retribution, and other evident principles of natural religion connected with both, will even force themselves upon the unbelieving heart, and wring it with anguish which it cannot always, though it may frequently, conceal. This is admirably illustrated by Bishop Atterbury in his sermon on this text and subject.

SECT. Ixxvii.

returned to life; and, not knowing what to think of the reports he heard of Jesus, he earnestly desired to see him, that his doubts might be removed.

Mark VI. 16.

17 Thus was his guilty mind perplexed and tormented, and not without reason; for, as we have before observed [h], Herod had formerly seized John, and bound him with chains in prison, on account of the reproof he gave him for his marrying Herodias; Because, as Herod had seduced her from his brother Philip, who was still living and had a daughter by her, John had said to him, with a freedom that he could not bear, It is not lawful for thee thus to have thy brother's wife.

17 For Herod had —laid hold upon John, and bound him in prison for Herodias's sake:—

18 For John had said,—It is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife.

19 And we had likewise added, that, for this reason, Herodias also was incensed against him, and would have put him to death; but for a long time she could not compass her design; For Herod had so great a reverence for John, that he would not yield to her solicitations: But we must now inform the reader, that before this time she had found a way of accomplishing her cruel purpose.

19 Therefore Herodias — would have killed him, but she could not.

20 For Herod feared John.—

21 For as her heart was filled with malice, and she was ever watching for an opportunity to be revenged on John, at length a convenient day happened of preferring her petition with unexpected circumstances of advantage: a public festival was kept, when Herod on his birth-day [i] made a splendid supper for the entertainment of his lords, and of all the chief officers of his army [k], and other persons of distinguished rank 22 in Galilee, over which he presided: And, to grace the solemnity, Salome, the daughter of the above-mentioned Herodias by Philip her former husband, a young lady of celebrated beauty, coming in publicly among them, and dancing in the midst of the assembly; this instance of condescension,

21 And when a convenient day was come, that Herod on his birth day made a supper to his lords, high captains, and chief estates of Galilee: [MAT. XIV. —6.]

22 And when the daughter of the said Herodias came in, and danced [before them,] and h As we have before observed.] I have ventured to repeat here a few clauses of Mark, because they seemed to me absolutely necessary to introduce the following account of Herod's beheading John the Baptist. These verses are before inserted at large in sect. xxviii. p. 157, 158.

i When Herod on his birth-day.] Some great critics, and particularly Grotius, Heinsius, and Reland, choose to interpret this, of the day of Herod's accession, rather than his birth, which they think would have been more properly expressed by γενεθλιων than γενεσιων. (See Elsner. Observ. Vol. I. p. 100—102.) But it is evident, the seventy use ημερα γενεσεως for a birth-day; Gen. xl. 20.

k Chief Officers of his army.] Though the word χιλιαρχος properly signifies one who had the command of a thousand men, and held a rank in their army nearly answering to that of the colonels in ours, there can be no reason to imagine that the entertainment was confined just to that rank of officers: I have therefore rendered it in a more general way.

l This and pleased Herod, and them that sat with him, the king said unto the damsel, Ask of me whatsoever thou wilt, and I will give it thee. [MAT. XIV. —6.]

23 And he [promised her with an oath, and] sware unto her, Whatsoever thou shalt ask of me, I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom. [MAT. XIV. 7.]

24 And she went forth, and said unto her mother, What shall I ask? And she said, The head of John the Baptist.

25 And she [being before instructed of her mother,] came in straightway with haste unto the king, and asked, saying, I will that thou give me [here] by and by, in a charger, the head of John the Baptist. [MAT. XIV. 8.]

condescension, so unusual in those days and countries, especially in persons of such high dignity [l], was so exceedingly agreeable and pleasing unto Herod and his guests, that the king said before them all to the maiden in a kind of transport, Ask of me whatever thou wilt, and I will give it thee. And when she seemed surprised at such a declaration, to encourage her to depend on what he said, he promised her with the solemnity of an oath, [and] profanely and foolishly sware unto her more than once [m], I will give thee whatsoever thou wilt ask of me, even though it should be to the [value of] half of my kingdom. SECT. LXXVII. Mark VI. 22. 23

And, young as she was, she perceived this was now grown a circumstance of high importance, and might be managed to considerable advantage; she therefore went out, and said to her mother, who was not in the assembly, What shall I ask? And she, struck with this unexpected opportunity of executing her revenge, eagerly replied, Ask the head of John the Baptist, who would have expelled and ruined us both; for nothing in the power of the king to grant could give me equal satisfaction. 24

And, though at first she hesitated at so shocking a proposal, yet being thus before urged to it by her mother, and at length confirmed in the resolution [n], she immediately, after a very short absence, came unto the king with speed in her motion and eagerness in her countenance, and made her demand, saying, I desire that, in accomplishment of thy promise, thou wouldest give me, presently, the head of John the Baptist; and that I may be sure the execution is done, let the head be brought and delivered to me here in a charger, or large dish [o]. 25

And

l This instance of condescension, so unusual in those days, &c.] Dr. Lardner very justly observes that it was very unusual for ladies of a high rank to appear before the men (Esth. i. 10—12). and much less to dance at such banquets as these. See his Credibility of the Gospel History, part i. Vol. I. p. 23.

m Sware unto her more than once.] This may be very well concluded, because both the evangelists use the plural ὤμοσε, Mat. xiv. 9. and Mark vi. 26.

n Being before urged to it by her mother, and at length confirmed in the resolution.] So the word προβιβασθεισα seems to intimate, as Beza, with his usual accuracy, has observed; and there is indeed much more reason to wonder that she was induced to make such a request at all, than that she made some difficulty, for a while, of presenting it, considering how savage it seemed, and how many pleasing views must be sacrificed to it. But at last her mother's remonstrances seem to have wrought her up to great emotion, which the evangelist well expresses by saying, She came in αὐτῳ μετα σπευδης immediately, and with eagerness. The whole narration of Mark, which is by far the most circumstantial, is very much animated; as Mr. Blackwell has justly observed in his Sacred Classics, Vol. I. p. 383.

o The head of John the Baptist in a charger.] It was well known that it was and SECT. lxxvii.

Mark VI. 26.

And the king was exceedingly sorry, as well as greatly surprised, that she should prefer so strange a petition; nevertheless, as she persisted in it, for the sake of his repeated oaths, and out of regard to his guests, in whose presence they were made, he would not deny her, [but] granted what she asked, and ordered that it should be given her.

26 And the king was exceeding sorry; [nevertheless] for his oath's sake, and for their sakes which sat with him [at meat,] he would not reject her, [but commanded it to be given her.] [MAT. XIV. 9.]

27 And immediately, the king sent one of his guards[p] as an executioner, that very night, and commanded his head to be brought into the assembly: and, as soon as the soldier had received his orders, he presently went, and without any further warning, beheaded John in the prison.

27 And immediately the king sent an executioner, and commanded his head to be brought: and he went and beheaded [John] in the prison. [MAT. XIV.—10.]

28 And brought his head in a charger, and gave it to the maiden; and the maiden, forgetting the tenderness of her sex[q], and the dignity of her rank, with a steady cruelty, agreeable to her relation to so ill a woman, brought [and] delivered it to her mother with her own hands. And thus, till the righteous judgment of God overtook them all[r], they gratified themselves in the indulgence of their lusts, and triumphed in the murder of this holy prophet.

28 And brought his head in a charger, and gave it to the damsel: and the damsel [brought it, and] gave it to her mother.—[MAT. XIV. 11.]

29 And the next day, his disciples hearing [of it,] came to the prison, and having permission to do it, took up his corpse, and laid it with great reverence, and due lamentation, in a sepulchre belonging to some of them, who were willing to pay this last act of duty to their master's memory: and then they went and told Jesus what had happened, and remembering the repeated testimony which John had borne to him, continued their attendance upon him.

29 And when his disciples heard of it, they came, and took up his corpse, and laid it in a tomb, and went and told Jesus. [MAT. XIV. 12.]

IMPROVE-

is customary with princes in those eastern parts to require the head of those they order to be executed to be brought to them, that they may be assured of their death. The Grand Signior does it to this day. See Dr. Lardner, in the place cited in note l, p. 24, 25.—The word πιναξ signifies a large dish, which the antiquated word charger well expresses; for which reason I chose to retain it.

p One of his guards.] So σπεκουλατωρα properly signifies, or one who was then standing centry. There were no executioners in those times whose peculiar business it was to put persons to death.

q Forgetting the tenderness of her sex.] This may perhaps be intimated in the repetition of the word maiden. Jerom tells us that Herodias treated the Baptist's head in a very disdainful manner, pulling out the tongue which she imagined had injured her, and pierced it with a needle.

r Till the righteous judgment of God overtook them all.] Dr. Whitby, after many others, observes, that Providence interested itself very remarkably in the revenge of this murder on all concerned. Herod's army was defeated in a war occasioned by his marrying Herodias, which many Jews thought a judgment sent upon him for the death of John: Joseph. Antiq. lib. xviii. cap. 5 (al. 7), § 1, 2.) Both he and Herodias, whose ambition occasioned his ruin, were afterwards driven from their kingdom with great regret, and died in banishment at Lyons in Gaul: (Joseph. ibid. cap. 7. (al. 9.) § 2.) And if any credit may be given to Nicephorus (Hist. lib. 1, cap. 20), Salome, the young lady who made this cruel request, fell into the ice, as she was walking over it, which closing suddenly, cut off her head.

IMPROVEMENT.

SECT. LXXVII.

Mark VI. 14, 16.

How dreadful a thing is it to have a guilty and accusing conscience! and how remarkable was the force of it in the instance before us! Herod was a king, yet it addressed him in language of terror, and made itself heard and felt amidst all the hurries and flatteries of a court. Vain was the power of a prince; vain the caresses of a favourite mistress, basely gratified with the blood of a prophet; and vain the yet more besotting tenets of a Sadducee. In one instance at least a resurrection shall be believed; and if a prophet arise in Israel, Herod shall be among the first to say, It is John the Baptist, risen from the dead; and shall be ready to forbode the sad effects of his recovered life, and to prognosticate evil to himself from the mighty works he performed. Let us make it our care to preserve a conscience void of offence, that instead of a continual torment, it may be to us a continual feast!

22, 23 And if we really desire to preserve it, let us take heed that we be not excessively transported with the entertainments of life, or rashly enter ourselves into engagements which perhaps may plunge us into some degree of guilt, whether they be performed or violated.

24 We see, in this dreadful instance of Herodias, what an implacable degree of malice may arise in the hearts of sinners on being reproved for the most scandalous and mischievous vices. Instead of owning the obligation to one that would have plucked her as a brand out of the burning, she thirsts insatiably for his blood: and chooses rather to indulge her cruelty and revenge in taking away his life, than to gratify her avarice and ambition in demanding a gift that might have been equal to the half of a kingdom.

25, 27 But how mysterious was that providence, which left the life of so holy a man in such infamous hands, and permitted it to be sacrificed to the malice of an abandoned harlot, to the petulancy of a vain girl, and to the rashness of a foolish and perhaps an intoxicated prince, who made the prophet's head the reward of a dance! The ways of God are unsearchable! but we are sure he can never be at a loss to repay his servants in another world for the greatest sufferings they endure in this, and even for life itself, when given up in his cause.

27 We may reasonably conclude, that death could never be an unseasonable surprise to this excellent saint. When the executioner came into the prison by night, perhaps breaking in upon his slumbers, and executed his bloody commission almost as soon as he declared it, a soul like his might welcome the stroke, as the means of liberty and glory; assured that the transient agony of a moment would would transmit it to a kingdom where the least of its inhabitants would be in holiness, honour and felicity, superior to John in his most prosperous and successful state on earth.

SECT. LXXVII.

29 His enemies might a while insult over him, while his disciples were mingling their tears with his dust, and lamenting the residue of his days cut off in the midst. His death was precious in the sight of the Lord, and the triumphing of the wicked was short. So will he ere long plead the cause of all his injured people, and give a cup of trembling and astonishment to those that have made themselves drunk with their blood. Let cruelty and tyranny do their worst, verily there is a reward for the righteous, verily there is a God that judgeth in the earth. (Psal. lviii. 11.

SECT. LXXVIII.

When the apostles were returned from executing their commission, our Lord passes over the sea of Tiberias; and finding vast multitudes had followed him to the place of his intended retirement, he instructs and heals them; and, having miraculously fed above five thousand, retires afterwards to pray. Mat. XIV. 13—23. Mark VI. 30—46. Luke IX. 10—17. John VI. 1—15.

MARK VI. 30.

SECT. LXXVIII.

AND quickly after this awful event of the Baptist's death[a], which has been just related,

Mark VI. 30.

the twelve apostles, when they were returned from their circuit, gathered together unto Jesus, and told him all the occurrences of their late journey; recounting to him, both what miracles they had done by his divine assistance, and what doctrine they had taught according to his direction.

31 And when Jesus heard [of it,] and was informed (as we have just now seen) of the death of John, as well as of the event of the journey which his apostles had been making, he said to them, Come ye yourselves privately with me into a solitary place in the neighbouring desart, and repose yourselves a while after the fatigue of your journey, that we may there indulge such meditations as are suitable to this awful dispensation. And it was necessary to give them this advice, for there were many continually coming and going to and from the public place in which they then were, so that they had no opportunity even to

MARK VI. 30.

AND the apostles [when they were returned,] gathered themselves together unto Jesus, and told him all things, both what they had done, and what they had taught. [LUKE IX. 10.—]

31 And [when Jesus heard of it] he said unto them, Come ye yourselves apart into a desart place, and rest awhile: for there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat. [MAT. XIV. 13—]

[a] After this awful event of the Baptist's death.] Matthew, Mark, and Luke, are all so express in the connection of this story with the foregoing, that there can be no doubt as to the propriety and necessity of placing it here.

[b] After

to eat without interruption, and much less had they leisure for religious retirement and recollection. SECT. LXXVIII.

LUKE IX.—10. And [JOHN, after these things,] he took them and went aside, [MARK, and they departed [thence] by ship,] privately, into a desart place, belonging to the city called Bethsaida; [JOHN, and Jesus went over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias.] [MAT. XIV. —13 —MARK VI. 32. JOHN VI. 1.

And accordingly, after these things[b], he took them with him, and retired from the multitude: and they departed from thence, (even from the place where they had been so much crowded and hurried,) and setting out in a ship privately, they withdrew into a lonely desart belonging to the city called Bethsaida, which we have several times mentioned before. [And] as this desart was divided from the place they set out from by a creek or bay of the sea, Jesus in passing to it went over a part of the sea of Galilee, which is also sometimes called [the sea] of Tiberias[c], because that is the most considerable place on its shore. Luke IX. 10.

MARK VI. 33. And [when] the people saw them departing, and many knew him, [and heard thereof,] [JOHN, a great multitude followed him, because they saw his miracles, which he did on them that were diseased:] and [they] ran a-foot thither out of all [the] cities, and outwent them, and came together unto him

And when the people who had been attending on his ministry saw them departing, and, though he was at some distance, many of them knew him[d], and others thereabout heard of [it] a great multitude following him; because they had seen his miracles, which he had just before performed on them that were diseased, and, struck with the energy of them, were impatiently desirous still to hear so Divine a Teacher. And, therefore, observing how he steered his course, and guessing right as to the place at which he intended to land, they ran thither on foot, and increased Mark VI. 33.

b After these things.] I have before observed (in note[a] on John v. 1, p. 250.) that Mr. Manne supposes this sixth chapter of John ought to be connected with the end of the fourth (see his Dissertations, p. 157.—163); and the rather, because he fancies one may find a connection between John iv. 54, and vi. 1. the first of which texts tells us that Jesus was in Galilee; and the latter, that he went over the sea of Galilee, which is the sea of Tiberias. But I cannot see the least force in the argument, considering how often Christ changed his place, and came back again to that which he had formerly visited: nor can he urge it with any consistence, because, according to his own scheme of the harmony, Christ had crossed the sea to Gergasa, and dispossessed the Legion, after the cure of the nobleman's son, and long before the passing over the sea, that is here referred to (which was plainly not to Gergasa, but to the desart of Bethsaida): so that there is no shadow of a reason for such an unexampled transposition, which has no copy or version to support it. Besides, that this requires another change in ver. 4, which is equally arbitrary, and (as we shall shew in note[e] of this section) most contrary not only to the faith of all copies, but to the reason of things.

c Sometimes called the sea of Tiberias.] We have before observed that it had various names, (See note[b] on Luke v. 1, p. 187.)—It is not necessary to suppose they crossed the lake: if they did, it was only over the extremity of it; or possibly they only made a coasting voyage round some creek or bay of it; otherwise it is hard to say how the people going on foot could have been there before him, as it is said they were, Mark vi. 33. See Lightf. Hor. Heb. on Mat. xiv. 15; and Calmet, Dissert. Tom. I. part. i. p. 89.

d Many knew him.] It should seem that Christ ordered the vessel to be prepared at some distance from the place where the multitude was; yet not so far off but some of the company could make a shift to distinguish who he was.

e The

SECT. lxxviii.

increased their numbers out of all the cities by which they passed: and they pursued their journey with such eagerness, that they outwent them who had taken ship, and, getting round to the shore where he was to land, they came together to him, and stood ready to salute him in a large body.

him. [MAT. XIV.—13. LUKE IX. 11.—JOHN VI. 2.]

Mark VI. 33.

34 And Jesus, when he came out of the ship, and saw such a great multitude of people, who had taken so much pains to meet him there, was moved with tender compassion for them; because he perceived they were sadly neglected by those who ought to have been their spiritual guides, and were forced to wander from place to place, as sheep having no shepherd to feed and take care of them: and with this he was struck to such a degree, that though he had come thither for retirement, he did not either dismiss or forsake them; but, on the contrary, received them in a most condescending and indulgent manner, and began with renewed zeal and fervency to teach them many important things; and, in particular, spake to them concerning the kingdom of God which he was now erecting, and healed many of their sick people, [even all] those that were brought to him and had need of healing.

34 And Jesus, when he came out, saw much people, and was moved with compassion toward them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd: [LUKE, and he received them,] and began to teach them many things, [LUKE, and spake unto them of the kingdom of God, and healed [their sick, even all] them that had need of healing,] [MAT. XIV. 14. LUKE IX.—11.]

John VI. 3

And, in prosecution of this design, that he might be heard and seen with the greater advantage, Jesus went up into a mountain, and there sat down with his disciples, and the multi-

4 tudes about him. And indeed it was a season of the year which admitted it; for the spring was now so far advanced, that the passover, a grand feast of the Jews, was near[e].

JOHN VI. 3. And Jesus went up into a mountain, and there he sat with his disciples.

4 And the passover, a feast of the Jews, was nigh.

And

[e] The passover, a feast of the Jews, was near.] Almost all who have compiled harmonies of the gospels have concluded that this was at least the third passover of our Lord's public ministry; and Sir Isaac Newton reckons it the fourth. See note [a] on John ii. 13. p. 136.) But Mr. Manne advances a most singular hypothesis, which is, that it was no passover at all, but was the feast of Pentecost: (Dissert. p. 163.) But he has no authority for making such an alteration, all the old manuscripts and versions agreeing with the received reading, which therefore should not be changed without urgent necessity; whereas there is no necessity at all for it in this place: nor is it possible that this should be, as he supposes, the feast of pentecost, following the first passover of Christ's ministry; because such things are expressly said to have happened between that passover and this feast, as could not be crowded into the narrow compass assigned them on this scheme. For, according to Mr. Manne's scheme, the passover happened on April the 2d, the feast of pentecost on May the 23d, and this miracle of feeding the five thousand at the latter end of April. Now he himself allows that, after the first passover [at which he staid long enough to work many miracles, and to have a conference with Nicodemus,] Jesus [having, as John tells us, chap. iii. 22. tarried some time with his disciples in Judea, and made so many disciples there that he alarmed the Pharisees; see John iv. 1.] went through Samaria; and after having spent two days at Sichar, [and every hour in such a circumstance is important,]

SECT. LXXVIII.

LUKE IX. 12. And when the day began to wear away, [MARK, and was now far spent,] [and it was evening;] then [his disciples] even the twelve, came [MARK, unto him and said, This is a desart place, and now the time is far passed,] send the multitude away, that they may go into the towns and country round about, and lodge, [MARK, and buy themselves bread,] and get victuals: [MARK, for they have nothing to eat.] [MAT. XIV. 15. MARK VI. 35, 56.]

JOHN VI. 5. When Jesus then lift up his eyes, and saw a great company come unto him, he saith unto Philip, Whence shall we buy bread, that these may eat?

6 (And this he said to prove him; for he himself knew what he would do.)

7 Philip answered him, Two hundred pennyworth of bread is

And when they had thus spent the day in a delightful attendance upon him, and it now began to decline, and indeed was so far spent that the evening came on, then some of his disciples, and particularly the twelve apostles, who were now round him, came to him, and said, This is a solitary desart place, where there is neither food nor lodging to be had, and the time of day is now far advanced; it will therefore be proper to put an end to thy discourse, and to dismiss the multitude, that they may go into the towns and country-places round about us, and find conveniences to lodge there, and may have opportunity to buy themselves bread and get other food; for they have fasted all the day, and can have nothing here to eat. LUKE IX. 12.

Then Jesus lifted up his eyes, and, seeing a great company who (as was said before) were come out of all the cities to him, he says to Philip, who, being a native of Bethsaida, was acquainted in that country, (John i. 44. sect. xxii.) How and whence shall we buy bread for the entertainment of all these people, that they may eat with me before we part? (And this he said only to try him, and to give him an opportunity of observing what followed, more attentively; for he himself very well knew what he was about to do, and had determined how to proceed. But Philip, forgetting what had been done of this kind by Elijah and Elisha, prophets so far inferior to Jesus (1 Kings xvii. 14—16. and 2 Kings iv. 4—6, 42—44.) and JOHN VI. 5 6 7 important,] came into Galilee, and taught in all their synagogues; preached the sermon on the mount; and then [having, as Luke tells us, chap. iv. 31. dwelt a while at Capernaum, and taught them on the sabbath days,] cured Peter's mother-in-law: then having cast out Legion, cured the paralytic, called Matthew, and [after having kept them with him some time, as Mark and Luke intimate, sect. lii. p. 280,] sent out the twelve apostles; and having on one sabbath vindicated his disciples for plucking the ears of corn, and on another cured the man with a withered hand, he then goes to Nazareth, [where he spent at least one sabbath;] and, after many other miracles, and the return of the twelve, goes into the desart; [John the Baptist in the mean time having been seized (for it is directly said he was at liberty after the first passover, John iii. 24.) and after frequent audiences, while Herodias long waited an opportunity to destroy him, being at length beheaded.] All these events, except those included in crotchets, Mr. Manne expressly mentions, (p. 166—171); and those that are so included, the evangelists in express words connect with the rest. Now I appeal to any unprejudiced person, whether it is possible these things could happen in a month. It may rather be doubted whether two years be sufficient for them, and others connected with them in the preceding sections. On the whole, I cannot recollect any instance in which a person of such distinguished learning and abilities has been betrayed, by love to an hypothesis, into so palpable an error.—The reader will pardon my having been so large in confuting a scheme so inconsistent with that laid down above; and will, I hope, perceive that it is proved, not only to be precarious or unlikely, but even impossible.

SECT. lxxviii. and even by Jesus himself at Cana in Galilee, (John ii. 6—11. sect. xxiii.) that he should mention such a thing, and answered him, Two hundred pennyworth of bread, or as much as could be purchased for two hundred denarii[f], which is at present all our little stock, is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little refreshment, and much less would it furnish them with a full meal; it will be necessary therefore immediately to dismiss them, that they may have time to shift for themselves.

John VI. 7.

is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little.

Mat. XIV. 16 But Jesus said to him, and to them that stood near him, who had but just now made the same proposal, They have no need to go away fasting, nor am I willing to dismiss them so without any supply; and therefore let them have food for their refreshment here; and, instead of sending them away to provide for themselves, do you make ready for them, and give ye them [something] to eat. And they say unto him, Shall we then go to any neighbouring place, and buy two hundred pennyworth of bread [and] meat for all this multitude of people, and give [it] them to eat, that it may go as far as it can? If such be thy pleasure, we shall not offer to dispute it, whatever be the consequence as to ourselves.

MAT. XIV. 16. But Jesus said unto them, They need not depart, give ye them to eat. [And they say unto him, Shall we go and buy two hundred pennyworth of bread, [LUKE, and meat for all this people,] and give them to eat?] [MARK. VI. 37. LUKE IX. 13.—]

Mark VI. 38 But, as he purposed in himself to entertain the multitude out of the little store of provisions they had, Jesus says to them, How many loaves have you here already? go and see that, and there will be no need of buying any more. Upon which one of his disciples, namely, Andrew, who was Simon Peter's brother, went to enquire; and, soon returning back with an account of what they had, he says unto him, I find there is a lad here, that has five coarse barley loaves, and two small fishes, which he would let us have; but we have no more to offer them, either of bread or meat; [and] what are they among so many, to satisfy the hunger of so great a company? And he said to them, Do you be under no concern about the scantiness of your provisions; but bring them hither to me, for even these shall suffice.

MARK VI. 38. He saith unto them, How many loaves have ye? go and see.

John VI. 8

JOHN VI. 8. One of his disciples, Andrew, Simon Peter's brother, saith unto him,

9 There is a lad here, which hath five barley loaves, and two small fishes: but [LUKE, we have no more, and] what are they among so many? [MAT. XIV. 17. MARK VI.—38. LUKE IX. 13.]

Mat. XIV. 18

MAT. XIV. 18. He said, Bring them hither to me.

And,

[f] For two hundred denarii.] This amounts to about six pounds five shillings of our money. The mention of that sum seems to intimate (as in the paraphrase) that their whole stock amounted to so much.

g There

19—And he commanded the multitude to sit down [upon the green grass;] [Luke, and he said to his disciples,] Make them all sit down by companies.] [John, Now there was much grass in the place.] [Mark VI. 39. Luke IX. 14. —John VI. 10.—]

Luke IX. 15. And they did so, and made them all sit down. [John, So the men sat down] [in ranks, by hundreds, and by fifties,] [John, in number about five thousand.] [Mark VI. 40. Luke IX.—14. John VI.—10.

Mark VI. 41. And when [John, Jesus] had taken the five loaves, and the two fishes, he looked up to heaven, and [John, when he had given thanks, he blessed [Luke, them] and brake the loaves, and [John, distributed] them to his disciples [Luke, to set before the multitude] John, that were set down,] [and the disciples gave them to the multitude;] and [John, likewise] the two fishes divided he among them all, [John,

And, when they were brought to him, he commanded the multitude to sit down upon the green grass, which at that season of the year was pretty high: and, that the distribution of the food might be more orderly, and the number of persons be the better observed, he said to his disciples, Let them be placed in order, and cause them all to sit down by companies in rows. Now there was then much grass in the place[g], in which they might sit down with ease and pleasure. SECT. LXXVIII. Mat. XIV. 19

And his disciples would no more dispute the matter with him; but they did so, as the Lord had commanded them. and caused them all to sit down though they could not see how they were to be fed. The men therefore sat down by themselves in rows, which there was room to pass between, by hundreds and by fifties, in a long square containing an hundred in rank and fifty in file:[h] and they were about five thousand in number, not to mention the women and children who were placed apart. Luke IX. 15.

And Jesus, taking the five loaves and the two fishes, looked up to heaven with great reverence and affection, and, having given thanks to his heavenly Father for the bounties of his kind Providence, and the extraordinary instance of Divine favour now to be manifested, he, in a solemn manner, blessed them, commanding upon the provisions before him that singular blessing by which they were to be multiplied by the distribution; and then he brake the loaves in pieces, and distributed them to his disciples, that they might set [them] before the multitude who were set down upon the grass as he had ordered them: and accordingly the disciples [gave them] round to all the multitude, with believing hearts and unsparing hands: and he likewise divided the two fishes Mark VI. 41.

g There was much grass in the place.] It is also said, (Mark vi. 39.) that the grass was green; as it was before the passover, but not near the feast of pentecost, when even the corn harvest was concluded. Though they sat thus on the ground, under no canopy but the sky, and had only barley bread, and, as it seems, cold, or dried fishes to eat, and probably nothing but water to drink; yet, as Mr. Henry truly and beautifully observes on Mat. xiv. 19. "There was more real grandeur displayed by the Master of this feast, than by Ahasuerus in that royal feast which was intended to shew the riches of his glorious kingdom, and the honour of his excellent majesty." See Esth. i. 4—7.

h An hundred in rank, and fifty in file.] That this is the proper import, is abundantly proved by Mr. Pierce in his Fifth Dissertation annexed to the Hebrews. This was the shortest and exactest way of ranging them, and reconciles Mark's account above with Luke's, who only speaks of their sitting down by fifties. Thus disposed, they would wait more patiently till they were served in their turns; the number would appear at once; and they would see that Christ knew it.

SECT. lxxviii.

fishes among them all, and gave them by the hands of his disciples to the whole company, supplying them with as much as they would take. And so wonderfully were the provisions increased by passing under his creating hands, that they did all eat of them till they had every one enough, and were all fully satisfied.

Mark VI. 42.

John VI. 12.

And, when they were all sufficiently filled, he says to his disciples, Let there be no waste made of any part of the Divine bounties, but gather up the broken pieces that remain, that so nothing 13 may be lost. The disciples therefore, in obedience to his word, went through the several ranks of the whole company, and picking up the pieces that were left, they gathered them together, and filled no less than twelve baskets with the very fragments of the five barley loaves, and of the two fishes, which remained over and above to them that had eaten: a quantity vastly larger than they had at first.

Mat. XIV. 21.

And yet they who had eaten of the loaves and fishes (as by the disposition of the multitude in rows the number of them might be easily computed were about five thousand men, besides women and children, who sat by themselves and might almost amount to an equal number.

John VI. 14.

The men therefore who were present upon this occasion, and were thus miraculously entertained, having seen the miracle which Jesus wrought, after all the preceding wonders of the day, were so mightily struck with it, that they said, Truly this is the great Prophet who was to come into the world, and has so long been impatiently expected by us; even the Messiah himself, whom God has appointed to rule as well as to teach his people. (Compare Deut. xviii. 18. and see also 1 Mac. xiv. 41.) And, concluding that the same miraculous power could make itself victorious over all opposition, and easily could subsist and maintain an army [i] in the greatest extremity, they

[John, as much as they would.] [Mat. XIV. —19. Luke IX. 16. John VI. 11.]

42 And they did all eat, and were filled. [Mat. XIV. 20.— Luke IX. 17.—]

John VI. 12. When they were filled, he said unto his disciples, Gather up the fragments that remain, that nothing be lost.

13 Therefore they gathered them together, and filled twelve baskets with the fragments of the five barley loaves, [Mark, and of the fishes,] which remained over and above, unto them that had eaten. [Mat. XIV.—20. Mark VI. 43. Luke IX.— 17.]

Mat. XIV. 21. And they that had eaten [of the loaves,] were about five thousand men, besides women and children. [Mat. VI. 44.]

John VI. 14. Then those men, when they had seen the miracle that Jesus did, said, This is of a truth that Prophet that should come into the world.

[i] Concluding that the same miraculous power could subsist and maintain an army.] It is certain, than an army of less than five thousand men might, under such a Leader, have accomplished the greatest events, and have obtained even universal empire, had he been pleased to exert his power to such purposes. They probably remembered how vast an host had been defeated by Gideon with only three hundred men with their trumpets and lamps (Judg. vii. 22.) not to mention Samson's slaying a thousand with a jaw-bone (Judg. xv. 15,) and other extraordinary events of this kind recorded in the Old Testament. (See 2 Kings iii. 21—24. 2 Chron. xx. 22—25. and compare Lev. xxvi. 8. They also knew that the whole body of the Jewish nation was then highly spirited with these sentiments; and might reasonably expect that legions of them would soon pour in to the standards of such a Leader.

[k] Obliged

they began to enter into measures for proclaiming his title to the kingdom of Israel, and fixing him on the throne of David his father. SECT. lxxviii.

15 – When Jesus therefore perceived that they would come and take him by force, to make him a king, [MARK, straightway he constrained his disciples to get into the ship, and to go [before him] to the other side, unto Bethsaida, while he sent away the people.] [Mat. XIV. 22. MARK VI. 45.]

Jesus therefore, knowing that they would quickly urge this proposal, and that their hearts were so much set upon it, that they were ready to come and seize him by force to make him king, was determined immediately to part with them, lest he should give umbrage to the jealousy of the Romans, and lead the people that followed him into inconvenience and ruin: he therefore immediately obliged his disciples to get into the ship in which they had come thither,[k] and to go before him to the other side of the creek, to the city of Bethsaida[l], while he dismissed the multitude, who, upon seeing his disciples go abroad, would be more easily prevailed upon to go away. And, when he had accordingly dismissed the multitude, and sent them off as well as his disciples, and the evening was now come, he again withdrew, according to his frequent custom, [and] ascended up by himself alone to a mountain in those parts to pray to his heavenly Father, in which delightful exercise he spent the greatest part of the night. John VI. 15. Mark VI. 46.

MARK VI. 46. And when he had sent them away, [and the evening was come,] he departed [JOHN, again,] [and went up,] [JOHN, himself alone] into a mountain to pray.] [MAT. XIV. 23. JOHN VI.—15.]

IMPROVEMENT.

So evidently true is it that man liveth not by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God! (Mat. iv. 4.) How wonderful did the power of Christ appear in thus multiplying the food! and how amiable his compassion, in his affectionate concern for the relief of his necessitous followers! It is to be esteemed a great happiness when the ministers of the gospel have it in their power Mark VI. 41. Mat. XIV. 16.

[k] Obliged his disciples, &c.] This phrase may intimate that they, who plainly appear to have been too fond of secular views, were rather inclined to stay, and quitted the multitude with some reluctance in what they thought so favourable a conjuncture. But it was certainly the highest prudence in Christ, considering what his purposes were, to order them away, and to dismiss them and the multitude before any thing happened which could alarm or offend even the most jealous spies, who might perhaps herd among the crowd.

[l] And to go before him to the other side to the creek to Bethsaida.] It was observed before, (Luke ix. 10, p. 411,) that they were now in in a desert place belonging to Bethsaida; which probably was divided from it by some bay or creek that run into the land: and Christ now only ordered his disciples to pass over this creek to the city of Bethsaida, where he might afterwards have joined them when he had sent away the people. But in their passage thither a great storm arose, and they were driven by a contrary wind into the midst of the sea towards Capernaum. This reconciles the place before us with the beginning of the next section, where, notwithstanding the direction Christ had given them to go before him to Bethsaida, we find them going to Capernaum, which lay on the other side of the lake. Compare note a, page 419.

SECT. LXXVIII.

Mat. XIV. 16.

John VI. 11.

15

12

Mat. XIV. 23.

power to assist men in their temporal as well as spiritual necessities; and it is peculiarly incumbent upon them thus to do good and communicate: for with such sacrifices from their hands God is peculiarly well pleased, and the success of their ministry may be greatly promoted by them. (Heb. xiii. 16.)

The disciples received from the hand of Christ the food they delivered to the people: and so should ministers be concerned, that they may receive from Christ, what they dispense to others, as the bread of life, and that they also at the same time may live upon it, as the support of their own souls. How great an honour is it to be employed as stewards of the mysteries of God! Let not immoderate secular cares, let not the desire of worldly riches or greatness interrupt us in this blessed work! Christ withdrew from those who would have made him king: ill therefore does it become his disciples to pursue earthly grandeur; and most unworthy is it of his ministers to act as if his kingdom were of this world. May we learn in every state to be content! (Phil. iv. 11.) In want may we cheerfully trust Providence! In plenty, may we not wantonly abuse it! but learn, by his command of gathering up the fragments even of his miraculous feast, a wise frugality in the use of our enjoyments; that nothing may be lost, nor a reserve be wanting, by which the streams of future liberality may be fed!

When the day had been thus employed, Christ retired to a mountain to pray. Thus must secret devotion attend our public labours for the instruction and salvation of men, if we would secure that Divine blessing, without which, neither the most eloquent preaching, nor the most engaging and benevolent conduct, can command or promise success.

SECT. LXXIX.

As the disciples were upon the lake they are overtaken by a storm; and Christ comes to them, walking on the sea, and stills the tempest. Mat. XIV. 24, to the end. Mark VI. 47, to the end. John VI. 16—21.

JOHN VI. 16.

SECT. LXXIX.

John VI. 16.

17

IT was before observed, that, after the miraculous feeding of the five thousand, Christ ordered his disciples to depart, and go before him to Bethsaida; and accordingly, when the evening was come, his disciples went down to the sea [side;] And, having entered into the ship which waited for them, and put off from land, they quickly met with a cross wind that changed their course, and were soon driven farther from the shore than they designed; so that, instead of getting

JOHN VI. 16.

AND, when even was now come, his disciples went down unto the sea; [MARK VI. 47.—]

17 And entered into a ship, and went over the sea towards Capernaum: and it was now dark, [MARK, and the ship was in the midst the midst of the sea :] and Jesus was not come unto them,] MARK, but was alone on the land.] [MAT. XIV. 24.—MARK VI. 47.]

getting to Bethsaida, they were going to the other side of the sea towards Capernaum [a]: and, night coming on, it was now dark, and the ship was in the midst of the sea, they did not exactly know where. Now Jesus was not yet come to them [b], [but was] still where they left him, by himself alone on the land, employed in secret devotion on the mountain to which he retired. SECT. lxxix. John VI. 17.

18 And the sea arose, by reason of a great wind that blew, [and the ship was tossed with waves; for the wind was contrary.] [MARK, unto them.] [MAT. XIV. —24. MARK VI. 48.]

In the mean time they were in circumstances of great danger and distress; for the sea arose in a very tempestuous manner, by reason of a violent storm of wind which blew hard upon it; and the vessel was tossed by the swelling waves; for the wind was contrary to them, and had driven them far out of their intended course. 18

19—So when they had rowed about five and twenty or thirty furlongs, [in the fourth watch of the night, Jesus] [MARK, saw them toiling in rowing, and cometh unto them walking upon the sea, and

So when they had rowed about twenty-five or thirty furlongs, or something more than a league [c], in the beginning of the fourth watch of the night, or about three o'clock in the morning [d], Jesus, who knew the distress they were in, perceiving that they were weary with rowing, and in vain attempted to weather the storm, came to them, walking on the sea [e], by his miraculous 19

a Were going to the other side of the sea towards Capernaum.] This exactly expresses what is said in the original: ηρχοντο περαν της θαλασσης εις Καπερναουμ: and I cannot but look upon it as an argument that Bethsaida lay on the east side of the sea of Tiberias (though most of our maps have placed it in a different situation,) since Capernaum is allowed by all to have been situated on the western shore, and is here represented as lying on the opposite side to Bethsaida, from which they were driven over the sea to Capernaum. (Compare note l, page 417.) This situation of Bethsaida is likewise confirmed by Josephus, (Bell. Jud. lib. ii. cap. 9. (al. 8. § 1,) who calls it by the name of Julias; which Pliny also speaks of, as on the eastern side of the lake of Gennesareth. See Plin. Nat. Hist. lib. v. cap. 15, and Lightfoot's Cent. Chorog. in Mat. cap. 93.

b Now Jesus was not yet come to them.] It is a great imperfection of our language that we have no proper copulative particle but [and;] which, is here so much the more unhappy, as in laying together the whole narration of the evangelists, the use of that particle is much more frequent than it would have been in any single one. I choose therefore here, and in some other places, to change it for the word [now,] which in this connection signifies almost, if not entirely, the same thing.

c When they had rowed about twenty-five or thirty furlongs.] Probably, when they found the wind so violent, they were afraid of being shipwrecked if they came near the shore: and therefore, having perhaps sailed a while before the wind, they now rowed out to sea: for, as they must have been several hours at sea, one can hardly imagine that with so brisk a gale they made no more way in all this time than a little above a league; unless we impute it to their having laboured all they could to avoid crossing the sea and to get to Bethsaida.

d In the fourth watch of the night.] The Jewish night was divided into four watches, each containing about three of our hours, especially so near the equinox. The first began at six in the evening, the second at nine, the third at midnight, and the fourth at three in the morning. (See Godwin's Moses and Aaron, book iii. chap. 1.) F. Calmet (in the word hours) thinks they learned this division from the Romans. See Veget. de Re militari, lib. iii. cap. 8. and Pitisc. Lexic. in Vigil.

e Walking on the sea.] This was thought so impracticable, that the picture of two feet walking on the sea was an Egyptian hieroglyphic for an impossible thing. And culous power rendering his own body lighter than usual, or strengthening the waves to bear it: and, farther to exercise their faith and courage, he seemed, at first, as if he would have passed by them. And when the disciples, by that little light, which the reflection of the moon on the water afforded them [f], saw him walking on the sea, and passing near the ship, not perfectly discerning who it was, they were much terrified, saying, It is certainly an apparition, for no human body could thus be supported by the water: and they had such a dread of what might be the consequence, that they cried out aloud for fear. For they all saw him; and, notwithstanding the miraculous power that he had lately given them over evil spirits (Mat. x. 1, p. 388), yet were they greatly troubled. And therefore, to deliver them from that anxiety, he immediately spoke to them, and said, Take courage; for it is I, your Lord and Master: be not afraid of me, who am your Friend; nor of the violent tempest, which cannot hurt you while under my protection.

18

SECT. lxxix.

Then, as they knew his voice, they presently began to lay aside their fears; and Peter, whose natural temper was remarkably warm and forward, immediately answering, said unto him, Lord, if it indeed be thou, who art walking on the sea, as I now apprehend it is, I am so far from being afraid of the tempest in thy presence, while I continue in the ship, that I am willing thou shouldest, if thou pleasest, command me to come to thee even upon the water, and I will immediately venture to do it. And Jesus, that he thus might exercise his faith, and, by convincing him of his weakness, might give a check at the same time to his excessive confidence, complied with his proposal, and said to him, If thou hast faith and courage to attempt it, come then, and make the trial: and Peter, being now assured it was indeed his Master, came down from the ship, and, fully satisfied that he was able to uphold and bear him up, walked on the water for a while, to come unto Jesus: But, soon perceiving that the wind was very strong, and the sea raging with great violence, he was afraid of being lost; and,

Mat. XIV. 26.

Mark VI. 50.

Mat. VI. 28.

29

30

and would have passed by them.[[MAT. XIV. 25. MARK VI.—48.]

MAT. XIV. 26. And when the disciples saw him walking on the sea, [JOHN, and drawing nigh unto the ship] they were [JOHN, afraid] saying, It is a spirit; and they cried out for fear.—[MARK VI. 49. JOHN VI.—19.]

MARK VI. 50. For they all saw him, and were troubled. And immediately he talked with them, and saith unto them, Be of good cheer, it is I, be not afraid. [MAT. XIV. 27. JOHN VI. 20.]

MAT. VI. 28. And Peter answered him, and said, Lord, if it be thou, bid me come unto thee on the water.

29 And he said, Come. And, when Peter was come down out of the ship, he walked on the water, to go to Jesus.

30 But, when he saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid: and in the scripture it is mentioned as the prerogative of God, that he alone treadeth upon the waves of the sea, Job ix. 8.

f By that little light, &c.] It is well known that it is never entirely dark on the water; not to urge that the moon might perhaps now be in the last quarter, as it must have been if this was about three weeks before the passover.

and beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me.

31 And immediately Jesus stretched forth his hand, and caught him, and said unto him, O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?

MARK VI. 51. And he went up unto them into the ship; [and when they were come into the ship,] [JOHN, they willingly received him,] and the wind ceased: [JOHN, and immediately the ship was at the land whither they went:] and they were sore amazed in themselves beyond measure, and wondered. [MAT. XIV. 32. JOHN VI. 21.]

52 For they considered not the miracle of the loaves, for their heart was hardened.

and, his faith failing him, he presently began to sink[g], and cried out in a great consternation of spirit, saying, Lord, save me, or I shall be swallowed up in a moment. And immediately Jesus stretching out his hand, laid hold on him; and, to remind him of his unbelief, said to him, O thou of little faith, why didst thou doubt of my protection, when I was so near; when thou hadst my commission to make the trial, and hadst in part experienced my power in supporting thee thus far on the waves? SEPT. LXXIV. Mat. XIV. 31

And, taking Peter with him, he ascended to them into the bark[h]; and, when they were come aboard, they, that were there, received him with the utmost pleasure, as the great pledge of their common safety. And they quickly found the happy effects of his presence: for all the fury of the wind now ceased at once; and, what was yet more surprising, the ship was immediately at the point of land to which they were going. And they were all exceedingly amazed in themselves, and astonished beyond measure[i], as if they had never before seen any exertion of his miraculous power. For their heart was so hardened, and 52 their mind so insensible, that they considered not the yet more wonderful and glorious [miracle of the] loaves, which but the day before they had seen multiplied in so extraordinary a manner as to display even a creating power[k]. Mark VI. 51,

Then

[g] He began to sink.] He probably could swim, as most fishermen can (compare John xxi. 7.) and perhaps he might venture on the attempt he now made with some secret dependance on his art, which God, for wise reasons, suffered to fail him. The word καταποντίζεσθαι is very expressive, and may intimate that he felt himself sinking with such a weight that he had no hope of recovering himself, and expected nothing but that he should go directly to the bottom of the sea.

[h] Into the bark.] Though the evangelists generally use the word πλοιον, which signifies any vessel in which men sail on the sea, I have sometimes varied it a little, in order to prevent that ill effect which the repetition of it so frequently as it occurs would have on the ear in reading; and have here called it a bark, that it may not be imagined like our modern ships. Accordingly John calls it πλοιαριον, or a little vessel; chap. vi. 22. Compare John xxi. 3, 8.

[i] Exceedingly amazed—and astonished beyond measure.] The words λιαν εκ περισσου εξισανλο, και εθαυμαζον, are too emphatical to be exactly rendered; but this is plainly the sense of them: and the accurate reader will observe that I suppose the words λιαν εκ περισσου to be equally connected with εθαυμαζον and εξισανλο.

[k] As to display even a creating power.] Had not this been done, it is hard to imagine how twelve baskets full of fragments could have been taken up: it was therefore in itself (as the evangelist plainly intimates) a more certain and glorious miracle than the ceasing of the wind immediately on his coming into the ship. Their speedy landing after this must also have increased their astonishment. Considering this instance, and that of Philip, Acts viii. 39, 40, we have room to admire the condescension of Christ, in submitting so often to the fatigues of journeying on foot from one place to another, when he could at pleasure have commanded angels to transport him. With equal ease he could have walked ashore from the waves of the sea, but with a most edifying modesty he avoided the ostentation of it.

SECT. lxxix.

Then they that were about him, even all that were in the ship, came and worshipped him, as in a rapture of wonder, devotion and joy, falling down at his feet with the utmost reverence, and saying, We are now convinced that thou art indeed the Son of God, and hast an unlimited power over the whole creation.

Mat. XIV. 33. Then they that were in the ship came and worshipped him, saying, Of a truth thou art the Son of God.

34 And, when they had thus passed over the lake, they came to a part of the land of Gennesareth, and put to shore not far from Capernaum[1], to which, it was observed before (p 418), their course was tending. And when they came out of the vessel, as it was a place where Jesus had often been, they that were present when he landed, immediately knew him: and, though it was so early in the morning, the news of his arrival quickly spread through all the neighbouring parts. For they were ready to inform each other of his coming; and the men of that place, who knew him, no sooner were apprised of his arrival, but presently they sent out, and ran to every place in all that country round about, to give notice to their neighbours, that Jesus was there, and that they now again should have the privilege of his preaching and working miracles among them: and they began to carry about the sick in beds, and brought unto him all that were diseased, to the place where they heard he was.

34 And when they were gone over, they came into the land of Gennesaret, [and drew to the shore.] [MARK VI. 53.]

MARK VI. 54. And when they were come out of the ship, straightway they knew him.

55 [And when the men of that place had knowledge of him, they sent out,] and ran through that whole region round about, and began to carry about in beds those that were sick,] and brought unto him all that were diseased,] where they heard he was. [MAT. XIV. 35.]

56 And this was indeed the general custom whereever he came: as soon as he was entered into any towns or cities, or country [villages,] they laid the sick in the most public streets through which they expected he would pass, and entreated him that they might at least touch the fringe of his garment; and as many as touched him, believing in his power and his readiness to heal them, were perfectly recovered, how extreme soever their illness had been.

56 And whithersoever he entered, into villages, or cities, or country, they laid the sick in the streets, and besought him, that they might touch, if it were but the border of his garment: and as many as touched him were made [perfectly] whole. [MAT. XIV. 36.]

Mat. XIV. 33.

Mark VI. 54.

IMPROVEMENT.

John VI. 17, 18.

THUS it still pleases Christ to exercise the faith of his people, that he may strengthen their dependance on him, and demonstrate

1 To the land of Gennesareth, and put to shore not far from Capernaum.] The land of Gennesareth was a large tract of ground on the western shore of the lake, in part of which Capernaum appears from hence to have been situated. For, though Matthew and Mark only speak of their coming to the land of Gennesareth, and putting to shore there, it is plain, from John's account, that Jesus at his landing came to Capernaum; for it was there the people found him that followed him in the morning from the other side of the sea. Compare John vi. 22, 24, 25, in the next section, and ver. 59, sect. lxxxii.

strate at once his compassion and his power. Thus are storms permitted oftentimes to rise around them, and for a while they are left in darkness, and are tossed with tempests: but he is near at hand, even when they think him at the remotest distance; and when he seems to be passing by them, as regardless of their danger and distress, he has designs of grace and mercy to them, and acts in such a way on purpose to quicken and excite them to a greater earnestness and fervour in their applications to him. Happy would the Christian be, could he always discern his Lord and always conceive of him aright! but alas, how often does he appear to the disordered mind as the object of terror rather than of confidence! and, in a day of darkness, while he may seem to treat his suffering people with neglect, instead of seeking him with a more earnest importunity, how are they ready to be overwhelmed with fears, and to conclude he has forgotten them! SECT. LXXX. Mark VI. 48. 49

At the command of Jesus, Peter ventured to go to him on the sea. And through what storms and dangers may we not safely venture, if we are sure that our Lord calls us! Yet the rebuke, which he suffered, may warn us not rashly to throw ourselves on unnecessary trials, lest our excess of confidence end in fear and disgrace. Modesty and caution will adorn our other virtues, and render us amiable in the eyes of the humble Jesus. Mat. XIV. 28, 29. 30

In how many circumstances of life does the Christian appear to his own imagination like Peter beginning to sink in the waves! But in the time of our distress, like him, let us cry to Jesus for help; and, while we are lifting up the hands of faith and prayer, we may humbly hope that Christ will stretch forth his omnipotent arm for our rescue. Let every experience of this kind, and all the seasonable aid he is from time to time imparting to us, establish our dependance on him, and enforce our obedience to him, as the Son of God. May Divine Grace deliver us from that hardness of heart, that stupidity and insensibility of mind, which sometimes remains unconvinced in the midst of evidence, and unaffected under the most moving illustrations of his abilities and willingness to help us! 30, 31 32, 33 Mark VI. 52.

SECT. LXXX.

Our Lord, being followed by the multitude to Capernaum, cautions them against those worldly views with which they sought him, and declares himself to be the bread of life. John VI. 22—40.

John VI. 22.

THE day following when the people, which

John VI. 22.

IN the mean time, while Jesus was thus charitably employed in healing those, who were brought SECT. LXXX. John VI. 22.

SECT. LXXX.

brought to him in the places near the shore, from whence he soon went forwards to Capernaum, on the morrow after he had fed the five John VI. 22. thousand, great search was made for him by those whom he had sent away the night before: for they were so affected with the miraculous entertainment he had given them, that there were many of the multitude, who, though they might withdraw to a little distance on his dismissing the assembly (Mark vi. 46, p. 417), yet still continued on the other side of the sea that night, hoping to have another interview with him in the morning; and, as they saw there was no other vessel there on the coast, but that one, into which his disciples entered, when they departed in the evening, and knew that Jesus did not go with his disciples into the vessel, but that his disciples went away by themselves, leaving him there to spend the night alone, they made no question of his 23 being still on that side of the sea. But in the morning they perceived that he was gone, and presently determined to go after him: and, though there were no vessels there the night before, yet were they quickly furnished with an opportunity of following him; for there came other vessels very early from Tiberias, and put to shore nigh to the place where they had eat the bread and fishes after the Lord had given thanks, and commanded such a miraculous blessing upon
24 them. The multitude therefore, when they saw that neither Jesus nor his disciples were there on that side, went also themselves immediately aboard the vessels, that were now arrived, as many of them as could, and came to Capernaum, seeking for Jesus with all the appearance of the most 25 eager importunity. And, when they had found him on the other side of the sea, in the synagogue of Capernaum (see ver. 59), as soon as the worship was over, and before they quitted the place, they accosted him with the greatest respect, and said unto him, Rabbi, when and how camest thou hither? for, as thou didst not go last night with thy disciples, we expected to have found thee on the other side of the sea, and know not when thou couldest come, or what imaginable way thou couldest have of crossing the water.
26 But Jesus, modestly waving the recital of those extraordinary circumstances which attended his passage, diverted the discourse to a yet more important and edifying subject; and, knowing, by an which stood on the other side of the sea, saw, that there was none other boat there, save that one, whereinto his disciples were entered, and that Jesus went not with his disciples into the boat, but that his disciples were gone away alone:

23 (Howbeit, there came other boats from Tiberias, nigh unto the place where they did eat bread after that the Lord had given thanks:

24 When the people therefore saw that Jesus was not there, neither his disciples, they also took shipping, and came to Capernaum, seeking for Jesus.

25 And when they had found him on the other side of the sea, they said unto him, Rabbi, when camest thou hither?

26 Jesus answered them and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Ye seek me, not because cause ye saw the miracles, but because ye did eat of the loaves, and were filled.

an intimate penetration of their very hearts, that they were governed only by carnal motives in this attendance upon him, humble and zealous as it might appear, he answered them with great solemnity, and said, Verily, verily, I say unto you, You seek me, not because you have seen the miracles, that I perform, and are convinced by them that I am a Divine Teacher, but because you have eaten of the loaves and were filled, and have from thence concluded that you shall make yourselves rich and great by following me. But these are mean and may be fatal views: and I would form you to nobler and wiser sentiments: labour not therefore so much to procure the meat which perishes, and can only support the mortal part of your nature[a]; but rather be solicitous to obtain Divine knowledge and instruction, that meat which endures to eternal life, and will nourish your souls to endless felicity; this is that which the Son of man will most readily give you; for him has God the Great Father of all, in mercy to his creatures, sent into the world for this blessed purpose, and sealed with this miraculous power, which he daily displays[b], as an authentic proof of his divine mission.

SEPT. LXX.

John VI. 26.

27 Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life, which the Son of man shall give unto you: for him hath God the Father sealed.

27

28 Then said they unto him, What shall we do, that we might work the works of God?

They therefore, that they might appear willing to receive his instructions as well as his bounties, said unto him, What must we do, that we may so work the works of God as to secure his favour to eternal life?

28

29 Jesus answered and said unto them, This is the work of God, that ye believe on him, whom he hath sent.

Jesus replying said unto them, Think not of meriting the Divine favour by any thing you can do yourselves; for this is the great work of God, which he requires above all things, and which he will be ready to accept, that you believe on him, whom he has sent, crediting his message, and venturing your souls upon his power and grace.

29

Then

a Labour not to procure the meat which perishes.] Hardly any one can imagine our Lord intended to prohibit men's labouring for the subsistence of their bodies. Most of those who attended him probably had no other support than their labour: but his intent was plainly to declare how much the interest of the soul was to be preferred to that of the body. (See note h on Mat. xii. 7, p. 270. Εργαζεσθαι βρωσιν is to labour to procure meat.

b Him has God the Father sealed.] Some have ingeniously conjectured, that this may allude to a custom which princes might have when making grand entertainments, to give a commission under their hand and seal, or perhaps to deliver a signet, to those whom they appointed to preside in the management of them: (see Elsner, Vol. I. p. 311, 312. Though it may possibly be sufficient to say that to seal is a general phrase for authorising by proper credentials, whatever the purpose be for which they are given; or for marking a person out as wholly devoted to the service of him whose seal he bears.

c Some

SECT. lxxx.

John VI. 30.

Then, though they just before had seen such an astonishing miracle, and several of them lived in the neighbourhood of Capernaum, where he had so long multiplied those wonders, yet some of them were so unreasonable, that they said to him after all the miracles that he had wrought[c], If thou wouldest have us to regard thee as invested with so high a character, that far exceeds whatever has been claimed by any one before, thou shouldest produce some signal evidence of a superior kind to all that has been done by others: what sign therefore shewest thou from heaven, that we may see [it,] and believe thee? What dost thou perform more than others, or even equal to what Moses did, that we should treat thee with so extraordinary a regard? Thou didst indeed yesterday feed some thousands of us in an extraordinary manner with barley-bread: but our fathers, who were incomparably more numerous than that assembly, did, under the conduct of Moses, eat manna, a far more delicious food, in the wilderness, even forty years; as it is written (Psal lxxviii. 24.) "He gave them bread from heaven to eat;" and, when thou shalt give us as glorious a demonstration of thy mission, we will pay thee an equal regard.

30 They said therefore unto him, What sign shewest thou then that we may see, and believe thee? What dost thou work?

31 Our fathers did eat manna in the desart; as it is written, He gave them bread from heaven to eat.

32 Then Jesus said to them again, Verily, verily, I say, and affirm it unto you, how strange soever it may appear, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven, which best deserves so honourable a name; but this you are supplied with by my Father, who, sending me among you as your Instructor and Redeemer, giveth you now the true and most excellent bread from heaven. For that is indeed the bread of God, and may most justly claim the title, which descendeth from the highest heaven[d], whereas manna fell only from the clouds or the inferior region of the air; and which giveth life and true happiness to the whole world

32 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Moses gave you not that bread from heaven; but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven.

33 For the bread of God is he, which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world.

c Some of them were so unreasonable that they said to him.] The sentiments of those that speak to Christ in this discourse are so various (compare ver. 34, 41, 42), and the evangelist so expressly declares that there was a debate between some and others of them, ver. 52, that I think it would be wrong to imagine these to have been the perverse and ungrateful sentiments of the whole multitude, who had followed him with so much eagerness from place to place for several days.

d That is indeed the bread of God, which descendeth from heaven, &c.] It is necessary to translate ο καταβαινων, &c. in this ambiguous manner, that we may not supersede the explication which our Lord gives in ver. 35. Dr. Clarke has justly observed this; and it is of great importance to apply it to many other passages, where too clear and full a paraphrase of what is explained professedly in some subsequent verses would only serve to flatten the whole. Compare note c on Mark iv. 3, sect. lxv.

e Some

SECT. lxxx.

John VI. 34.

world of believers, whereas what Moses gave only relieved the temporal necessities of one particular nation.

34 Then said they unto him, Lord, evermore give us this bread.

They therefore, when they heard him speaking of so excellent a gift, were presently desirous to obtain it; and, though as yet they did not fully understand what he intended by this bread, some of the wiser and better part of them[e] had such a notion of its excellence, that they said to him, Lord, give us evermore this bread, on which our life depends, and let us always live upon this heavenly manna.

35 And Jesus said unto them, I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger; and he that believeth on me shall never thirst.

Then, for a farther explication of this important truth, Jesus said to them, I am indeed the bread of life[f]; nor is bread so necessary to the support of your bodies, as a believing regard to me is to the life of your souls; he therefore that comes to me and makes his application aright, shall never hunger; and he that truly believes in me shall never thirst any more; but may depend upon it that he shall find the most restless desires of his soul satisfied, and, conscious of the noblest refreshment and nourishment already received, shall grow up to a state of everlasting complete satisfaction and enjoyment. 35

36 But I said unto you, that ye also have seen me, and believe not.

But, valuable as these blessings of my grace are, you are little disposed to pursue and accept them: for I have already told you (ver. 26), that you have even seen me, and beheld the miracles, that I perform; and yet are so perverse and obstinate that you believe not [in me,] and will not be prevailed upon to come to me for life and happiness. 36

37 All that the Father giveth me, shall come to me; and him that cometh to me, I will in no wise cast out.

Nevertheless, though you reject me, yet I shall not be universally rejected, nor shall the purposes of my mission be entirely frustrated; for all that the Father has graciously chosen to himself, and whom he giveth to me in consequence of a peculiar covenant to be sanctified and saved by me, will certainly at length come to me[g]; and, 37

on

[e] Some of the wiser and better part of them.] See before, note [c] on ver. 30.

[f] I am the bread of life.] Though indeed it is very usual with the sacred writers to represent Divine instructions as the food of the soul, and to compare them to delicious and nourishing diet (see Psal. xix. 10; cxix. 103; Prov. ix. 5; Job xxiii 12; Jer. xv. 16; and Heb. v. 12, 14); yet I can recollect no instance in which the Instructor himself, as such, is called Food, or any are said to eat him; much less in which, as below, they are exhorted to eat his flesh, and drink his blood: so that Dr. Clarke's laboured and ingenious criticism on this passage (in the xiith of his Seventeen Sermons) is far from being satisfactory; and, however clear it may be of any such design, I fear it has misled many to a neglect of that great doctrine of Christ's atonement, to which there seems in this context so express a reference.

[g] All, that the Father giveth me, will come to me] I have given that sense of this celebrated and important text, which on serious, and, I hope, impartial consideration, appeared

SECT. LXXX.

John VI. 37.

on the other hand, if any of you find yourselves disposed to such a believing application to me, you have no reason to be terrified with any suspicion that you are excluded from hope by any secret transactions between the Father and me; for I declare it to you as an universal truth, and perfectly consistent with the former, That him that cometh to me, whoever he may be, I will by no means cast out[h], nor shall he be rejected or refused on any consideration whatsoever. And you have sufficient reason to believe this, because I came down from heaven into this lower world, not to do my own will, or to seek any separate interest of my own, but to do the will and to seek the glory of him that sent me. And this is the will of the Father who sent me, That of all the whole body of my people whom he has given me, and committed to my care, I should lose none, not even the meanest member, but should assuredly raise it up at the last day in complete glory and happiness. Or, to express it in more general terms, even this is the will of him that sent me, That every one who views the Son with an attentive eye[i], and, in consequence of that view, cordially believes on him, receiving him by faith, and trusting in him as an all-sufficient Saviour, should have eternal life; and I will accordingly raise him up at the last day, and make him

38 For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me.

39 And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, That of all which he hath given me, I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day.

40 And this is the will of him that sent me, That every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him may have everlasting life: and I will raise him up at the last day.

appeared to me most agreeable to the words themselves, and to the general tenor of scripture. (See especially John xvii. 2, 6, 9, 11, 24.) Mr. Le Clerc's gloss upon them appears to me unnatural, and Dr. Whitby's frivolous.—I do not mean in these notes to enter largely into any kind of controversy; but dare not suppress or disguise what I am in my conscience persuaded to be the sense of scripture, merely because it is not agreeable to the general taste of the age to take it in that view.—I render ηξει will come, because the word does not necessarily imply any thing more than the certainty of the event; and I would not lead any, merely in dependance on a translation, to build a weak argument on the word SHALL, which it is well known has sometimes been done.

h And him that cometh to me, whoever he may be, I will by no means cast out.] To limit this latter clause by the former is not only missing but contradicting the design of Christ, and destroying the wise and beautiful turn of this text; than which I think few more important for stating some great doctrines of the gospel which have unhappily been the foundation of much eager and uncharitable dispute.—The expression ου μη εκβαλω εξω is extremely beautiful and emphatical. It represents an humble supplicant as coming into the house of some prince or other great person to cast himself at his feet, and to commit himself to his protection and care. He might fear his petition might be rejected, and he thrust out of doors: but our Lord assures him to the contrary. His house and heart are large enough to receive, shelter and supply all the indigent and distressed. God only knows how many thousand souls have been sensibly supported by these gracious words.

i Every one who views the Son with an attentive eye.] Thus the words πας, ο θεωρων τον υιον, should undoubtedly be rendered. There are many other places where θεωρειν signifies to view with attention. Compare Mat. xxvii. 55. Luke x. 18. xxi. 6. John xvii. 24. Acts iii. 16. and Heb. vii. 4.

him completely happy, both in soul and body, in the enjoyment of a glorious immortality; nor are there any secret purposes and decrees of God inconsistent with the sincerity of such a declaration. SECT. LXXX. John VI. 40.

IMPROVEMENT.

How gratefully should we acknowledge the Divine goodness, in giving this true bread from heaven for the life of the world; and how solicitous should we be, that by a true faith we may feed upon it! In the midst of so many ensnaring circumstances, let us be strictly watchful over ourselves, that the vigour of our pursuits and labours may not be laid out on the meat, which perishes, to the forgetfulness of that, which endures to eternal life: but acknowledging those authentic seals, by which Christ is marked out to that important trust, may we apply to him as sent of God the Father to be the Author of eternal salvation, and come to him to be partakers of his saving benefits! Ver. 32, 33 27 40

It must surely grieve us to observe the neglect and contempt with which he is too frequently treated; but it may comfort us that there yet remains a remnant according to the election of grace, (Rom. xi. 5.) All that the Father giveth him, will come to him; and blessed be God, that this appears to be no inconsiderable number. Secret things belong to the Lord our God, (Deut. xxix. 29.) let it therefore be our care to make first our calling, and then, by a happy consequence, our election sure, (2 Pet. i. 10.) Whatever discouragements may arise in our way, may we fly to cast ourselves at the foot of Christ; and then we may be sure he will never on any consideration cast us out, but will receive us in the arms of his almighty compassion, and, having sheltered and maintained us in his house on earth, will at length conduct us safely to the presence of his glory and to the blessed abodes of complete felicity! 37

SECT. LXXXI.

Christ having represented himself as the bread of life, enlarges on the necessity and benefit of feeding upon him as such. John VI. 41—58.

John VI. 41.

THE Jews then murmured at him, because he said, I am the bread

John VI. 41.

THUS did our Lord declare himself to be the bread of life, which God had given them from heaven; but then, as this agreed not with their worldly views, the Jews who were about him were so far from receiving the declaration SECT. LXXXI. John VI. 41.

SECT. lxxxi.

John VI. 41.

with a becoming regard, that on the contrary, they took offence and murmured at it, because he said, I am the bread which came down from heaven, to feed and support the Divine life in the bread which came down from heaven.

42 soul. And, being strangers to the doctrine of his miraculous conception and Divine nature, they said among themselves, Is not this Jesus, the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we have long known[a], having lived many years in the neighbourhood? How is it therefore, that this man should claim so high a character? or how does he presume to say, that I came down from heaven?

42 And they said, Is not this Jesus the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know? how is it then that he saith, I came down from heaven?

43 Jesus therefore, who well knew all their secret suspicions, how artfully soever they might be whispered and concealed, replied and said unto them, Do not murmur among yourselves on this occasion; but rather set yourselves seriously to reflect on your present state, and your true interest. I know indeed that your prejudices against me are strong, and without the influences of Divine grace will prove invincible and fatal: for such is the moral blindness and de-

43 Jesus therefore answered and said unto them, Murmur not among yourselves.

44 generacy of human nature, that no man can by a saving faith come and make his application to me, unless the Father who has sent me, draw him by the sweet but powerful influences of his Holy Spirit on the heart[b]; and [then] I will raise him up at the last day, and finally make him a partaker of the complete felicity and blessedness of 44 No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me, draw him: and I will raise him up at the last day.

45 my kingdom. For so it is written in the prophets, (Isa. liv. 13. and Jer. xxxi. 34.) "And they shall all be taught by God[c], by Divine influences

45 It is written in the prophets, And they shall be all taught of God. Every man therefore a Whose father and mother we have long known.] Dr. Wells argues from hence that Joseph was yet alive; but it may signify only, We know who his father and mother were. It is at least certain that Joseph died quickly after; for if he had been living, Jesus, when dying on the cross, would not have consigned his mother to the care of John. John xix. 26, 27. (Compare note b on John ii. 1. sect. xxiii. and Mat. xiii. 55, p. 385.)

b Unless the Father who has sent me, draw him.] The sense I have given in the paraphrase seems so natural from a view of the words themselves and of their connection, as well as so agreeable to the whole tenor of scripture, that I wonder so many learned and ingenious men should have laboured to disguise it by other interpretations. Dr. Clarke explains it as an intimation, that to be well grounded in natural religion is the best preparative for receiving the Christian religion. But this, though an apparent truth, falls far short of the sense of the passage; especially considering what is afterwards said of being taught by God, and not merely of him, ver. 45.—The doctor observes here, that when in scripture one person is said to draw another, the word may signify either the action of the person said to draw, or of the person drawn; and unhappily produces, John xii. 32. Jer. xxxi. 3. and Hos. xi. 4. all which lie strongly against such a sense. The truth is, God's drawing does not exclude our consent to follow, and our activity in doing it; but it always includes a Divine agency. Compare Judg. iv. 7. (See Dr. Clarke's Sermons, Vol. III. No. 3.)

c Taught by God; διδακτοι τυ Θευ.] The word fore that hath heard, and hath learned of the Father, cometh unto me.

fluences on their minds;" and there are many other passages much to the same purpose; (see Isa. ii. 2—5. Mic. iv. 1—4. &c.) Therefore every one, who has not only been instructed in the true nature of God, but has both heard and learned from the Father himself, by virtue of these internal and efficacious teachings of his grace, comes unto me, and cordially receives me under the character I profess. I speak this of an inward Divine teaching, and not to insinuate, that any one on earth has seen the Father, and been taught by him, as one man is by the converse of another: no one has enjoyed such an honour, except it be he, who is come to men as the great Ambassador from God: He indeed being statedly resident with him and inseparably united to him, has seen the Father, and conversed with him to a degree of intimacy and endearment, which no creature can pretend to have known. In virtue then of those ample instructions I have received from him, verily, verily, I say unto you, and testify it as a most sure and important truth, that this is the only method of salvation; and that it is he, and he alone, who believes in me, and reposes himself on me, that hath everlasting life. Remember therefore, that it is in this respect I tell you, I am the bread of life; not only as a Teacher of truth and a Messenger from God to men; but as the Great Redeemer, whom you must receive into your hearts, and on whom you must, as it were, feed by faith, if you indeed would have your life to be supported and secured.

46 Not that any man hath seen the Father, save he which is of God; he hath seen the Father.

47 Verily, verily, I say unto you, He that believeth on me, hath everlasting life.

48 I am that bread of life.

49 Your fathers did eat manna in the wilderness, and are dead:

And those who thus regard me will receive far more important blessings than Moses, of whom you have now been boasting, could possibly give. For though indeed your fathers, under the conduct of that illustrious prophet, did eat manna in the wilderness, yet it was not sufficient to maintain their life, and they are long since dead: [But] this, of which I now speak, is the true bread, which cometh down from heaven, and is of such a nature, that any one may eat of it, and have his life so nourished and supported by it, that he shall not die, but be assuredly word properly signifies, they shall be the disciples or scholars of God, who shall humbly sit down, as it were, at his feet, and receive instructions from him. This, in the latter text referred to in the paraphrase, is expressly distinguished from human instructions relating to the nature of God. Compare 1 Thess. iv. 9.

50 This is the bread which cometh down from heaven, that a man may eat thereof, and not die.

d Which

SECT. LXXXI.

edly delivered from the condemnation and ruin, to which the breach of God's righteous law has subjected every offender.

John VI. 51. Thus then I plainly tell you, how incredible soever you may think it, That I, who came down from heaven for this gracious purpose, am the living bread, or a principle of Divine life and eternal happiness to all, who shall faithfully receive me: so that if any one eat of this bread, in spite of death and the grave, he shall live for ever. And, that you may more distinctly conceive this important truth, and see the propriety of this language, I add, That the bread which I will give to such a one, is my own flesh, which I will give as an atoning sacrifice for the forfeited life of the whole world of Jews and Gentiles[d], of which every true believer shall partake.

51 I am the living bread, which came down from heaven: if any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever: and the bread that I will give, is my flesh, which I will give for the life of the world.

52 But the Jews, whose stupidity often occasioned them to mistake, and whose perverseness led them to wrest his words, did not, or would not, understand him; and therefore contended with each other, the generality of them saying[e], as if what he had said was to be taken in a literal sense, How can this man possibly give us [his] flesh to eat? What a monstrous and unintelligible doctrine is this?

52 The Jews therefore strove amongst themselves, saying, How can this man give us his flesh to eat?

53 Then Jesus replied in the same figurative language he had used before, and, without condescending to any farther explication, said to them, However you may censure it as unintelligible and absurd, yet, verily, verily, I say unto you, There is no truth more certain in itself, and more important to you; for unless, by a cordial dependance on the atonement I shall make, and by the powerful influences of Divine grace upon your hearts, you eat, as it were, the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood[f], you have no principle

53 Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you.

d Which I will give for the life of the whole world, &c.] There seems to be a beautiful gradation in this verse, compared with ver. 31. They had insinuated that feeding a few thousands with the five loaves was an inconsiderable thing, when compared with what Moses did, when he fed the whole camp of Israel; but our Lord declares the purposes of his grace and bounty to be far more extensive, as reaching the whole world, and giving life, immortal life, to all that should believe in him.

e The generality of them saying.] Had this been the language of all, there could have been no contention between them, which yet is expressly asserted.

f Eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood.] This phrase naturally expresses a lively and habitual regard to Christ as the great support of the spiritual life. The mention of his blood naturally leads to the thought of his atonement, as we are elsewhere told, We have redemption through his blood, (Eph. i. 7.) and boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, (Heb. x. 19.) The sacrament of the eucharist is plainly intended to affect our minds with a sense of these important truths, and our Lord might probably think of that intended institution, while he spoke: but as this was a future thing, and utterly unknown to his hearers, it seems to me unwarrantable to interpret

sect. lxxxi.

John VI. 54.

principle of spiritual life in you, and can have no claim to eternal happiness. For this is so important a part of faith in me, that, to declare the necessity of it, I may say (with such an alteration of my former words, ver. 40), He alone, that eats my flesh, and drinks my blood, hath eternal life; and I will most assuredly raise him up at the last day, and shew by his complete deliverance, how just a confidence he has reposed in me amidst all the contempt, with which you treat me. For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed[g]; and nothing deserves the name so well, as nothing is worthy of being called life, in comparison of that which is hereby supported. For this feeding upon me is such, that he who thus eats my flesh and drinks my blood, abides in me by an intimate and inseparable union, and I abide in him[h] by the unalienable tokens of my favour and love to nourish the Divine life in his soul: I say by the unalienable tokens of it; for as the living Father, the great source of life, has sent me into the world, and I live by the protection and care of the Father[i] who is continually dwelling in men, and communicating of his Spirit in the richest abundance to me: so he that thus eateth me, even he shall live by me, through the Spirit, which I will also communicate to him. And if you attend to these important hints that I have given, you may in general know what I meant, by saying as I have done, This is the bread that came down from heaven: and by adding (ver. 49, 50,) that it is not in this case, as it was with your fathers, who 54 Whoso eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day.

55 For my flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.

56 He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him.

57 As the living Father hath sent me, and I live by the Father; so he that eateth me, even he shall live by me.

58 This is that bread which came down from heaven: not as your fathers did eat manna interpret this text as chiefly referring to that ordinance; and nothing can be more precarious than many consequences, which have been drawn from it in that view, though some of them be authorised by very great names.

55 56 57 58

g My flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.] It might more literally be rendered, Is truly meat, and is truly drink: but the sense in which the word [indeed] is often used, gives a kind of paraphrase on the words. Just in this sense, the true light is the most excellent light, (John i. 9.) the true vine is the most noble vine (John xv. 1.) and the true bread is the most excellent and nourishing bread. See above, ver. 32.

h Abides in me, and I in him.] After these words, the Cambridge manuscript, and one of Stephens's, add, As the Father is in me, and I in the Father, verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye receive the body of the Son of man as the bread of life, ye have no life in you. Dr. Mill (in his notes here) seems to approve the addition: but I think Dr. Whitby has so fully proved it to be spurious, that I content myself with referring the reader to him (see his Examen Millii, p. 49) and to Wetstein on this text (Crit. Philol. Vol. 1. p. 885, 886.)

i I live by the protection and care of the Father.] The human and derived nature of Christ had, no doubt, the same dependance on the providence and influence of God that other creatures have: and though Christ as Mediator has life in himself (as it was said before, John v. 26, sect. xlvii.), yet was it given him of the Father, and it is he that qualifies Christ by his Spirit for the great work, for which he sent him into the world: and he accordingly is elsewhere represented as upholding him in it. Isa. xlii. 1. Compare John viii. 29, and xvi. 32.

k Not

SECT. lxxxi.

who did eat manna in the wilderness, and yet are dead[k], without having found any efficacy in it to communicate a spiritual or secure an eternal life; [but] he that eats this bread, shall live for ever.

John VI. 58.

manna, and are dead; he that eateth of this bread, shall live for ever.

IMPROVEMENT.

41, 52 THE hearers of Christ murmured, and perversely objected against his doctrine. Let not ministers now wonder, if the like capricious humour sometimes prompts their hearers to seek occasion of offence, where there is none: let them learn of their great Master in meekness, to instruct those that oppose themselves, if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the 44, 45 truth; (2 Tim. ii. 25.) Our Lord expressly asserts the necessity of being taught and drawn by the Father, in order to our knowing him, and coming to him. Let us therefore humbly seek these influences ourselves, and fix our dependance upon them in all our attempts upon others, for their conversion and edification.

48, 51 Christ here gives us line upon line, and precept upon precept, to 53, 54 illustrate and enforce this important doctrine of the necessity of regarding him as the bread of life, and of feeding by faith on his flesh and blood, which he has given for the life of the world. Let us, as we desire any part in his saving blessings, most thankfully
55 receive his flesh as meat indeed, and his blood as drink indeed. May God be merciful to those that call themselves Christians, and yet are strangers to such a believing intercourse with Christ, and to the 56, 57 derivation of spiritual life from him! If this be enthusiam, it is the enthusiasm of scripture; and the denial of forgetfulness of these important doctrines, is like a fatal palsy to the soul, which chills, as it were, all its nerves, and destroys at once its sensibility and vigour, its pleasure and usefulness.

To represent and inculcate these great truths, our Lord afterwards instituted the sacrament of his supper, in which we not only commemorate his sufferings, but our own concern in them. It is the language of every intelligent approach to it, that we acknowledge the life of our souls to depend on the merit of his atonement, and the communications of his grace. This is eating his flesh, and 58 drinking his blood: may we be nourished by it to eternal life!

Then

[k] Not as your fathers did eat manna, and are dead.] This version of the words is perfectly agreeable to the original; ου καθως εφαγον οι πατερες υμων το μαννα. But I should not perhaps have taken too great a liberty, had I avoided the ellipsis in the Greek, and ventured to reduce it to a plainer form, by rendering it, Not like that manna which your fathers did eat, and are dead. So Grotius has explained this passage; and though it does not so exactly answer to the Greek, and cannot pass for a literal translation, it plainly expresses the sense of the place, and the words run more natural and easy. See Grotius in loc.

a As

Then though this mortal part of our nature drop into the dust, our souls will live and triumph; nor shall our bodies finally perish but be raised up by Christ in the great day, to take their part in the full joy of our Lord. There these intermediate ordinances shall cease, and copious uninterrupted streams of Divine teachings, and Divine influences, shall sweetly flow in upon our ever improving, active, rejoicing minds! SECT. LXXXI.

SECT. LXXXII.

Christ having declared that the foregoing discourse was to be taken in a spiritual sense, is forsaken by many of his disciples; and while the apostles assure him of their continued fidelity, he intimates the treachery of Judas. John VI. 59, to the end.

John VI. 59.

THESE things said he in the synagogue, as he taught in Capernaum.

JOHN VI. 59.

SECT. LXXXII.

THESE things, which had been now delivered by our Lord, he spake before all sorts of hearers in the synagogue, as he was teaching at Capernaum[a]: and, for wise reasons, he involved a part of his discourse in figurative and mysterious language; as in particular, that which related to eating his flesh, and drinking his blood. John VI. 59.

60 Many therefore of his disciples, when they had heard this, said, This is an hard saying, who can hear it?

Many therefore of those who followed him as his disciples, having heard [it,] said, This is a difficult and strange discourse; and who can hear or understand it? In its literal sense it is plainly absurd, and we know not, what other interpretation to give it. 60

61 When Jesus knew in himself, that his disciples murmured at it, he said unto them, Doth this offend you?

But Jesus knowing in himself, that his disciples murmured about it, though they did not speak out their objections and scruples, said unto them Does this, which you have just now heard, so much offend you? and do you stumble at it as incredible? 61

62 What and if ye shall see the Son of man ascend up where he was before?

[What] then, if ye shall see the Son of man ascending up into heaven, where he was before[b]? would you then understand what was meant by the bread of life coming down from thence, 62

a As he was teaching at Capernaum.] Probably (as was hinted above, ver. 25, p. 424.) the foregoing discourses were introduced after the reading of the law, and prayer. We are not to wonder at the dialogue which passed here: there are many other instances of disputes which either Christ or his apostles had with the Jews in their synagogues. See Mat. xii. 9. & seq. sect. l. Luke xiii. 10. & seq. sect. cxvii. Acts xiii. 44. & seq. and xvii. 17.

b Ascending up into heaven, where he was before.] A very celebrated writer thinks this refers to the Son of man appearing to Daniel in the clouds of heaven: but his appearing to him thus in vision was no more an argument of his being there at the time of that appearance, than the appearances of the symbols of the Greek and Roman empires was an argument of their existence at that time.

c Would

SECT. LXXXII.

thence, as the food of the world? Or would you then believe that I came from heaven, notwithstanding the objection you have made as to

John VI. 63. the meanness of my parentage?[c] Thus our Lord intimated his intended ascension; and in the mean time, as a key to his former discourse, he added. As in the human frame it is the indwelling Spirit that quickens every part of it; and the flesh, how exactly soever organized and adorned, if separate from that, profits nothing, but is an insensible and inactive corpse; so also the words which I speak unto you, are spirit, that is, they are to be taken in a spiritual sense, and then you will find they are life to your souls; whereas to take them in a literal sense, would 64 be most unprofitable and monstrous. It is indeed strange that you should think of it; but I know there are some of you who believe not, and would shelter your infidelity under these mean and disingenuous cavils. This he plainly told them: for Jesus knew from the beginning, who they were that believed, and who did not; and even knew the very person who it was, that at last should so basely betray him.

65 And he farther said, For this reason I told you, (ver. 44.) that no man can come unto me, except it be given him of my Father[d]; because I know that the prejudices of corrupt nature lie strongly against such a doctrine as I publish, and that nothing but Divine grace will subdue them.

66 From this time many, who had borne the name of his disciples, abusing and misrepresenting what he had now delivered, as if it had been either absurd or utterly unintelligible, went back and walked no more with him; plainly perceiving that their true character was now discovered, as well as that their secular views were disappointed.

67 Jesus therefore said unto the twelve apostles, Will you also go away? The multitude are gone, and will you also follow them, and leave me entirely alone? Choose for yourselves; for I desire not 63 It is the spirit that quickeneth, the flesh profiteth nothing: the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life.

64 But there are some of you that believe not. For Jesus knew from the beginning, who they were that believed not, and who should betray him.

65 And he said, Therefore said I unto you, that no man can come unto me, except it were given unto him of my Father.

66 From that time many of his disciples went back, and walked no more with him.

67 Then said Jesus unto the twelve, Will ye also go away?

c Would you then believe, that I came from heaven, &c.] What Christ here says of his ascension may be farther intended to intimate the necessity of taking his discourse in a figurative sense, as it would so soon be evidently impossible to eat his flesh, which was to be received into heaven.

d Except it be given him of my Father.] To be drawn by the Father, (ver. 44.) and to have faith given him by the Father, are evidently synonymous terms; which plainly vindicates the interpretation given above, and shews how far the loose and general glosses of Dr. Clarke and Dr. Clagget are from expressing the true and determinate sense of our Lord's words.

e Have

SECT. LXXXII.

John VI. 68.

68 Then Simon Peter answered him, Lord, to whom shall we go? thou hast the words of eternal life.

not to detain you against your will. Then Simon Peter, with his usual zeal, answered him, Lord, to whom should we go, if we were really disposed to quit thee? or what advantage could we expect by it? Thou hast the words of eternal life, and hast even now been directing us in the way to it; and God forbid that any other hopes and views should ever be preferred by us to these!

69 And we believe and are sure, that thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God.

However others may be governed by their carnal prejudices, and a deluded multitude may treat thee with contempt, we firmly believe, and assuredly know, on the most convincing evidence, that thou art the Messiah, the Son of the living God; in which persuasion we are determined to hazard all in thy service, and to sacrifice even our lives to thee.

70 Jesus answered them, Have not I chosen you twelve, and one of you is a devil?

Jesus then answered them, Such a resolution might reasonably be expected from you all; for have I not chosen you twelve to the honour of a peculiar intimacy with me, and to a station of the most distinguished eminence and importance in the church[c]? And yet I know, that one of you is a devil, and, under the influence of that malignant spirit of darkness, will turn my accuser and betrayer[f].

71 He spake of Judas Iscariot, the son of Simon; for he it was that should betray him, being one of the twelve.

This he spake concerning Judas Iscariot [the son] of Simon; for it was he who at that time began to harbour in his breast this execrable purpose, and had then thoughts of betraying him[g]; though he was one of the twelve apostles, and therefore under peculiar obligations to fidelity and duty.

IMPROVE-

c Have I not chosen you twelve? &c.] I see not the least reason with Eisner to expunge the note of interrogation, and render it, I have not chosen you all; which would entirely enervate the spirit of the following clause.

f My accuser and betrayer.] According to Mr. Locke, our Lord intimates that this was the reason why he had not more plainly declared himself to be the Messiah, because he knew Judas would have accused him of rebellion against the Romans; (for so the word διαβολος does sometimes signify, a false accuser; see 1 Tim. iii. 11. 2 Tim. iii. 3. and Tit. ii. 3.) But I can see no proof that Judas, from the beginning, intended to betray Christ. It is more probable he at first engaged with him in expectation of secular advantage; and finding those views disappointed, he might now begin to form that detestable scheme which he afterwards executed. If this was the occasion on which he first entertained the thought (as I think it probably might,) one would imagine that such an intimation of his secret wickedness must have struck him to the heart.

g Had thoughts of betraying him.] The words ημελλεν αυτον παραδιδοναι, may properly, though not necessarily, import thus much; and, I think, had not this been actually the case, Christ would not have said he is a devil, but rather that he would become one.

a Which

IMPROVEMENT.

SECT. LXXXII.

We have, through the Divine goodness, been made acquainted with those gospel-truths, in their full evidence, and mutual connection, which were more obscurely hinted to those who attended on Christ's personal ministry: may we therefore hearken to the spiritual sense of this sublime and excellent discourse! And as the credible account of his ascension into glory is now added to the rest, let us receive the whole of his doctrine with the most humble submission: earnestly intreating the influences of Divine grace, that we may not only be drawn to Christ, but be so firmly attached to his interest, that whoever else forsake him, we may never go away. On the contrary, may we rather collect an argument from their ingratitude and folly, more strenuously and more affectionately to adhere to him! Indeed to whom should we go, but to him? He has the words of eternal life. From him therefore, in all lowly subjection of soul, may we learn those lessons on which our everlasting happiness depends!

May we never, like Judas, conceal a treacherous and disaffected heart, under the specious appearance of piety and goodness! This would be only imposing on ourselves; for his penetrating eye can never be deceived. May we approve the integrity of our souls in his sight, and repose an unlimited confidence in him, as one whom we believe and know to be a Divine Saviour, Christ the Son of the living God!

John VI. 60. 63 62 65 67 68 70 64, 71 69

SECT. LXXXIII.

Our Lord vindicates his disciples in neglecting the traditions of the Pharisees, and condemns those corrupt teachers for preferring such traditions to the precepts of the Divine law. Mat. XV. 1—9. Mark VII. 1—13.

SECT. LXXXIII.

Mark VII. 1.

MARK VII. 1.

THE miracles which Jesus wrought, and which have been mentioned above[a], being reported at the ensuing passover[b], gave a farther alarm

Mark VII. 1. THEN came together unto [Jesus] the Pharisees

a Which have been mentioned above.] As both Matthew and Mark introduce the following discourse immediately after his crossing the sea to Capernaum, when he but just before had fed the five thousand, and John determines the debates in the preceding sections to that time, there can be no reasonable doubt about placing this section, and several more that are expressly connected with it, in this order.

b At the ensuing passover.] That a passover followed quickly after the events before related, is expressly determined: (see John vi. 4, and the note there, p. 412, and compare chap. vii. 2.) But the evangelists do not exactly determine whether Christ did or did not attend it. If he did not, we may conclude he had proper reasons for not doing it: but, to be sure, such numerous and public miracles, as he had lately performed, would be the subject of a great deal of discourse at Jerusalem. Compare John vii. 11, 12, and xi. 56.

c Almost

SECT. LXXXIII.

Mark VII. 1.

Pharisees and certain of the scribes, which [were of, and] came from Jerusalem. [MAT. XV. 1.]

alarm to the Jews, and especially to their established teachers; so that to obviate the effect of them, and to prevent the success of his ministry, there were then gathered unto Jesus the Pharisees, and some of the scribes, who were stated inhabitants of Jerusalem, [and] came [from thence] on purpose to watch, and if possible, to ensnare him.

2 And when they saw some of his disciples eat bread with defile[1] (that is to say, with unwashen) hands, they found fault.

2 And, as they looked on all his actions with a most malignant eye, they soon found an opportunity to cavil; for seeing some of his disciples eat bread with what they counted polluted (that is, with unwashed) hands, they found fault with them among themselves.

3 For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, except they wash their hands oft, eat not, holding the tradition of the elders.

3 For this was a favourite tenet of the Pharisees, on which they laid a particular stress, and indeed almost all the Jews pay a considerable regard to it[c], that they do not allow themselves to eat without washing their hands often with abundance of exactness[d], and particularly just before their meals: and this they observe, not in consequence of any express Divine command, but as holding the tradition of the elders, who thought this scrupulous care a decent expression and memorial of their concern to keep themselves free from whatsoever might pollute them.

4 And when they come from the market, except they wash, they eat not. And many other things there be, which they have received to hold, as the washing of cups and pots, brasen vessels, and of tables.

4 And especially [when they come] from the market, or any other place of public concourse, lest they should without their knowledge have touched any thing unclean, they eat not, till they have washed their hands at least, if not their whole body. And there are many other things, besides the washing of their hands, which they in like manner receive and maintain by the authority of the same tradition, [as] the washing of cups and pots in which their food is put, and of the brasen vessels made use of in preparing it, and even of the very couches on which they lie at their meals.

Then

c Almost all the Jews pay a considerable regard to it.] Their rabbies carried this to a most ridiculous height; one of them determining the neglect of washing to be a greater sin than whoredom; and another saying, it would be much better to die, than to omit it. Many instances of this kind may be seen in Dr. Whitby and Dr. Hammond in loc. and in Buxtorf. Synag. Jud. cap. xi. p. 236. It is plain, that other nations commonly used to wash before their meals. See Athenæus, p. 408, Edit. Casaub. 1675, and Elsner. Observ. Vol. I. p. 73.

d Washing their hands often.] The word πυγμη is ambiguous, being very seldom used. Theophylact's gloss would incline one to render it, as L'Enfant does, up to the elbows; and Beza translates it with the fist. (See Godwyn's Moses and Aaron, lib. i. cap. 10, p. 39.) Not being able certainly to determine the point, I thought it sufficient to add in the paraphrase, with abundance of exactness. Camero, and Lud. Cappellus (in loc.) explain it of lifting up their hands clean, while the water was poured upon them; and I have nothing to object to the reasons they give for that interpretation.

SECT. Ixxxiii.

Then the Pharisees and Scribes, after they had censured the disciples of Christ among themselves (as was observed before), came to Jesus, Mark VII. 5. and asked him, Why do not thy disciples walk and behave themselves according to the tradition of the elders, as other pious and regular Jews do; but transgress [it] in a very obvious and material instance, for they eat with unwashed hands[e]? Can they be so ignorant as not to know the traditions that forbid it? Or are they so profane as not to regard them?

5 Then the Pharisees and Scribes asked him, Why walk not thy disciples according to the tradition of the elders, but [transgress it, for they] eat bread with unwashen hands? [MAT. XV. 2.]

Mat. XV. 3. And he answering, said unto them, Nay, but I may with much greater reason ask you, Why do you also transgress what is infinitely more sacred, even the command of God himself, out of regard to your own vain and superstitious tradition?

MAT. XV. 3. But he answered and said unto them, Why do you also transgress the commandment of God by your tradition? [MARK VII. 9.—]

Mark VII. 9. And this, in several instances, you run to such a length, as that you fairly make void the command of God, and render it insignificant, that you may observe your tradition; though you consider not perhaps from whence it comes, or may easily know that it was derived only from MARK VII.—9. Full well ye reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition.

Mat. XV. 4. a fallible man. I will give you one notorious instance of it, which you cannot dispute: for you well know that God has commanded [by] Moses, saying, "Honour thy father and thy mother:" A precept written with his own finger on the tables of stone, and guarded by that awful sanction, "Whoso curseth his father, or his mother, let him surely die without mercy." (See Exod. xxi. 17. Lev. xx. 9. and compare Prov. xx. 20. and Deut. xxvii. 16.) Now for any one to suffer his parents to languish in want of the necessary supplies of life, must certainly be a yet more aggravated wickedness, than an impious word, which may possibly escape a man's lips in a sudden transport of passion[f].

MAT. XV. 4. For God [by Moses] commanded, saying, Honour thy father and [thy] mother: and, He that curseth father or mother, let him die the death. [MARK VII. 10.]

Mark VII. 11. But what you teach is contradictory to this Divine command; and an ungrateful child may justify himself in the neglect of it, in consequence of your tradition: for you assert, [that] any one may

MARK VII. 11.—But ye say, [Whosoever]

e For they eat with unwashed hands.] It is, in the original, eat bread; and I have sometimes retained the Hebraism, but did not think it necessary always to do it. Every attentive reader must have observed that food in general is called bread in a multitude of places; and bread is sometimes put even for the provisions of a royal table, 2 Sam. ix. 7, 10, and xii. 20.

f In a sudden transport of passion.] Dr. Lightfoot (in his Hor. Heb. in loc.) has well observed, that it is probable a child must be in a transport of very undutiful passion, when he made the rash vow afterwards mentioned, that he would never in any instance relieve his parent, so that it was a kind of cursing him: but had it been said ever so coolly and deliberately, the argument here suggested would have taken place, and would have justified the connection.

ever] shall say to his father or mother, It is corban, that is to say, a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me, [and honour not his father or his mother,] he shall be free. [MAT. XV. 5, 6.—] 12 And ye suffer him no more to do ought for his father or his mother.

MAT. XV.—6. Thus have ye made the [word and] commandment of God of none effect [through your tradition, which ye have delivered: and many such like things do ye.] [MARK VII. 13.]

may say to his father or mother, [Let that be] corban, that is to say, let it be reckoned as a devoted thing, or be considered as a gift dedicated to the altar[g], by which thou mightest otherwise receive advantage from me[h], and he shall then be free from the command, and not be under any obligation to honour and relieve his father or his mother. And in this manner, out of regard to such a rash and impious vow, you not only suppose he may innocently omit this evident duty of natural as well as revealed religion, but will no more permit him to do any thing for the relief even of his father or his mother. And [thus] then it is evidently to be seen, according to the charge which I advanced against you, that, through a gross and impious superstition, you have even invalidated the word, [and,] as it were, annihilated the command of God, by means of your tradition, which you have delivered as a rule of life to be observed with the most scrupulous exactness: and it were easy to be shewn, in other instances, that many such like things you do.

SECT. LXXXI.

Mark VII. 11.

12

Mat. XV. 6.

7 Ye hypocrites, well

Yet these are the things in which you vainly pride yourselves, as proofs of your religion; but, O you

7

g Any one may say, [Let that be] corban, that is to say, a gift.] So I choose with Elsner, (Observ. Vol. I. p. 74.) to render the words in Matthew, ος αν ειπη, though, I confess, not without some doubt. But I think it is best to leave as little as possible to be supplied in order to make up the sense; and on that principle I should prefer the addition in our own translation of this place, he shall be free, to that which Sir Norton Knatchbull proposes, who would render it, You say, [a man honours his parents,] if he say, It is corban, &c. thus supposing the passage to imply a repetition from the verse before. But such a construction seems to me quite unparalleled, and very unnatural. Grotius makes και, redundant, and would render it, You teach, that whosoever shall say to his father or mother, It is a gift, &c. —let him not honour his father and mother: but in the way that I have rendered it, the sense is in effect the same, and the common sense of και is retained.—Some considerable critics, particularly Drusius (de Tribus Sectis, lib. ii. cap. 17.) and Godwyn (Moses and Aaron, lib. vi. cap. 6.) give a very elegant turn to the following words, δωρον ο εαν εξ εμου ωφεληθης, and would suppose them to be an oath expressed in the elliptical manner, which was very common among the Hebrews: if so, they should be rendered, I swear by corban, or the sacred treasury, thou shalt receive no benefit from me. But as both the evangelists insert the particle ο, which in this construction has no force, I cannot wholly approve this version, and therefore did not insert it. Perhaps some of these pretended vows of theirs amounted to no more, than an obligation to leave some proportion of the overplus of their estates to the temple treasury after their death, which might in a thousand instances be made the cloak of avarice and cruelty. The indeterminate manner of speaking, it must be owned, would lead to such a supposition. Cappellus with immense labour (and, I think, beyond all farther controversy) has asserted the interpretation of this text as given in the paraphrase; and has produced a vast variety of passages from the Talmud, to shew the superstitious regard the Jews had to such rash and unnatural vows, as well as the ridiculous ways they sometimes took to evade them. See Lud. Cappell. in Mat. xv. 5.

h Advantage from me.] Sir Norton Knatchbull would render εξ εμου, of my substance, or possession: but had this been the exact rendering, it would have been εκ των εμων, of which instances occur in Greek authors.

SECT. lxxxiii.

O you hypocrites, well did Isaiah prophesy of such as you, and very fitly may those words which he delivers in the name of God be applied to you, Mat. XV. 7. where he is saying of the superstitious Jews of his own time, what may be evidently seen to agree to you, (as it is written, Isa. xxix. 13.)

8 "This people draweth near to me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips; they make a pompous profession, and pretend to a great deal of devotion and piety; but it plainly appears, that their heart is far estranged from Mark VII. 7. me." Notwithstanding all your talk, then, of strictness in religion; yet as this appears to be expressive of your real character, the doom of hypocrites belongs to you; and God may justly affirm of such (as it is added there), "In vain do they worship me, while they teach doctrines or lessons [that are] merely human inventions and injunctions[1], being only the precepts of men, that have no stamp of the Divine authority upon them," which yet they would insist upon as necessary parts of religion, and would impose 8 them on the consciousness of others. And this (as I have said) you may be charged with, not in one single instance only, but in many; for, leaving the commandment of God, you maintain the tradition of men, [relating to] the washing of pots and cups: and many other such like things you do, with a zeal by no means required, and on which at best you lay a very disproportionable stress.

well did Esaias prophesy of you, saying, [as it is written,] [MARK VII.—6.]

8 This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me.—[MARK VII.—6.]

MARK VII. 7. Howbeit, in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. [MAT. XV. 9.]

8 For, laying aside the commandment of God, ye hold the tradition of men, as the washing of pots and cups: and many other such like things ye do.

IMPROVEMENT.

Mat. XV. 9. How miserable is the case of those who, while they earnestly contend for the forms of Divine worship, are losing both the improvement and reward, which might be expected from a regular 8 attendance upon it! This is the case of all, who draw near to God with their lips, while their hearts are far from him. May we abhor the vanity of such hypocritical behaviour in the presence of Him, who searches the heart and tries the reins of the children of men.

Let

[1] While they teach doctrines that are human injunctions.] So I render διδασκοντες διδασκαλιας ενταλματα ανθρωπων. The words seem to allude to Isa. xxix. 13, where, though the present Hebrew copies read the text to our translation of the place, Their fear towards me is taught by the precept of men, Grotius has shewn how a small variation in the original might justify the seventy in that version of theirs, which the evangelist here follows, the sense of which is much the same with what we retain in that place. I would only observe farther, that διδασκαλια in general signifies any lesson, and not merely (as Bishop Hopkins contends) a doctrine of faith; and that the purpose to which our Lord here applies it, plainly shews that it must refer to ritual injunctions. See Bishop Hopkins's Works, p. 150, 151.

Let us learn from this just and severe sentence which our Lord passes on these superstitious Pharisees, to avoid the temper he condemns in them. It much less becomes us as Christians, and especially as protestants, to impose on our brethren with rigorous severity those doctrinal decisions, or those ritual observances, which have not their express foundation in the word of God, to which we so constantly appeal as to our common rule. Happy had it been for the church in all ages and nations, had men exerted that zeal for the truths and the institutions of God in the beauty and glory of their native simplicity, which has carried them on to defend and propagate their own inventions, till religion itself has almost sunk under the weight of the ornaments in which they have dressed it, and the unwieldy armour which they have hung about it! SECT. LXXXIII. Mat. XV. 3, 7.

Let children learn from the command which Christ has vindicated, to honour their parents by a tender care of them in their declining days; remembering, that as no filial duty and gratitude can ever fully repay our obligations to such friends, so an affectionate regard to them is a proper and necessary expression of our filial piety to the great Father of our spirits. Justly may he esteem his temples profaned, rather than adorned, by the most costly gifts, which are the spoils of nature, and the trophies of inhumanity. 4—6

SECT. LXXXIV.

Christ pursues his discourse against the Pharisees, and inculcates the necessity of inward purity. Mat. XV. 10—20. Mark VII. 14—23.

Mark VII. 14.

AND when he had called all the people unto him, he said unto them, Hearken unto me every one of you, and understand. [Mat. XV. 10.]

Mark VII. 14.

NOW when our Lord had thus condemned the Pharisees to their face, for the unwarrantable stress they laid on their vain and precarious traditions, he took this opportunity to undeceive the people, and to let them see how insignificant this outward strictness was, on which the Pharisees insisted; and having called all the multitude together to him, he pursued his discourse, and said to them, Let me charge every one of you attentively to hearken to me in what I now deliver, and give all diligence that you may understand it; lest for want of doing it, out of regard to your admired teachers, you impose on your own souls in a matter of the greatest importance. There is nothing which enters into a man from without, that can really pollute him in the sight of God: it is not, I say, that which is originally from without, and goes into the mouth, that SECT. LXXXIV. Mark VII. 14. 15

15 There is nothing from without a man, that, entering into him, can defile him; [not

SECT. lxxxiv. that renders him polluted [a]; but the things which come out of a man are those that actually defile him, [even] that which comes out of [his] mouth.

Mark VII. 15. And I would have you to observe, that much is comprehended in these few important words:

16 remember them therefore, and think of them; and if any one of you has ears to hear, and a heart to consider, let him hear these things, and reflect seriously upon them.

17 And when he was come into the house apart from the multitude, his disciples came to him, according to their usual custom, [and] asked him concerning the meaning of this parable, or sentenMat. XV. 12. tious, and, to them, obscure saying. And they likewise said to him at the same time, Knowest thou, and art thou sufficiently aware of it, that the Pharisees, who heard this saying, were highly offended at it, as what appears to strike directly (as they represent the matter) both at the authority of the oral and of the written law?

13 But he answered and said, As for their displeasure, I am very little concerned about it, nor shall I ever labour to ingratiate myself with persons of their character: for I consider them as a set of men doomed to destruction: and indeed every plantation which my heavenly Father has not planted, and every thing in religion, which, like the vain traditions they advance, is not founded in Divine institution, but human invention, shall sooner or later be rooted up, and cast out of the vineyard, as an incumbrance to it.

14 Let them alone, and do not trouble or concern yourselves about their censures; they are blind guides of the blind populace, that implicitly commit themselves to their conduct: and it is very easy to foresee the consequence; for, if the blind shall undertake to lead the blind, they will both fall into a ditch together, and incumber instead of helping each other (compare Luke vi. 39, p. 290); and so will these perverse Pharisees, and their careless followers, perish together.

15 But Peter answering said unto him, We would desire thee, however, to explain more clearly to us what is the meaning of this parable which they

[not that which goeth into the mouth,] but the things which come out of him, those are they that defile the man, [even that which cometh out of the mouth] [MAT. XV. 11.]

16 If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

17 And, when he was entered into the house from the people, his disciples [came, and] asked him concerning the parable; [MAT. XV. 12.—]

MAT. XV.—12. And said unto him, Knowest thou that the Pharisees were offended, after they heard this saying?

13 But he answered and said, Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up.

14 Let them alone; they be blind leaders of the blind: and, if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch.

15 Then answered Peter, and said unto him, Declare unto us this parable.

[a] Not that which goes into the mouth, &c.] Though it is very true a man may bring guilt upon himself by eating what is pernicious to his health, or by excess in the quantity of food and liquor; and a Jew might have done it by presumptuously eating what was forbidden by the Mosaic law, which still continued in force: yet in all these instances the pollution would arise from the wickedness of the heart, and be just proportionable to it; which is all our Lord asserts.

[b] Corrupt

they are so much offended at; for even we ourselves are at a loss to reconcile it, not only with the Pharisaic traditions, but with the injunctions of the law of God, which hath so expressly enjoined a difference of meats. SECT. LXXXIV. Mat. XV. 15.

MARK VII. 18. And [Jesus sai l] unto them. Are ye [also yet] so without understanding? Do ye not [yet] perceive, that whatsoever thing from without entereth into the man, it cannot defile him? [MAT. XV. 16, 17—]

And Jesus said to them, Are you likewise still so void of understanding, as not to apprehend the sense of what I said? by which you might have easily perceived, that I did not intend immediately to supersede any precept of the law relating to the distinction of clean and unclean food; but only to declare that it is the temper of the mind which God regards, and that no external accident, separate from this, can render a man offensive to him: and, after all the instructions I have given you, do you not yet perceive that it must needs be so, that whatsoever enters from without into a man, cannot defile him? Mark VII. 18.

19 Because [whatsoever entereth in at the mouth] entereth not into his heart; but [goeth] into the belly, and [is cast out] into the draught, purging all meats. [MAT. XV. —17.]

And 19 that for this obvious reason, because whatsoever enters in at the mouth, enters not into his heart, or mind, in which sin or holiness is seated, and which alone is capable of moral excellence or pollution; but goes into the belly, and, passing through the bowels, by the course of natural digestion and evacuation, is thrown off into the vault, a place which cleanses, as it were, and carries off the grosser dregs of all the food that a man eats.

20 And he said, That which cometh out of the man, that defileth the man: [for those things which proceed out of the mouth, come forth from the heart, and they defile the man] [MAT. XV. 18.]

But, said he, It is indeed, that which comes out 20 of a man, that really defiles a man, and makes him sinful in the sight of God, as it originally proceeds from within: [for] the things proceeding out of the mouth, come forth from the heart; and these are they that actually defile a man, as they must thus be tainted with a great deal of moral guilt and malignity.

21 For from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, [MAT. XV. 19.—]

For from within, 21 out of the heart of men, proceed all such corrupt and evil reasonings[b], as those of the Pharisees which you have now been hearing, and all those self-invented sophisms which exclude wisdom at the first entrance; and from hence also proceed adulteries and fornications, and all sorts of sensuality

b Corrupt and evil reasonings, οι διαλογισμοι οι κακοι.] I choose to render it evil reasonings, rather than merely evil thoughts, as better suiting both the original and the occasion, and as containing a more universal and important truth; for those thoughts only defile the heart, which it willingly admits, and does, as it were, hold a parley and converse with. And, I fear, there are multitudes in the present age, like these Pharisees, who are contracting immense guilt by those corrupt and sophistical reasonings, on the subtilty of which they may highly value themselves and each other.

SECT. lxxxiv.

ality and uncleanness; all acts of violence, and murders; And thefts, and insatiable desires, and malevolent affections of inhumanity and cruelty to mankind; the injuries arising from false witnessings, and deceit; the vile abominations of lasciviousness and intemperance; an evil envious grudging eye, and that odious temper which discovers itself by such a look (compare Prov. xxiii. 6; xxviii. 22; and xxii. 9); the horrid outrages of blasphemy, and pride; and, in a word, all kind of folly[c], wild imaginations, ungoverned passions, and many other moral irregularities. All these evils, and many more which I might mention, come from within, and these are the things which do indeed pollute a man, and render him an object odious to the infinite purity of the Divine nature: but the bare undesigned violation of a ceremonial precept cannot do it; and much more evident it is, that to eat with unwashed hands, which has no moral impurity in it, and no authority but a vain tradition to forbid it, does not, and cannot defile a man: and it must have a very bad tendency to teach people to place religion in things so entirely foreign to it.

Mark VII. 22.

23

22 Thefts, covetousness, wickedness, [false witness,] deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness: [MAT. XV.—19.]

23 All these evil things come from within, and [these are the things which] defile the man: [but to eat with unwashen hands defileth not a man.] [MAT. XV. 20.]

IMPROVEMENT.

Mat. XV. 18.

MAY we be all taught of God to maintain a constant watch over our own hearts, as remembering that from thence are the issues of life, and from thence the sources of sin and death! (Prov. iv. 23.) All the secret motions and sentiments of them are open to the Divine examination and inspection. There then may we begin our cares, to purify ourselves from all filthiness both of the flesh and spirit, as ever we would perfect holiness in the fear of God. (2 Cor. vii. 1.)

Mat. XV. 19.

We see, what secret abominations our Lord has here discovered and marked out. It is a matter of much lamentation, that our corrupted nature abounds with such poisonous productions: let us earnestly pray, that they may be rooted out by Divine grace, lest we ourselves be rooted out of God's vineyard, as at once incumbering and deforming it!

May the blessed spirit of God create in us a clean heart, and implant

[c] All kind of folly.] I apprehend that αφροσυνη here stands directly opposed to σωφροσυνη, or sobriety of thought and discourse; and therefore does particularly signify the wild sallies of the imagination, and extravagant passions and appetites, and consequently must include a great many immoralities not touched on in the preceding enumeration.

implant in our souls a temper opposite to all these enormities! May candour and purity, integrity and tenderness, piety and generosity, humility and wisdom, prevail in our hearts and shine in our conduct! And, in a word, whatsoever things are true and honest, just and pure, lovely and of good report, if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, let us think on these things, and practise them! (Phil. iv. 8.)

SECT. LXXXV. Mark VII. 21, 22.

Let those, who are employed to guide others, be especially solicitous to know and pursue the right way themselves; lest, instead of saving themselves, and those that hear them, they both of them at last perish together. We are in danger of it, if, like these Pharisees, we inculcate on our hearers a zeal for the circumstantials and appendages of religion, while its essentials are neglected; and perhaps some of the greatest enormities of the mind are consecrated under an honourable name, and profanely listed under the banner of the God of holiness and love. Mat. XV. 14.

SECT. LXXXV.

Jesus withdraws to the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, and there expels a demon from the daughter of a Canaanitish woman; and afterwards, in his return to Galilee, cures a man who was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech. Mat. XV. 21—29. Mark VII. 24, to the end.

MARK VII. 24.

AND from thence [Jesus] arose, and [departed] into the borders [or coasts] of Tyre and Sidon, and entered into an house, and would have no man know it; but he could not be hid. [MAT. XV. 21.]

MARK VII. 24.

AND Jesus arose from thence, and withdrew from the place where these invidious enemies were continually lying in wait for him, to the borders [or] coasts of Tyre and Sidon: and when he was come into those parts, he entered into a house as privately as he could, and would have had no one know [it] that he was there; but he had so many eyes upon him wherever he went, that he could not long be concealed in that retirement. SECT. LXXXV. Mark VII. 24.

25—For [behold, a woman of Canaan out of the same coasts,] whose young daughter had an unclean spirit heard of him, and came, [and cried unto him, saying, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David; my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil.] [MAT. XV. 22.]

Yea, an occurrence quickly happened, that spread the fame of his arrival there through all the neighbourhood; for behold, a Canaanitish woman came out of those coasts, to whom, though an alien from the common-wealth of Israel, he displayed his power and goodness in a very remarkable manner. Now this was one, whose young daughter, for whom she had a most tender affection, was possessed by an unclean and malignant spirit, which often threw her into violent agonies: and, as the fame of Jesus, and of the miracles that he had wrought, was known in all those parts, the afflicted mother was no sooner 25

SECT. LXXXV.

told of his arrival, but, having now an expectation of relief from the great things she had heard of him, she came immediately to the place where he was, and cried unto him at some distance with the most humble importunity, saying, Have mercy upon me, O Lord, thou son of David [a]; consider my distressed case, and extend thy compassion to me, though a stranger; for my poor unhappy daughter is grievously tormented by a cruel demon, that delights in the misery of my child; and I well know that thou art able to cure her.

Mark VII. 25.

26 Now it is here to be observed as somewhat singular, that (as we just now hinted) the woman was not a Jew, but a Greek, a native of Syrophœnicia [b], or of that tract of Canaan in which they now were: and therefore, though she thus earnestly besought him to cast out the demon from her daughter, and the case seemed so compassionable, our Lord thought it proper not to take such immediate notice of it, as he had commonly done in the like instances; But, turning from her, as if he were regardless of her case, he answered her not a word.

Mat. XV. 23.

And his disciples came to him on the occasion, and entreated him, saying, Dismiss her with the grant of her request: for she is so overwhelmed with her affliction, that she crieth after us wherever she sees us [c]; and not only gives us trouble, but is like to make thy abode here more public

24 than thou wouldest have it. But he replying said, I am not sent, but to seek and recover the lost sheep of the house of Israel, and am charged with no immediate message to the Gentile nations, to whom you all know this woman belongs.

25 Then, perceiving her case was the subject of their discourse, she came nearer, and fell down at his feet in a most importunate manner, and worshipped

26 (The woman was a Greek, a Syrophenician by nation;) and she besought him that he would cast forth the devil out of her daughter.

MAT. XV. 23. But he answered her not a word. And his disciples came, and besought him, saying, Send her away, for she crieth after us.

24 But he answered and said, I am not sent, but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

25 Then came she, [and fell at his feet,] and

[a] O Lord, thou Son of David.] Some have argued from this expression, that she was a proselyte; but perhaps she might have learned it from some of the Jews (either immediately or by report), and might use it as a title of respect without thoroughly understanding its meaning.

[b] A native of Syrophœnicia.] This part of Phœnicia was so called, as it had been formerly conquered by the Syrians.

[c] For she crieth after us wherever she sees us.] As Mark tells us Christ was entered into a house, and that the application of this woman to him prevented his being concealed, as he desired to have been; it should seem that she, having learned that Jesus was there, watched for the disciples as they went in and out; and, having cried after them some time, she at length got admittance into the house; and, with the profoundest respect, accosted him at first from some distance, and then drew near and threw herself at his feet. Compare Mat. xv. 25, and Mark vii. 25.

[d] Truè

and worshipped him, saying, Lord, help me. [MARK VII.—25.]

worshipped him, saying, Lord, I beseech thee to help me, though a stranger; for surely none ever needed thy help more. SECT. LXXV.

MARK VII. 27. But Jesus said unto her, Let the children first be filled; for it is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it unto the dogs. [MAT. XV. 26.]

But Jesus said to her (yet farther to exercise and illustrate her faith), Let the Jews, the children in God's family, first be satisfied; for it is not proper to take the children's bread, and throw it to the dogs; and such you know, that you Gentiles are commonly deemed by our nation, on account of those impurities and abominations that prevail among you. Mark VII. 27

28 And she answered and said unto him, [Truth,] Lord; yet the dogs under the table eat of the children's crumbs [which fall from their master's table.] [MAT. XV. 27.]

And she replied and said to him, True, Lord, it would not be fit to put both on a level; yet even the dogs under their master's table are allowed to eat the children's crumbs which fall from it[d]: may I not then humbly hope, that, unworthy as I am, I may also receive some fragments of that mercy which is so liberally bestowed on the Jews, and may have been in some instances wantonly abused: 28

MAT. XV. 28. Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman, great is thy faith: [for this saying, go thy way, and] be it unto thee even as thou wilt: [the devil is gone out of thy daughter.] And her daughter was made whole from that very hour. [MARK VII. 29.]

Then Jesus answering said unto her, O woman great is thy faith; and it was my design to illustrate, rather than to overbear it; now therefore, for this lively saying, which argues so much humility and piety, go thy way with the kindest answer thou couldest wish, [and] be it unto thee even just as thou wilt: thy desire shall be accomplished in all its extent, for the demon is already gone out of thy daughter, and I assure thee that he shall torment her no more. And accordingly her daughter was cured from that very hour. Mat. XV. 28.

MARK VII. 30. And, when she was come to her house, she found the devil gone out, and her daughter laid upon the bed.

And, returning back to her house, fully persuaded of the accomplishment of what Jesus had told her, she found the demon was gone out, and her daughter was lying on the bed composed and quiet, which of late she had very seldom been. Mark VII. 30.

MAT. XV. 29. And [again] Jesus departed from thence [from the coasts of Tyre and Sidon,] and came nigh unto the sea of Galilee [through the midst of the coasts of Decapolis] and went up into a mountain, and sat down there. [MARK VII. 31.]

And Jesus after this departed again from thence even from the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, and came near to the sea of Galilee, passing through several places in his way that lay in the midst of the coasts of Decapolis, from whence his fame had formerly brought multitudes to follow him (see Mat. iv. 25, note[l], sect. 36): and on a certain day, in his journey, he went up to the top of a mountain, and sat down there, to rest himself, and to teach the Mat. XV. 29.

[d] True, Lord, yet the dogs, &c.] Both Matthew and Mark use the word ναι, which we have rendered in the former Truth, and in the latter, Yes. It is sometimes a form of assenting, and sometimes of entreating. Compare Philem. ver. 20, and see Blackwell's Sacred Classics, vol. I. p. 143.

[e] He

SECT. LXXXV.

the people, who in great multitudes resorted to him to attend upon his preaching, and brought their sick to be healed by him.

Mark VII. 32. And, among many other diseased persons, they brought him one who was very deaf, and had so great an impediment in his speech that he was almost dumb too: and, making known his case to Jesus, they besought him that he would lay his hand upon him, as he had done in many other cases, making no doubt that he would upon this be perfectly restored to his hearing and speech.

33 And, taking him aside from the multitude, which was very numerous, he put his fingers into his ears, where there was a great obstruction, which hindered him from hearing distinctly; and, spit-
34 ting on his finger, he touched his tongue[e]: And, looking up, as to his Father in heaven, he groaned, in token of his earnest desire that these disorders might be removed; and then said unto him, as with a voice of Divine authority, Ephphatha; that 35 is, Be opened. And immediately the word had its effect; and his ears were accordingly opened, and the string of his tongue, which had hindered it from moving freely, was loosed, and he spoke distinctly and in an articulate manner, which from 36 his birth he had never done before. And he charged the man himself, and them that were near, that they should tell no one of it; but, the more he charged them to conceal it, the more they were charmed with his modesty and humility, and consequently so much the more abundantly
37 did they proclaim [the cure:] And all they who heard of it were struck with exceeding astonishment, and said, He has done all things well, and performed the most extraordinary cures in the most amiable and graceful manner; making, in this and many other instances, both the deaf to hear and the dumb to speak.

MARK VII. 32. And they bring unto him one that was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech: and they beseech him to put his hand upon him.

33 And he took him aside from the multitude, and put his fingers into his ears, and he spit, and touched his tongue:

34 And, looking up to heaven, he sighed, and saith unto him, Ephphatha; that is, Be opened.

35 And straightway his ears were opened, and the string of his tongue was loosed, and he spake plain.

36 And he charged them that they should tell no man: but the more he charged them, so much the more a great deal they published it.

37 And were beyond measure astonished, saying, He hath done all things well; he maketh both the deaf to hear and the dumb to speak.

IMPROVE-

[e] He put his fingers into his ears, and, spitting, touched his tongue.] If any should ask, Why our Lord used these actions when a word alone would have been sufficient; and such means (if they may be called means) could in themselves do nothing at all to answer the end? I frankly confess I cannot tell, nor am I at all concerned to know. Yet I am ready to imagine it might be intended to intimate, in a very lively manner, that we are not to pretend to enter into the reasons of all his actions; and that, where we are sure that any observance whatever is appointed by him, we are humbly to submit to it, though we cannot see why it was preferred to others which our imagination might suggest. Had Christ's patients, like Naaman (2 Kings v. 11, 12), been too nice in their exceptions on these occasions, I fear they would have lost their cure; and the indulgence of a curious or a petulant mind would have been but a poor equivalent for such a loss.

[f] Happy

IMPROVEMENT.

If there be any thing in the whole history of our Lord, which might have a tendency to discourage and terrify the humble penitent, it would surely be his treatment of this poor Canaanitish woman, when she made so humble and so affectionate an application to him; first keeping silence; then intimating in words a coldness, not to say an aversion; and at last representing her but as a dog in comparison of the Jews. Surely such an answer had almost broke her heart, had it not been secretly supported by his grace, while his conduct seemed so unkind. Happy are they that, like her (who, though a Gentile, did in this instance approve herself a true daughter of Abraham), can against hope believe in hope! (Rom. iv. 18.) Happy they, who can thus extract arguments even from discouragement[f]! They will finally conquer and triumph, as this pious woman did; and the honours of their faith will be commemorated even by Christ himself, who soon indulges the overflowing tenderness of his heart in the applause he bestows upon her, and the ample grant he makes her of all that she asked in its utmost extent.

SECT. LXXXV. Mat. XV. 23. 24 26 28

The story of the deaf man, whose ears were opened and his tongue loosed, is one additional instance, among many more, of Christ's humility, as well as of his power. He retired from the admiring multitude; he used means when he could easily have wrought without them; he solemnly addressed his heavenly Father, virtually acknowledging, while he looked up to heaven, that, as man, he derived his miraculous power from above; and he was so far superior to the sentiments of vanity, that he commanded men to conceal the most glorious and benevolent actions. May all his followers, and especially his ministers, learn of him who was thus meek and lowly! (Mat. xi. 29.) neither acting as in their own strength, when they attempt a spiritual cure; nor proclaiming their own praises, when they have effected it. Then will they likewise do all things well; and there will be that beauty in the manner, which no wise man would entirely neglect, even in those actions, which are in themselves most excellent and great.

Mark VII. 32. & seq. 33 34 36 37

SECT.

[f] Happy are they, &c.] The pious, moderate, and eloquent Bishop Hall has a fine contemplation on this subject, to which I refer the reader with pleasure; and take this opportunity of observing that (allowing something for the peculiarities of the age in which he lived) I have met with no devotional writings on the historical part of scripture, which have generally given me so much entertainment as his.

[a] The

SECT. LXXXVI.

Our Lord, after many amazing miracles, feeds above four thousand with seven loaves and a few small fishes; and then goes over to Dalmanutha. Mat. XV. 30, to the end. Mark VIII. 1—10.

MAT. XV. 30.

SECT. LXXXVI.

Mat. XV. 30.

AND while Jesus was seated on the mountain to which he went up, (Mat. xv. 29,) there came to him, besides the deaf man of whom we have just been speaking, great multitudes, having brought along with them persons who were lame, or blind, or dumb, [or] maimed by the loss of a limb, and many others, who had different complaints; and they cast them at the feet of Jesus, entreating his compassion, which failed not to operate on such occasions, and he healed them all.

31 And so many and various were the displays of his miraculous power in the cures he wrought that the whole multitude was perfectly amazed, when they beheld the dumb speaking forth the praises of God and of their great Deliverer; the maimed made whole by the recovery of hands and arms which they had lost, or which were grown quite useless to them;[a] the lame walking with vigour and agility, and the blind seeing every object distinctly, and immediately bearing, without any inconvenience, the full force of unaccustomed light:[b] and, struck with such various and pleasing wonders, they glorified the God of Israel, who had raised up so illustrious a Prophet to his people, and sent help to so many afflicted creatures whom no human power could have restored.

Mark VIII. 1.

This concourse of people continued with him much

MAT. XV. 30.

AND great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet, and he healed them:

31 Insomuch that the multitude wondered, when they saw the dumb to speak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to see: and they glorified the God of Israel.

MARK VIII. 1. In those a The maimed made whole.] The word κυλλους, which we render maimed, does, in the strictest propriety (as Festus observes,) signify one whose hand or arm has been cut off (see Mark ix. 43.) but it is sometimes applied to those who only were disabled in those parts. (See Beza and Casaub. in loc.) And though in some rare instances it may be used to signify a lameness in the feet (see Elsner. Observ. Vol. I. p. 77, and Albert. Observ. p. 109.) yet, as it is here opposed to χωλους περιπατουντας, the lame walking, it must undoubtedly be limited as in the paraphrase.—It is reasonable to suppose that among the many maimed, who were brought on such occasions, there were some whose limbs had been cut off; and, I think, hardly any of the miracles of our Lord were more illustrious and amazing than the recovery of such.

b Bearing—the full force of unaccustomed light.] So far as we can judge by all the stories of the blind restored to sight, which occur in the gospel, this was universally the case; and I could not forbear pointing out so wonderful a circumstance.

c They

those days the multitude being very great, and having nothing to eat, Jesus called his disciples unto him, and saith unto them. [MAT. XV. 32.—] much longer than could have been imagined; and, the season being favourable, they were so intent on hearing Christ and seeing his miracles, that they lodged two nights together in the fields:[c] and therefore, in those days, the multitude being very great and having spent the provision they had brought out with them, so that now on the third day they had nothing to eat, Jesus having called his disciples to him, says unto them, I cannot but have compassion on the multitude of my hearers, who flock thus eagerly about me, and express such zeal in their attendance, as to expose themselves thereby to many inconveniences: for they have continued with me now three days, and I well know, that they have nothing left to eat: And therefore I will not send them away fasting to their own houses, lest, if I do, they should some of them faint by the way: for our Lord knew, that several of them came from a considerable distance, and were but ill furnished for procuring accommodations abroad.

SECT. LXXXVI.

Mark VIII. 1.

2 I have compassion on the multitude, because they have now been with me three days, and have nothing to eat: [MAT. XV. 32.—]

2

3 And [I will not] send them away fasting to their own houses, [lest they faint] by the way: for divers of them came from afar. MAT. XV.—32.]

3

4 And his disciples answered him, From whence can a man satisfy these men with bread here? [Whence should we have so much bread in the wilderness, as to fill so great a multitude?] [MAT. XV. 33.]

And his disciples, not reflecting on the miracle he had lately wrought for the relief of the five thousand, or not imagining he would repeat it, answered him, From whence can any one hope to satisfy these men with bread and other food here in this desert country, if he had ever so much money to spare for the purpose? [And] especially whence should we, whose stock is so small, have so much bread in the wilderness as might suffice to fill so great a multitude, whose appetites are many of them sharpened by so long a fast? We cannot but wonder to hear thee mention such a design.

4

5 And he asked them, How many loaves have ye? And they said, Seven, [and a few little fishes.] [MAT. XV. 34.]

And he asked them, How many loaves are you provided with, or what have you at hand to eat? And they said, We have only seven loaves among us all, and a few little fishes, which is a very trifle to the present purpose. And, having ordered them to bring out what they had, he commanded the multitude to sit down in rank on the ground

5

6 And he commanded [the multitude] to sit

6

[c] They lodged two nights together in the fields.] This we may infer from the next verse. The season of the year was pleasant, it being, as we have observed, quickly after the passover. (See sect. LXXXIII. note b, p. 425.) And besides, that the great number of cures, which had been wrought but just before, might animate them, perhaps they might conclude that the miraculous power of Christ, which was displayed in so many glorious instances around them, would either preserve their health from being endangered by the large dews which fell in the night, or restore them from any disorder they might contract by their eagerness to attend on his ministry.

SECT LXXXV

Mark VIII. 6.

ground, that they might be served as before, in an orderly manner ;[d] and then having took the seven loaves, and solemnly given thanks to his heavenly Father, acknowledging his goodness as the great Author of all mercies, when he had blessed them before them all he brake them into proper pieces, and gave [them] to his disciples to set before them ; and they accordingly set them

7 before the people. And, as they likewise had a few small fishes, he took them also in the same manner ; and having blessed [them] as he had done the bread, he commanded his disciples to set them also before [the multitude.]

8 So they did all eat, and were abundantly satisfied : and the disciples afterwards collected what was left, and they took up no less than seven baskets full of what remained of the fragments ; which Jesus ordered them to gather up, that he might thus convince them in the strongest manner of the greatness of the miracle, and teach them also, at the same time, to use a prudent frugality in the midst of plenty.

9 And they who had eaten of these loaves and fishes were about four thousand men besides a considerable number of women and children, who were there in company with them, and all partook of the same entertainment.

Mat. XV. 39.

And, the repast being over, he dismissed the multitude: and immediately after this, entered into a ship with his disciples he crossed the sea, and came into the parts of Dalmanutha (which, with several neighbouring cities, stood in the coast of Magdala, not far from Gadara, on the eastern shore of the sea of Galilee :) and there he had an interview with some Pharisees, which will be related in the next section.

s t down on the ground: and he took the seven loaves, and gave thanks and brake, and gave to his disciples to set before them : and they did set them before the people. [MAT. XV. 35, 36.]

7 And they had a few small fishes; and he blessed, and commanded to set them also before them.

8 So they did [all] eat, and were filled. And they took up of the broken meat that was left, seven baskets [full.] [MAT. XV. 37.]

9 — And they that had eaten were about four thousand men, beside women and children. [MAT. XV. 38.]

MAT. XV. 39. And he sent away the multitude : [and straightway he entered into a ship with his disciples,] and came [into the parts of Dalmanutha,] into the coast of Magdala. [MARK VIII. 9, 10.]

IMPROVEMENT.

Mat. XV. 30, 31.

WITH what a circle is our blessed Lord surrounded[e]! Let us pause a little, and endeavour to paint him to our imagination on this mountain, where the astonished multitudes so justly extolled all these

d That they might be served as before, in an orderly manner.] See note h on Mark vi. 40. p. 415. Probably here they might sit an hundred in rank, and forty in file, by which means the four thousand men would be exactly disposed as the five thousand had been.

With what a circle is our blessed Lord surrounded !] As this story of feeding the four thousand is so very much the same with what we had in sect. lxxviii. I refer the reader to the improvement of that section (p. 417.) for practical reflections on the greatest part of this ; and choose here to indulge a devout meditation on the number and variety of those cures which Christ performed, which constitutes the whole of this improvement, having been elsewhere but transiently touched upon.

these mingled wonders of power and of grace. Let us reflect on the dumb speaking, the maimed made whole, the lame walking, the deaf hearing, and the blind seeing, that with them we may glorify the God of Israel. SECT. LXXXVI. Mat. XV. 30, 31.

But who can describe the sentiments of these happy creatures, who, without any dangerous or painful operation, found themselves, in a moment, restored beyond all the efforts of nature, and beyond all the prospects of hope! With what pleasure did the ear, which had just been opened, listen to the pleasing accents of his instructive tongue! How did the lame leap around him for joy! and the maimed extend their recovered hands in grateful acknowledgments of his new creating power! While the voice of the dumb sang forth his praises in sounds before unknown; and the eye of the blind checked the curiosity, which would have prompted it to range over the various and beautiful objects of unveiled nature, to fix its rapturous regards on the gracious countenance of him that had given it the day!

Let us farther reflect with what correspondent pleasure must our Lord survey these grateful and astonished creatures, while his benevolent heart took its share in all the delight, which he gave! These trophies of his greatness, how unlike to those of the field, the monuments of desolation and slaughter! Trophies, for which the hero must have struggled with the man, and might sit down and weep over his own success!

Whose heart is so insensible as not to feel an humane as well as devout pleasure in the history of these and the like miracles, though the subjects, on which they were wrought, are long since mouldering in the dust! But let us farther recollect, that our Divine Leader has other yet more noble and more permanent trophies; those immortal spirits, which he has redeemed, and sanctified, and saved! So may our transported souls, O blessed Jesus, in the consciousness of health, vigour and salvation, behold thee as our Deliverer! So mayest thou view us with satisfaction, as the travail of thy soul, in that mountain of God, where we hope to offer thee nobler praises, and for ever to consecrate to thy service those powers, which thou hast recovered from weakness, dishonour and ruin.

SECT. LXXXVII.

The Pharisees again demand a sign, and Christ upbraids them with hypocrisy in doing it; and, having crossed the lake again, he cautions his disciples against their leaven, and that of the Sadducees. Mat. XVI. 1—12. Mark VIII. 11.

Mat. XVI. 1.

THE Pharisees also with the Sadducees came,

Mat. XVI. 1.

AND when Jesus was landed on the opposite shore of the sea of Galilee, in the coasts of Magdala, SECT. LXXXVII. Mat. XVI. 1.

SECT. lxxxvii.

Mat. XVI. 1. Magdala, the Pharisees and Sadducees, notwithstanding the difference of their principles, and the alienation of their affections from each other, agreed to join in an attempt upon him: and accordingly they came, and began to examine him in a very crafty and ensnaring manner; and, to try him yet farther, desired him that he would shew them a sign from heaven[a]; pretending that they could not acquiesce merely in such miracles as he had wrought upon earth, where there was much more room for artifice and deceit, and evil spirits might have some greater influence than in the upper regions. (Compare Mat. xii. 38. sect. lxiii.)

came, [and began to question with him,] and [tempting him] desired him that he would shew them a sign from heaven.—[MARK VIII. 11.]

2 But he, answering, said unto them, It is most apparent, you ask this out of a desire to cavil, rather than to learn the Divine will: for in other cases you take up with degrees of evidence far short of those which you here reject: as for instance, you readily say in an evening, [It will be] fair weather to-morrow, because the sky is this 3 evening of a bright and fiery red: And in the morning, [It will be] tempestuous weather[b] to-day, for the sky is red and lowring. O ye hypocrites, you know how to distinguish the face of the heavens, and to form from thence probable conjectures concerning the weather; and can you not [distinguish] the signs of the present times, and see by the various miracles which are daily performed among you, and the other tokens which attend mine appearance, that this is indeed the period, which you profess to desire with so much eagerness, and which you might discern with much less sagacity?

2 He answered and said unto them, When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather, for the sky is red.

3 And in the morning, It will be foul weather to-day, for the sky is red and lowring. O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky, but can ye not discern the signs of the times?

Mark VIII. 12 And, sighing deeply, as being touched in his own spirit with a most compassionate sense of their

MARK VIII. 12.—And he sighed deeply in his spirit, and saith, Why a Desired him that he would shew them a sign from heaven.] On the whole, I am ready to think the two things mentioned in note a on Mat. xii. 38, p. 330, are to be united; and that, what they here demanded was the very thing which Josephus tell us. (Bell. Jud. lib. ii. cap. 13. [al 12,] § 4.) Impostors of those times promised they would shew them from God; under the character of σημεια ἐλευθερίας, signs of liberty, or some miraculous appearance from heaven, to assure them of deliverance from the Roman yoke. And on these principles they continued their demands in the apostles' time, (1 Cor. i. 22.) though so many signs from heaven had then been given in the voice from thence; in the preternatural darkness at our Lord's crucifixion; in the descent of angels in repeated instances; and in that of the Holy Spirit, in a visible form, as well as in the most sensible effects. See Dr. Lardner's Credib. book i. chap. 5, § 2, Vol. I. p. 291.

b Tempestuous weather.] So χειμων properly signifies. Dr. Lightfoot justly observes that the Jews used to value themselves highly on their skill in prognosticating the weather. And Grotius has well observed in his note on this place what a variety of signs marked out that time for the arrival of the Messiah.

Why do this generation seek after a sign? Verily I say unto you, [A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign, and there shall no sign be given unto it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas.] [MAT. XVI. 4.—] their guilt and misery, he said, Why does this generation seek after a farther sign? Verily, as I said once before on this occasion, (Mat xii. 39, sect. lxiii.) I now say it again to you, This is an evil and adulterous generation, which demands a sign, and no such sign, as it requires, shall be given it, unless it be the sign of the prophet Jonah, who lay three days and nights in the belly of the great fish, and then came out alive; to which a most remarkable resemblance will be quickly manifested in the resurrection of the Messiah on the third day, that will moreover be attended with the appearance of an angel coming down from heaven. SECT. lxxxvii. Mark VIII. 12

13 And he left them; and, entering into the ship again, departed to the other side. — [MAT. XVI. 4.]

And, having said this, he staid no longer to debate the matter with persons of so perverse and disingenuous a temper, but left them; and, entering again into the ship, which brought him over the sea, he departed to the other side of the lake. 13

MAT. XVI. 5. And when his disciples were come to the other side, they had forgotten to take bread, [neither had they in the ship with them more than one loaf.] [MARK VIII. 14.]

And when his disciples were come to the other side of the sea, they were concerned to find that they had forgotten to take any bread; and, having used all the fragments, which they carried over with them in the baskets, they had now no more than one loaf with them in the ship. Mat. XVI. 5.

6 Then Jesus [charged them, saying,] Take heed and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees, [and of the leaven of Herod.] [MARK VIII. 15.]

And Jesus, willing to improve this circumstance, considering what had lately passed, gave them a solemn charge, saying, Be very cautiously on your guard [c] against the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees, and particularly take heed of the leaven of Herod [d]: intending thereby to caution them against those corrupt mixtures, which these sects had introduced to the depraving of religion; which tended, like leaven, to overspread and sour, and puff up the mind, and so to prevent the efficacy of Divine instruction upon it. 6

7 And they reasoned among themselves, saying, It is because we have taken no bread. [MARK VIII. 16.]

But the slowness of their understanding shewed itself on this occasion, as it had done on many others; and they debated privately among themselves, saying, [It is] surely because we have taken no bread with us, that our Lord thus cautions us against the leaven of these men, as if they 7

[c] Be very cautiously on your guard.] This sufficiently expresses the sense of the words ὁρᾶτε καὶ προσέχετε, which are repeated in the original, to urge the caution with the greater force and emphasis.

[d] Leaven of Herod.] Those Sadducees, who were also Herodians, might with peculiar propriety be singled out by our Lord, to caution his disciples against them. See Grotius in loc. and note [f] on Mark iii. 6, p. 274.

[e] How

SECT. lxxxvii. they polluted whatever they touched. [Which] when Jesus perceived, as he knew all the secret workings of their minds, he said unto them,

Mat. XVI. 8. O ye of little faith, why do you reason in this manner with yourselves? and why is it, that you are under such concern, because you have 9 brought no bread? Do you not yet consider, after all that you have seen and heard, nor understand what has so lately passed before your eyes? [and] have you still your hearts so hardened, and your minds so stupified, as not to draw so easy a consequence from such repeated miracles, as to be free from any anxious concern on this account, because you have but one

Mark VIII. 18. loaf? Are you like so many senseless images? Having eyes, do you not see with them? and, having ears, do you not hear? and, with those natural powers of memory and reflection, do ye not remember, what you were witnesses to but 19 a few days ago? Let me refresh your memories, and ask you, When I broke the five loaves, and you with your own hands distributed them among the five thousand men till they were all satisfied, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? They say unto him, We well re-
20 member that we took up twelve. And, added he, when in like manner [I divided] the seven [loaves] among the four thousand, and fed them to the full, how many baskets full of fragments did you then take up[e]? And they said, Lord, we know we took up seven.

21 And he farther said to them, Since you remember these facts, how is it that you do not understand by them that I did not speak to you concerning bread, so as to blame you for having brought no more bread, but meant that you should be on your guard against the leaven of those erroneous notions and corrupt principles which are so common among the Pharisees, Herodians, and Sadducees?

8 Which when Jesus perceived, he said unto them, O ye of little faith, why reason ye among yourselves because ye have brought no bread? [MARK VIII. 17.—]

9—Do ye not yet perceive, [neither] understand? [have ye your hearts yet hardened?] [MARK VIII. —17.]

MARK VIII. 18. Having eyes, see ye not? and, having ears, hear ye not? and do ye not remember? [MAT. XVI.—9.—]

19 When I brake the five loaves among five thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? They say unto him, Twelve. [MAT. XVI. —9.]

20 And when the seven among four thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? And they said, Seven. [MAT. XVI. 10.]

21 And he said unto them, How is it that you do not understand [that I spake it not to you concerning bread, that ye should beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees?] [MAT. XVI. 11.]

Then

e How many baskets full of fragments did you take up?] The learned Dr. Daniel Scott, on Mat. xvi. 10. with his usual accuracy has observed that two different words are used in this and the preceding verse for baskets, κοφινους and σπυριδας. The former signifies larger baskets; and therefore is translated paniers by the French: we have borrowed the word from them, and it seems, from its etymology, first to have been given them from their being used by bakers to carry about large quantities of bread. The other seem to have been smaller baskets with handles, and such as consequently might easily be carried on the arm. It is observable that our Lord did not affect to rise in the circumstances of the two miracles here mentioned. The latter, though in some particulars inferior to the former, was equally a demonstration of the Divine power of Christ, and therefore equally to the purpose for which it is here mentioned; not to urge that it was, of the two, the more fresh in their memories.

MAT. XVI. 12. Then understood they how that he bade them not beware of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees.

Then they were sensible of their mistake, and understood that he did not charge them to beware of the leaven of bread; but that he intended to warn them of the evil doctrine and example of the Pharisees and Sadducees, against which so many of his discourses were most justly levelled. SECT. lxxxvii. Mat. XVI. 12

IMPROVEMENT.

So evident is it, that the circumstances of a scripture story may be remembered, where the design of it is overlooked or forgot! It is much to be wished, that those which we have been surveying, may not increase the number of such instances. Mark VIII. 18, 21

In all those cases, wherein the arm of the Lord has been made bare in our favour, let us seriously reflect on the Divine power and goodness, and learn from past experience to trust it for the time to come. Never let us fall into the perverse suspicions of the Israelites, Can God furnish a table in the wilderness? (Psal. lxxviii. 19.) But let us be strong in faith, giving glory to God, and cheerfully repose ourselves on his care, who can never want wisdom to judge aright of the necessities of his people, or power to relieve them, even in the greatest extremities. 19, 20 Mat. XVI. 8.

We see a new instance of the perverseness of these scribes and Pharisees. They tempted Christ by unreasonable demands; and he justly suffered them to go away without the additional demonstration they sought. It is not for us to prescribe to God what degrees of evidence he shall give us. Let us impartially pursue and improve what we have; and be very careful that our sagacity, and openness to conviction, in other matters of much less importance, may not condemn our stupidity or obstinacy, where the truths of God and the salvation of our souls are concerned. 1 4 2, 3

It is our concern to beware of erroneous principles in religion, and of every corrupt leaven which might be ready to insinuate itself into our minds; especially of that, which, like the leaven of the Pharisees, would exalt our confidence in ourselves; or, like that of the Sadducees, would impair our persuasion of a future judgment, and our solicitous concern to live as in the views of it. May the oracles of Divine truth ever appear to our minds as the rule, by which all doctrines are to be tried! and let us, in the spirit of love, contend earnestly for that faith, which we believe to have been once delivered to the saints; that both our sentiments and actions may finally be found blameless, unto praise, and honour, and glory, at the appearing of Jesus Christ! Amen. 6, 12

SECT.

SECT. LXXXVIII.

Christ gradually heals the blind man at Bethsaida; and owns to his disciples, that he is the Messiah, applauding Peter for expressly acknowledging him under that character. Mark VIII. 22—30. Mat. XVI. 13—20. Luke IX. 18—21.

MARK VIII. 22.

sect. lxxxviii.

AND when our Lord had thus crossed the sea, he came to Bethsaida; and his fame being well known there, as soon as he entered the

Mark VIII. 22 place, they brought him a blind man and entreated him that he would be pleased only to touch him, as being well assured, that this would be

23 sufficient for the recovery of his sight. And, as he chose to work this miracle in private, he took hold of the blind man's hand, and led him out of the town[a] in the most tender and condescending manner; and having spit upon his eyes, and laid his hands upon him, he asked him if he saw any

24 thing. And looking up, he said, I do indeed discern the forms of things, in an imperfect manner, and see men walking before me, but it is so obscurely, as that I am hardly able to distinguish them from trees, any otherwise than

25 by their motion[b]. Then he laid his hands again upon his eyes, and caused him to look up a second time: and upon this he found his sight was perfectly restored, so that he saw every man and 26 thing about him clearly and distinctly. And he sent him away directly to his own house, which lay in some neighbouring village; and said unto him, Enter not into the ungrateful town of Bethsaida, to proclaim what has now been done for thee; neither tell the circumstances of it to any man dwelling in the town, for they are unworthy the knowledge of such a miracle; but content thyself with returning thy acknowledgments to God for his favour to thee; for I assure thee, that in what I do, I am animated only by a sincere regard to the glory of him that sent me, and to the relief of afflicted creatures.

And

MARK VIII. 22.

AND he cometh to Bethsaida, and they bring a blind man unto him, and besought him to touch him.

23 And he took the blind man by the hand, and led him out of the town; and when he had spit on his eyes, and put his hands upon him, he asked him if he saw ought.

24 And he looked up, and said, I see men as trees walking.

25 After that he put his hands again upon his eyes, and made him look up: and he was restored, and saw every man clearly.

26 And he sent him away to his house, saying, Neither go into the town, nor tell it to any in the town.

a And led him out of the town.] Grotius thinks it was an intimation of his just displeasure against the inhabitants of Bethsaida, for their ingratitude and infidelity, that he would not permit them to be eye-witnesses of this miracle, or even suffer the person who received the cure to go back thither to proclaim it. Compare Mat. xi. 21, sect. lix.

b I see men walking, as trees.] Probably they might not be far from the way-side, and these might be passengers who happened then to be going by; for it seems by the story, that our Lord, when he took him out of the town, permitted none of his company to attend him.

c Cesarea

27 And Jesus went out, and his disciples, into the towns of Cesarea Philippi: and [Luke, it came to pass] by the way, [when Jesus came into the coasts of it,] [Luke, as he was alone praying, his disciples were with him, and] he asked his disciples, saying unto them, Whom do men say that I [the Son of man] am? [Mat. XVI. 13. Luke IX. 18.]

Luke IX. 19. They answering, said, [Some say that thou art] John the Baptist; but some say Elias; [and others Jeremias,] and others say, that one of the old prophets is risen again. [Mat. XVI. 14. Mark VIII. 28.]

Mark VIII. 29. And he saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And [Simon] Peter answereth and saith unto him, Thou art the Christ, [the Son of the living God.] [Mat. XVI. 15, 16. Luke IX. 20.]

And Jesus, with his disciples, went out from the city of Bethsaida, in the neighbourhood of which this miracle had been performed, and came into the towns belonging to a city in the northern part of Canaan, (near mount Lebanon, which had formerly been called Laish, but now bore the name of Cæsarea Philippi, having lately been rebuilt by Philip the tetrarch[c]. And it came to pass by the way, as they were on their journey, when Jesus was just come into [those] parts, he retired a while for devotion; and when he had been praying with his disciples apart he inquired of them, saying, Whom do men say that I, who have so long conversed among them as the Son of man, am? What notions do you find that men generally form of me? SECT. LXXVIII. Mark VIII. 27.

And they, replying, said, Some [say that thou art] John the Baptist risen from the dead, with an additional power of working miracles; but others [say] that thou art Elijah the prophet, who art come to prepare the way of the Messiah; and others say that thou art Jeremiah[d]; and others, in a more general way, that one of the ancient prophets is risen again. Luke IX. 19.

And, after they had told him what were the thoughts of others, he then said to them, for the trial of their faith, But tell me truly and plainly your own sentiments; whom do you yourselves think and say that I am? And Simon Peter immediately answered, with his usual zeal and forwardness, and said to him, in the name of the rest, Lord, we well know that thou art the great expected Messiah; and art not only the Son of man, the worthy Heir of that glorious and extensive kingdom promised to him; but art, in a proper and incommunicable sense, the Son of the ever living God; and we believe in thee as such, and adore thee under that Divine character. Mark VIII. 29.

And

[c] Cæsarea Philippi, &c.] Philip the tetrarch called the chief city of this tract of land Cæsarea, in honour of Tiberius Cæsar; and Philip's own name was added, to distinguish it from that other Cæsarea so often mentioned in the Acts (chap. viii. 40; ix. 30; x. 1; xii. 19; xxi. 8; xxiii. 23, 33, and xxv. 4. 13), which was a fine port on the Mediterranean sea, and had been rebuilt by Herod the Great, and named in honour of Augustus Cæsar.—Josephus gives Philip so good a character, that some have thought our Lord retired into his territories for security from the insults of his enemies elsewhere. See L'Enfant's Introduction, p. 27.

[d] Others say that thou art Jeremiah.] Mr. Cradock has observed, that the Jews seem to have had a tradition among them, that Jeremiah the prophet would appear among them, when the Messiah came, to recover the ark of the covenant, which they fancied he had hid: 2 Mac. ii. 5. (See Cradock's Harmony, Part II. p. 12.) And Dr. Whitby imagines, they might farther encourage themselves in that notion, from Jer. i. 5, 10. (See his note on Mat. xvi. 14.)

SECT. lxxviii.

Mat. XVI. 17.

And Jesus, replying, said unto him, Thou hast confessed a truth, and a truth of the utmost importance: blessed art thou, therefore, O Simon Bar-Jonas, (or the son of Jonas,) in being brought thus firmly to believe it: for flesh and blood hath not revealed [it] to thee, thou hast not learnt it by human report, or the unassisted sagacity of thine own mind; but my Father in heaven has discovered it to thee, and wrought in thy soul this cordial assent in the midst of those various prejudices against it, which present circumstances might suggest. And, as thou hast been so ready to make this acknowledgment, I also in return say to thee, Thou art indeed Peter, (see John i. 42, p. 125), thou art, as thy name signifies, a substantial rock; and, as thou hast shewn it in this good confession, I assure thee, that upon this rock I will build my church[e]; faith in me as the Son of God shall be its great support, and I will use thee as a glorious instrument in raising it: yea, so immoveable and firm shall its foundation be, and so secure the superstructure, that though earth and hell unite their assaults against it, and death, in its most dreadful forms, be armed for its destruction, the gates of hell, or the unseen world, shall not finally prevail against it to its ruin[f]; but one generation of

MAT. XVI. 17. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-Jona; for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven.

18 And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

e Upon this rock I will build my church.] I look upon this as one of those scriptures the sense of which might be most certainly fixed by the particular tone of voice and gesture with which it was spoken; and therefore have paraphrased it with a latitude, which an intelligent reader will easily observe.—If our Lord altered his accent, and laid his hand on his breast, it would shew that he spoke, not of the person but of the confession of Peter (as most protestant divines have understood it), and meant to point out himself as the great Foundation. Compare 1 Cor. iii. 10, 11.—But if he turned to the other apostles, and pointed to Peter, that would shew, he meant to intimate the honour he would do him, in making him an eminent support to his church. This is the sense which Grotius, Le Clerc, Dr. Whitby, Dr. Clarke, and L'Enfant defend, and it seems to suit best with the connection; (see Whitby in loc.) But to be a foundation in this sense, was not his honour alone: his brethren shared with him in it, (see Eph. ii. 20, and Rev. xxi. 14.) as they did also in the power of binding and loosing. (See Mat. xviii. 18, and John xx. 23.)—On the whole, how weak the arguments are, which the Papists draw from hence, to support the supremacy of Peter in their wild sense of it, is sufficiently shewn by Bishop Burnet on the Articles, p. 180. Calvin, Institut. lib. iv. cap. 6. Dr. Barrow on the Creed, Serm. xxviii. Dr. Patrick in his Sermon on this text, and a multitude more, whom I need not name.—There seems a reference in this expression to the common custom of building citadels upon a rock.

f The gates of hell shall not prevail against it to its ruin.] It is most certain that the phrase here used πυλαι αδε, does generally in the Greek writers signify, the entrance into the invisible world; as Elsner (Vol. I. p. 77, 78), and Albert (Observ. p. 111, 112), have abundantly proved. So the seventy use it, Isaiah xxxviii. 10, and Job xxxviii. 17. (Compare Wisd. of Sol. xvi. 13.) So that it is equivalent to the gates of death, Psal. cvii. 18, and elsewhere. The plainest and fullest sense seems to be what I have given in the paraphrase; for the vindication of which, see Dr. More's Theological Works, p. 110, and Dr. Whitby's note on this place. Grotius also supposes it refers to the final triumph of the saints over the grave at the general resurrection. This does indeed imply of Christians shall arise after another, even to the very end of time, to maintain this truth, and to venture their lives and their souls upon it, till at length the whole body of them be redeemed from the power of the grave. In the mean time, I will raise thee, O Peter, and thy brethren, whose faith herein agrees with thine (compare John xx. 23), to distinguished honours in my church; and I will give unto thee, in particular, the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and make thee the instrument of opening it both to the Jews and Gentiles[g]: yea, so fully shall thou be instructed in my will, and in the constitution of my kingdom, that whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven[h]; that is, thou shalt have authority to declare what precepts of the Mosaic religion are superseded, and what are continued, and what things are allowed or forbidden to my disciples; and I will myself confirm those decisions, whether general or personal, as made by the influences by a victory over the power and policy of infernal spirits; but I cannot apprehend a reference to this to be chiefly intended; as it is certain, that the Greek word ἅιδης [hades] does very seldom signify the state of the damned, but generally (as שְׁאוֹל in Hebrew), the invisible world in general. See Mr. Howe's Works, Vol. II. p. 61, 62.

SECT. LXXXVIII.

Mat. XVI. 18.

19 And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven.

g I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven, &c.] As stewards of great families, especially of the royal household bore a key, probably a golden one (as the lords of the bed-chamber do), in token of their office, the phrase of giving a person the key naturally grew into an expression of raising him to great power: (compare Isa. xxii. 22, and Rev. iii. 7.) And this seems more natural and certain than Bishop Burnet's supposition, that Christ refers to the custom of giving a key to the Jewish rabbies when they were admitted into their office, in token of the power given them to expound the scripture. See Grotius on Luke xi. 52, and Bishop Burnet's four Discourses, (p. 241, 242). Peter's opening the kingdom of heaven, as being the first that preached it, both to the Jews (Acts ii), and to Gentiles (Acts x), may be considered as an illustration of this promise: but I apprehend it more fully explained by the power of binding and loosing afterwards mentioned.

h Whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven, &c.] A power to bind and loose may signify, in general, great authority in a family or state; which sense it plainly has, both in Josephus and Plutarch. (See Elsner. Observ. Vol. I. p. 80). When applied to judges in criminal cases, it signifies to absolve or condemn (see Raphel. Annot. ex Herod. page 169); and when used of teachers, especially in the Jewish language, it refers to their explications of the law; and thus to bind is to oblige a person to do or forbear any thing in question, or to declare a thing commanded or forbidden; and to loose is to declare the thing to be indifferent, or the person at liberty with respect to it. (See Lightf. Hor. Heb. in loc.)—The learned Selden has endeavoured to shew that the clause before us must be interpreted in this sense (see Seld. de Synod. lib. ii. cap. 7); and many of the greatest characters for criticism in our own country and abroad have followed him; and among the rest the present celebrated Bishop of Winchester, in his glorious controversy on the subject of Church Authority. I have included that sense, and taken the words in a yet greater extent, as the learned Puffendorff also does (De Habitu Relig. Christ, &c. § 22—25). and I shall, with great pleasure, submit to those ecclesiastical rulers who shall prove, as the apostles did, their power to explain the laws of Christ in a decisive way, and their authority efficaciously to absolve or condemn men, according to the sense they give of them.

SECT. lxxxviii.

ences of my unerring spirit communicated to thee and thy brethren, and will determine men's final state in a manner agreeable to them.

Luke IX. 21.

And upon this he strictly charged and commanded his disciples that they should tell no man, at present, this thing concerning him, which he had so expressly acknowledged to them, that he was Jesus the Messiah, and that he actually professed and owned the title; because he knew it was like to be interpreted in a very unjust and unnatural manner, which might have rendered him and his followers obnoxious to the Romans, who would unreasonably look on such a profession as a claim to regal power, and utterly inconsistent with the rights of Cæsar.

LUKE IX. 21. And he straitly charged [his disciples,] and commanded them to tell no man that thing [MARK, of him,] [that he was Jesus the Christ.] [MAT. XVI. 20. MARK VIII. 30.]

IMPROVEMENT.

Mat. XVI. 16, 18.

WE here behold the great Foundation of our faith and hope, even Jesus, the Rock of ages, the same yesterday, to day, and for ever (Heb. xiii. 8), who is Christ the Son of the living God. Other foundation can no man lay (1 Cor. iii. 11). On him may our souls rest, and the fiercest tempests shall rage in vain!

18 Our Lord foretold that the gates of hell should not be able to prevail against his church as thus founded; and behold, even to this day, the accomplishment of the prediction. As Christians of one age have sunk into their graves, a new harvest has sprung up in the next; and, in spite of all the artifices of Satan to pervert young minds, and all the advantages with which he attacks them, instead of the Fathers have been the children, to be accounted to the Lord for a generation. (Psal. xlv. 16, and xxii. 30).

19 Let us thankfully adore the Divine goodness herein; and be very sensible how much we are indebted to that goodness in those powers communicated to the apostles, on whom, as subordinate foundations we are built (Eph. ii. 20). As they received so ample a commission, and obtained grace from the Lord to be faithful to it, let us pay the humblest regard to their teachings; as well knowing, that what they have bound on earth is bound in heaven, and what they have inculcated, was solemnly confirmed by a Divine authority.

17 If we have listened with attention to those immortal writings of theirs, by which, being dead, they yet speak; and have found them the effectual means of revealing Christ in our hearts, in all his Divine glories and saving powers; let us remember that we owe it not to flesh and blood, or the most excellent human instruments alone, but to the influences of our Father in heaven.

That

That efficacious grace is freely exercised, and operates in various methods; on some, in a more instantaneous way; on others, like the power of Christ on the blind man of whom we have been reading, by more gradual advances. Let us be thankful for whatever light we receive, and press on to brighter discoveries; and join with them proportionable degrees of gratitude to Christ, and veneration for his gospel.

SECT. LXXXVIII. Mark VIII. 23—25.

SECT. LXXXIX.

Christ prophesies of his approaching sufferings, rebukes Peter for being offended at them; and exhorts his disciples to self-denial, and a readiness for martyrdom in his cause. Mat. XVI. 21, to the end. Mark VIII. 31, to the end, IX. 1. Luke IX. 22—27.

MAT. XVI. 21. FROM that time forth began Jesus to [teach and] shew unto his disciples, how that he, [the Son of man,] must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things, [and be rejected] of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and [after three days] be raised again the third day. [MARK VIII. 31. LUKE IX. 22.]

MAT. XVI. 21.

SECT. LXXXIX. Mat. XVI. 21

NOW when Jesus had applauded the confession of Peter, (as recorded above,) and thereby expressly declared to all the apostles that he was the Messiah, he from that time began more plainly than ever, to teach, [and] shew to his disciples, that he, the Son of man, who was indeed the Christ of God, must in a few months more go to Jerusalem; and, there, instead of being owned under the royal character he bore, and submitted to by princes and people, must suffer many most injurious things, and be disdainfully rejected by the elders, and chief priests, and scribes of their nation, and be killed in a most cruel and outrageous manner: but he went on and added, to encourage them under this gloomy prospect, That after having laid part of three days under the power of death, he should be raised again on the third day.

MARK VIII. 32. And he spake that saying openly. And Peter took him and began to rebuke him, [saying, Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall not be unto thee] [MAT. XVI. 22.]

And, as he now spake that saying plainly and freely[a], whereas he had before only given distant and obscure hints of it, they were exceedingly surprised and troubled: and Peter elevated with what our Lord had before been saying, and unable to reconcile it with what he now heard, took him [by the hand[b]] and began, with a mixture of tenderness and surprise, to chide him Mark VIII. 32.

a Plainly and freely.] So παρρησια evidently signifies, and is often rendered in our version (compare John x. 24, and xi. 14.) and in this sense it is opposed to speaking in proverbs; John xvi. 25, 29. Christ had before given obscure hints of this, John ii. 19. iii. 14. vi. 51. Mat. x. 38. xii. 40. and elsewhere.

b Took him by the hand.] So I render the word προσλαβομενος. Compare Rom. xv. 7. Gr. which may help to illustrate the sense of it.

c God

SECT. LXXXIX.

him for this melancholy discourse, saying, God in his infinite mercy forbid[c], that thou, O Lord, shouldst ever be thus treated! This injury and violence, I persuade myself, shall not by any means be done unto thee.

Mark VIII. 32.

33 But [Jesus] when he had turned about, and looked round him on his other disciples, whose sentiments he knew to be much the same, rebuked Peter with an unusual severity; and said to him, Get thee behind me, Satan [d], for thou actest the part of a devil, rather than a friend; and art a scandal to me, in thus endeavouring to obstruct the great end of mine appearance in the world; for by this it plainly appears, that thou dost not regard and relish the things of God, but those of men [e], and losest thy zeal for the Divine glory, and the salvation of souls, in the mean solicitude for the enjoyments of this temporal life, and the grandeurs of an earthly kingdom, of which thou art vainly dreaming.

33 But when he had turned about, and looked on his disciples, he rebuked Peter [and said unto him,] Get thee behind me, Satan, [thou art an offence unto me;] for thou favourest not the things that be of God, but the things that be of men. [MAT. XVI. 23.]

34 Then having called the multitude, with his disciples

34 And [then] when he had called the c God in his infinite mercy forbid!] Dr. Fuller supposes that ἱλεως σοι should be rendered, (May God have compassion upon thee! (See Fuller's Miscel. Sacr. lib. ii. cap. 2.) Heinsius, Grotius, and Le Clerc, give the same interpretation; which is also asserted at large by the learned Mr. Wasse. (Biblioth. Liter. Vol. I. p. 80.) And the accurate Dr. Scott renders it, Mercy on thee! which is more literal than any of the rest. I think the phrase, as used by the seventy, generally signifies, God forbid; or, as we render it, Far be it from thee! (See 1 Sam. xiv. 45. 2 Sam. xx. 20. 1 Kings xxi. 3. 1 Chron. xi. 19. and compare 1 Mac. ii. 21.) But as the accurate critics I have mentioned above suppose there is a particular tenderness in their interpretation, I have endeavoured to preserve it in the paraphrase.—Some would render it, Have compassion on thyself, but I cannot recollect any place where it has that sense; though 2 Sam. xxiii. 17. and Gen. xliii. 23. Septuag. have been especially alledged as instances of it. See Elsner. Observ. Vol. I. p. 81.

d Get thee behind me, Satan.] Compare Luke iv. 8. p. 120.—The word Satan, which is originally Hebrew, and has from thence been taken into several languages, is often used in the Old Testament to signify an adversary, (see Num. xxii. 32. 2 Sam. xix. 22. 1 Kings v. 4. and xi. 14.) and the expression has appeared so harsh to some, as coming from the mouth of Christ to one of his apostles, that they have rather chosen to translate it, O mine adversary. But as the evangelists have both made use of the word σατανα, which must be owned to have a sound as odious in the Greek as it has now with us, we may conclude that it was used by Christ, or his rebuke to Peter would have been otherwise expressed by some Greek word that signifies an adversary. Nor can the word appear at all too harsh, when we consider that the tendency of Peter's saying, though it was spoken out of a singular affection to his Master, was to obstruct the great design for which he came into the world, and none but Satan could desire to prevent what he was ready to submit to for the salvation of lost sinners.—Dr. Young (in his Sermons, Vol. II. p. 137,) rendering ἱλεως σοι, Favour thyself, supposes that our Lord calls Peter, Satan, because he now fell on that advice which Satan uses the most successfully of all his artifices to undo men; that of self-indulgence: and so makes this scripture an introduction to his discourse on self-denial.

e Thou dost not regard and relish the things of God, &c.] To relish, or savour, is plainly included; but I did not think it proper to limit it by such a version; for the word φρονεις often signifies to fix a governing regard on any thing, so as to make it the chief object of our pursuit; which seems the plain sense of it here. Compare Rom. viii. 5. Phil. iii. 19. and Col. iii. 2.

If

the people unto him with his disciples also, he said unto them, [Luke, all] Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross [Luke, daily,] and follow me. [Mat. XVI. 24. Luke IX. 23.]

ciples to him, he said unto them all, You must not only expect to see me suffer, but to share with me in my afflictions and sorrows, if ever you would hope to obtain a part in the glories of my kingdom; if any one therefore is willing to come after me and to attend me as a faithful servant and disciple, let him learn to deny himself in the dearest pleasures and interests of this present life, and habituate himself daily to take up his cross: let him submit to whatsoever trial Providence may lay before him, and be ready to follow me, even to crucifixion itself; for till he is taught a readiness to meet death, even in that dreadful form, for my sake, he has attended my other instructions in vain. (Compare Mat. x. 38, p. 401.)

sect. lxxxix. Mark VIII. 34

35 For whosoever will save his life, shall lose it: but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall [find and] save it. [Mat. XVI. 25. Luke IX. 24.]

And it is well worth your while to submit even to this: for whosoever will attempt to save his life from persecution, by forsaking me and my gospel, shall find he has taken the surest way to lose it; as he will another day incur the sentence of the second death, and meet a far more dreadful punishment from God, as an apostate, than he could have borne from men as my servant: but whosoever shall lose or expose his life for my sake and the gospel's, shall find it with far greater advantage in the future state, [and] so shall have reason to acknowledge that he took the truest method to save it. (Compare Mat. x. 39, p 401.

35

36 For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul, [Luke, that is, lose himself, or be cast away?] [Mat. XVI. 26. —Luke IX. 25.]

And therefore on these principles it will be certainly your highest wisdom to forego the greatest advantages, or to bear the utmost extremities, rather than to forsake me: for it is a kind of proverb among you. What would it profit a man, if he should gain the whole world, and be punished with the loss of his life?[†] and so may

36

I

† If he should gain the whole world, and be punished with the loss of his life? και ζημιωθη την ψυχην αυτου.] Though the force of this maxim, taken by itself, appears best by rendering ψυχην soul, which it does undoubtedly on the whole signify here; yet as the same word had been rendered life, ver. 35. and its meaning is sufficiently plain from what follows, I thought it better to retain the same version here likewise; which, taken in its connection, has (as Dr. Tillotson observes, Vol. III. p. 528, 529.) an additional spirit, which consists in the application of a proverb relating to the worth of life (compare Job ii. 4.) to the soul, which is in the highest sense the life of the man, or the man himself. (Luke ix. 25.)—Την ψυχην ζημιωθησθαι does not merely signify to lose the life, which might be applied to a man who accidentally met death in the pursuit of gain) as a merchant who should be lost in his voyage;) but it properly imports undergoing a capital execution, which is an idea of much greater terror, as well as of much stricter propriety in the present case: and would to God it might seriously be considered in this awful view! See Raphel. Annot. ex Herod. p. 171.

SECT. lxxxix. I say, what would all that gain, added to his present security, signify, if he thereby bring a sentence of death on his soul, [and] so lose himself,

Mark VIII. 37. or be finally cast away? Or what shall a man give as a ransom for his life[g]? what gains would he not be willing to resign, to quit himself of that foolish bargain by which he had sold it? Yet in this case, what would be accepted as an equivalent for it? "Its redemption is precious, and it ceaseth for ever." (Psal. xlix. 8.)

37 Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? MAT. XVI.—26.]

38 Now assure yourselves that this thought may with the utmost propriety be applied to the case before us: for whosoever is ashamed of me and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, shall find, to his cost, that of him also will the Son of man be ashamed, and him will he with scorn disown, and with inexorable justice condemn, when he comes in his own glory, (that is, in all the pomp and grandeur in which he was of old represented to the prophets,) and shall appear upon his throne invested with the glory of his Father[h], as commissioned by him, to be the great executor of his judgment, as well as the dispenser of his grace, attended with the bright retinue of the holy angels, who shall wait on him as his servants to grace the solemnity of

Mat. XVI. 27. that awful day. For you may certainly depend upon it, that howsoever he be now despised and rejected of men, there is a day appointed, when the Son of man shall thus come in his Father's glory, and be encircled in the most pompous manner with his holy angels; and then shall he convene the whole world before him, that he may determine the final happiness or misery of each, and recompense every man according to his actions.

38 Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me, and of my words, in this adulterous and sinful generation, of him also shall the son of man be ashamed, when he cometh [in his own glory, and] in the glory of his Father, with the holy angels. [LUKE IX. 26.]

MAT. XVI. 27. For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father, with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works.

Mat. IX. 1. And he said farther to them, Verily I tell it you as a most certain truth, that there are some of them who stand here among us that shall live to see

MARK IX. 1. And he said unto them, Verily, [LUKE, I tell you a

g As a ransom for his life.] So the word ἀντάλλαγμα properly signifies; and in this connection leads us to reflect how willing a condemned malefactor would be to give all he had got by his crimes to buy his pardon, and how vain the attempt would in this case be.

h In his own glory, and the glory of his Father.] How these are distinguished it is not easy to say. Mr. Bragge explains it of the lustre of his own glorified body, surrounded with such a circle of fire as that in which (according to him) God the Father had appeared particularly on Mount Sinai. (Bragge on the Parables, Vol. II. p. 181.) I think it sufficient to say that, besides the glory which the human nature of Christ habitually wears in heaven, some additional splendour shall now be given to him by the Father, when he sends him with his commission on so august an occasion as the universal judgment.

i The

you of a truth,] that there be some of them that stand here, which shall not taste of death till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power, [and the Son of man coming in his kingdom.] [MAT. XVI. 28. LUKE IX. 27.]

a most awful emblem of this important day: for some that now hear me shall not taste of death, that is, they shall not die, till they have seen the kingdom of God come to be established far and near, with a divinely efficacious power; [and] have beheld so eminent an appearance of Providence to promote the triumphs of my gospel, and to avenge the cruel injuries I shall receive from this ungrateful nation, that they may be said even to see the Son of man coming in his kingdom[1], and leading on his victorious armies against those who would not admit him to reign over them. SECT. LXXXIX. Mark IX. 1.

IMPROVEMENT.

ALAS, how prone are our foolish souls to relish and regard the things of men rather than those of God! How justly do we deserve the rebuke of our Lord, who, while he speaks to Peter with such abhorrence, after all the encomiums he had just been giving him, shews us with what indignation we should reject every motion that would lead us to prefer our own ease or temporal interest, to the glory of God and the happiness of man. Mark VIII. 33

We shall never act so mean a part, if we cordially digest the 36 lessons which Christ hath here taught us, and consider of how much greater importance the salvation of the soul is, than the gain of the whole world when opposed to it. Let us steadily pursue this maxim of Divine wisdom, and with cheerfulness sacrifice every other interest to the views of an eternal felicity.

Does Jesus call us to deny ourselves for him? What difficulties 34 should we not be ready to submit to, what pleasures should we not renounce for him, who pleased not himself, that he might shew his love to us; and took upon him the form of a servant, that he might make us kings and priests unto God!—Does he require us to take up our cross and follow him? What sufferings should we not be

[1] The Son of man coming in his kingdom.] Raphelius (Annot. ex Polyb. in loc.) and Albert. (Observ. p. 113, 114) have indeed proved that ἐρχομαι is sometimes used for ἀπέρχομαι, and ἐν for εἰς (compare John v. 4.) and therefore they, with some other critics, would render this text, Some here present shall not die, till they see the Son of man going into his kingdom, that is, ascending to heaven, which the apostles did, (see Acts i. 9.) But it increaseth the difficulty to suppose both these uncommon senses of the words in question to occur together; nor will Luke xxiii. 42. be allowed as an exact parallel. I choose therefore to adhere to our received version, which may include a reference to the giving of the spirit, and propagating the gospel, but chiefly refers to that providential appearance of Christ for the destruction of Jerusalem, so often called the coming of the Son of man, (Mat. xxiv. 3, 27, 30, 37.) and the day in which he shall be revealed, (Luke xvii. 24, 26, 30.) This sense is the more natural here, especially as our Lord's manner of speaking intimates that most of the company should be dead before the event referred to; yet his ascension happened in a few months after this.

SECT. LXXXIX.

be willing to endure for him; and whither should we not consent to follow him, who has borne the cross for us, and willingly expired on it for our sakes!

A sense of gratitude for past favours might bear us triumphantly through all the opposition we might be called to encounter in his cause; how much more then may we be animated by the pleasing hope, that we shall another day be confessed by Christ in 38 the presence of his Father and of his holy angels Let us represent to ourselves that august presence, that awful day, whenever a regard to an adulterous and sinful generation would lead us to be Mark IX. 1 ashamed of Christ and of his words. So shall we certainly be brought to see the kingdom of God in its glory; and if it opens to us in the visions of the future state, we shall have no reason to be anxiously solicitous, though death should remove us from these lower regions, before the gospel hath that universal triumph, which the word of God encourages his church to expect.

SECT. XC.

Christ goes up to a mountain, where he is transfigured, and discourses with his disciples concerning the expectation the Jews had of Elijah. Mat. XVII. 1—13. Mark IX. 2—13. Luke IX. 28—36.

MARK IX. 2.

SECT. XC.

AND it came to pass after six days, [or] if you include the first and last, about eight Mark IX. 2. days after these discourses, which were related in the two last sections, Jesus took with him those three disciples whom he honoured with something of a peculiar intimacy (compare Mark v. 37. and Mat. xxvi. 37.) namely, Peter and James, and his brother John, and brought them up, privately, to an high mountain apart from the people[a], whither he retired to pray; intending, as he often did, to spend the night in that holy exercise[b].

MARK IX. 2.—

AND [LUKE, it came to pass [after six days, [LUKE, or about eight days after these sayings,] Jesus taketh with him Peter, and James, and John [his brother,] and leadeth them up into an high mountain apart by themselves [LUKE, to pray.] [MAT. XVII. 1. LUKE IX. 28.]

And

a An high mountain apart from the people.] Jerom tells us (Epist. 17, 18) that there was in his days an ancient tradition that this was Mount Tabor, which lay in the tribe of Zebulon. Its standing apart (as Mr. Maundrell observes that it does, Travels, p. 112) is to be sure no argument to prove it; for that expression only signifies that it was a private retirement, which it might have been, had it made part of a ridge of mountains. However, as this happened at the distance of six days, there seems to be but little probability in Mr. Fleming's conjecture, that since Christ was just before near Cæsarea Philippi, this must be the mountain in that neighbourhood on which one of Jeroboam's calves had been worshipped; over which he thinks it a kind of triumph that the Shekinah was thus gloriously manifested, where it had been so long affronted by idolatry. See Fleming's Christology, Vol. I. p. 40.

b To spend the night in that holy exercise.] This appears from Luke ix. 37. where we read of their coming down from the mountain the next day. See p. 476.

c The

SECT. XC.

Luke IX. 29. And as he prayed, [Mark, he was transfigured before them, and] the fashion of his countenance was altered, [so that his face did shine as the sun;] and his raiment was white and glistering, [Mark, shining exceeding white as snow,] [or as the light,] [Mark, so as no fuller on earth can white them.] [Mat. XVII. 2. Mark IX.—2, 3.]

And as he was praying, it came to pass that he was suddenly, in a most glorious manner, transfigured in their presence; and the form of his countenance was changed[c], [so that] his face shone with a brightness like that of the sun; and his whole body was clothed with such a lustre, as shone through his raiment, insomuch that the appearance of it was all white and dazzling[d], shining so exceedingly, that it seemed as white as snow [yea] as resplendent as the light itself, to so great a degree as no fuller on earth could whiten it. Such a glory did God confer on his Son, as an earnest of that, in which he was finally to appear; and he permitted these his servants to see it, that they might not be offended at those scenes of deep abasement, in which they were shortly to attend him. (Compare Mat. xxvi. 37. sect. clxxxii.)

Luke IX. 29.

Mark IX. 4. And [behold] there appeared unto them [Luke, two men] talking with Jesus, [Luke, which were Moses and Elias:] [Mat. XVII. 3. Luke IX. 30.]

Luke IX. 31. Who appeared in glory, and spake of his decease which he should accomplish at Jerusalem.

And behold, there appeared to them, at the same time that they saw their Lord in this splendid form, two men, that were talking with Jesus in a language and accent which the three apostles heard and understood, who were known to be Moses the great giver, and Elijah the zealous restorer of the law. These were the persons whom they saw with Christ, in whose honour their respective ministrations terminated; who appearing to their view in forms of glory, somewhat resembling that which he now wore himself, spake of his exit, or departure out of the present life and state, which he was shortly after, even at the ensuing passover, to accomplish at Jerusalem[e]; suggesting and enlarging on such thoughts as were proper to animate him to so painful and glorious a conflict.

Mark IX. 4

Luke IX. 31

32 But Peter, and they that were with him

But Peter, and they that were with him, even the two other disciples, did not see the beginning 32

[c] The form of his countenance was changed.] This was so striking a circumstance, that Eunapius (Vit. Jamb. p. 22.) relates a story of Jamblicus, which seems evidently to be borrowed from this; as many things which Philostratus tells us of Apollonius Tyanæus seem also to have been borrowed from other histories recorded of Christ by the evangelists.

[d] White and dazzling.] The words λευκος ἐξαστραπτων may literally be rendered, white as lightning; but as this clause stands here connected with parallel passages in the other evangelists, I chose to render it dazzling, that some proper gradation might be observed, which would otherwise have been destroyed.

[e] Spake of his exit, which he was shortly to accomplish at Jerusalem.] Dr. Hammond and Le Clerc seem greatly mistaken in referring this to Christ's victory over the impenitent Jews in the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans; for though the word ἐξοδος does sometimes signify a military expedition (see Elsner. Observ. Vol. I. p. 219) yet it is plainly used for death, or departure out of the world, 2 Pet. i. 15. and Wisd. iii. 2. which suits much better here with the construction, εν Ιερουσαλημ.

SECT. XC.

ning of this glorious vision, nor hear the whole of this wonderful and edifying discourse; for, wearied with the labours of the preceding day, they were quite overburdened and sunk down with sleep; but being awakened with the splendour of those rays, which pierced through the darkness of the night that had before favoured their slumbers, they saw, to their inexpressible astonishment, his unusual glory, and the two men who were standing with him, and heard the conclusion of their conference, from whence they collected who they were[f]. And it came to pass that, just as they were departing from him, Peter answered and said unto Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here in such a circumstance as this: let this glorious appearance and converse be prolonged; for we could delight to spend all the remainder of our days thus; and therefore, if thou pleasest, let us make three tents here[g], for Thee one, and for Moses one, and one for Elijah, that thou with them mayest lodge here in a more convenient manner. This was indeed a wild kind of proposal, ill suiting the state of these glorified persons, or the subject of their late discourse: but it is the less to be wondered at, considering the great surprise in which Peter was, for he knew not what he said, [or] should say; for such was the effect it had on him and the two other disciples who were then present, that they were vastly terrified at the majesty of this unparalleled sight, which broke out upon them at once in so unexpected a manner.

Luke IX. 32.

Mark IX. 6

And as he was speaking thus, behold, there came a bright cloud, which in a most surprising manner spread itself over the top of the mountain, and overshadowed them all: and the disciples were seized him, were heavy with sleep: and when they were awake, they saw his glory, and the two men that stood with him.

Luke IX. 34

33—And it came to pass, as they departed from him, Peter [answered and] said unto Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here; and [if thou wilt] let us make [here] three tabernacles, one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias: [MAT. XVII. 4. MARK IX. 5.]

MARK IX. 6 For he wist not [LUKE, what he said, or] what to say, for they were sore afraid.] [LUKE IX.—33.]

LUKE IX. 34. While he thus spake, [behold,] there came a (bright) cloud, and overshadowed them: and [f] Heard the conclusion of their conference, &c.] It might not perhaps have been proper they should have heard the whole of it: God might intend to reveal some of those things to them by the Spirit, and the knowledge of others might be reserved to the discoveries of the heavenly state.

[g] Let us make three tents here.] Mr. Fleming thinks it is as if he had said, "Lord, let this mountain be to Israel now what Sinai was to our Fathers: hold, as it were, thy court here; and let the people resort hither to learn thy will, and pay their homage to thee, attended by these thy glorified servants." (See Fleming's Christology, Vol. I. p. 46.) But this seems too great a refinement, and too deep a scheme. I rather choose to interpret them as words of rapturous surprise, intended merely to express the pleasure they had in what they saw and heard. The proposal was, as St. Mark observes, very improper; but perhaps few, in such an astonishing circumstance, could have been perfectly masters of themselves.—The tents they proposed to build must be only slight huts or bowers; and there is no reason at all to suppose they meant any sumptuous tabernacles like that of Moses in the wilderness; and, that no such idea might accidentally be raised, I chose to use the word tents.

There

and they feared, as they entered into the cloud. . [MAT. XVII. 5. MARK IX. 7.—]

35 And [behold,] there came a voice out of the cloud, [which said,] This is my beloved Son, [in whom I am well pleased,] hear [ye] him. [MAT. XVII.—5. MARK IX. —7.]

MAT. XVII. 6. And when the disciples heard it, they fell on their face, and were sore afraid.

7 And Jesus came and touched them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid.

MARK IX. 8. And suddenly [LUKE, when the voice was past, Jesus was found alone: and] when they had [lift up their eyes, and] looked round about, they saw no man any more, save Jesus only with themselves. [MAT. XVII. 8. LUKE IX. 36.—].

seized with such a kind of religious horror, that they feared, when they entered into the cloud[h], and saw it diffused on every side of them. And behold, an ever memorable circumstance then happened; for there came a most awful voice out of the cloud, as the sacred symbol of God's immediate presence, which said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased[i]; hear ye him therefore with the humblest submission and obedience, as the object of my dearest complacency, and your surest guide to duty and happiness, in all respects superior to the greatest of your prophets. SECT. XC. Luke IX. 35.

And when the disciples heard [this voice,] they fell prostrate on their faces to the ground with the humblest reverence, and were exceedingly terrified by this tremendous manifestation of the present Deity. And Jesus, knowing their confusion, came and touched them, and said. Rise up, and be not afraid; infusing into them, at the same moment, a secret strength and fortitude of mind. (Compare Dan. x. 10, 19.) Mat. XVII. 6.

And on a sudden, whi'e the heavenly voice was uttered, Jesus was found alone, Moses and Elijah disappearing in a moment: [and] the disciples, lifting up their eyes, upon the kind encouragement that he had given them, [and] looking round about them for the persons they had seen but just before, saw no man any more, but Jesus only with themselves, who now again appearing in his usual form, graciously entered into conversation with them in the same condescending manner he was used to do. Mark IX. 8.

And

h There came a bright cloud, and overshadowed them, &c.] I cannot think it probable (though a late eminent critic has so explained it) that this only means that the cloud cast a shadow which fell upon them, but rather that it spread over the mountain; and this not like a canopy or umbrella, but that it covered it in such a manner as a cloud does; yet with this difference, that it was more like a thick smoke than a shower; and that whereas the skirts of clouds are generally rarer than the central parts, this was darker towards the edges, a glory being in the midst: and probably it was the darker part with which the apostles were enveloped, while the excellent glory (as St. Peter calls it, 2 Pet. i. 17.) seemed much higher, and the rays of it were much attempered by that part of the cloudy veil which was between it and them. And thus we know that the Shekinah had appeared in former ages; particularly when it took possession of the tabernacle of Moses, Exod. xl. 34, 35, and the temple of Solomon, 1 Kings viii. 10, 11.

i In whom I am well pleased.] Though neither Mark nor Luke have given us these words, we may be sure that they were really spoken, as we have the concurrent testimony both of Matthew and of Peter, who has thus quoted them, 2 Pet. i. 17. Some have thought their being omitted by Mark an intimation that Peter did not review that gospel with any great accuracy, supposing it was (as Clemens Alexandrinus reports) put into his hands. Perhaps the command that is added, to hear him, may refer to that solemn charge to hear the great prophet, Deut. xviii. 15.

k They

SECT. XC.

And as they came down from the mountain, on which this wonderful transaction had passed, Jesus strictly charged them, that they should tell no one what they had seen, unless it were when the Son of man was risen from the dead; lest, till that glorious evidence was given of his Divine mission, this story should appear as an idle dream, or an incredible tale. And when he spake of rising from the dead, they laid hold on that word[k], disputing among themselves what this rising from the dead could mean; for as often, and as plainly, as Christ had declared it to them, they could not persuade themselves to understand it in a literal sense. However, in obedience to the charge he gave them, they were silent as to what had passed, and told no one in those days any of the things which they had now seen and heard.

Mark IX. 9.

10

9 And as they came down from the mountain, [Jesus charged them, that they should tell no man what things they had seen, till the Son of man were risen from the dead. [MAT. XVII. 9.]

10 And they kept that saying with themselves, questioning one with another what the rising from the dead should mean: [And they kept it close, and told no man in those days any of those things which they had seen.] [LUKE IX.—36.

And his disciples as they could not doubt but he was the Messiah, took that opportunity of informing themselves as to a scruple, which had long lain on their minds, and asked him, saying, Why then do the scribes, the teachers of our nation, and professed students of the law, say, that Elijah must first come before the Messiah appear? Is this vision, that we have now seen, all the coming of that prophet, which was to be expected?

Mat. XVII. 10

MAT. XVII. 10. And his disciples asked him, saying, Why then say the scribes, that Elias must first come? [MARK IX. 11.]

And Jesus replying said unto them, It does indeed appear from the scripture, that Elijah shall first come to make way for the Messiah, and regulate all things[l], by preaching repentance and reformation: and yet, how little is the influence that his coming will have upon a wicked and ungrateful generation? And how is it also written of the Son of man himself[m], that illustrious Person

11

11 And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come, and restore all things, [and how it is written of the Son of man, that he must suffer

k They laid hold on that word.] So I think τον λογον εκρατησαν may most literally be rendered; the verb often signifying to lay hold on, and, in consequence of that, resolutely to retain; but never, that I can recollect, to keep a secret. Compare Mat. ix. 25. xiv. 3. Mark xii. 12 and Rev. xx. 2.—I think the words προς εαυτους should be joined with συζητουντες, as they are with the same word Mark i. 27. ix. 16. Luke xxii. 23 and Acts ix. 29.

l Shall first come, and regulate all things.] It is plain that αποκαταστησει here (as αποκαταστασις, Acts iii. 21.) cannot, as it generally does, signify restoring things to their former state, but only, in the general, reducing them to order. It is strange Tertullian (de Resur. cap. 35.) should infer from hence, that Elijah the prophet is to come before Christ's second appearance. Grotius has well confuted that wild notion, in his annotations, in loc.

m And yet how is it written of the Son of man himself?] The construction of this verse in the original is as perplexed as almost any in the New Testament. The Prussian Testament, which is followed by the late English version, renders it roundly and elegantly enough: "It is true," said he, "that Elias must first come to restore all things, and that it is foretold of him, as well as of the Son of man, that he should have much to suffer, and be rejected with contempt." But this is not strictly agreeable to the original, nor can I find the martyrdom of John the Baptist suffer many things, and be set at naught.] [MARK IX. 12.]

Person whom Elijah is to introduce? It is plainly foretold, that he must suffer many things, and be contemptuously rejected; which evidently implies, that his forerunner also shall be disregarded and his preaching slighted. And the event, you know, has been answerable to it: do not therefore expect another to appear, but observe what I now say to you, while I assure you that Elijah is indeed come already, as it is written of him[n] in various passages of scripture, (see Isa. xl. 3, and Mal. iii. 1.) and they who pretended so eagerly to expect him, did not know and acknowledge him, but have treated him in the most arbitrary and cruel manner, even just as they pleased, without any regard to piety, justice, or humanity: and thus likewise shall the Son of man quickly suffer by them, and with the utmost enmity and malice shall be persecuted by a hardened people, who will shew no more regard to him, than to Elijah his herald.

SECT. XC. Mat. XVII. 11

12 But I say unto you, that Elias is [indeed] come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed, [as it is written of him:] likewise shall also the Son of man suffer of them. [MARK IX. 13.]

12

13 Then the disciples understood that he spake unto them of John the Baptist.

Then the disciples understood that he spake to them concerning John the Baptist, who was foretold under the name of Elijah, as the Messiah was under that of David. (Compare Mal. iv. 5, and Ezek. xxxiv. 23, 24.)

13

IMPROVEMENT.

How glorious and delightful was this view of our blessed Redeemer, which the apostles had, when he was transfigured before them, clothed, as it were, with the Divine Shekinah and shining with a lustre like that of the sun! How pleasing and how edifying must it be to them, to see with him Moses and Elijah, those two eminent saints, who had so many ages ago quitted our world, but whose names they had often read in the sacred records with wonder and reverence! Ver. 2 3

Well might Peter say, It is good for us to be here. Well might he be contented to resign his entertainments and his hopes elsewhere, that they might prolong these delightful moments, feasting their eyes with these Divine visions, and their minds with these more than human discourses. Nor can we wonder that the scene, transitory as it was, left so abiding a savour on his spirits, that 4

Baptist any where foretold in the Old Testament: I choose therefore to render this clause as a question. That καὶ sometimes signifies [and yet] evidently appears from John v. 40. Luke ix. 45. Mat. xxiii. 37. and other places.

[n] Elijah is indeed come already, as it is written of him.] For the reason assigned in the preceding note I choose to connect these two clauses, and conclude that the words which lie between, both in the original and in our translation, are to be included in a parenthesis.

SECT. XC.

that in an epistle which he wrote many years after, and but a little before his death, he should single this story from a thousand others to attest it as he does, and to argue from it. (Compare 2 Pet. i. 16—18.) But oh! how much more desirable is it to stand upon mount Zion, and to behold those brighter glories, which our Jesus wears in the heavenly regions! To behold, not merely Moses and Elijah, but all the prophets, the apostles, and martyrs, and, in a word, all the saints of God in every age, whether to us personally known or unknown, surrounding him in a radiant circle; and not only to behold them, but to converse with them. Lord, it is good for us to be there, in our desires at least, and in our meditations, till thou pleasest to call us to that happy world, and to take us thither, where no drowsiness will cloud our eyes, where no hurry will discompose our thoughts; but where the perfection of holiness, and of love, shall cast out every degree of terror, as well as of sorrow.

Mat. XVII. 4.

Luke IX. 32.

Mark IX. 6.

In the mean time let us reverently attend to that Saviour who appeared in this majestic form, and who comes recommended to us with so many testimonials of his Divine authority. He was again declared by a voice from heaven to be the beloved Son of God: as such let us hear him, receiving all his revelations with the assurance of faith, and all his commands with the obedience of love. If these sentiments govern our hearts and our lives, the thoughts of that departure from this world, which we are shortly to accomplish, will be no grief or terror to our souls. Like our blessed Master, we may connect the views of it, and intermix discourse upon it, with the most delightful enjoyments and converse; nay, it will serve to render them yet more pleasing. For who would not long to be made conformable to Christ, even in his sufferings and death, if it may be a means of transforming us into the resemblance of his glories!

Mat. XVII. 5.

Luke IX. 31.

SECT. XCI.

Christ, descending from the mountain on which he was transfigured, drives out an evil spirit, which had obstinately withstood the attempts of his apostles. Mat. XVII. 14—21. Mark IX. 14—29. Luke IX. 37—43.—

Luke IX. 37.

SECT. XCI.

THUS did our Lord discourse with his three disciples after he had been transfigured in so glorious a manner in their presence: and it came to pass, that on the next day, when they came down from the mountain on which the night had been so delightfully spent, a great crowd of people

Luke IX. 37.

Luke IX. 37.

AND it came to pass that on the next day, when they were come down from the hill, much people met him.

MARK IX. 14. And when he came to his disciples, he saw a great multitude about them, and the scribes questioning with them.

people met him. And, being come to the disciples, and particularly to the rest of the apostles, who, knowing their Master was on the hill, waited for him in the adjacent valley, he saw a great multitude around them, and, among the rest, some of the scribes and Pharisees, who were disputing with them, and endeavoured to take the opportunity of their Master's absence to expose and distress them.

SECT. XCI. Mark IX. 14.

15 And straightway all the people, when they beheld him, were greatly amazed; and running to him, saluted him.

And immediately, as soon as he came near them, all the multitude seeing him, was struck into astonishment at those unusual rays of majesty and glory which yet remained on his countenance[a]; and, running to him, they saluted him with the greatest marks of respect and affection: yet the scribes and Pharisees, without regarding his return, continued their ill-natured attack on his disciples. 15 16 And he asked the scribes, What question ye with them?

And, taking notice of the warm dispute they were engaged in, he asked the scribes, What is the point you are debating, and what do you contend with them about? 16

17 And [LUKE, behold,] [a certain man] of the multitude, [kneeling down to him,] answered and [LUKE, cried out, saying,] Master, I have brought unto thee my son, which hath a dumb spirit; [MAT. XVII. 14—LUKE IX. 38.—]

And presently, upon his making this inquiry, behold, a [certain] man of the multitude came, and kneeling down to him, answered the question in effect: and, crying out with a loud and eager voice, said, O thou great Teacher and Master in our Israel, I have brought thee my poor afflicted son, who has for a long time been possessed with a dumb spirit; and the malicious demon has deprived him of the use of his hearing and speech: And in this moving case, O Lord, I beseech thee look upon my son, for he is mine only child, [and] yet, instead of being any comfort to me, is a most melancholy spectacle of horror; let me intreat thee therefore to have compassion on [him,] for 17

MAT. XVII. 15. Lord, [I beseech thee, look upon my son, for he is mine only child; and] have mercy on him, for he is lunatic, Mat. XVII. 15

[a] Was struck into astonishment, &c.] It is strange that so few critics should have said any thing concerning the reason of the multitude's being thus astonished. It could not be, as Dr. Clarke supposes, his coming down from the mountain the day after he went up; for they were gathered round it in expectation of his descent; and I do not remember that he ever continued more than one night in such a retirement. Nor is it easy to imagine the multitude were under any apprehension, after he had been no longer absent, that they never should be able to find him again. I therefore follow Dr. Whitby's natural conjecture in his paraphrase, which is agreeable to what we read of Moses, that the skin of his face shone, when he came down from the mount. (Compare Exod. xxxiv. 29, 30, and 2 Cor. iii. 7). One would indeed have expected that Luke, who has mentioned the lustre on Stephen's countenance, when pleading his cause before the sanhedrim (Acts vi. 15), should have taken some notice of the fact here supposed: but it is observable, Mark tells the story before us far more circumstantially than either of the other evangelists; which, by the way, is another most convincing proof that his gospel was not (as Mr. Whiston supposes) an abridgment of Matthew.

SECT. xci.

for he is lunatic[b], and grievously tormented with terrible fits, which frequently seize him, and sometimes endanger his life; for he often falleth into the fire, and often into the water. And behold, wherever [this] spirit seizes him, he has no strength or thought to take care of himself, but suddenly cries out in a violent manner; and it convulses him so, that he foams again at the mouth, and gnashes with his teeth in extremity of anguish; and thus he miserably pines, and withers away in the bloom of his age: and [it] is with great difficulty that the malignant demon departs from him for a little while, having bruised him to such a degree by violent distortions, that he is hardly able to use his limbs in the interval of these dreadful agitations.

Luke IX. 39.

lunatic, and sore vexed: for oft-times he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water. [LUKE IX.—38.]

LUKE IX. 39. And lo, [wheresoever] this spirit taketh him, he suddenly crieth out, and it teareth him, that he foameth again, [and gnasheth with his teeth, and pineth away;] and bruising him, it hardly departeth from him.] [MARK IX. 18.—]

Mat. XVII. 16

And I am persuaded there is some more than ordinary difficulty in the case; for I brought him to thy disciples, and spake to [them] concerning him, and entreated [them] in the most affectionate manner, to use their utmost efforts to cast him out: and they could not accomplish it, nor heal him.

MAT. XVII. 16. And I brought him to thy disciples, [and spake to them, [LUKE and] besought them to cast him out,] and they could not cure him. [MARK IX.—18. LUKE IX. 40.]

17 Then Jesus said in reply to him, O ye incredulous and perverse generation of men, how long shall I be with you, before you will learn a becoming regard to me? How long shall I endure that infidelity which you are shewing on so many occasions? And thus did he mean at once to reprove the weakness of faith in the father, and in his disciples, as well as the obstinacy and perverseness of the Jewish teachers, who were triumphing in their present disappointment: and then, turning to the father of the child and his attendants, he said, Bring thy Son hither to me, and you shall see what my power can effect.

17 Then Jesus answered [him] and said, O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring [LUKE, thy son [hither to me. [MARK IX. 19. LUKE IX. 41.]

Mark IX. 20.

And upon this they brought him that was possessed to Jesus, and presented the poor creature to him. And immediately, as soon as he saw him, while he was yet coming, the evil spirit in a rage wrought in him with such violence, that he threw him down, and convulsed him; and he fell on the ground with great force, and there lay, and rolled

MARK IX. 20. And they brought him unto him: and when he saw him, [as he was yet coming,] straightway the spirit [threw him down, and] tare him, and he fell on the ground,

[b] He is lunatic.] Grotius well observes that this word (which exactly answers the etymology of the original) might with great propriety be used, though there was something preternatural in the case; as the evil spirit would undoubtedly take advantage of those disorders, into which the brain and nerves of this unhappy child were thrown by the changes of the moon.

[c] From ground, and wallowed, foaming. [LUKE IX. 42.—] rolled from one side to the other, a spectacle of horror, foaming at the mouth, and sweating profusely, till nature was almost exhausted, and he seemed ready to die. SECT. XCI.

21 And he asked his father, How long is it ago since this came unto him? And he said, Of a child.

And, that the greatness of the cure might more plainly appear, while the unhappy youth lay thus before him, he asked his father, How long time is it, that he hath been thus afflicted? And he said, Even from his childhood[c]: And the evil spirit is so outrageous, and so malicious, that it frequently, as I said, has thrown him into the fire, and into the waters, when he has happened to be near them, as if he watched for opportunities to destroy him; so that I am sensible it is a most difficult, as well as dreadful case: but if thou canst do any thing in it[d], have compassion on us, and help us; for surely none ever needed thy pity more. Mark IX. 21. 22

22 And oft-times it hath cast him into the fire, and into the waters to destroy him: but if thou canst do any thing, have compassion on us, and help us.

23 Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth.

And Jesus said unto him, The question is not at all concerning my power, but concerning the strength of thy faith; for if thou canst firmly and cheerfully believe, the deliverance will surely be effected, as all things of this kind [are] possible to him that believeth[e]. 23

24 And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief.

And immediately the father of the child, touched to the very heart to think that his dear son might possibly lose the cure through the weakness of his own faith, cried out aloud, and said, with tears in his eyes and ardour in his countenance, Lord, I do from my heart believe that thy power is unlimited; yet such is my frailty, that when I look on this spectacle of misery, my faith is ready to fail me again: help me therefore against my unbelief, by mitigating the circumstances of the trial, or communicating suitable strength to my soul[f]. 24 c From his childhood.] So the word παιδιοθεν properly signifies; and, I think with Grotius, it is much more convenient to render it thus; than from his infancy.

Then

d If thou canst do any thing in it.] Perhaps, observing the fit grow more violent on his approaching Christ, his faith might begin to fail. This was a very natural manner of speaking, and yet strongly pathetic, and obliquely interesting the honour of Christ in the issue of the affair. See Raphel. ex Xen. p. 73.

e If thou canst believe, &c.] As the construction in the original is something uncommon. Το ει δυνασαι πιστευσαι, I cannot forbear mentioning a singular conjecture, which I lately had from the mouth of a very accurate critic, especially in biblical learning. He thinks, instead of το, it might be τι, as some copies read it; and then taking πιστευσαι to be the imperative mood, would render and paraphrase it with an interrogation after τι; "What dost thou "mean by saying, if thou canst?" referring to η δυνασαι in the verse before: "Believe: "all things are possible to him that believeth: "see thou to the firmness of thy faith; "and leave the rest to me."

f Help my unbelief, &c.] It seems an inconvenience inseparable from this method of paraphrasing, that sometimes (as in the present instance) some lively and strongly

SECT. XCI.

Then Jesus, seeing that the crowd ran together and was continually increasing round them, rebuked the unclean spirit, which had possessed the Mark IX. 25. child, and said unto him, with an air of superior power and Divine authority, Thou dumb and deaf spirit, who had so maliciously deprived this youth of his speech and hearing, I strictly charge and command thee immediately to come out of him, and presume to enter into him no more, nor farther to disquiet him as long as he lives.

25 When Jesus saw that the people came running together, he rebuked the [unclean] spirit, saying unto him, Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee, come out of him, and enter no more into him. [LUKE IX. —42.—MAT. XVII. 18.]

26 And, immediately, as soon as he had spoken these words, [the evil spirit] having cried out with great earnestness, and thrown him into violent distortions, came out of him, and the poor youth had been so miserably handled, that he fell into a swoon, and seemed as one dead, so that many who were present, said, He is undoubtedly quite dead, and will revive no more.

26 And the spirit cried and rent him sore, and came out [of him] and he was as one dead, insomuch that many said, He is dead. [MAT XVII.—18.—]

27 But Jesus, taking hold of him by the hand, lifted him up, and strengthened him, so that he arose and stood on his feet. And when [he] thus had perfectly restored and healed the child, he took and delivered him to his father, who received him with an inexpressible mixture of joy and amazement. And the child was well from that very hour, and these terrible symptoms returned upon him no more.

27 But Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up, and he arose: [LUKE, and he healed the child, and delivered him again to his father.] [And the child was cured from that very hour.] MAT. XVII.—18. LUKE IX. 42.

Luke IX. 43. And they who beheld it were all astonished at the mighty power of God, by which this illustrious miracle had been wrought.

LUKE IX. 43.—And they were all amazed at the mighty power of God.

Mark IX. 28. And when he had left the multitude, and was come into the house, where he then resided, his disciples, something mortified at the repulse they had met with in their late attempt, came to Jesus when he was alone, and asked him privately, Why could not we prevail so far as to cast out this demon, and expel him, since we have performed many cures which seemed equally difficult?

MARK IX. 28. And when he was come into the house, his disciples [came to Jesus apart, and] asked him privately, Why could not we cast him out? [MAT. XVII. 19.]

Mat. XVII. 20 And Jesus said unto them, It was because of the remainder of your unbelief; for verily I say unto you, If you had but the least degree of faith in a lively exercise, though it comparatively was but as a grain of mustard-seed[g], you might perform the

MAT. XVII. 20. And Jesus said unto them, Because of your unbelief: for verily I say unto you, If ye have faith as a grain of mustard-seed, ye shall say strongly pointed sentences should lose something of their spirit by it; yet keeping the original thus distinct, may in part remedy it; and, on the whole, many of these expressions are so full of meaning, that the general laws of interpretation require, they should be unfolded. To observe the exact medium here, is a felicity, which I dare not say I have obtained, though I have laboured after it.

[g] Faith as a grain of mustard-seed.] It is say unto this mountain, Remove hence unto yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you.

21 Howbeit, [he said unto them, [this kind can come forth by nothing] but by prayer and fasting, [MARK IX. 29.]

the greatest wonders, so as even to say to this mountain here in the neighbourhood, Remove from this place to that, and it should accordingly remove; and, in a word, nothing will be impossible to you. But as to the case that was lately before us, he farther said unto them, This demon which possessed the child was one of a very obstinate kind, which cannot be expelled so readily as others; nor must you expect to have power over such spirits as these, to oblige them to go forth by any means, unless you do by frequent prayer and fasting intercede with God for his more abundant co-operation; and by such extraordinary devotions endeavour to prepare your souls for his farther influences [h]."

SECT. XCI.

MAT. XVII. 20

21

IMPROVEMENT.

THE invidious opposition, which these scribes and Pharisees made to our Lord, and the ill-natured joy they expressed, in what they imagined would disgrace his disciples, appears exceeding odious; and it shews us the fatal effects of ambition, pride, and avarice, is very trifling to suppose that here is a reference to the poignancy of mustard-seed, as an emblem of a vigorous and lively faith. It is apparently a proverb to express any thing inconsiderably small, that being, as our Lord expresses it, one of the smallest among seeds. Thus the rabbies say the globe of the earth is but as a grain of mustard seed, when compared with the expanse of the heavens. See Drusius in loc.

MARK IX. 14.

h This kind cannot go forth by any means, unless by prayer and fasting.] An ingenious physician, mentioned by the learned Author of the Inquiry into Demoniacks, &c. p. 47. instead of εν προσευχη και νηστεια, would read εν προσεγχυσι νηστεια, by constant fasting; and supposes it refers to the necessity of frequent and long continued abstinence, in order to the cure of such an epileptic distemper as the child in question had been subject to. But as the criticism is founded on mere conjecture, contrary to all the copies known in the world, so I cannot think it at all natural in itself, or pertinent to the occasion; for it seems not at all to our Lord's purpose to speak of the natural methods of cure, in answer to the apostle's demand, why they could not miraculously perform it?—Nor can any instance be produced to prove, that the expression is proverbial for any thing very difficult.—I could therefore see no reason to recede from the usual interpretation, which I have given in the paraphrase. —As for the interpretation of Chrysostom and Theophylact, who suppose that γενος signifies at large this kind of beings, that is, demons, it seems very wrong; since the apostles evidently did cast out many demons, what peculiar malignity there might be in this and others of his rank, which might make more intense devotion necessary to eject them.—Sir Norton Knatchbull's sense is extremely forced, who understands it, as if it had been said, This sort [of miraculous faith] advances not but by prayer and fasting. Raphelius has abundantly shewn how inconclusive those authorities from Xenophon are, by which he would justify so odd a version of εξελθειν. (See Raphel. Annot. ex Xen. p. 44—46.) And were the words considered as they stand in Mark, where there is nothing said of faith, it would be easy to perceive, our Lord is speaking of a kind of demons, which they were not able to cast out: and that some demons are more malignant than others is most manifest from Mat. xii. 45. But oftentimes an explication has been built upon the words of one evangelist, and many learned remarks have been made to establish it, which could not be applied without great violence to suit the parallel place in another, and presently has fallen to the ground upon comparing them together.

SECT. XCI.

Mark IX. 14.

avarice, when they possess the hearts of those who should be (as these by their office were) teachers of others. Such qualities render those in the number of the most dangerous enemies of mankind, who ought to be its most affectionate friends and most useful benefactors. May the light of the gospel break in on their souls, and form them to a better temper!

Mat. XVII. 14, 15. Luke IX. 38.

The solicitous concern of this parent when he saw his child under such sad symptoms of disorder, may surely remind persons in that relation, of the sentiments, with which they should view those of their children, who are, in a spiritual sense, under the power of Satan; and of the importunity, with which they should entreat, that the hand of Christ may be stretched out for their rescue.

A lively exercise of faith is greatly to be desired in this and all other applications of this nature. But alas, how often do we find the remainders of a contrary principle! In how many instances does that passionate exclamation of the father in this story suit us? Lord, we believe, help thou our unbelief! How difficult is it, in the midst of so much guilt and weakness, of so much perplexity and unworthiness, to believe the promises of forgiveness and preservation, of grace and glory? Yet we may humbly hope that He, who by his grace has wrought the Divine principle in our souls, will maintain it there. Only let it be our concern to oppose those corruptions which would enervate and suppress it. Perhaps there are some of them, which will not be driven out, but by prayer and fasting, by deep humiliation, and more than ordinary solemnity and intenseness of devotion. But surely they have little regard to the peace and security of their souls, who can allot only a few hasty moments to them, when they have whole hours and days to bestow, not only on the labours, but even on the amusements of life.

Mat. XVII. 21

SECT. XCII.

The disciples are offended at the warning Christ gives them of his approaching sufferings. He makes a miraculous provision for paying the tribute-money. Mat. XVII. 22, to the end. Mark IX. 30—33.—Luke IX.—43—45.

MARK IX. 30.

SECT. XCII.

Mark IX. 30.

AND while every one of the spectators was amazed at this stupendous miracle wrought on the child who had been so terribly possessed, and at all the other extraordinary things which Jesus did, our Lord and his apostles left that place, and, setting out on a further progress, they departed from thence, and passed from the mountain

MARK IX. 30.

AND [while they wondered every one at all things which Jesus did,] they departed thence, and passed through Galilee; and he would not that any man should know it. [LUKE IX. —43.—]

tain on which he had been transfigured, through the rest of Galilee: and Jesus chose to do it as privately as he could; for he was desirous that no one might know [it,] lest the important conversation, into which he then entered with his disciples, should be interrupted. For while they 31 continued travelling and conversing in Galilee, and especially when they came to the place where they lodged, Jesus taught his disciples[a], more largely than he had done before, what was to befal him. (Compare Mat. xvi. 21. Mark viii. 31. Luke ix. 22. sect. lxxxix.)

sect. xcii.

Mark IX. 30.

31 — For [while they abode in Galilee, Jesus] taught his disciples, and said unto them, [MAT. XVII. 22.—LUKE IX.—43.]

And he said unto them, with great solemnity Apply your ears attentively to these sayings,[b] how disagreeable soever they may be, and let them sink into your hearts; for the Son of man, instead of reigning in that grandeur which you expect, shall very shortly be betrayed into the hands of sinful men[c], and shall seem for a while to be a helpless prey to their rage; for they shall put him to death in a most cruel and infamous manner; but they shall not finally triumph over him; for after he is thus slain, he shall rise from the dead on the third day, according to the intimations I have often given you. (See p. 138, 331, 457.)

Luke IX. 44.

LUKE IX. 44. Let these sayings sink down into your ears: for the Son of man shall be delivered into the hands of men, [and they shall kill him; and after that he is killed, he shall rise the third day. [MARK IX.— 31. MAT. XVII. —22, 23.—].

But they were so strongly prepossessed with the 45 expectation of a temporal kingdom, that they understood not this saying, plain as it was, and the sense of it was hid from them, so that they perceived it not; foolishly imagining it inconsistent with what the sacred oracles had declared of the glorious success of the Son of man, and the universal empire he was to establish. (Dan. vii. 14.) And yet they were afraid to ask him what was the meaning of that saying, lest he should upbraid them as unteachable; considering how lately he had given them the like warning before and

45 But they understood not this saying, and it was hid from them, that they perceived it not: and they feared to ask him of that saying, [and were exceeding sorry.] [MAT. XVII. 23. MARK IX. 32.]

a For Jesus taught his disciples.] Mark assigns this as the reason, why he desired his journey should be private, viz. that he might have an opportunity to talk over this subject at large: which shews that the continuance or abode in Galilee, mentioned by Matthew, refers to the short stay they made in the places where they lodged; and indeed he could not so conveniently speak to all the twelve, while they were actually travelling.

b Apply your ears to these sayings.] This seems to me a just translation of Θεσθε υμεις εις τα ωτα υμων τους λογους τουτους, which is literally, Put these sayings to your ears; a phrase, which our language will hardly admit. It intimates the propensity they had to withdraw and turn away their ears from such declarations, as he was now about to make.

c Shall shortly be betrayed, &c.] Mark has expressed it in the present tense, and says, The son of man is delivered; but nothing is more common in the sacred language than to speak of what should certainly and quickly be, as if it was already done. (Compare John xii. 31. xvii. 1, 11, 24. Eph. ii. 5, 6. Heb. xii. 22. and Rev. xviii. 2, 4.—The explication of many other scriptures depends on this obvious remark.

d The

SECT. XCII.

and how severely he had rebuked Peter for endeavouring to dissuade him from it (sect. lxxxix) nevertheless, they perceived that their Master foretold his own death; and were exceeding sorry, that a Person of so excellent and amiable a character, from whom they had entertained such glorious expectations, should meet with so unworthy a return.

Luke IX. 45.

Mat. XVII. 24

And soon after this, he came with his disciples to Capernaum: and when they were come to Capernaum, the receivers and collectors of the sacred tribute[d], which was gathered every year through all their cities, came to Peter, and said, Does not your Master, who has the character of so religious a Teacher, pay the usual tribute of the didrachma[e], or half-shekel, to the service of the temple?

MAT. XVII. 24.—And [he came to Capernaum: and] when they were come to Capernaum, they that received tribute-money came to Peter, and said, Doth not your Master pay tribute? [MARK IX. 33.—]

25 And he says, Yes, I know that he uses to pay it, and make no doubt but he will do it now. And when he came into the house, Jesus, who was there before, prevented him, before he could speak of the affair in question, and said to him, What dost thou think, Simon, and what seems fit to thee on this occasion? Of whom do the kings of the earth receive custom or tribute? of their own sons, 26 or of strangers? Peter says to him, Lord it is evident, they receive it only of strangers. Jesus said to him, Then the sons, by virtue of their fathers' dispensation, are free from the obligation: and, on the like principle, I, as the Son of God, might plead an exemption here, especially as I have not now the sum, which is required towards 27 the maintenance of the temple worship. Nevertheless, lest we should offend them, by giving an occasion to imagine, that I put any slight on the temple, or lest others from my example should in far different circumstances omit this contribution, I will not debate the matter, but rather 25 He saith, Yes, And when he was come into the house, Jesus prevented him, saying, What thinkest thou, Simon? of whom do the kings of the earth take custom or tribute? of their own children, or of strangers?

26 Peter saith unto him, Of strangers. Jesus saith unto him, Then are the children free.

27 Notwithstanding, lest we should offend them, go thou to the sea, d The collectors of the sacred tribute.] Josephus has expressly asserted that each of the Jews used yearly to pay a didrachma, or half-shekel, the piece of money here mentioned, to the service of the temple: (see Joseph. Antiq. lib. xviii. cap. 9, [al. 12] § 1. A custom which probably took its rise from the demand of that sum from each of the Israelites, whenever they were numbered; Exod. xxx. 13. And therefore, with Beza, Casaubon, Hammond, Grotius, and many other great critics, I choose to understand this passage as referring to that, rather than to any civil tax; chiefly because I think, notwithstanding what Salmasius says to the contrary (against Milton, p. 259), our Lord's argument, ver. 25, 26. can otherwise have no force.—The reader will find an excellent note in Grotius here, which renders it unnecessary to enlarge any farther.

e Does not your Master pay the usual tribute, &c.] It seems then to have been a voluntary thing, which custom rather than law had established. In Nehemiah's days it was accounted so, and the sum was then something lower. See Neh. x. 32.

sea, and cast an hook, and take up the fish that first cometh up: and when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shalt find a piece of money: that take, and give unto them for me and thee.

rather work a miracle than fail in the payment. Go therefore to the sea, and when thou comest to the neighbouring shore, throw in a hook, and take the first fish that comes up; and when thou hast opened its mouth, thou shalt there find a piece of silver-coin, called a stater, which it has just swallowed[f]; take that, and give it to them that collect the tribute, both for me and thee; for thou knowest it will answer their demands for both. Accordingly Peter went, and having caught a fish, he found the money in its mouth, and presently returned and paid it according to his Lord's command.

SECT. XCII.

Mat. XVII. 27

IMPROVEMENT.

How slow and untractable were the minds of the apostles, who understood not these plain things when thus inculcated again and again! But, on the other hand, how much integrity does it shew in the historian, to record what seemed so little to the honour of himself and his brethren! In this respect, and many others, surely credit rises to the gospel, even by occasion of the infirmities of those to whom it was committed, and out of weakness they are made strong.—The lenity of our blessed Lord was truly admirable, that he should bear with such stupidity in his disciples with so much gentleness and patience, and should, with so much earnestness, go on to renew his instructions to them. Let us, however, learn to be upon our guard against the prejudices of worldly interest, since, as we see, they may take such strong hold of minds, in the main, upright and pious. And therefore let us earnestly pray, that God would give us a greater relish for spiritual and eternal blessings.

Mark IX. 32

Luke IX. 44

It cannot surely become us to seek the grandeur and riches of this world, when our blessed Master was so poor, that he could not pay

Mat. XVII. 27

[f] A stater, which it had just swallowed.] The stater was (as appears in part from this text) a piece of coin, in value about two half shekels, or, according to Dr. Prideaux, near three shillings of our money, though most critics reckon the shekel but about half-a-crown. (See Drusius on this verse and the 24th.)—I see no reason, with Schmidius, to suppose this piece of money was created on this occasion: but supposing, as in the paraphrase, that the fish had accidentally swallowed it (perhaps as it was falling into the water, near some other prey), I cannot forbear remarking how illustrious a degree of knowledge and power our Lord discovered in the case before us; knowledge, in penetrating into the bowels of this animal, though in the sea; and power, in directing this particular fish to Peter's hook, though he himself was at a distance. Hardly any circumstance can be imagined more fit to encourage him and his brethren in a firm dependance on Divine Providence. And it is very natural to reflect how easily Christ could, if he had seen fit, have drawn up immense treasures, by this very method, from the heart of the sea: but he intended that his servants should be enriched and adorned in a much nobler manner than with pearls and costly array.

SECT. xcii. pay this little tribute without having recourse to a miracle. Yet this he chooses, rather than to give offence by a refusal, how justly soever he might have pleaded an exemption from it. Let us learn from hence that meekness of wisdom which will teach us to seek the interest of others rather than our own; and to consider how we may edify others by the abundance of our good works, rather than how we may excuse ourselves in the omission of any. That extent of knowledge and power, which our Lord displayed on this occasion, can never be at a loss for means to repay, whatever we may thus sacrifice for his sake.

Mat. XVII. 26

SECT. XCIII.

Christ reproves his apostles for their contention, who should be greatest; and recommends to them humility and mortification. Mark IX.—33—37, 42. to the end. Mat. XVIII. 1—9. Luke IX. 46—48.

MARK IX. 33.

SECT. xciii. NOW when Peter was returned from the sea-side, and had paid the tribute-money with which the fish had supplied him[a], our Lord, from a late occurrence which he had observed among his disciples, took occasion to recommend humility to them: and being in the house with his apostles, that he might naturally introduce the discourse he intended, he asked them, About what were you disputing with each other on the way in so eager a manner, that I could not forbear taking particular notice of it?

Mark IX. 33.

MARK IX. 33.

AND being in the house, he asked them, What was it that ye disputed among yourselves by the way?

34 But, instead of answering him directly, they were confounded with the question, and continued silent, being ashamed to confess the truth; for as they were travelling on the way, a controversy arose among them, [and] they had warmly debated the matter one with another, which of them should be the greatest man in that temporal monarchy, which they assured themselves that Jesus, as the expected Messiah, would erect, whatever sufferings might lie in the passage to it.

34 But they held their peace: for by the way [there arose a reasoning among them, and] they had disputed among themselves, [which of them should be greatest.] [LUKE IX. 46.]

And Jesus perceiving, notwithstanding their silence,

35 And [Jesus perceiving

[a] When Peter was returned, &c.] In order to remind those who may hear these sections read in a family, of the connection of them, I have generally introduced each with a brief hint at the subject of the former; which, though it makes the paraphrase on the first verse of a section sometimes much longer than I should otherwise have chosen, yet I hope it may be attended with advantage sufficient to balance that inconvenience.

[b] Called

ceiving the thought of their heart,] sat down, and called the twelve, and saith unto them, if any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all, and servant of all. [LUKE IX. 47.]

silence, the secret thought of their ambitious heart, and observing the same carnality and emulation to be still working there; when he was sat down, called all the twelve about him[b], and says unto them with great seriousness and earnestness, It is humility that is the way to honour in my kingdom; and therefore if any one would be chief there, let him, in all the offices of condescending friendship to his brethren, be as the last of all, and the servant of all.

SECT. XCIII.

Mark IX. 35.

MAT. XVIII. 1. At the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?

Now at the same time[c], when the disciples were thus called, they came to Jesus, and finding that he knew the subject of their late debate, some of them at length took the liberty of saying, Lord, decide this question, and tell us plainly, who is intended to be the greatest in the kingdom of heaven, and to whom wilt thou commit the chief management of affairs in it?

Mat. XVIII. 1

2 And Jesus called a little child unto him, and [took and] set him [LUKE, by him] in the midst of them, [and when he had taken him in his arms, he said unto them,] [MARK IX. 36. LUKE IX.—47.]

And, when he had answered the inquiry in the manner related above, Jesus, in order to impress the important maxim yet deeper on their minds, having called to him a little child, that happened then to be in the house where they lodged, took and set him by him in the midst of them; and taking him up, and embracing him in his gracious arms, in token of his tender regard, he said unto them, I assuredly declare it to you as a most solemn and important truth, That except ye be converted and turned from those ambitious and carnal views, and become like little children in lowliness and meekness, in a candid teachable temper, and an indifference to the great things of the present life (Psal. cxxxi. 1, 2.) you will be so far from having any distinguished rank among my subjects, that ye shall by no means so much as enter at all into the kingdom of heaven, or be entitled to any of its final blessings. Whoever therefore shall humble himself even as this little child, and act

2

3 Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.

3

4 Whosoever therefore shall humble himself

4

b Called all the twelve about him.] It is natural to suppose, that twelve persons travelling together on foot would form themselves into two or three little companies, while some of them, no doubt, would be attending Christ, and discoursing with him: but our Lord judged it proper, as he was now in the house, that all the twelve should hear this admonition, though they might not all have been engaged in the dispute which occasioned it.

c At the same time.] By these words Matthew expressly fixes the connection between this story and that which concluded his xviith chapter. But Clarius seems to refine too much, when he supposes that Christ's having thus miraculously provided for paying Peter's tribute with his own, gave umbrage to the rest: yet this precarious turn serves the church of Rome as an argument for the supremacy of the Pope; nor is it wonderful that in so weak a cause they should catch at such a shadow.

SECT. XCIII.

act with such candour, simplicity and modesty, as you see in him, He is the person, that hereafter will be regarded as the greatest in the kingdom of heaven, and will stand high in its final glories. And whosoever cordially shall entertain this child, [or] shall discover an affectionate regard to any one of such little children, in my name, and for my sake, as one whom I love, and recommend to his care, entertaineth me; for I shall take the kindness as done to myself: and I would have you to remember, that it shall not terminate even there, but (as I have formerly told you, Mat. x. 40. p. 402), whoever thus shall entertain and shew a regard to me, entertains not me alone, but him that sent me[d], even my heavenly Father, who is honoured or affronted, as I am respected or slighted. And this regard to the meanest of my servants, I must urge upon you, as of the utmost importance; for (as I just now told you) he that by such a condescension is as the least among you all, He shall be eminently great in my esteem, and be distinguished by peculiar marks of the Divine favour. But whoever shall deliberately do any thing to offend, and to occasion the fall of one of these little ones who believe in me[e], or of any disciple of mine, though he may seem as weak as this infant, will expose himself thereby to such guilt and punishment, that it were better for him he should undergo the most certain and terrible destruction one can imagine, even that a huge mill-stone[f] should be hanged about his neck, and he should thus be thrown headlong into the sea[g], [and] there be drowned in the depth of it. Wo

Mat. XVIII. 4 5 6

self as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven.

5 And [LUKE, whosoever shall receive this child,] [or one of such] little [children] in my name, receiveth me; [and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me:] [LUKE, for he that is least among you all, the same shall be great.] [MARK IX. 37. LUKE IX. 48.]

6 But [whosoever] shall offend one of these little ones, which believe in me, it were better for him that a mill-stone were hanged about his neck, and that he were [cast into the sea, and] drowned in the depth of the sea. [MARK IX. 42.]

d Entertains not me alone, but him that sent me.] Here Christ was interrupted by a speech of John, related Mark ix. 38—41. which is paraphrased and explained below, in sect. xcvi. where I have accounted in note a for placing it apart.

e Shall offend one of these little ones, &c.] To offend a person generally signifies (as was observed before, p. 211, note c) laying a stumbling block in his way; so that any, who should by a scandalous life lead others to think ill of the Christian profession in general, or should by persecution discourage the weak, or by sophistry, bad example, or otherwise, pervert them from the way of truth and goodness, would fall under the weight of this terrible sentence.

f A huge mill-stone.] So I render μυλος ονικος, which (as Erasmus, Grotius, Raphelius, and many others observe) properly signifies a mill-stone too large to be turned, as some were, by the hand, and requiring the force of asses to move it; as it seems those animals were generally used by the Jews on this occasion. See Raphel. Annot. ex Xen. p. 46.

g Thrown headlong into the sea.] Casaubon and Elsner (Observ. Vol. I. p. 85), not to mention others, have shewn at large, that drowning in the sea was a punishment frequently used among the ancients, and that the persons condemned had sometimes heavy stones tied about their necks, or were rolled up in sheets of lead. It seems to have grown into a proverb for dreadful and inevitable ruin.

h As

SECT. XCIII.

Mat. XVIII. 7

7 Wo unto the world because of offences: for it must needs be, that offences come: but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh.

Wo unto the world, because of such offences, or scandals as these; for they will bring upon it the most dreadful judgments: indeed, considering the corruption and weakness of mankind, and the various temptations with which they are surrounded, it is, humanly speaking, necessary, or unavoidable, that offences come; but I may well say, Wo to that man, by whom the offence cometh, whoever he be, that by avarice, ambition, or any other vicious affection, lays a stumbling-block in men's way, and makes himself accessary to the ruin of immortal souls, tempting them either to renounce or to despise the gospel; for the time will come, when he shall bitterly repent it.

8 Wherefore, if thy hand offend thee, [cut it off,] and cast it from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life—maimed, rather than having two hands, [to go into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched:] [MARK IX. 43.]

8 Wherefore let me renew the exhortation which I formerly gave you, rather to submit to the severest mortifications, than to indulge your sinful inclinations, to the scandal of others, and to your own ruin: And, as I then told you in my sermon on the mount[h] (see note[c] on Mat. v. 30, p. 212), If thy right hand offend thee, that is, if any thing dear unto thee as a right hand should be the means of leading thee into sin, rather than indulge it, cut it off, and cast [it] from thee, whatever pain or deformity, or other detriment might follow from such a loss; for it is much better for thee to enter maimed into eternal life, than having two hands, to go down into the prison of hell, even into that fire which shall never be extinguished: Where their corroding and upbraiding conscience is as a worm, which dieth not[i], but, with unutterable anguish,

MARK IX. 44. Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

Mark IX. 44.

h As I told you in my sermon on the mount.] It will, I hope, be observed, that Matthew, who had before so largely recorded that sermon, gives us again this passage of it on the present occasion; which is one proof, among many others, that our Lord did not think it improper or unnecessary sometimes to repeat what he had then said: (See p. 240, note c.) And, considering the importance of these maxims, and how little many of his hearers were disposed to receive and retain them, it was a valuable instance of his compassion and wisdom.

i Where their—conscience is as a worm which dieth not.] There may indeed be an allusion here to Isa. lxvi. 24. (compare Ecclus. vii. 17, and Judith xvi. 17); but the expression had been just and proper without it: and it is observable, that some of the ancients expressed the same thought by saying, that the marrow of the back-bone did, in a wicked man, turn into a huge and fierce serpent; thereby intimating (by a much finer figure than Ælian, who reports it, understood) that their own thought should be their torment, and they should be unable to disarm it by those artifices, which had prevailed in the present life; see Ælian, Hist. Anim. lib. i. cap. 51. and Gataker, Antonin. lib. viii. § 58.—Since the first edition of this work, I have met with an explication of these words in Dr. Rymer's Representation of Revealed Religion, p. 155, so new to me, and at the same time so considerable, that I could not forbear mentioning it. He supposes that both the worm and the fire are means of the body, and refer to the two different ways of funeral among the ancients, interment and burning anguish, still gnaws upon the heart; and where the fire of Divine wrath, which shall penetrate into the very soul of the sinner, is not, and shall not be quenched throughout all the endless ages of eternity.

SECT. XCIII.

Mark IX. 44.

45 And again, if thy foot offend thee, cut it off, with as much resolution as thou wouldest part with a gangrened member for the preservation of thy life: for something yet more important is here concerned, and it is better for thee to enter lame into the regions of eternal life and blessedness, though thou wast ever to continue so[k], than having two feet to be cast into the inextin-

45 And if thy foot offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter halt into life, than having two feet, to be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched: [MAT. XVIII.—8.]

46 guishable fire of hell: Where their tormenting worm dieth not, and where the fire is not quenched, nor the violence of its heat abated through all the ages of eternity.

46 Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

47 And, to repeat so wholesome and necessary an admonition a third time, If thine eye offend thee, or would necessarily be the means of leading thee into sin, choose rather with thine own hands to tear it out of its socket, and to cast it away from thee as an abhorred thing, than, by complying with the temptation, to hazard thy far more precious soul; for it is far better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God, [or] into everlasting life and blessedness, with but one eye, even though the other were not to be restored at the resurrection, but the blemish were to continue for ever, than having two eyes, and all the other members of thy body in the greatest perfection, to be cast into hell, where they will all be full of unutterable anguish, being tormented with ever-

47 And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, [and cast it from thee:] it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God, [or into life] with one eye [rather] than having two eyes to be cast into hell-fire: [MAT. XVIII. 9.]

48 lasting fire. In that dreadful prison of Divine vengeance, where (as I have told you again and again)

48 Where their worm

burning. So that our Lord may seem here to prevent an objection against the permanent misery of the wicked in hell, arising from the frail constitution of the body: as if he should have said, "The body will not then be as it is at present, but will be incapable of consumption or dissolution. In its natural state, the worms may devour the whole, and die for want of nourishment; the fire may consume it, and be extinguished for want of fuel. But there shall be perpetual food for the worm that corrodes it, perpetual fuel for the fire that torments it." The words of the Apocryphal writer above mentioned, Judith xvi. 17, greatly illustrate this interpretation; where it is said, The Lord Almighty will take vengeance on the wicked in the day of judgment, putting fire and worms into their flesh, and they shall feel them, and weep for ever.

k Though thou wast ever to continue so.] It is certain no man will enter into life, halt, maimed, or blind, as the bodies of the saints will be restored in the greatest perfection. I know indeed that, with some latitude in the expression, he may be said to enter halt, or maimed, into life, whose spirit passes from a dismembered body into the regions of the blessed; but it seems to me that the propriety of the phrase is most exactly preserved by taking it as in the paraphrase, and the spirit of the thought is greatly increased by that interpretation.

worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

again) their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched nor abated, but preys perpetually on the miserable sinner that is condemned to it. For as the flesh burnt on the altar has salt rubbed upon it, in consequence of which it burns so much the more fiercely, so every one of those unhappy creatures, the victims of Divine justice, shall be (as it were) salted with fire[l]; and, instead of being consumed by it, shall, in those wretched abodes, continue immortal in the midst of their flames; whereas every acceptable sacrifice shall be seasoned with another kind of salt[m], even that of Divine grace, which purifies the soul and preserves it from corruption.

SECT. XCIII.

Mark IX. 49.

49 For every one shall be salted with fire, and every sacrifice shall be salted with salt.

50 Salt is good: but if the salt have lost his saltness, wherewith will ye season it? Have

In allusion to this, you, my disciples, may remember, I have formerly called you the salt of the earth, (Mat. v. 13, p. 203.) and as salt is a very good thing, so will you, if you answer that character, be inestimable blessings to the world, by purifying and preserving it from corruption, and diffusing the savour of that knowledge and grace, with which you are seasoned: but as I added then, if the salt itself be grown insipid, with what will you season it? or what can restore you, if you are corrupted, who should be the means of curing or restoring others? See to it therefore, that you have this excellent salt

50

l Shall be salted with fire.] Grotius, Spanheim, Gataker, Le Clerc, and Dr. Mill, have abundantly answered the favourite criticism of Scaliger, by which he would here read πυρια instead of πυρι, that it might be rendered, Every offering made by fire shall be salted.—The learned and laborious Wolfius has proposed a multitude of interpretations on this text. He and Mons. L'Enfant think, it refers to the fiery trial through which Christians must expect to pass: but this neither seems a natural sense of the phrase itself, nor does it so well suit the context, by which it should seem to be a reason why the infernal fire is never quenched. I know it may be answered, that it is however a reason why the disciples should practise the mortification required above: but it seems desirable, where it can be done, to interpret the particles in their most usual sense, though sometimes it is necessary (as we have elsewhere observed, page 270, note i) to recede from it.—To suppose, as Dr. Clarke and some others do, that here is a reference to the ambiguity of the Hebrew word נמלח, which signifies either to be salted or consumed, seems very unwarrantable; since αλισθησεται has no such ambiguity; not to say how much it would impair the force of the sentence, leading to an idea, the very contrary to what Christ had suggested above no less than three times.

m Every sacrifice shall be seasoned with salt.] It is well known that the Mosaic law required this. See Lev. ii. 13.—Heinsius thinks that as salt contracts and binds, it was therefore used as an emblem of friendship, which he supposes our Lord afterwards to refer to; and that it was the foundation of the figure, by which a perpetual engagement is called a covenant of salt; Numb. xviii. 19. I should rather think it intended as a circumstance of decency, that the meat of God's table should be salted; and conclude that, if it had any emblematical meaning, it was to recommend to the worshipper an incorrupt heart, seasoned with savoury sentiments of wisdom and piety. Sinners are elsewhere represented as the victims of Divine justice: (Isa. xxxiv. 6. Jer. xii. 3. xlvi. 10. Ezek. xxi. 9, 10. and xxxix. 17.) And good men (as in the end of this verse) are represented in another view, with regard to their consecration to God, as acceptable sacrifices. Rom. xii. 1. xv. 16. Compare 1 Pet. ii. 5.

salt

SECT. XCIII.

salt in yourselves; and, as one instance of it, be careful to maintain peace with each other, and do not give way to those very unbecoming disputes and emulations which have been the occasion of my present discourse.

Have salt in yourselves, and have peace one with another.

Mark IX. 50.

IMPROVEMENT.

Mat. XVIII. 1

How deeply is pride rooted in the heart of fallen man; when neither the daily instructions, nor edifying example of the humble Jesus could prevent it from appearing, even among the apostles themselves, in so mean and unworthy a manner! Still did worldly interest and grandeur so intoxicate their minds, that they seemed even against hope to have hoped for it, and to have found out a strange kind of method of grafting these expectations, even on the very cross of Christ, which was intended to destroy them.

Mark IX. 36

How edifying and affecting are these lessons, which the meek and lowly Redeemer gave us, with this little child in his arms, whose example we are required to copy! Lord, give us of thy regenerating grace, that we may do it; that we may be converted, and become as little children, free from avarice and ambition, malice and prejudice! How melancholy is it to think, that many, who have by their office been employed to read and explain this lesson to others, and who have not been children in understanding, seem to have learnt so little of it themselves; as if it had never been at all intended for that order of men, to whom indeed it was immediately addressed! If there be any such yet remaining in the Christian ministry, let them seriously weigh the woe de-

Mat. XVIII. 3

7 nounced on that man by whom the offence cometh. May the infinite mercies of God be extended to all professing Christians, who give themselves up to worldly pursuits and projects; and especially to those who make the church of Christ only a kind of porch to the temple of mammon, and the sacred office itself merely a convenient vehicle for swallowing down riches and honours! May Divine grace deliver us from such fatal snares, and form us to that self-denial and mortification, without which we cannot be the true disciples of Christ; but, after having pierced ourselves through with many unnecessary sorrows here, shall plunge ourselves deep into eternal perdition!

Mark IX 43—48

May these repeated and dreadful representations of future misery, which we have now been reading, impress our souls in a becoming manner! Blessed Jesus! thou bringest good tidings; yet which of the prophets under the legal dispensation ever represented the terrors of the Lord in so awful a light, as that in which thou hast placed them! Let none of thy ministers be afraid to imitate thee herein! nor let any of thy followers presume to censure sure them for it! May we all be effectually warned to flee from the wrath to come; and, as we would not another day be salted with fire, may our hearts now be seasoned with thy grace! and may we, by a modest and peaceful, a benevolent and useful life, be daily bearing a testimony to it, and, as the salt of the earth, may we be labouring to cure the growing corruption of the world about us! SECT. XCIII. Mark IX. 49, 50

SECT. XCIV.

Our Lord farther enforces condescension and humility, and gives rules for the accommodation of disputes and offences among Christians. Mat. XVIII. 10—20.

MAT. XVIII. 10.

TAKE heed that ye despise not one of these little ones: for I say unto you, That in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven.

MAT. XVIII. 10.

FARTHER to promote the humility and moderation of his disciples, our Lord proceeded in the discourse which he began (as in the former section) with the little child in his arms, and said, Take special heed, that you despise not one of these little ones, or that you do not cast contempt on the weakest and meanest of my servants, nor slight even the soul of a child; for I say unto you, that their attendant angels, while in heaven, do incessantly behold the face of my heavenly Father[a]; and if the highest courtiers in the world above do not disdain, on proper occasions, to minister unto them, much less should you disdain it. Especially when you consider, how much greater an instance of condescension you have continually before you, than it is possible even the angels should give; for the Son of man himself[b], that great and illustrious Personage, came not, as many have imagined, to reign and triumph upon earth, but SECT. XCIV. Mat. XVIII. 10

11 For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost. 11 a Their attendant angels while in heaven, &c.] The fathers looked on this as an argument, that each good man has his particular guardian angel: (see Suicer. Thesaur. Vol. I. p. 43.) And Grotius also seems to allow the force of it. I apprehend this passage rather intimates, that the angels who sometimes attend the little ones spoken of, at other times stand in God's immediate presence; and consequently that different angels are at different times employed in this kind office, if it be incessantly performed. The general sense is plain, that the highest angels do not disdain, on proper occasions, to perform services of protection and friendship for the meanest Christian; but, as St. Paul says, they are all ministring spirits sent forth to minister to the heirs of salvation: (Heb. i. 14.) I say, the highest, because to behold the face of God may signify waiting near his throne, and be an allusion to the office of chief ministers in earthly courts, who daily converse with their princes. See Grotius; and compare 2 Sam. xvi. 19. 1 Kings xii. 6. Esth. i. 14. and Luke i. 19.

b For the Son of man himself.] The particle for here introduces another reason to enforce the caution not to despise these little ones, and not a proof of their angels beholding God's face. See note [d] on Luke xi. 36. p. 336.

SECT. XCIV.

but by all the offices of humility and endearment to save that which was lost and undone; and he takes a gracious and constant oversight of the least, as well as the greatest, of his redeemed ones. Compare Luke xix. 10. sect. cxliii.) What do you think would be the conduct of a faithful shepherd? If a man had a flock of an hundred sheep, and but one of them should wander from the rest, would he not leave the ninety-nine in their pasture or fold on the mountains[c], and go out with the most solicitous care and labour to seek that which is gone astray?

Mat. XVIII. 12.

12 How think ye? If a man have an hundred sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and seeketh that which is gone astray?

13 And if he happen to find it, I assuredly say unto you, that he will bring it back with greater pleasure, and the recovery of it will give him a more sensible joy, than the safety of the ninety-nine which had not wandered at all. (Compare Luke xv. 4, 5, sect. cxxii.)

13 And if so be that he finds it, verily I say unto you, he rejoiceth more of that sheep, than of the ninety and nine which went not astray.

14 Even so the love and tenderness of God for those, who are regarded by him as his children, is such, that you may be assured it is not the will of your heavenly Father that any one of these little ones should be lost, for want of your care in attending it, or through your negligence in seeking its recovery.

14 Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish.

15 And, as in order to the recovery of your weaker brethren, admonition will frequently be necessary, let me lay down a rule, which, when larger societies are formed among you, it will be of great importance to attend to with the utmost care: If thou shalt know thy brother to be guilty of a fault, and he shall sin against thee, go and reprove him in the most convincing, yet the most gentle manner that thou canst[d]; and that he may take it the better, let it be done between thee and him alone: if he will hear thee with due regard, it is well, for by this means thou hast gained thy brother; he will return to the way of his duty, and the friendship between you will thus be established on firmer foundations than ever, in consequence of this substantial token of thy impartial sincerity and frankness of temper. (Compare

15 Moreover, if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother.

c Leave the ninety-nine on the mountains.] The original will bear either this construction, or that which is given in our common translation; but I have rather chosen to express it thus, as most agreeable to what we find in Luke, chap. xv. 4, sect. cxxii.

d Reprove him in the most convincing —manner that thou canst.] The word ελεγξον signifies to convince as well as to admonish. Compare John viii. 9, 46; xvi. 8; 1 Cor. xiv. 24; Tit. i. 9; and James ii. 9.—The reader will observe I often choose to give the full force of a word in the paraphrase, rather than greatly to increase the number of words in the version, though so increased they might express no more than is expressed in a single word or two in the Greek.

e Tell

SECT. XCIV.

Mat. XVIII. 16.

16 But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established.

(Compare Prov. xxviii. 23.) But if he will not hearken [to thee] take with thee one or two more, who are persons of character and reputation in the society, that their presence may add greater weight to the admonition given, and may be of service, either to silence his objections, and bring him to a sense of his fault, or to prevent disputes, and justify thy conduct, if the matter should be carried farther; as in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established more effectually, than it could otherwise have been. (See Deut. xix. 15.)

17 And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man, and a publican.

But if he shall be still incorrigible in his fault, and disregard them in the advice they offer him for peace, then tell it to the whole church[c], or society of worshipping Christians to which he belongs, and among whom he has immediate communion in gospel ordinances; and if they concur in any admonition to the offender, and he be so far hardened as to disregard the whole church, or society of Christians, you have then done your utmost to reclaim him; and while he continues in this obstinate temper, you will do well to enter your protest against it, by forbearing any intimate 17

c Tell it to the whole church.] This is one of those many scriptures, which would have been very intelligible, if they had not been learnedly obscured by ingenious men, whose interest it has been to spread a cloud over them. I am more and more convinced that the vulgar sense of the New Testament, that is, the sense in which an honest man of plain sense would take it on his first reading the original, or any good translation, is almost every where the true general sense of any passage; though an acquaintance with language and antiquity, with an attentive meditation on the text and context, may illustrate the spirit and energy of a multitude of places in a manner, which could not otherwise be learned. The old English editions of 1539 and 1541 render it, Tell it to the congregation; and, I think, properly enough.—The word church is unhappily grown into a term of art, and has by different persons a variety of secondary ideas annexed to it; as Dr. Watts has beautifully shewn in his Essay on Uncharitableness, p. 7—10. But it signifies in general, an assembly, or number of people, called together on whatever occasion, as is well known. (Compare Acts xix. 32, 39.) It is in the New Testament generally used, as here, for a particular assembly (Acts xiv. 23; 1 Cor. iv. 17; xiv. 23; xvi. 19); but sometimes it is used for the whole body of Christians, because they are now called out from the world, and are at last to be gathered together in the presence of Christ their head (2 Thes. ii. 1), and to dwell for ever with each other, and with him. (1 Thes. iv. 17.) Compare Mat. xvi. 18; Eph. i. 22; iii. 10; v. 24; and Col. i. 18, 24.—According to Bishop Stillingfleet's interpretation of this text (in his Irenicum, book ii. cap. 5. § 8) it should be rendered, Tell it to an assembly, or a select company. But it is certain, the force of the article is better preserved by our version; and as undoubtedly it must be an assembly of Christians (compare 1 Cor. vi. 1), so no interpretation seems so natural as, that it should be that assembly which was under a peculiar obligation to watch over the person in question (compare 1 Cor. v. 12, 13, and 2 Thes. iii. 14, 15), and that whose advices and remonstrances he was peculiarly obliged to hear. And this was likewise conformable to the usage of the Jews, who admonished offenders in their synagogues, and to many of their maxims, which commentators mention on this text. See Lightfoot's Hor. Heb. in loc. and Selden de Syned. lib. i. cap. 9.

SECT. XCIV.

intimate friendship with such a person; and let him therefore in this case be to thee even as a heathen, and a publican, or other most notorious sinner[f], to whom you would perform only the common offices of humanity, but would avoid his intimate society as scandalous, and to whom you are not under these peculiar obligations, whereby Christian brethren are bound to each other.

Mat. XVIII. 17.

18 These are the maxims which you, my apostles, are to inculcate on my other followers, and let them see to it, that they duly regard you; for verily I say unto you, You shall be furnished with such Divine illumination and assistance, as shall abundantly confirm the authority of your decisions on every case and question which may occur; and fully prove (as I formerly told you) that whatsoever you shall bind even in this course of your humble ministry, on earth, shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever you shall loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven. (See note [h] on Mat. xvi. 19, sect. lxxxviii. p. 463.)

18 Verily I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth, shall be loosed in heaven.

19 And further, as a convincing token and demonstration of this, I say unto you, That this authority and power not only shall attend the actions of your whole united body, but even if any two of you shall agree together here on earth[g], concerning any thing which they shall think it proper to ask in prayer for the miraculous confirmation of any of their determinations, it shall be immediately done for them by my Father in heaven[h]. For where but two or three are assembled in my name, with a regard to my authority, and to the purposes of my glory, whatever the peculiar occasion be, I am there by my special, though invisible, presence, in the midst of them,

19 Again I say unto you, That if two of you shall agree on earth, as touching any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven.

20 For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them.

[f] As a heathen, and a publican, or other most notorious sinner.] If I am not much mistaken, that celebrated text in Titus relating to heretics (chap. iii. 10), which requires that a man who disturbs the peace, or subverts the faith of his Christian brethren, should be twice admonished, and then discarded by the society, may be much illustrated by this passage. When such a case occurs (as well as when an offended brother has just cause of complaint) each particular person concerned must judge as well as he can, remembering he is answerable to Christ for the impartiality of such judgment.

[g] If any two of you shall agree together here on earth.] The text so expressly refers to agreeing in a petition, that I wonder the learned and judicious editors of the Prussian Testament should render it, If any two of you shall live on earth in a good understanding with each other. Perhaps there may be a reference to the notion the Jews had, that it was necessary at least ten should concur in social prayer, if any extraordinary success was expected. See Trigland. de Secta Karæorum, cap. x. page 172.

[h] It shall be done for them, &c.] That this refers to a miraculous answer of prayer may appear from comparing Mat. xxi. 21, 22; Mark xi. 23, 24; John xiv. 13, 14; 1 John iii. 22; v. 14, 15; and Jam. v. 16. See Tillotson's Works, Vol. III. page 307.

them, and will shew, by all proper interposition of my Divine power, the regard I have to their interest and their prayers. SECT. XCIV. Mat. XVIII. 20.

IMPROVEMENT.

THUS happy are the meanest servants of Christ, in the care and favour of their heavenly Master, and in the angelic guard, which, by his high command, are continually attending even the lambs of his flock. So condescending are the blessed spirits above, that even the greatest of them do not disdain to minister unto the heirs of salvation; (Heb. i. 14.) Let not the wisest and greatest men despise those, whom angels honour with their guardianship and care; especially since the Son of man, that merciful Shepherd, has come forth into this wilderness to save that which was lost, and even to seek and recover us when we were gone astray, and should otherwise have wandered on to our eternal ruin. 10, 11, 12

What could have been more happy for the church of Christ than the observation of this plain and easy rule, which he has given for ending disputes among his followers! And yet who, that sees the conduct of the generality of Christians, would imagine they had ever heard of such a rule? Instead of this private expostulation, which might often bring a debate to a speedy and amicable conclusion, what public charges! what passionate complaints! what frequent and laboured attempts to take, if the least scandalous, yet not the least pernicious kind of revenge, by wounding the characters of those, whom we imagine to have injured us! 15, 16

As for church-censures, how lamentable is it, that they have been so little conformable to this rule, and in many instances so contrary to it, in almost every Christian nation under heaven! Is this the form in which ecclesiastical judgments do appear in the Popish, or even in the Protestant world? Are these the maxims by which they have been, or by which they are determined, even by those who claim the largest share in the promises made to the apostles, and boast with the greatest confidence of the presence and authority of Christ with them, to confirm their sentences, and to sanctify perhaps rapine and murder? Vain wretched confidence! Let us earnestly pray that this dishonour to the Christian name may every where be wiped away; and that true religion, and even common humanity, may not with such solemn mockery be destroyed in the name of the Lord. 17

Let humble submission be always paid to apostolical decisions in every difficulty; and let the promises made to these leaders in the Christian Church be some encouragement even to us, on whom the ends of the world are come. None but an Omnipresent, and 18

conse-

SECT. XCIV.

consequently a Divine Person, could say, Wherever two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them. 20 His power and his goodness can never be impaired; let it therefore be an encouragement to social prayer: and let the remembrance of our Redeemer's continued presence and inspection, engage us to behave ourselves agreeably to the relation that we claim to him, and to those expectations from him which we profess.

SECT. XCV.

Our Lord cautions his disciples against a revengeful spirit, and inculcates mutual forgiveness, by the affecting parable of the unmerciful servant. Mat. XVIII. 21. to the end.

MAT. XVIII. 21.

SECT. XCV. Mat. XVIII. 21. THEN, when Jesus had given this advice for the accommodation of differences among his disciples, Peter, imagining it might be abused by ill-disposed persons, as an encouragement to offer injuries to others, came to him and said, Lord, how often must I forgive my brother, if he offend against me? must I go on to do it until he has repeated the injury seven times?

MAT. XVIII. 21. THEN came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times?

22 And Jesus, in reply, says to him, I do not merely say to thee, Till seven times, but even till seventy times seven: in short, the precept is unbounded, and you must never be weary of forgiving your brethren, since you are so much more indebted to the Divine mercy, than they can be to your's.

22 Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto to thee, Until seven times; but, until seventy times seven.

23 For this reason, or with respect to this matter, I may properly say, that the kingdom of heaven, in its constitution and final process, may be likened to, or be illustrated by, the instance of a certain king that ruled over a large country[a], who, as he had a great number of officers under him, was determined at length to settle an account with 24 his servants. And when he began to reckon with them, there was brought to him one, who had so abused the eminent station in which he had been placed, and the high confidence which his prince had reposed in him, that he owed him a most immense sum, and stood accountable for 25 ten thousand talents[b]: And as he had nothing to

23 Therefore is the kingdom of heaven likened unto a certain king, which would take account of his servants.

24 And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him, which owed him ten thousand talents:

25 But forasmuch as a May be likened to, or be illustrated, &c.] See sect. lviii. note [1].

b Owed him ten thousand talents.] According to Dr. Prideaux's computation, if these as he had not to pay, his lord commanded him to be sold, and his wife and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made.

SECT. XCV. Mat. XVIII.

to pay, which could be any equivalent for the debt, or any considerable composition for it, his lord, according to frequent custom in such cases (Exod. xxii. 3. Lev. xxv. 47. and 2 Kings iv. 1.) commanded him to be sold for a slave, and also his wife and children, and all the goods that he had, and payment to be made with the price of them, as far as it would go. 25

26 The servant therefore fell down and worshipped him, saying, Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

The servant therefore falling down in helpless consternation, prostrated himself at his master's feet, and said, Lord, I beseech thee to have patience with me for a while longer, and I will endeavour to pay thee all. 26

27 Then the Lord of that servant was moved with compassion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt.

Then the lord of that unhappy servant, whose affairs were so utterly desperate, being melted with compassion, graciously discharged him; and, knowing how vain it was to expect he should ever pay him, declared that, on condition of his future good behaviour[c], he frankly forgave him all the debt. 27

28 But the same servant went out, and found one of his fellow-servants, which owed him an hundred pence: and he laid hands on him, and took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest.

But just as that servant went out from the presence of his generous and indulgent sovereign, he met with one of his fellow-servants, who owed him but a very inconsiderable sum of money, no more than an hundred pence[d]; and laying hold of him by the throat, and almost strangling him[e], he said, in a furious and outrageous manner, Pay me that which thou owest me immediately, or I will detain thee as my prisoner, 28

29 And his fellow-servant fell down at his feet, and besought him, saying, Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all.

And his poor fellow-servant fell down at his feet, as he had done at his lord's, and entreated him, saying, in the very words which he himself had used but just before on the like occasion, Have patience with me for a while longer, and I will endeavour to pay thee all. 29

30 And he would not,

And he would not be prevailed 30

these were talents of gold, this would amount to seventy-two millions sterling; which is so immense a sum, that it seems strange Antiochus the Great should be able to pay it, as Eutropius tells us he did, to purchase a peace with the Romans: (Eutrop. lib. iv. cap. 2). But, by Livy's account of the conditions of peace, they were talents of silver, of which Antiochus was to pay fifteen thousand talents, that is, five hundred talents down, two thousand five hundred when the senate should ratify the peace, and the remaining twelve thousand in twelve years, at a thousand talents a year: (Liv. Histor. lib. xxxvii. cap. 45. & lib. xxxviii. cap. 38.) And even thus the sum must have amounted to 6,750,000*l.* See Prid. Connect. Vol. I. Pref. p. 20, and Vol. II. p. 138.—Our Lord seems to have mentioned so large a sum on purpose to intimate the number and weight of our offences against God, and our utter incapacity of making him any satisfaction.

c On condition of his future good behaviour.] This is a circumstance exceeding natural, and by the revocation of the pardon afterwards it seems strongly implied.

d An hundred pence.] Reckoning the Roman denarius at seven pence half-penny of our money, it amounted to three pounds and half-a-crown.

e By the throat, and almost strangling him.] This is the proper import of the word πνιγε, which yet more strongly expresses his cruelty.

f Gave

SECT. XCV.

Mat. XVIII.

vailed upon to forbear him any longer; but went away with him before a magistrate, and cast him into prison, protesting he should lie there till he should pay even the last farthing of the debt.

not, but went and cast him into prison, till he should pay the debt.

31 And when his other fellow-servants saw what was done, they were exceedingly grieved at such an instance of unexampled cruelty from a man in his circumstances, and came and gave their lord the king an exact and faithful account of the whole matter[f], who was highly incensed at so inhuman an action. Then his lord, having called him again, said unto him with just indignation, Thou wicked and barbarous slave[g], thou knowest that I frankly forgave thee all that vast debt which thou owedst to me, because thou didst entreat my pity: And shouldst not thou also have had compassion on thy fellow-servant, when in thy power, even as I but just before had compassion on thee? Thou art most inexcusable in what thou hast done, and I am determined to treat thee accordingly.

31 So when his fellow-servants saw what was done, they were very sorry, and came and told unto their lord all that was done.

32 Then his lord, after that he had called him, said unto him, O thou wicked servant, I forgave thee all that debt, because thou desiredst me:

33 Shouldest not thou also have had compassion on thy fellow-servant, even as I had pity on thee?

34 And his lord, being justly incensed, revoked the grant of remission he had just before made, as forfeited by so vile a behaviour; and not only put him in prison, but delivered him to the tormentors there, to fetter and scourge him[h], till he should pay all that was due to him; which was equivalent to condemning him to perpetual confinement and painful imprisonment during life.

34 And his lord was wroth, and delivered him to the tormentors, till he should pay all that was due unto him.

35 And Jesus concluded the discourse with saying, Thus also will my heavenly Father deal with you; if you do not every one of you from your very hearts forgive his brother his trespasses; and I leave it to your own consciences to judge, whether it be safe for you to tempt the strictness of his inexorable justice, by the severity of your conduct towards your offending brethren.

35 So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their trespasses.

IMPROVE-

[f] Gave their lord an exact and faithful account.] This is the meaning of the word διεσαφησεν, as Albert has shewn; Observ. p. 116.

[g] Thou wicked slave.] The word δουλε is not always a term of reproach, nor does it necessarily imply more than servant: (compare Mat. xxv. 21, 23.) Yet in this connection I thought it would well bear the version I have given it, which may best express the indignation with which his lord is supposed to speak.

[h] Delivered him to the tormentors, &c.] Imprisonment is a much greater punishment in the eastern parts of the world than here: state criminals especially, when condemned to it, are not only forced to submit to a very mean and scanty allowance, but are frequently loaded with clogs or yokes of heavy wood, in which they cannot either lie or sit at ease; and, by frequent scourgings, and sometimes by racking, are quickly brought to an untimely end. (See Samedo's China, p. 225.) To this there is probably a reference here. Compare sect. xxxii. note h.

IMPROVEMENT.

How unreasonable and how odious does a severe and uncharitable temper appear, when we view it in the light of this parable! Yet what light can be more just than this? We are indebted to God more than ten thousand talents; from our infancy we begin to contract the debt, and are daily increasing it in our ripening years: justly, therefore, might he cast us into the prison of hell till we paid the uttermost farthing. And were we to fall at his feet, with a promise of paying him all on his patient forbearance, it must be the language of gross ignorance, or of presumptuous folly, when addressed to a Being who knows our poverty, and knows that, in consequence of it, we are utterly incapable of making him any amends. But he magnifies his grace in the kind offers of a free forgiveness; and shall we who receive it, and hold our lives and all our hope by it, take our brethren by the throat, because they owe us a few pence? or shall we carry along with us deep continued resentment, glowing like a hidden fire in our bosoms? God forbid! For surely if we do so, out of our own mouth shall we be condemned, while we acknowledge the justice of the sentence here passed against this cruel servant.

SECT. XCV. Mat. XVIII. 24 26 28 34

Christ himself has made the application: so shall my heavenly Father deal with you, if you do not forgive your brethren: and he has instructed us elsewhere to ask forgiveness only as we grant it; (Mat. vi. 14, 15). Let us then from this moment discharge our hearts of every sentiment of rancour and revenge, nor ever allow a word, or even a wish, that savours of it. And as ever we hope our addresses to the throne of Divine mercy should meet with a favourable audience, let us lift up holy hands, without wrath, as well as without doubting. (1 Tim. ii. 8.)

35

SECT. XCVI.

Christ reproves John for prohibiting one, who cast out demons in his name, because he was not of their company. Mark IX. 38—41. Luke IX. 49, 50.

MARK IX. 38.

AND John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting

MARK IX. 38.

IN the midst of the preceding discourse, relating to humility and self-denial, the apostle John (whether desirous of diverting him from a subject which he could not hear pursued without some consciousness of having deserved blame, or thinking it might receive some farther illustration by his remarks upon the case that he should mention) interrupted our Lord[a], and answered him, when he had just been urging a readiness to receive one of the least of his servants in his name (Mark ix. 37. sect. xciii.) by saying, Master, while we were in our late progress, we saw one casting out demons in thy name[b], who does not follow us, nor converse with us as brethren: and we forbade him to do it any more, because he does not follow thee among us, and never had, as we apprehend, any regular commission from thee, and so might possibly have proved an occasion of neglect or reproach to the rest of thy disciples.

SECT. XCVI. Mark IX. 38.

SECT. XCVI.

Mark IX. 38.

ing out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us: and we forbade him, [because he followeth not with us.] [LUKE IX. 49].

39 But Jesus said unto him, Do not forbid, or go about to hinder him at present; for, by thus making use of my name, he appears to have some reverence and regard for me, and will not therefore set himself against me; since there is no man who shall be seen to work such a miracle in my name, that can quickly, or on any slight occasion, speak evil of me, or say any thing dishonourable of that name, for which he pro-
40 fesses such a regard: And be that regard ever so imperfect, I would not discourage one who acts thus, now: for, with respect to such, and in a case like this, I may use a proverb (the reverse of that which I mentioned on a different occasion), and say, Whosoever is not against us, is for us[c]; and therefore I would by no means condemn a man for doing that, by which the kingdom of Satan is in fact weakened and my name

39 But Jesus said [unto him,] forbid him not: for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me. [LUKE IX. 50.—]

40 For he that is not against us, is on our part. [LUKE IX.—50.]

[a] Interrupted our Lord.] I have inserted this story apart here, that the thread of the preceding discourse might not be broken; that the xciii section might not be lengthened beyond due bounds; and that I might have room to illustrate and improve this passage, which, though short, has both its difficulty and its use.

[b] Casting out demons in thy name.] Probably this was a case something resembling that of the sons of Sceva, (Acts xix. 13—16.) and God might see reason now to grant that efficacy to their adjuration, which he afterwards denied, when the evidences of the gospel were proposed so much more distinctly and fully, after the descent of the Spirit.—Dr. Clarke supposes that he was one of John the Baptist's disciples.

[c] Whosoever is not against us, is for us.] Our Lord had formerly said (Mat. xii. 30.) He that is not with me, is against me; thereby giving his hearers a just and necessary admonition that, on the whole, the war between him and Satan admitted of no neutrality, and that those who were indifferent to him would finally be treated as his enemies. (See sect. lxi. p. 323.) But here, in another view, he very consistently uses a different and seemingly opposite proverb, the counterpart of the former, directing his followers to judge of men's characters in the most candid manner, and charitably to hope that they, who did not oppose his cause, wished well to it; a conduct peculiarly reasonable, when his cause lay under so many discouragements. Probably many who now concealed their regard to him, were afterwards animated courageously to profess it, though at the greatest hazard. I cannot, with Mr. Baxter, think an express declaration of regard to Christ, to have been more necessary in the former case, than now; but it is most obvious, that Christ requires us to be more rigorous in judging ourselves, than he allows us to be in judging each other.

name glorified, though he have not my immediate and express commission. I rather take it in good part, as I am willing to do any thing that looks like a token of esteem and affection to me, be it ever so inconsiderable; for, as I formerly told you, (Mat. x. 42. p. 402), whoever shall present you with a cup of cold water only in my name, that is, because you belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, He shall not lose his proportionable reward. And so he went on to warn them of the danger of offending any of the weakest of his disciples, in the manner recounted and explained above. (See Mark ix. 42. sect. xciii.) And when he had concluded that discourse he not long after quitted Galilee. Compare Mat. xix. 1. sect. cxxxv.

sect. xcvi.

Mark IX. 41.

41 For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, He shall not lose his reward.

IMPROVEMENT.

It is sad that the spirit, which remains in so many Christians, and in this instance appeared even in the beloved Saint John, should (as the apostle James expresses it) lust unto envy; Jam. iv. 5.) How ill does that spirit become a disciple, and much more a minister, of the benevolent Jesus! The apostle Paul had learnt and taught a better temper, when he rejoiced, that Christ was preached, even by those who were his personal enemies, (Phil. i. 18.) To seek our own glory, is not glory, Prov. xxv. 27.) and to confine religion to them that follow us, is a narrowness of spirit which we should avoid and abhor.

Mark IX. 38.

Christ here gives us a lovely example of candour and moderation: he was willing to put the best construction on dubious cases, and to treat those as friends, who were not avowed and declared enemies. Perhaps in this instance, it might be a means of overcoming a remainder of prejudice, and perfecting what was wanting in the faith and obedience of the persons in question; at least it suited the present state of things, in which men are to be judged of by their professions and actions, as their hearts cannot immediately and certainly be known. 39, 40

But let us judge ourselves with greater severity, remembering there is an approaching day, in which the secrets of all hearts will be made manifest; in which those, who have indeed been neuters in the war between Christ and Satan, will be treated as enemies; and those other words will be fulfilled, He that is not with me, is against me; and he that gathereth not with me, scattereth abroad. (Mat. xii. 30. and Luke xi. 23.)

In that day, may the sincerity of our hearts be discovered, and then 41

SECT. XCVI

then we may rejoice in this repeated assurance, that the least of our services shall be kindly remembered, and abundantly rewarded according to the riches of Divine bounty and grace.

SECT. XCVII.

Our Lord sends out the seventy disciples with large instructions, like those he had before given to the twelve apostles. Luke X. 1.—16.

LUKE X. 1.

SECT. XCVII.

AFTER these things, before he departed from Galilee, the Lord Jesus intending, when the approaching feast of tabernacles was over [a], to make one journey more over the country, in the last half year he was to spend on earth, fixed upon seventy others of his disciples also, besides the twelve apostles so frequently mentioned before (see Luke ix. i. & seq. sect. lxxiv.) and sent them out before him, two and two, together into every city, and more private place, into which he himself intended shortly to come; and thus, as it were, he divided the whole country into thirty-five lesser circuits.

Luke X. 1.

LUKE X. 1.

AFTER these things, the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face, into every city and place, whither he himself would come.

2 And at their setting out, he gave them many important instructions, nearly resembling those, which he had before addressed to the apostles; and as it was a large and copious field for service, on which they were to enter, he said therefore to them [b], as he had formerly done to their brethren a When the approaching feast of tabernacles was over.] It seems to be much more reasonable to suppose, that Christ sent out the seventy before the feast of tabernacles than after it; considering how little time he had between that and the feast of dedication, in which interval he dispatched his last circuit in Galilee. To take from those three months all the period to be allowed for their journey and return, seems inconvenient. But it is astonishing, that Mr. Le Clerc, and some others, should suppose that these instructions were given to them in Christ's journey to the above mentioned feast: for, not to mention the impossibility of holding a discourse with such a number of people on the road about an affair of such importance, it is expressly said, John vii. 10. that he went up to the feast of tabernacles privately; which is utterly inconsistent with his being attended with such a train as seventy, or (according to that author) eighty-two persons; for Le Clerc supposes the twelve were also with him.—I shall elsewhere give my reasons why I suppose the story of the Samaritans refusing him entertainment (though recorded Luke ix. 51—56,) to have happened later than this. (See sect. cxxvii. note a.) At present I would only observe, that the expression, after these things, in the beginning of this chapter, may either refer to the stories immediately preceding, in the close of the former, from ver 57. to the end, or to the general series of events recorded above, though (as I think the evangelist himself strongly intimates) one little history be transposed.

2 Therefore he said unto them, The harvest truly is great, but the labourers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth labourers into his harvest.

b He said therefore to them.] Luke is the only evangelist, who has given us this account of Christ sending out the seventy; and it is the less to be wondered at that he should do it so particularly, if the ancient tradition be true, which Origen and Epiphanius have mentioned, that he was himself one of the number. See Dr. Whitby's Preface to Luke, where he has shewn this to be highly probably, and no way inconsistent brethren, (Mat. ix. 37, 38. p. 387,) The harvest is indeed great, and many souls are to be gathered in, but the faithful labourers are as yet very few; pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would, by his immediate access to the spirits of men, thrust forth more labourers into his harvest, though the work may prove so fatiguing and hazardous, that they are naturally averse to it.[c]

3 Go your ways; behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves.

And as for you, go your ways with all the resolution and zeal you can employ in your ministry, as indeed you will need it all; for behold, I send you forth as so many defenceless lambs in the midst of ravenous and cruel wolves. 3 4 Carry neither purse, nor scrip, nor shoes; and salute no man by the way.

Yet as you go under the singular care of Divine Providence, carry not, with you any purse of money, nor even a scrip for your provisions, nor any more shoes than you have now on your feet; nor stay so much as to salute any man as you pass by him on the way;[d] but let it evidently appear to all who see you, that your thoughts are full of the great errand on which you go. 4

5 And into whatsoever house ye enter, first say, Peace be to this house:

And, in all the stages of your journey, carry along with you those benevolent affections which are so well suited to the design of your mission: into whatever house therefore you shall happen to come, at your first entrance say, Peace be upon this house and pray that prosperity and happiness may attend the whole family. 5

6 And if the son of peace be there, your peace shall rest upon it: if not, it shall turn to you again.

And if any son and heir of peace, or any truly good man who is worthy of such blessings, be there in the house, your prayer for peace and prosperity shall be answered, and shall rest upon it; but if not, it shall not be entirely lost, but shall return upon you, and you shall be the better for those kind and friendly sentiments, even though the wishes they dictate be not exactly answered. 6 sistent with what Luke has said at the beginning of his gospel.

And

c That he would thrust forth more labourers, &c.] As both Luke here, and Matthew in a parallel passage, (Mat. ix. 38.) use the word ἐκβαλῃ, which literally signifies to thrust out, I was willing to express the force of it in the version as well as the paraphrase. (See note k on Mat. ix. 38. sect. lxxiii. p. 387.)—So many of the expressions used in this discourse are to be found in that to the twelve, sect. lxxiv. lxxv. that it is generally sufficient to refer to the paraphrase and notes there for the explication of them here.

d Nor stay to salute any man, as you pass by him on the way.] Our Lord did not intend by this to forbid his disciples in general, nor even any of his ministers, a decent use of the customary tokens of civil respect to others, any more than he forbids the use of shoes and purses; only while they were employed on this particular message, he required the forbearance of them, that every one, who saw them pass by, might perceive that their minds were full of the most important business, and that they were earnestly intent on the immediate dispatch of it. (Compare 2 Kings iv. 29.) This was the more necessary, as they were so much straitened for time. See above note a.

e Wipe

SECT. XCVII.

Luke X. 7.

And when you are entered into any lodgings, continue in the same house as long as you stay in the town, cheerfully and contentedly eating and drinking what you find with them; for as, on the one hand, the common labourer is worthy of his reward, and therefore you who take so much pains to bring them to the greatest blessings, have much more right to your entertainment; so, on the other, it is beneath you to be very solicitous and nice about the manner of it; and therefore do not create an unnecessary trouble in the family where you are, or go from one house to another, in hope of better accommodations, during the short stay you make in a place.

7 And in the same house remain, eating and drinking such things as they give; for the labourer is worthy of his hire. Go not from house to house.

8 And, I repeat it again, Into whatever town or city you come, and they receive and entertain you freely and cheerfully, be ready to accept their kindness to you, and without any difficulty eat and drink such things as are set before you:

8 And into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you, eat such things as are set before you:

9 And I am sure I put it into your power to make them an abundant recompense, when I commission you, as I do now, to heal the sick that are in it, and to say unto them, The long-expected kingdom of God is come near unto you, and therefore prepare yourselves thankfully to receive the blessings of it, which are thus freely offered to you by the Messiah.

9 And heal the sick that are therein, and say unto them, The kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

10 But into whatsoever city you come, and they perversely set themselves against you, and do not entertain you, nor regard your message, go out into the streets of it, and say, in a most public and solemn manner, Since you reject so gracious and important a message, we cannot but consider you as rejected by God, and devoted to certain and inevitable destruction; we therefore separate ourselves from all that belongs to you, and wipe off from our feet, as a testimony against you, even the very dust of your city, which cleaves to us[e]; nevertheless, know this assuredly, that the kingdom of God is come near unto you, and in the midst of all the calamities which are to befal you, let your consciences witness that mercy hath been offered

10 But into whatsoever city ye enter, and they receive you not, go your ways out into the streets of the same, and say,

11 Even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you; notwithstanding, be ye sure of this, that the kingdom of God is come nigh unto you.

[e] Wipe off the very dust of your city, &c.] For the import of this solemn action, see sect. lxxiv. note o, p. 392, from whence it will appear that Dr. Edwards's singular interpretation (Edw. on Script. Vol. II. p. 189—193) is not only foreign, but contrary to our Lord's purpose. He strangely supposes it an allusion to those courts, where, as in what we call pie-powder (or pieds poudres) courts, controversies were immediately decided, as it were, before people could wipe the dust off their shoes.

[f] He

SECT. XCVII.

Luke X. 12.

12 But I say unto you, That it shall be more tolerable in that day for Sodom, than for that city.

offered and refused. And I say unto you, as I formerly did to your brethren, That in that day of the final judgment it shall be more tolerable, even for the accursed inhabitants of Sodom itself, than for that city, wheresoever it be found.

13 Wo unto thee, Chorazin, Wo unto thee, Bethsaida; for if the mighty works had been done in Tyre and Sidon, which have been done in you, they had a great while ago repented, sitting in sackcloth and ashes.

Now while our Lord was thus mentioning to his seventy disciples the wretched case of those that rejected the gospel, he could not forbear reflecting that this was the condition of some of those cities, where he himself had made the most frequent visits and the longest abode: he therefore repeated the pathetic lamentation he had before taken up for them[f], and said, On this account, Wo unto thee, O thou obstinate Chorazin, Wo unto thee, O thou incorrigible Bethsaida; for if the wonders which have been wrought in you had been done in Tyre and Sidon, degenerate as they were, they would have repented long since, sitting in sackcloth, and lying down in ashes, to express the depth of their humiliation and sorrow. 13

14 But it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the judgment, than for you.

But though vengeance has long since been executed upon them, God will make manifest the impartiality of his justice and it shall be more tolerable, in the day of his tremendous judgment, for Tyre and Sidon, than for you. 14

15 And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted to heaven, shall be thrust down to hell.

And thou, O most ungrateful and rebellious Capernaum, who hast been distinguished from all the rest by my longest residence in thee, so that thou hast (as it were) been lifted up to heaven in that respect as well as in magnificence and wealth, shall be brought down even to hell, and sunk into the deepest and most irrecoverable ruin, since thou hast heard my gospel only to despise it. 15 16 He that heareth you, heareth me: and he that despiseth you, despiseth me: and he that despiseth me, despiseth him that sent me.

And then turning to the seventy disciples, who still stood around him, he concluded his instructions to them in these important words (to the same purpose as he before had said to the apostles, Mat. x. 40, sect. lxxvi.) He that heareth you, in the discharge of this your embassy, heareth me; and, on the other hand, he that rejecteth you, in like manner rejecteth me; and he that rejecteth me, rejecteth him that sent me, even 16

[f] He repeated the pathetic lamentation, &c.] Considering the affectionate temper of our Lord, it is no wonder that he should renew his lamentation over those unhappy places, where he had so intimately conversed; and that he should do it in such words as these, so well calculated to alarm and impress all that should hear or read them. Oh! that they might now have their due weight with those, who might pass them over too slightly, when they occurred before, in Mat. xi. 20—24. (See sect. lx. p. 309, 310.) Oh! that every impenitent creature who reads them might know that the sentence of his own condemnation is now before his eyes.

SECT. XCVII.

even the Father himself, whose credentials I bear, and who will punish the despisers of the gospel, as impious rebels, who presume to contemn his Infinite Majesty, and provoke his almighty power.

Luke X. 16.

IMPROVEMENT.

So unwilling was the blessed Jesus to give over his kind attempts for men's salvation! He projected another circuit through the country, and sends forth other messengers, more numerous than the former company. He renews his invitations to perish-
13, 15 ing sinners, and his lamentations over those, who had hitherto rejected the counsel of God against themselves; (Luke vii. 30.) Thus let us love the souls of men; thus let us use repeated endeavours to deliver them; endeavours which would probably be much more successful than they are, if these wise and gracious directions of Christ to his ministers were more attentively observed by those who are honoured with that important office.

3, 4 Let all such cast their care upon God; let them go forth cheerfully in a dependence on his protection and favour; let them carry about with them hearts full of affection for the whole hu-
5 man race, seeking and praying for the peace of all around them;
7, 8 cheerfully contenting themselves with such things as they have (Heb. xiii. 5); and neither pursuing the grandeurs nor the delicacies of life with any eager attachment.

2 Send forth, O Lord, such labourers into thine harvest, and animate them to a becoming zeal in their work, by a deep sense of that dreadful condemnation, which those will incur, who despising
16 them, pour contempt on their Divine Master, and his heavenly Father, in whose name he was sent! May God preserve our coun-
11 try from that guilt and ruin! The kingdom of God is come nigh unto us, and we are lifted up to heaven by our privileges: may we 15 not, after all, be cast down to hell for the abuse of them! but may Divine grace make such a way for the gospel into our hearts, that we may cordially receive all who faithfully proclaim it, and bid them welcome in the name of the Lord!

SECT. XCVIII.

Christ discourses with his brethren about his going up to the feast of tabernacles, and stays some time after them. John VII. 1—13.

JOHN VII. 1.

SECT. XCVIII.

AFTER these things, that is, after he had miraculously fed the five thousand, walked on the sea to his disciples, and discoursed with the multitude

John VII. 1.

JOHN VII. 1.

AFTER these things Jesus walked in Galilee;

Galilee; for he would not walk in Jewry, because the Jews sought to kill him.

multitude concerning the bread of life[a], Jesus for some time walked, or travelled, as we before observed, in Galilee, and there instructed his disciples (see sect. xcii.) for he would not then walk or converse familiarly in Judea[b], because the Jews, and more especially their rulers, incensed by the growing fame of his miracles, and the freedom of his discourses, sought an opportunity to slay him, either by private assassination, tumultuous assault, or legal process.

SECT. XCVIII.

John VII. 1.

2 Now the Jews' feast of tabernacles was at hand.

2 And a very noted feast of the Jews was then near, which is [called] the feast of tabernacles; instituted in commemoration of their dwelling in tents in the wilderness, and celebrated in booths erected for that purpose, with great solemnity and joy. (See Lev. xxiii. 34, & seq.)

3 His brethren therefore said unto him, Depart hence, and go into Judea, that thy disciples also may see the works that thou doest:

3 Therefore his brethren, or near kinsmen in Galilee, said unto him, We would advise thee to remove from hence, and go into Judea, that thy disciples also who are there, may, for the confirmation of their faith in thee, behold thy miracles, and see the mighty works which thou performest here: For this retirement seems not at all to suit the great pretensions thou art making to a public and extraordinary character; as it is well known that no man will choose to act any remarkable thing in secret, that is himself desirous, like thee, to be publicly known and talked of[c]: if, therefore thou art really the promised Messiah, and performest these things, which we so often see at home, by a Divine commission, go up to Jerusalem, and there manifest thyself to the great men of the world, and appear in places of the most public concourse; and thou canst not have a better opportunity of doing it, than at this celebrated feast, which brings together so many, not only from the land of Israel, but from neighbouring countries. This they said, not out of any real friendship and respect, but

4 For there is no man that doeth any thing in secret, and he himself seeketh to be known openly: if thou do these things, shew thyself to the world.

4

5 For neither did his

5

a After these things, &c.] Those that I have mentioned here are the last which had been recorded by John. See a more particular account of them, sect. lxxvii—lxxxii.

b He would not walk in Judea.] This may be an intimation, either that he was not at Jerusalem the preceding passover, or at least made no public appearance or long abode there. I am inclined to think the former was the case.—Undoubtedly, his omission of a journey thither, at some of the great feasts, might be vindicated by his extraordinary character, and those intimations he might have from his heavenly Father, of being dispensed with, for reasons not particularly known to us, who have no concern with them. See note b, sect. lxxxiii. p. 438.

c That is himself desirous to be publicly known and talked of.] This seems to be a very invidious and groundless insinuation, as if he was actuated by ostentatious views; the contrary to which appeared so evidently in the whole of his conduct, that nothing but base envy could suggest such a charge.

d Neither

SECT. XCVIII.

but to make farther trial of him, and in some measure to upbraid him with those precautions which he thought proper to observe; for, notwithstanding all the evidences he had given of his Divine mission, yet neither did his brethren and kindred themselves believe in him, when they saw that he took no such method to raise himself and his family, as they thought inseparable from the character of the Messiah, whenever he should appear[d].

his brethren believe in him.

[g]John VII. 5.

6 Then Jesus said unto them, My time either to manifest myself or to go up to Jerusalem, is not yet come; but your time is always ready, and such a circumstance in your case is comparatively of very little importance. You have no reason to fear any injury or assault, as the world cannot hate you[e], because it is on principles of carnal wisdom that you act, and so have nothing in your conduct that may draw upon you any particular opposition; but me it hates, not on account of any ill action which I have committed, but because, from a zeal for truth, and a desire of its reformation, I bear my testimony concerning it, that its deeds are evil. Do you therefore go up to this feast, whenever you please, without waiting for me: and acquiesce in what I now tell you, that I do not as [yet] go up to this feast[f]; for that which I judge my most convenient time of doing it, is not yet fully come, nor do I need to 6 Then Jesus said unto them, My time is not yet come: but your time is alway ready.

7 The world cannot hate you, but me it hateth, because I testify of it, that the works thereof are evil.

8 Go ye up unto this feast: I go not up yet unto this feast, for my time is not yet full come.

d Neither did his brethren believe in him, &c.] It is astonishing that these near relations of Christ, who must have had so many opportunities of seeing the glories both of his character and miracles (which last they here expressly acknowledge) should continue in unbelief. But they unhappily laid it down as a first principle, that the Messiah must be a temporal Prince; and finding this mark of his mission wanting, and seeing (more strongly than others, not so intimately conversant with him, could do) his aversion to any such scheme, they would yield to no other proofs; and are, I fear, on the fatal list of those who perished, as thousands now do, by opposing hypothesis to fact. See Dr. Sykes on the Truth of Christianity, p. 128.

e The world cannot hate you.] These words, gentle as they may appear, contain a most awful insinuation, that these his kinsmen were persons governed entirely by carnal views, and therefore destitute of the love of God, and all well-grounded hope from him.

f I do not yet go up to this feast.] The reader may observe that I enclose the word [yet] which answers to οὔπω in the original, in crotchets; and the reason is, because I do indeed doubt, whether it was in the oldest copies. And this doubt arises, not merely from Porphyry's objecting against this as a falsehood (for frequent experience has taught us how little the enemies of Christianity are to be trusted in their representations of scripture,) but from observing that Jerom, and the other most ancient fathers, who reply to that objection, do not found their answer on his citing the passage wrong, but as they justly might, on the intimation our Lord gave of his intending shortly to go to the feast, in that expression. My time is not yet fully come.—It is a glorious testimony to the unblemished integrity of our Lord's character, that so cunning and inveterate an enemy was forced to have recourse to such mean and ridiculous methods of aspersing it. See Dr. Mill on this text, and Cleric. de Arte Critica, part. iii. p. 232.

g He

to be directed by you in my conduct on such occasions as these. SECT. XCVII.

9 When he had said these words unto them, he abode still in Galilee.

Now when he had said these things unto them he left them to go up alone, while he continued [still] in Galilee for a few days longer. But John VII. 9.

10 But when his brethren were gone up, then went he also up unto the feast, not openly, but as it were in secret.

when his brethren or kindred were gone up, then 10 he also himself went up to the feast[g], not publicly with a train of attendants, as he had often done[h], but as it were in secret, with as much privacy as he could.

11 Then the Jews sought him at the feast, and said, Where is he?

The Jews therefore, not seeing him appear as 11 usual, sought for him at the beginning of the feast, and said, What is become of Jesus, and where is he? or what can have prevented his coming up to the feast[i]?

12 And there was much murmuring among the people concerning him: for some said, He is a good man; others said, Nay, but he deceiveth the people.

And there was, in the mean time, a great 12 murmuring among the people concerning him; for some said (as they had, from the whole tenor of his life, the utmost reason to conclude) Surely[k] he is an eminently pious and a good man: but others, under the force of strong prejudices, suspected the worst, and said, Nay, that cannot be, but he certainly seduces the ignorant populace, however he comes by this power of doing it; and the wisest part of mankind must see that he will undoubtedly at last draw his followers into ruin, as some other impostors have lately done. (See Acts v. 36, 37.) Thus they privately debated 13 Howbeit, no man spake openly of him, for fear of the Jews.

13 the matter; howbeit, no one, that thought favourably of him, spoke his mind with freedom concerning him[l], for fear of the rulers among the Jews, who were jealous of his growing fame, and looked with a very malignant eye on all who took any peculiar notice of Jesus.

IMPROVE-

g He also went up to the feast.] Our Lord might know of some circumstance of particular danger, which might have rendered his going up at the usual time, and in company with his brethren, unsafe, and therefore improper.

h Not publicly with a train of attendants, &c.] I look on this as a most certain argument that the story in Luke ix. 51—56, cannot (as most commentators suppose) relate to this journey; since it is so evident he was then attended with a numerous train of followers. Compare note a, sect. xcvii.

i Where is he? or what can have prevented his coming up to the feast?] If our Lord had absented himself from the two preceding feasts (which perhaps the expostulations of his brethren, ver. 3, 4, may imply) there was yet an obvious reason for the surprise which this question expresses; or undoubtedly our Lord used generally to attend on these occasions. See p. 458. sect. lxxxiii. note b.

k Surely.] It is possible, as our translators have supposed, that the word ὅτι here may be only an expletive; but to me it seems probable that it may not improperly be rendered surely, or truly, which is accordingly the sense that I have sometimes given it.—We should not, I think, unnecessarily conclude a word to be quite insignificant in any writer of credit and character, especially in the sacred penmen.

l No one, that thought favourably of him, &c.] The reason afterwards given renders such a restriction absolutely necessary. Those that thought contemptibly of Christ might have spoken their minds as freely as they pleased.

IMPROVEMENT.

SECT. XCVIII. Ver. 5. We see how little the greatest external advantages can do without the Divine blessing, when some of the nearest relations of Christ himself, by whom he had been most intimately known, were not prevailed upon to believe in him. Who then can wonder if some remain incorrigible in the most regular and pious families? How much more valuable is the union to him, which is founded on a cordial and obedient faith, than that which arose from the bands of nature? and how cautiously should we watch against those carnal prejudices, by which even the brethren of Christ were alienated from him?

1, 8 Our Lord, we see, used a prudent care to avoid persecution and danger, till his time was fully come; and it is our duty to endeavour, by all wise and upright precautions, to secure and preserve ourselves, that we may have opportunities for farther service.

In the course of such service we must expect, especially if we appear under a public character, to meet with a variety of cen- 12 sures; but let us remember that Jesus himself went through evil report and good report; by some applauded as a good man, but by others, and those the greater part of his countrymen, condemned as deceiving the people. Let us learn of Christ patiently to endure such injurious treatment; and endeavour to behave ourselves so, that we may have a testimony in the consciences of men, and in the presence of God, that, after the example of our great Master, in simplicity and godly sincerity, not with fleshly wisdom, but by the Grace of God, we have our conversation in the world; (2 Cor. i. 12.) Then will our names be had in remembrance, and the honour and reward of our faithful obedience continued, when the memories of those that reviled us are perished with them.

SECT. XCIX.

Christ, going up privately to Jerusalem at the feast of tabernacles, vindicates his conduct, and farther urges the proofs of his Divine mission. John VII. 14—24.

JOHN VII. 14.

SECT. XCIX. John VII. 14. THUS were the Jews divided in their sentiments about our blessed Lord, and though they eagerly inquired after him, they knew not where to find him: but now in the midst of the feast of tabernacles, about the third or fourth day,

JOHN VII. 14. NOW about the midst of the feast, Jesus went went up into the temple, and taught.

15 And the Jews marvelled, saying, How knoweth this man letters, having never learned?

16 Jesus answered them, and said, My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me.

17 If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.

18 He that speaketh of himself, seeketh his own glory: but he that seeketh day, Jesus went up to Jerusalem and entered publicly into the temple, and taught the people, who were in vast multitudes assembled there. And the Jews who heard him, were amazed, saying, How does this man understand letters[a]? or how comes he to be so well acquainted with sacred literature, as to be able thus to expound the scriptures, and to apply himself to us with such gracefulness and propriety, having never learned these arts of address at any place of public education? SECT. XCIX. John VII. 15.

Jesus answered them, and said, There is no such reason why you should wonder at this; for my doctrine, or that which I now teach you, is not mine own invention, or what I have learnt by any common method of inquiry; but it is entirely his that sent me, and I learned it by immediate inspiration from him. And if you desire rightly to enter into the evidences of it, you must make it your great care to maintain an honest and religious temper; for if any one be resolutely determined to observe the dictates of my heavenly Father, and to do his will[b], though ever so contrary to the impulse of a corrupt nature, he shall then quickly understand, whether my doctrine be of God, or whether I speak it of myself; for the evidence is plain to an honest mind, and the correspondence which such a truly good man will find between the whole system of my doctrine and his own inward experience, will be unto him instead of a thousand speculative arguments. In the mean time you might observe something, even in the very manner of my teaching, sufficient to convince you that I am no impostor: for he that, in such a circumstance, and with such pretensions, speaks of himself, without any Divine commission, will govern himself a How does this man understand letters?] I see no reason to believe that our Lord adorned his discourses with quotations from, or references to, the writers that were then most celebrated for their learning, or shewed any extraordinary acquisitions in history, antiquities, &c. The evangelists have given us no specimen of this kind; and it is certain that foreign literature was then in great contempt among the Jews. The words undoubtedly refer to our Lord's great acquaintance with the scriptures, and the judicious and masterly manner in which he taught the people out of them, with far greater majesty and nobler eloquence than the scribes could attain to by a learned education.—Compare Mark i. 22, and Mat. vii. 29, p. 240, note g.

16 17 18

b Be determined to do his will.] This seems to be the import of those words, Θελη το θελημα αυτου ποιειν. (See sect. xxii. note a, p. 126.)—This important passage seems an express declaration that every upright man, to whom the gospel is proposed, will see and own the evidence of its Divine authority; which indeed might reasonably have been concluded from the awful judgment pronounced on those, who presume to reject it.

SECT. XCIX.

himself by secular views; and a sagacious observer will soon see that he is seeking his own glory and interest, even under the most self-denying forms: but he that in the whole of his conduct shews that he seeks the glory of God, as of him that he declares to have sent him, gives great reason to believe that he is true and sincere in that declaration, and that there is no unrighteousness or imposture in him[c].

John VII. 18. seeketh his glory that sent him, the same is true, and no unrighteousness is in him.

19 But your character is the very reverse of this, and you cannot but know it in your own conscience: for let me upon this occasion call you to reflect on your own conduct, and appeal to that: hath not Moses given you the law, and do you not eagerly contend for its Divine original? and yet none of you observes the law, which he has given you. If you deny the charge, let me remind you of that grand precept, "Thou shalt not kill," and then ask you, Wherefore do you go about to kill me, though an innocent and upright person, who am come to bring you a most important message from God?

19 Did not Moses give you the law, and yet none of you keepeth the law? Why go ye about to kill me?

20 This Jesus said with reference to what he knew to be the secret design of some of his hearers, who were even then plotting his destruction; but the multitude, who were not aware of it, ignorantly and rudely answered and said, Surely thou art possessed, and distracted[d], to talk thus; dost thou not safely travel from place to place, and appear in our most public assemblies, even here at Jerusalem, and who goes about or desires to kill thee?

20 The people answered and said, Thou hast a devil: who goeth about to kill thee?

21 Jesus, referring to the design which he knew some of them had of renewing their prosecution against him as a sabbath-breaker, because he had commanded the disabled man at the pool of Bethesda to carry his bed on that day (compare John. v. 16. p 255), answered in the gentlest manner, and said unto them, I have some time ago

21 Jesus answered and said unto them, I have done one work, and ye all marvel.

c No unrighteousness or imposture in him.] The word ἀδικια, in this opposition to ἀληθης, must signify imposture. Yet I think it the fairest way to translate the original words in all their extent, and content myself with suggesting in the paraphrase those limitations, which the particular connection requires.

d Thou art possessed, and distracted.] So some of them express it, John x. 20, He hath a devil, and is mad: which plainly shews (as many have observed) that they thought some of the worst kind and degrees of lunacies proceeded from the agency of some demon: as many considerable Greek writers plainly did (See Bos, Exercit. p. 41—43.) But it can never be argued from hence, that possession and lunacy are universally synonimous terms. When joined together they seem to signify different things; the former being put for the cause, and the latter for the effect.

e I have

SECT. XCIX.

John VII. 22.

ago performed one remarkable work[e], and you all, to this very day, wonder on account of it[f], that I should order the man I cured to carry his couch on the sabbath-day: Yet a little reflection might convince you that your cavil is very unreasonable, even on your own principles: for Moses gave you a precept, which required circumcision, (not that it is originally of Moses his institution, but had been formerly established by the observation of Abraham, and of the other fathers of our nation, many ages before Moses was born, which therefore could not properly be altered by him[g];) and you scruple not to circumcise a man-child on the sabbath-day, if it happen to be the eighth from his birth. If [then] to prevent the violation of Moses his law by deferring this sacred rite, you acknowledge it fit, that a man should receive circumcision on the sabbath itself; [why] are you incensed against me, that, by speaking a word, I have cured a man, who was entirely disabled[h], on the sabbath; as if it was a more servile work to heal than to wound? or how do you imagine that I have not power, when I have thus healed him, to manifest the perfection of the cure, by commanding him

22 Moses therefore gave unto you circumcision, (not because it is of Moses, but of the fathers,) and ye on the sabbath-day circumcise a man.

23 If a man on the sabbath-day receive circumcision, that the law of Moses should not be broken; are ye angry at me, because I have made a man every whit whole on the sabbath-day?

e I have some time ago performed one remarkable work.] It is plain the miracle here referred to was wrought a year and a half before this feast. Compare sect. xlvi. note a, p. 250.

f And you all wonder on account of it.] I here follow Theophylact and Beza in joining the words διὰ τοῦτο to the end of this verse, because it is certain that in their usual signification they cannot properly introduce the next; and John xix. 11, (sect. clxxxviii.) may be an instance of the like kind.—The Prussian translators render it, Because Moses gave you circumcision, &c. and the learned Elsner inclines to this version: (Elsner, Observ. Vol. I. p. 314, 315.) But though I am sensible ὅτι may sometimes signify because (see Gen. xxxvi. 26. Numb. x. 31. and xiv. 43, Septuag. and Heb.) I cannot find διὰ τοῦτο ever so used; and I think, if it be retained at the beginning of the next verse, it should be rendered, As to this matter; which sense it may perhaps have in Mat. xiii. 52. xviii. 23. and in a few other places; and so Grotius takes it here. See Dr. Whitby on this place.

g Not that it is originally of Moses, &c.] An excellent person, justly celebrated in the learned world, has lately suggested to me a thought on these words (which I have not met with elsewhere, but have briefly hinted in the paraphrase) as to the reason why our Lord makes this obvious remark, that circumcision was older than the time of Moses. Had Moses instituted it he would probably have ordered it so as to make it quadrate with his law relating to the strict rest of the sabbath; but finding it instituted by a previous covenant, which his law could not disannul, (see Gal. iii. 17.) he left it still on the same footing. This argument will indeed infer that the strict sabbatical rest was not observed in the patriarchal age; but yet it might be a day of extraordinary devotion, which I apprehend to be proved from Gen. ii. 3.

h I have cured a man entirely.] Our translation loses much of the emphasis: the words ολον ανθρωπον υγη εποιησα literally signify, I have healed, or made sound, a whole man. But the ambiguity in our English word whole rendered such a version very improper. I therefore thought it necessary a little to vary the expression, but the sense is altogether the same.—But, since I published this, a very accurate critic, both in the Greek and English language, has suggested another version, yet more literal than this, or any of the rest: I have made a man sound throughout.

i That

SECT. XCIX.

John VII. 24.

him to carry his couch[i]? Judge not according to these prejudices, which the meanness of my appearance tends to produce; but judge righteous and equitable judgment; which if you do, you must necessarily acknowledge my Divine mission to be as evident and certain as that of Moses himself, to whose precepts you profess so great a regard.

24 Judge not according to the appearance, but judge righteous judgment.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. 16, 18 LET us learn of our meek and humble Master to refer the honour of all we know and do to Divine instruction communicated to us, and Divine grace working in and by us; that, seeking the glory of God, we may have the surest evidence, that we are truly his. Let us on all occasions remember that integrity and uprightness will be a certain security to us against dangerous mistakes in matters of religion. If the light we already have, be faithfully improved, we may humbly hope that more will be given in; nor 17 shall we then fail of convincing evidence, that the gospel-doctrine is of God; for the experience of its power on our hearts will check our passions, and destroy the prejudices, that would prevent the truth from taking place in our minds.

Let us receive his doctrine as Divine, and hearken unto Christ as sent of God; and whatsoever be the vile reproaches we may meet with from a wicked world, and the malicious designs it may form against us, let us be resolute and stedfast in the practice of the 19 duties he has taught us, that with well-doing we may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men. (1 Peter ii. 15.)

Our Lord was reviled as a demoniac and a lunatic: but instead 20 of rendering railing for railing, he replied in the words of gentleness and sobriety. So let us endeavour to conquer the rudeness of those attacks we may meet with in his cause; that we may, if 21--23 possible, remove the prejudices so fatal to those that entertain them, and form men to that equitable and impartial judgment, 24 which would soon turn all their cavils against Christ into admiration, praise and obedience.

SECT.

[i] That I have not power, when I have thus healed him, &c.] So our Lord himself states the argument in a case nearly resembling this, (Mat. ix. 5, 6, p. 248.) and might probably here intend to insinuate it, though in an oblique manner.

a He

SECT. C.

The Jews pass a variety of censures on Christ; and the sanhedrim, alarmed by the regard which some expressed towards him, send officers to seize him; but Christ openly declares that their purposes should not immediately take effect. John VII. 25—30.

John VII. 25. THEN said some of them of Jerusalem, Is not this he whom they seek to kill?

26 But lo, he speaketh boldly, and they say nothing unto him: Do the rulers know indeed, that this is the very Christ?

27 Howbeit, we know this man whence he is: but when Christ cometh, no man knoweth whence he is.

28 Then cried Jesus in the temple as he taught, saying, Ye both know me, and ye know whence I am; and

John VII. 25.

THEN, while our Lord was thus discoursing at the feast of tabernacles, some of the inhabitants of Jerusalem, who knew more of the designs of the sanhedrim than others who had spoken before (ver. 20.) said, Is not this he whom they seek an opportunity to put to death? But behold, he is not only come up hither to the feast, but speaks openly and freely in the very temple itself; and they are so far from seizing him, that they do not so much as say any thing to prohibit him: do the rulers then indeed know they were mistaken in their former censures, and are they now persuaded in their consciences that this is really the Messiah? But we have sufficient reason to conclude this cannot be the case; for many of us know this man, from whence he is, and are sure that he was born of Joseph's wife: whereas, when the Messiah comes, no man will thus know from whence he is; for he is to be born in a miraculous way of a virgin [a].

Then Jesus, though they said this in a private manner to each other, and imagined that he could not have heard them, as he was teaching in the temple, and at some distance from them, cried out with a louder voice than before, and said, Do ye indeed both know me, and know from whence I am [b]? Alas, it is great rashness and folly for you to assert it; and whatever you may object,

SECT. C. John VII. 25. 26 27 28

[a] He is to be born in a miraculous way of a virgin.] It is evident from Mat. ii. 4, 5, that the Jews apprehended the Messiah was to be born at Bethlehem; and from a multitude of other places, that they knew he was to be a descendant of David; (compare ver. 42.) I know not how therefore to account for their saying that, when Christ came, no man would know whence he is, but by supposing, with Archbishop Tillotson, (Vol. II. p. 454.) that the words refer to an expectation they had that he would be born of a virgin.—As for the notion which Justin Martyr mentions, that the Messiah should for a while be hid, it seems more modern; and they must put a strange interpretation on Isa. liii. 8. Mic. v. 2. and Psal. cx. 4. to draw any such consequence from them, as Dr. Whitby and Mr. L'Enfant suppose they did.

[b] Do you both know me, and know whence I am?] So Bishop Chandler would render these words (see his Defence, p. 334); and it seems necessary, in order to vindicate the propriety, and indeed the veracity, of the reply; unless with Beza and Camerarius we suppose it to be spoken ironically.

SECT. c.

John VII. 28.

object, yet, it is most certain, that I am not come of myself, with vain and false pretences to a Divine mission, nor do I want any proper evidences of it; but he who sent me is true to all his promises and predictions[c], whom nevertheless, with and I am not come of myself, but he that sent me is true, whom ye know not.

29 all your boasts, ye know not. But I know him in a most intimate manner; for I am sprung from him[d] by a mysterious and Divine generation, in consequence of which I am infinitely better acquainted with him than you, or any mere creatures, can be; and he hath sent me among you, as his Ambassador, on an errand of the highest importance.

29 But I know him, for I am from him, and he hath sent me.

30 Then they were so provoked by this claim of a Divine original, and by the charge advanced against them, as ignorant of that God, in whom they gloried as so peculiarly their own, that they sought an opportunity to seize him; yet God impressed their minds in such a manner, that no one of them would be the first that laid hands on him: and they were kept under this visible restraint, because his appointed hour of suffering was not yet come, but he had farther services in life to dispatch, before he was delivered to them.

30 Then they sought to take him: but no man laid hands on him, because his hour was not yet come.

31 And many of the people were so much affected with these discourses, that they secretly believed on him, and said to each other, When the Messiah comes, will it be possible he should do greater miracles than these which this [Jesus] has done here at Jerusalem, and over the whole country?

31 And many of the people believed on him, and said, When Christ cometh, will he do more miracles than these which this man hath done?

32 This, however, could not be so privately said, but some information of it was sent to the Pharisees, who, when they heard that the people whispered such things concerning him, were greatly displeased, and alarmed at it: and the Pharisees and the other members of the grand sanhedrim, particularly the chief priests, among whom there were many Sadducees (see Acts iv. 1), sent officers from the chamber in which they held their council[e], into the adjacent court of the 32 The Pharisees heard, that the people murmured such things concerning him: and the Pharisees and the chief priests sent officers to take him.

c Is true to all his promises and predictions.] There seems a reference here to the accomplishment of some of the prophecies already fulfilled in him, together with a cheerful faith in what was yet to come.

d I am from him.] I should have chosen to render παρ' αὐτοῦ, with him, as I did in the first edition to avoid a tautology; but I am sensible on farther reflection, that I want a sufficient authority for such a version. I therefore acquiesce in our own: but I see no occasion to vary any thing in the paraphrase, since in either sense it suggests so strong a reason for believing that Christ had the most intimate knowledge of the Father.

e From the chamber in which they held their council.] See sect. xxiv. note f, p. 138.

f Will the temple, to seize him, as he preached there to the multitude. SECT. C.

53 Then said Jesus unto them, Yet a little while am I with you, and then I go unto him that sent me.

Then Jesus said to them, as soon as they appeared, I know the design on which some of you are come, but God will not permit you immediately to execute it; for yet a little while longer I am to continue with you, and [then] I am to go again to him that sent me. And when I am returned to him, I shall be entirely out of your reach; so that you shall seek me, and wish that you had me in your power again, but you shall not find me, and where I am, or where I shall then, and always be, you cannot possibly come: which he said, referring to his speedy exaltation to the heavenly world, and to the impotent malice with which they should then oppose his triumphant cause. John VII. 33. 34

54 Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come.

35 Then said the Jews among themselves, Whither will he go, that we shall not find him? will he go unto the dispersed among the Gentiles, and teach the Gentiles?

But he was not understood in that sense; the Jews therefore who were present said among themselves, Whither he is about to go, that we shall not find him? Will he leave Judea, and go to the remainders of the holy seed, who are dispersed among the Greeks and other nations? and will he teach them, or the Greeks themselves[t], even the idolatrous Gentiles, after his being thus rejected by his own nation at home and abroad? 35

36 What manner of saying is this that he said, Ye shall seek me, and shall not find me: and where I am, thither ye cannot come?

What [sort of] saying is this which he has now spoken, You shall seek me, and shall not find me; and where I am, you cannot possibly come? Thus they continued cavilling at his words; yet were so overawed by his presence, that they did not dare to offer him any violence, notwithstanding the commission with which some of them came. 36

IMPROVEMENT.

So confident is error in its own decisions, and so vain in its self-applauses! These unhappy people, every way mistaken, censure 26,27

[t] Will he go to the dispersed among the Greeks, and teach the Greeks?] By Greeks we are here to understand idolatrous Gentiles, and not Hellenists, or Jews that used the Greek language; for these were the dispersed among them. There is therefore, I think, a sting in these words beyond what commentators have observed. They insinuate, that if he was to go into foreign countries, to address himself to the Jews there, who might be supposed not so well instructed as those that lived in Judea and at Jerusalem, he would not be able to make any proselytes, even among these; but would be constrained to apply himself to the ignorant and stupid Gentiles, to seek disciples among them: which to be sure appeared to these haughty scorners one of the most infamous circumstances that could be imagined, and most incompatible with the character of the true Messiah.

SECT. C. censure their rulers for a supposed credulity, in seeming, as it were, to acquiesce in Christ's claim to be the Messiah; and imagined themselves, no doubt, exceeding wise in rejecting him, while they blindly took it for granted he was the son of Joseph; and had not patience to wait for the authentic story of his miraculous conception. Surely men had need to look well to the force of those arguments, on which they venture their souls by rejecting the gospel.

John VII. 26, 27.

28 Our Lord answered their secret reasoning, in a manner which might justly have alarmed them, charging them with ignorance of that God, whom they pretended to know, and whom, with a presumptuous confidence, they claimed as theirs. And oh, that it may not be found at last, that many who have appeared most confident of their interest in God, neither know him, nor are known by him!

29 The blessed Jesus, who is the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his Person, has the completest knowledge of the Father. May we be so wise and happy as to seek instructions from him, that the eyes of our understandings may be enlightened, and the temper of our hearts proportionably regulated, by all the discoveries of the Divine Being which he makes!

How obstinate and desperately hardened were the hearts of those, who, notwithstanding all the proofs that Jesus gave of his 30, 32 Divine mission, were yet so far from hearkening to him, as to seek opportunities to destroy him! So dangerous and fatal is the prevalence of error in such as like not to retain God in their knowledge, that they will even venture on the greatest wickedness, when once they are given over to a reprobate mind, (Rom. i. 28.) —May God preserve us from a spirit of delusion, and fill us with that wisdom, that we may know the things belonging to our peace; and, being ready to receive the truth in the love of it, may we acknowledge and attend to Christ as sent of God!

34 May we learn this heavenly wisdom in time, since the hour is approaching, when Christ will be sought in vain, and all correspondence between him and sinners will be finally cut off! Where he is, they cannot then come; and to be excluded from him will at length appear insupportable misery, even to those, who, with proud folly and fatal self-sufficiency, are now most ready to say unto him, Depart from us, for we desire not the knowledge of thee or thy ways. (Job xxi. 14.)

SECT.

SECT. CI.

Christ invites his hearers to come and imbibe the spirit from him; and by these and other gracious discourses disarms the resolution of the officers, who return to the sanhedrim without him; where a short debate arises between Nicodemus and his brethren. John VII. 37, to the end.

John VII. 37.

IN the last day, that great day of the feast, Jesus stood and cried, saying, If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink.

John VII. 37.

SECT. CI.

SUCH were the discourses, which our Lord made to the people in the presence of those, who were sent by the sanhedrim to seize him: and this happened in the eighth and last day, that great [day] of the feast of tabernacles, when, according to the institution of Moses (Lev. xxiii. 34, 36; Numb. xxix. 35), there was to be an holy convocation, attended with some extraordinary sacrifices. Now on this day, when it was customary for the priests to surround the altar with their palm-branches, and to pour out water in the temple, as an expression of the general desire of the Messiah's appearance, and the pouring forth of the Spirit by him [a], Jesus stood on an eminence, that he might be the better heard and seen, and proclaimed with a loud voice, saying, If any man thirst, that is, if he ardently desire true happiness, and long for the blessings promised under the administration of the Messiah, let him come unto me by faith, and drink his fill; for I am most ready freely to communicate every needful blessing, and particularly those supplies of the Spirit, which you profess so earnestly to desire. (Compare Isa. lv. 1.) For he that truly believeth on me, as the scripture hath in many places said and promised [b], shall receive those supplies

John VII. 37.

38 He that believeth on me, as the scripture

38

a When it was customary for the priests to pour out water, &c.] That there was a custom on this day of drawing water out of the fountain of Siloam, and pouring it out before the Lord in the temple at the time of evening sacrifice, and that the priest who did it stood on some eminence, the Jewish rabbies unanimously assure us. (See Reland's Antiq. Heb. part iv. cap. 6, § 6.) Some think it was intended to supplicate the former rain: but the context inclines me much rather to believe those Jewish writers produced by Dr. Lightfoot (in his Hor. Heb. on this place), who say, it was meant as a way of invoking the Divine influences of the blessed Spirit, and as a mark of their desire of having it poured out upon them. See Tremellius's excellent note on this text.

b As the scripture hath in many places said and promised.] Chrysostom, and after him many other eminent critics, refer this to the former clause, and understand it as if he had said, He that hath that faith in me which the scripture requires: (see Castalio, Zegerus, Jac. Cappellus, in loc.) And thus they avoid the difficulty which arises from our not finding the following words in scripture.—But it seems much more natural, with Grotius, to suppose that here is a general reference to the several prophecies which supplies in so great an abundance, that he shall not only be refreshed himself, but out of his belly or from within him [c], shall flow vital streams, and, as it were, rivers of living water, for the refreshment and comfort of others.

SECT. CI.

scripture hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water.

John VII. 38.

39 Now this, which was true in a more extensive sense, he peculiarly spake of the Spirit [d], which they who believe on him should receive, and which some of them should also be enabled to communicate to others. But it was not then generally understood: for the Holy Spirit was not yet [given] in that extraordinary manner, because Jesus was not yet glorified; and it was the wise and gracious purpose of God to send him down on the church, after the ascension of Jesus, as a triumphant Conqueror, into his Father's presence. (See Eph. iv. 7—12. John xvi. 7. and Acts ii. 33.)

39 (But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive; for the Holy Ghost was not yet given, because that Jesus was not yet glorified.)

40 Then many of the people, when they heard this gracious saying, which was indeed a more free declaration and profession than he commonly made, said, Surely this [man] is at least a prophet [e], and probably comes to introduce the Messiah. And others said, Nay, this is certainly the Messiah himself: but, in opposition to this, some objected, and said, shall the Messiah, when he appears, come out of Galilee, as we know this Jesus of Nazareth does? Hath not the scripture said, expressly, That the Messiah is to come from the seed of David? and hath it not also added, that he is to arise from the town of Bethlehem Judah, where David was [born,] and which was the ancient seat of his family? (Compare Isa. xi. 1. and Mic. v. 2.) And thus they were divided in their sentiments, and there was 40 Many of the people therefore, when they heard this saying, said, Of a truth this is the prophet.

41 Others said, This is the Christ, But some said, Shall Christ come out of Galilee?

42 Hath not the scripture said, That Christ cometh of the seed of David, and out of the town of Bethlehem, where David was?

43 So there was a division which refer to the effusion of the Spirit by the Messiah under the similitude of pouring out water; and accordingly I have paraphrased the words in that view of the connection. See Isa. lii. 15; xliv. 3; lviii. 11; and Joel ii. 28.

c Out of his belly, or from within him.] The belly is frequently put for the mind or heart. Compare Job xv. 35; xx. 20; and Prov. xx. 27, 30.—It sometimes signifies, in a more general way, the inward part of a thing (1 Kings vii. 20; Mat. xii. 40), and may perhaps have some allusion here to the prominency of that capacious golden vase from which the water was now poured out in a large stream.

d This he spake of the spirit.] It is strange that, when the evangelist has thus plainly commented on these words of Christ, a late eminent writer should venture to advance a different interpretation, and explain them as spoken of the doctrine of the gospel.

e Surely this man is a prophet.] As the article is prefixed, it might seem natural to render it the prophet, were it not afterwards distinguished from the Christ. On this account I conclude that here, as also John i. 21. ὁ προφήτης, signifies only a prophet, that is, one of the ancient prophets revived. See sect. xx. note c, p. 119.

division among the people because of him.

was a warm dissension [f] among the people on his account. SECT. CI.

44 And some of them would have taken him; but no man laid hands on him.

And the officers also, who had been sent to apprehend him, were at a loss what they should do, and some of them would have seized him; but, struck with the regard which several of the people expressed towards him, and above all, impressed by the dignity and sweetness of his discourses, and the secret hand of heaven, which wrought for his deliverance, they were so far restrained, that no man laid hands on him. John VII. 44.

45 Then came the officers to the chief priests and Pharisees; and they said unto them, Why have ye not brought him?

Then the officers came back to the chief priests and the Pharisees, without accomplishing the purpose for which they were sent: and when the sanhedrim perceived they had not executed their commission, they said unto them, Why have ye not brought him with you as your prisoner, according to the orders you received from us? 45

46 The officers answered, Never man spake like this man.

The officers replied, we could not find in our hearts to attempt it; for surely no man living ever spake in so engaging and irresistible a manner as this man doth; [g] and had you heard him yourselves it must have disarmed your resentment against him. 46

47 Then answered them the Pharisees, Are ye also deceived?

Then the Pharisees, far from being softened by the account they gave them, answered them in a scornful and upbraiding way, What, are you also deceived by his artful and popular address? Surely you cannot be so weak as to be thus infatuated! 47

48 Have any of the rulers, or of the Pharisees, believed on him?

Pray consider the conduct of those who are most capable of judging of this point: have any of the rulers believed on him, or [any] of the Pharisees of a more private station [h]? Yet 48

you

[f] A warm dissension.] So I apprehend the word Σχισμα always signifies. And thus the word schism, which is just the same with an English termination,) expresses, not merely nor necessarily a separation from each other, but an angry debate, whether it be or be not attended with separation.

[g] No man ever spake as this man doth.] Plutarch mentions it as a memorable proof of the extraordinary eloquence of Mark Antony, when Marius sent soldiers to kill him, that when he began παραιτησθαι τον θανατον, to plead for his life, he disarmed their resolution, and melted them into tears, (Plutarch Vit. p. 431.) But these officers are thus vanquished merely by hearing Christ's gracious discourses to the people, which is a circumstance much more remarkable. They return in a kind of amaze, and, instead of seizing him as their prisoner, or making a laboured apology for their failure, only break out into a pathetic exclamation, that no man in the world ever spake like him. It is a reflection which I hope we often make as we read his discourses.

[h] Have any of the rulers believed on him, or any of the Pharisees?] I cannot think, with Grotius, that this is any intimation that, if there were any of the Great Council who had favourable thoughts of Jesus, they were the Sadducees. The interpretation of the paraphrase is much easier. There is no reason to believe any of the Sadducees were inclined to receive the gospel; and if the Pharisees had secretly suspected them of such an inclination, they would hardly have affronted them by such an insinuation in this grand assembly, considering the high rank in which many of that sect were.

[i] This

SECT. ci.

John VII. 49. you know these are most eminent for their acquaintance with religion, and are the most authentic interpreters of the sacred writings in which it is contained: But this wretched herd of people, who are so enchanted with him, know and regard not any thing of the true meaning of the law, and, it is easy to be seen, are cursed with a judicial blindness, and given up to the most absurd and fatal mistake [i].

49 But this people who knoweth not the law, are cursed.

50 Upon this, Nicodemus, whom we before have mentioned as the person who came to [Jesus] by night, (see John iii. 1. & seq. p. 141,) being both a ruler and a Pharisee, and sitting in the sanhedrim as one of them, took so much cou-

50 Nicodemus saith unto them, (he that came to Jesus by night being one of them,)

51 rage, that he said to them. Doth our law which you boast so much acquaintance with [k], judge and condemn any man before the magistrate appointed to execute it summon him into his presence, that he may hear from him what he hath to say in his own defence, and know from credible witnesses, what he hath done to deserve punishment? See Deut. xvii. 8—11. and xix. 15. & seq.)

51 Doth our law judge any man before it hear him, and know what he doth?

52 But they, without entering farther into the argument, answered him only by saying, in a slight and superficial manner, What art thou thyself also of Galilee, that thou favourest the pretences of this contemptible Galilean? Search a little farther into the matter, and thou wilt soon see the unreasonableness of doing it; for it is notorious, even to a proverb, that no prophet is raised up from Galilee [l] nor will God ever honour that contemptible country with such a production. And 52 They answered and said unto him, Art thou also of Galilee? Search, and look; for out of Galilee ariseth no prophet.

i This people who know not the law, are cursed.] I see no ground to think, with Grotius, that this refers to Deut. xxvii. 26, and is built on a supposition that the ignorance of the populace must always expose them to a curse, It rather intimates an apprehension that God had given them up to a spirit of fatal infatuation.—Instances of their contempt of the common people may be seen in Lightfoot, (Hor. Heb. in loc.) and Vitringa (Observ. Sacr. lib. iii. cap. 2, p. 498.

k Doth our law, which you boast so much acquaintance with.] Soft as these words seem, there is a severe sting in them and they in effect amount to a charge, that while they professed such a knowledge of the law, and zeal for it, they either knew not, or regarded not, some of its plainest precepts, and were even unmindful of those which, as they were a court of judicature, were their peculiar concern.

l No prophet is raised up from Galilee.] As it is plain that Jonah, and probable that Nahum also, was a Galilean, Sir Norton Knatchbull, and others, who imagine that these rulers could not be ignorant of that, suppose that προφήτης here signifies the Great Prophet, or Messiah. But probably, had this been their meaning, they would rather have quoted the text which mentions Bethlehem as the birth-place of the Messiah. The answer must therefore be acknowledged to be very mean and trifling; and the abrupt manner in which the assembly was broke up, seems to intimate their consciousness that it would not bear examination.

53 And every man went unto his own house.

And, having said this, they would not wait for a reply, but immediately broke up the court; and so every one went away to his own house. SECT. CI. John VII. 53.

IMPROVEMENT.

WITH what delight and thankfulness should we hear this gracious proclamation of Christ, which he now made in the temple, and a while after repeated from the throne of his glory! If any man thirst, let him come unto me, and drink; yea, whosoever will, let him take of the water of life freely; (Rev. xxii. 17.) Blessed Jesus, had we been allowed to have prescribed to thee a form of words, in which thy kind purposes towards us should have been expressed, what could we have invented more pathetic, more condescending, or more reviving!—May we thirst for the blessings of thy grace, and in the confidence of faith apply unto thee for them; and particularly for these communications of thy Spirit, which are so highly excellent and desirable, and indeed so necessary for us! Supply us with them, we entreat thee, in so rich an abundance, that we, in our different spheres, may supply others, and from us there may flow rivers of living water! Ver. 37, 39, 38

Well might such gracious words as these disarm the rage of enemies and persecutors. Let us add our testimony to theirs, and say, Never man spake as Jesus speaks. Let us hear him with calm and thankful attention, while his voice still sounds in his word. Happy are those that know the joyful sound! (Psal. lxxxix. 15.) The Pharisees, like deaf adders, stopped their ears against the voice of the Charmer; and, while they proudly censured the populace as a brutal herd, and gloried in their own superior wisdom, rejected the counsel of God; rashly judging without serious inquiry, and weakly borne down by vulgar senseless prejudices against names and places, which is all the senate of Israel opposes to the solid argument of Nicodemus! That good man, already considerably improved by his interview with Jesus, was undoubtedly confirmed in his adherence to him, by observing the methods of their opposition: and where magistrates arm their authority to overbear argument, they will probably, in the judgment of impartial men, produce a suspicion, at least, that they know their cause to be incapable of a rational defence. 46, 48, 49, 51, 52, 53

SECT. CII.

Christ, having spent the night in retirement, returns to the temple, where an adulteress is brought before him; but he avoids giving judgment in her case, and turns the consciences of his enemies on themselves. John VIII. 1—11.

JOHN VIII. 1.

SECT. cii.

THUS the Pharisees debated the case, and in such dissension their assembly broke up; but

John VIII. 1. Jesus, choosing to retire in the evening, that he might by secret converse with his heavenly Father, be animated to all the labours and dangers before him, went up to a mountain in the neighbourhood of Jerusalem, which lay to the east of the city, on the other side of the brook Cedron, and is well known by the name of the Mount of Olives, where he spent the night in meditation and prayer.

JOHN VIII. 1.

JESUS went unto the mount of Olives.

2 But, that his retirement might not break in upon the opportunity of public service, which the present concourse of people gave him, he returned to the temple early in the morning; and all the people who came to worship there before they returned to their respective habitations in the country (the feast being now ended) flocked around him to receive his instructions; and, such was his courage and zeal, notwithstanding the late conspiracy which had been formed against him, that, sitting down in one of the cloisters, he instructed them as freely, as he had ever done.

2 And early in the morning he came again into the temple; and all the people came unto him, and he sat down and taught them.

3 And, while he was engaged in this exercise, the scribes and Pharisees brought to him a woman who had just been taken in the commission of adultery[a], having been unhappily betrayed into it

3 And the scribes and Pharisees brought unto him a woman taken in adultery; and when a Brought to him a woman taken in adultery.] It is well known that this story is wanting in the Syriac version, as well as in the Alexandrian and Bodleian copies, and indeed in most of the oldest manuscripts; which engaged Beza to question, and Le Clerc, with many others, to reject its authority. But I acquiesce in the reasoning of the learned Dr. Mill, to whom I refer the reader for the arguments to prove it authentic; the critical examination of these matters lying quite out of the sphere of my present design. A mistaken apprehension that some circumstances in the story were indecent, and an excessive rigour with respect to those who had fallen into this truly detestable crime, might perhaps be the occasion of this omission, if it was not accidental, in some early copies. Erasmus conjectures, it might be added by St. John after some copies of his gospel had been taken; and Grotius, that some, who heard the story from the apostle's mouth, recorded it with the approbation of Papias and other eminent persons in the church. The notice that Eusebius (Eccles. Hist. lib. iii. cap. ult.) Jerom. (adv. Pelag. lib. ii. cap. 6.) and other ancient writers when they had set her in the midst, it among those intemperances, which too often attend public feasts; and, as the court of judicature, before whom she should have been tried, was not yet assembled, they took that opportunity of laying a snare for Jesus, by setting her before him, in the midst of the people who were attending his discourse. And, as if they were desirous of information from him, they craftily said unto him, Master, as thou professest thyself an extraordinary Teacher, we desire thou wouldest pronounce thy judgment on this case; here is a woman who was taken in the very act of adultery: Now Moses in the law commanded us, that such infamous women should be stoned[b], (Lev. xx. 10. and Deut. xx. 22.) but, as thou takest upon thee, either to supersede many of his precepts, or to interpret them in a very singular manner, we would be glad to hear thy determination in an affair of so great importance; what therefore dost thou say? This they said tempting him, that, which way soever he should determine, they might have an opportunity to accuse him; either to the Jewish rulers, if he acquitted such a criminal; or to the Romans, if he ventured, though on the authority of the law, to pronounce a capital sentence against her, which he had no authority from the Romans to do[c], and 4 They say unto him, Master, this woman was taken in adultery, in the very act:

5 Now Moses in the law commanded us, that such should be stoned: but what sayest thou?

6 This they said tempting him, that they might have to accuse him.—

writers have taken of the dubiousness of this passage, with a few other instances of the like nature, shews that critical exactness, with which they examined into the genuineness of the several parts of the New Testament, and so, on the whole, strengthens the evidence of Christianity, which (as I have shewn at large in the ninth of my Ten Sermons) is so inseparably connected with the genuineness and purity of the New Testament.

b Such women should be stoned.] If they spoke accurately, this must have been a woman who had been betrothed to a husband, and had been guilty of this infamous crime, before the marriage was completed; for such only are expressly condemned to be stoned. (Deut xxii. 22—24.) The Jewish writers tell us, that when (as in the case of other adulteries) only death in general was denounced, without specifying the particular kind of it, strangling was to be used. Custom indeed (as Grotius observes) might have introduced stoning in all these cases (compare Ezek. xvi. 38, 40.) yet that would not justify what they here say. But our Lord's Spirit was too noble to take the advantage of such a slip, if it was a mistake: he had a much greater view, and silenced them in a far more effectual manner.

c To accuse him—to the Romans, if he ventured, &c.] It is very evident, that the Jewish sanhedrim sat by licence from the Roman governor; and though they had a right to try capital causes, it was necessary (as it seems from passages elsewhere examined) that the sentence they passed, should be recognized and allowed by the Romans before it could be carried into execution. (See sect. clxxxvi. note c, on Matt. xxvii. 2. and sect. clxxxviii. note h, on John xix. 10.) For Christ therefore to have undertaken the decision of this case would, ipso facto, have rendered him obnoxious to the Romans, as well as to the sanhedrim: and had he condemned her, a new occasion of offence must have arisen, in consequence of that—to Pilate, if execution had been ordered without an application to him,—and to the Jews, if Christ had directed such an application to be made. So that the snare here was much the same with that afterwards laid for him (Mat. xxii. 17—22. sect. cliv.) in the question about the lawfulness of paying tribute.

SECT. cii.

and which the Jewish rulers themselves had at present no power to execute. (Compare John xviii. 31.)

John VIII. 6. But Jesus, stooping down, wrote something on the ground with his finger[d], choosing (as it were) to speak to them by that action, rather than by 7 words. But as they, thinking that they had him at a great advantage, continued asking him with greater importunity, he raised himself up, and, without replying directly to their demand, only said to them, Let him of you that is without sin, in this or any other respect, pursue the prosecution, and throw the first fatal stone at her, when she is condemned[e]; (compare Deut. xvii. 7.) thus prudently avoiding a decision of the case, and leading them to reflect on their own 8 guilt. And stooping down again, he wrote on the ground, as he had done before, and left them to their own reflections.

9 But having heard [his answer], and being by a secret energy, which went along with the word of Jesus, in a very awful and powerful manner, convicted in their consciences of their own personal and aggravated guilt, they were ashamed even to look each other in the face; and so went out one by one, beginning from the eldest[f], whose age —But Jesus stooped down, and with his finger wrote on the ground, as though he heard them not.

7 So when they continued asking him, he lift up himself, and said unto them, He that is without sin among you, let him first cast a stone at her.

8 And again he stooped down, and wrote on the ground.

9 And they which heard it, being convicted by their own conscience, went out one by one, beginning at the eldest, even unto the d Wrote on the ground with his finger] The following words, μη προσποιουμενος, as though he heard them not, or (as I would render them) as not regarding them, are wanting in the most valuable manuscripts. Dr. Mill therefore, I think, justly omits them, as several other printed editions of the Greek Testament do. Were they admitted, they would cut off most of the conjectures, which learned men have advanced as to what Christ wrote; a question which it is impossible for us to determine, and which we have no need at all to be solicitous about. I am inclined to think, there was a language in the action itself, either to intimate that these hypocritical Pharisees should be themselves (as the prophet expresses it, Jer. xvii. 13.) written in the earth, or that they were to attend to what was written: but I can determine nothing, and must say with a great critic on these words, Nescire velle, quæ magister optimus nescire nos vult, erudita inscitia est: "To be willing to continue ignorant of what our great Master has thought fit to conceal, is no inconsiderable part of Christian learning."

e Let him of you that is without sin, throw the first stone at her.] Le Clerc makes the supposed impropriety of this reply a farther argument against the genuineness of this text: since the law did not require the witnesses or executioners to be free from sin, in order to the efficacy of such a prosecution. But it may be answered, that our Lord's certain knowledge of what the effect would be, vindicated the wisdom of his putting the matter upon this issue, by which it is plain in fact he escaped their snare.

f Went out one by one, beginning from the eldest.] It is strange any should have interpreted this clause so rigorously, as to imagine that every particular person went out just according to his age. It seems only to intimate that those elders of the people, who had been most eager in the prosecution, appeared under the most sensible confusion, and were some of the first that left the assembly. And in this view it is very remarkable; especially considering that they were now in the presence of the multitude, before whom they would, no doubt, be desirous to keep up the strictest appearance of virtue, in order to maintain their influence over them.—Though (as Dr. Whitby shews, on ver. 7.) adultery prevailed much among the Jews about this time, the last: and Jesus was left alone, and the woman standing in the midst.

age and office tended to increase their shame and remorse; and the impression passed even to the last, or the youngest and meanest of them. And Jesus was left alone by all the accusers, and the woman standing in the midst of the crowd, with which he had been surrounded before she was brought in. SECT. CII. John VIII. 9.

10 When Jesus had lift up himself, and saw none but the woman, he said unto her, Woman, where are those thine accusers? hath no man condemned thee?

11 She said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I condemn thee; go, and sin no more.

And Jesus raising himself up, and seeing none of those who had been soliciting his judgment, but only the woman they had brought before him, said to her, Woman, where are those thine accusers? Has no man condemned thee, or is there none remaining to bear witness against thee? And she said, No man, Lord. And Jesus said unto her, Neither do I take upon me, at this time, and under this circumstance, judicially to condemn thee, though thy crime has been undoubtedly great: go thy way therefore, without any impediment from me; but, as the Messenger of God, and Friend of souls, I warn thee, that thou sin no more[g]; for such enormous practices as these, must subject thee to a severer judgment from God, than man can pronounce or inflict. 10 11

IMPROVEMENT.

THE devout retirements of Christ, and his early renewed labours, so often come in view, that, after having made some progress in his history, we are ready to pass them over as things of course. But let us remember, that in some degree they call upon us to go and do likewise; and will another day condemn those, who, while they call themselves his disciples, are given up to ease and luxury, and suffer every little amusement or sensual gratification to lead them into an omission of their duty to God and their fellow-creatures; an omission especially aggravated in those, whom he has appointed to be teachers of others, and who have therefore so many peculiar errands to the throne of grace, and Ver. 1, 2 time, yet I see no reason to conclude, that their conscience convicted every one of them of this particular crime.—Their partiality (as Dr. Lardner well observes) seems to appear in bringing only the woman, not the man, when the law condemned both. (Lard. Credib. part i. Vol. I. p. 79)

g Sin no more.] Elsner (Observ. Vol. I. p. 318), and Suicer, (Thesaur. Vol. I. p. 205), have shewn that the word ἁμαρτάνειν, to sin, is used by the most elegant Greek classics (as the correspondent word peccare is by the Latin) to signify the commission of adultery; which strongly intimates that even the light of nature taught many of the Heathens the exceeding sinfulness of it: which is the more worthy of notice, as not only the greatest of their men, but (according to their scandalous theology) the greatest of their gods too, gave it all the sanction it could have from example.

SECT. cii. and so many engagements in the morning to sow, or to prepare the seed of religious instruction, and in the evening not to with-hold their hand from dispensing it. (Eccles. xi. 6.)

John VIII. 3, 5 While Jesus is teaching, his enemies address him, not only as an instructor, but as a judge: and yet, by this specious form of 6 honour and respect, they sought only to insnare and destroy him. So unsafe would it be always to judge of men's intentions by the first appearances of their actions! But our Lord, in his answer, 7 united, as usual, the wisdom of the serpent with the innocence and 10, 11 gentleness of the dove; and in his conduct to this criminal shewed at once that tenderness and faithfulness, which might have the most effectual tendency to impress and reclaim her; if a heart capable of such infidelity and wickedness could be impressed and reclaimed at all. Go thy way, said he to this adulteress, and sin no more. Perhaps the charge may have little weight with such abandoned transgressors as she; but let all learn to improve their escapes from danger, and the continued exercise of Divine patience towards them, as an engagement to speedy and thorough reformation.

9 Let the force of conscience, and the power of Christ over it (both which so evidently appeared in this instance), teach us to reverence the dictates of our own minds, and to do nothing to bring them under a sense of guilt; which, through the secret energy of our Redeemer, wrought so powerfully on these Pharisees, that, hypocritical and vain glorious as they were, they could not command themselves so far as even to save appearances; but the eldest and gravest among them were the first to confess their guilt, by withdrawing from the presence of so holy a Prophet, from the temple of God, and from the criminal whom they came to prosecute. A like consciousness of being ourselves to blame will abate the boldness and freedom of our proceedings with others for their faults, if, while we judge them, we are self-condemned; nor will the authority of a superior age or station of life bear us out against these inward reproaches.

SECT. CIII.

Our Lord speaks of himself as the light of the world, urges the concurrent testimony of his Father, and gives the Jews repeated warning of the danger they would incur by persisting in their infidelity. John VIII. 12—29.

SECT. ciii. John VIII. 12.

JOHN VIII. 12.

THEN Jesus, after the interruption that he met with, while he was speaking to the people in the temple, by the Pharisees bringing in the

THEN spake Jesus again unto them, saying, saying, I am the light of the world: he that followeth me, shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

the adulteress, resumed the work he was before engaged in, and again proceeded to instruct the people; and observing the sun lately risen, and shining with great lustre and beauty, he spake unto them, saying, I am the true light of the world, in whose appearance you ought chiefly to rejoice[a]: this sun arises, in a few hours to descend again, and may fail many of you before your intended journey is dispatched[b]; whereas he that follows me, and governs himself by the dictates of my word and Spirit, shall not be left to walk in the darkness of ignorance, error and sin, but shall have the light of life continually shining upon him, to diffuse over his soul knowledge, holiness and joy, till he is guided by it to eternal happiness.

SECT. CII.

John VIII. 12

13 The Pharisees therefore said unto him, Thou bearest record of thyself; thy record is not true.

Some of the Pharisees therefore, who were then present, but different persons from those who had brought in the woman, enraged at the late disappointment of their brethren, said unto him, Thou bearest witness of thyself, and therefore, by thine own confession (chap. v. 31.) thy testimony is not to be admitted as true, but may rather be suspected of vain-glory; nor can we believe such great things of thee, unless we have some farther proof than thine own affirmation. 13

14 Jesus answered and said unto them, Though I bear record of myself, yet my record is true: for I know whence I came, and whither I go; but ye cannot tell whence I come, and whither I go.

Jesus answered and said unto them, Though I indeed bear witness of myself, [yet] as I speak from my own certain knowledge, and have already shewn that I am come with a Divine commission, my testimony is entirely and perfectly true, and as such you ought to admit it: for I well know from whence I came, and whither I am going, and the most evident demonstrations of it have been given you, both in the nature of my doctrine, and in the miracles which I have wrought among you; but you are so perverse, that, as often as I have hinted or declared it, you know not to this day from whence I come, and whither I am going: Which is not to be ascribed to the want of sufficient evidence, but merely to the force of your own prejudices; for 14

15 Ye judge after the 15

you

a I am the true light of the world.] The Messiah was often represented under this view. Isa. xlii. 6. xlix. 6. and Mal iv. 2. Compare Luke ii. 32. John i. 4.—9. iii. 19. ix. 5. and xii. 46.

b The sun arises to descend again, and may fail many of you, &c.] The reader will remember this was the morning after the conclusion of the feast of tabernacles, and probably might be before the morning sacrifice: after which, no doubt, many would be setting out for their habitations in the country.

c You

SECT. CIII.

you judge according to the maxims of flesh and sense, and will believe nothing in opposition to these principles, which you have so rashly imbibed[c], and by this means are justly liable to condemnation: but I wave that for the present, as I now judge no man, but rather appear under the character of a Saviour. (Compare chap. iii. 17.) Yet if I should judge, my determination and sentence is apparently true and right, and you would justly be condemned for not receiving my testimony; for I am not alone in what I say, but I and the Father that sent me, as we are in other respects inseparably united, do evidently concur together in the testimony that I give. And it is written in your own law, for which you profess so sacred a regard, that the testimony of two men is to be admitted as true, and matters of the greatest consequence are without scruple to be determined by it. Deut. xvii. 6, and xix. 15.) Now I am [one] who bear this witness of myself, in a fact, the truth of which I cannot but certainly know; and the Father who sent me is another, and surely a most credible Person, who also bears his testimony to me; thereby asserting the truth of every doctrine I teach, and the justice of every sentence I might pass.

John VIII. 15

16 17 18

Then said they to him, Where is this thy Father, to whom thou so frequently appealest? mention him plainly, that we may know how far he is to be regarded, and produce him as a witness. Jesus answered, You may well ask; for it plainly appears by your conduct, that you neither know me, nor my Father, however you may boast an acquaintance with him: and indeed, if you had known me aright, and regarded me as you ought to have done, you would also long ere this have known who and what my Father is, in another manner than you now do; for I bear his complete resemblance, and it is my great business to reveal him to those who submit to my instructions.

19

These words Jesus spake with the greatest freedom, as he was teaching in the temple, in a certain part of it called the treasury, where the chests the flesh, I judge no man.

20

16 And yet if I judge, my judgment is true: for I am not alone, but I and the Father that sent me.

17 It is also written in your law, that the testimony of two men is true.

18 I am one that bear witness of myself, and the Father that sent me beareth witness of me.

19 Then said they unto him, Where is thy Father? Jesus answered, Ye neither know me, nor my Father: if ye had known me, ye should have known my Father also.

20 These words spake Jesus in the treasury, as he taught in the temple: and no man

c You judge according to the flesh, &c.] The same carnal prejudices still prevail in the minds of the Jews, and prevent their reception of Christ; they laying it down as a first principle, that he is to be a great temporal Prince and Deliverer. And the admission of false principles, which are constantly taken for granted, and never examined, will, I fear, be attended with fatal consequences to thousands more.

man laid hands on him, for his hour was not yet come.

chests stood in which the people put their gifts for the service of that sacred house (see Mark xii. 41, sect. clix.) the stores of which were laid up in chambers over that cloister. and though he so plainly intimated that God was his Father, and charged the Jews with being ignorant of him, in whom they boasted as so peculiarly their God, yet their spirits were kept under such a powerful, though secret restraint, that no one seized him; which was the more wonderful, as it was a place from whence it would not have been easy to have escaped without a miracle, and which was much frequented by his greatest enemies: but the true reason was, because his hour was not yet come in which he was, by Divine permission, to be delivered into their hands.

SECT. CLII. John VIII. 20

21 Then said Jesus again unto them, I go my way, and ye shall seek me, and shall die in your sins: whither I go, ye cannot come.

Confiding therefore in the protection of Divine Providence, Jesus then said to them again, as he had done before (chap. vii. 33, 34, p. 519.) I am speedily going away from among you, and you shall seek me, and enquire after the Messiah in vain; but, as a just punishment for your having rejected me, you shall die in this your sin, and perish for your unbelief by a singular stroke of Divine vengeance, which shall sink you into final condemnation. Remember then, that I have warned you with the greatest faithfulness, and now again I solemnly repeat the warning, That though you should be ever so desirous of admittance to me, it will be in vain; for you cannot come to the place, whither I am now going, either to molest me, or to secure yourselves. 21

22 Then said the Jews, Will he kill himself? because he saith, Whither I go, ye cannot come.

The Jews then said, with a very perverse and foolish contempt, What, will he kill himself, that he says, You cannot come, whither I am going? We shall not desire to follow him upon those terms. 22

23 And he said unto them, Ye are from beneath, I am from above: ye are of this world, I am not of this world.

And he said to them yet more plainly, So vile and malicious an insinuation as this, evidently shews that you are from beneath, the slaves of earth, and the heirs of hell; while, on the other hand, I am from above, and shall quickly return thither: you are originally of this world, and your treasure and hearts are here; but as I am not of this world, my thoughts therefore naturally turn to that celestial abode, from whence I came, and I incessantly labour to conduct men thither. But as to you I labour in vain: and therefore I just now said unto you, that you shall die in your sins; and it is really a great and awful 23

24 I said therefore unto you, that ye shall die in your sins: for if ye 24

SECT. ciii.

awful truth, and deserves another kind of regard than you give it; so that I yet again would call you to consider it; for if you believe not that John VIII. 24 I am [he,] whom I have represented myself to be[d], you shall unavoidably die in your sins, and are in effect the murderers of your own souls[e]. ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins.

25 Then said they to him, in proud derision, Who art thou, that such great regard should be paid to thee, and that it should be so fatal a thing to neglect thee? And Jesus said to them, Truly, because I am still speaking to you to this very day
26 in so plain and affectionate a manner, I have many things to say and judge concerning you[f], and justly might upbraid you with the utmost severity, and pass an immediate sentence of condemnation upon you: but, for the present, I content myself with reminding you, that he who sent me is true; and, as I speak to the world only those things which I have heard from him, he will finally verify my words, and it will be at the peril of your souls, if you continue to treat me with such perverseness and contempt.

25 Then said they unto him, Who art thou? And Jesus saith unto them, Even the same that I said unto you from the beginning.

26 I have many things to say, and to judge of you: but he that sent me is true; and I speak to the world those things which I have heard of him.

27 These things were very intelligible, when compared with what he had said before; [yet] so exceeding stupid were they, and so blinded by

27 They understood not that he spake

d That I am he, &c. ὁτι ἐγω ειμι.] There is evidently an ellipsis here, to be supplied by comparing it with ver. 12. Compare John xiii. 19. Mark xiii. 6. and Acts xiii. 25.

e Are in effect the murderers of your own souls.] The repetition of the threatening here, from ver. 21. is a very awful rebuke to the folly of their answer, ver. 22. as if our Lord had said, "It very ill becomes you to trifle and amuse yourselves with such silly and spiteful turns, when your life, even the life of your souls, is at stake; and to talk of my killing myself, when by your unbelief and impenitency you are plunging yourselves into eternal death." Thus do those passages in our Lord's discourses, which to a careless reader might seem flat tautologies, appear, on an attentive review, to be animated with a most penetrating Spirit, and to be full of Divine dignity. A remark which will frequently occur, especially in reading those important discourses of Christ, which John has, through the infinite goodness of God to his church, recorded after they had been omitted by the other evangelists.

f Truly, because I am still speaking to you, I have many things to say and judge concerning you.] I entirely agree with the learned Raphelius (Annot. ex Herod. p. 292—303.) that all the difficulty of these words arises from a mistake in the pointing, as they stand in most copies; and I think his method of restoring the true reading and sense the easiest and justest I have ever met with. He would point them thus, Την αρχην, ὁτι και λαλω υμιν, πολλα εχω περι υμων λαλειν και κρινειν. All that know any thing of the Greek language, know that την αρχην often signifies indeed, or truly; and so the translation I have given is very literal, and makes a very good sense.—Mr. Fleming would render it, I am, as I said unto you, The Beginning, that is, the Person spoken of, Gen. i. 1. and elsewhere, under that title: but this, as well as our own version, is not any thing like a just and grammatical translation; though to be sure there is a sense in which Christ may most properly be called the Beginning. Compare Col i. 18. Rev. i. 8. xxi. 6. xxii. 13. (See Fleming's Christology, Vol. I. p. 281.)—I shall only add, that some would render it, The same I am speaking to you of: but the version here given is more agreeable to the original, and by a proper pointing would appear natural and easy, if what should be considered as one sentence had not been separated into two parts by a wrong division of the verses.

g You spake to them of the Father.

by the prejudices of their minds, that they did not understand that he spake to them of God the Father, as the Person who sent him. SECT. CIII.

John VIII. 28.

28 Then said Jesus unto them, When ye have lift up the Son of man, then shall ye know that I am he, and that I do nothing of myself, but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things.

Jesus therefore said to them, I know that, notwithstanding all I have said, you will be still so obstinate as to persist in your infidelity, till you proceed even to take away my life; but when, after all your professed desire of his appearance and kingdom, you shall have lifted up that glorious Person, the Son of man, from the earth, and have even proceeded so far as to put him to a violent death, instead of seeing his cause and interest overborne by that outrageous attempt, you shall then know, by some new and convincing tokens, that I am [he][g], and [that] I do nothing separately of myself, but, in exact agreement with him, speak all these things according as my Father has instructed me: And even now he 29 that sent me is graciously present with me, to bear his testimony to the truth of what I say, and to support and vindicate me: and whatsoever you may foolishly surmise, the Father has not left me alone, nor will he ever leave me; for I always do the things which are most pleasing to him, and faithfully and constantly pursue the important work, which he has committed to my trust.

29 And he that sent me is with me: the Father hath not left me alone: for I do always those things that please him.

IMPROVEMENT.

Such may our character ever be, as we desire the supports of 29 the Divine presence! Whoever be displeased, may we always do the things which please him; and with all diligence let us labour, whether present in the body, or absent from it, to be still approved and accepted of him! (2 Cor. v. 9.)

Our blessed Redeemer is the light of the world. With how much 12 pleasure should we behold his rays! With how much cheerfulness should we follow, whithersoever he leads us; as well knowing that we shall not then walk in darkness; and God forbid, we should ever

[g] You shall then know that I am he.] This undoubtedly refers to the prodigies attending his death, his resurrection, and ascension, the descent of the Spirit, the amazing miracles wrought by the apostles in his name, &c.—But I am careful not to put such words into our Lord's mouth in the paraphrase as would have been unsuitable to the reserve which, on some of these heads, prudence obliged him to keep; or such as, in other instances, would have superseded farther inquiry into the meaning of what he said. I think it most natural to refer these to the notes, or to the paraphrase on some following passage.

SECT. CIII. ever choose to continue in it, as the shelter and screen of wicked works!

Ver. 17, 18 May we, with all candour and humility, regard and submit to the testimony, which the Father has borne to him in so express and incontestable a manner! Dreadful would be the consequence of 21, 24 our refusing to do it. The doom of these wretched Jews would be ours, to die in our sins. And oh, how insupportable will that guilty burden prove in a dying hour, and before the tribunal of God? How will it sink us into condemnation and despair! In vain shall those, who now despise him, then seek admittance to the world where he is: thither they cannot come; and if excluded from him, must be excluded from happiness.

25, 26 Justly might it long since have been our case: for surely he has many things to say of us, and to judge concerning us, should he lay judgment to the line, and righteousness to the plummet, after his having been so long with us, yea, after we have, as it were, seen him lifted up and set forth as crucified among us. (Gal. iii. 1.)

28 May this faithful admonition prevail to our conviction and reformation; that our everlasting condemnation may not farther illustrate the reasonableness, yea, the necessity of it, and the madness of hardening our hearts against it!

SECT. CIV.

Our Lord continues his discourse with the Jews in the treasury, the day after the feast of tabernacles; and labours to convince them how vain their pretences to liberty and to the privileges of the children of Abraham were, while they continued to reject and persecute him. John VIII. 30—47.

JOHN VIII. 30.

JOHN VIII. 30. AS he spake these words, many believed on him.

SECT. CIV. THUS did Jesus warn the Jews of the danger of rejecting him, and appeal to his heavenly Father as authorizing the whole of his administration; and, as he was speaking these words, many of his hearers were so struck with them, that they believed in him[a], and were strongly inclined to follow him as the Messiah.

John VIII. 30.

Then

a Many believed in him.] One can hardly think that the ambiguity of the expression of the Son of man's being lifted up. (ver. 28) engaged them to this, in hope that it might intimate some exaltation to a temporal kingdom. It is more reasonable to believe that they felt their hearts impressed with what they heard from him in the whole preceding discourse. Yet it is observable, that in the series of it he advances no new proof of his mission: so that probably these people were wrought upon by what they observed in the temper and conduct of Christ; bearing the perverseness of his enemies with so much patience, speaking of an ignominious and painful death with such holy composure, and expressing so genuine and lively a sense of his heavenly Father's approbation, and so sweet a complacency in it.—And, perhaps, would ministers generally allow themselves to open with freedom the native workings of a heart deeply impressed with the gospel, the secret charm might subdue those, whose subtlety and prejudice might be proof against the most conclusive abstract reasoning.

b The

SECT. civ.

John VIII. 31.

31 Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed;

Then Jesus, knowing the weakness and treachery of the human heart, and the difficulties which would lie in the way, if they attempted to put that inclination into practice, said to those of the Jews who were now ready to profess that they believed in him, if you continue stedfast in your adherence to my word, and yield a constant and universal obedience to it, [then] you are my disciples indeed, and I will finally own you as such.

32 And ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.

And you shall then know the truth of my gospel in its full compass and extent, so far as it is necessary to your salvation, or conducive to your comfort; and the truth shall make you free[b], and fix you in that state of glorious liberty, which is the privilege of my disciples alone.

33 They answered him, We be Abraham's seed, and were never in bondage to any man: how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free?

But some that heard him were not a little displeased at this, as an insinuation that they were not already free; and strangely forgetting the servitude of Egypt and Babylon, and how often their nation had been conquered by others, and even how low it was at present reduced by the Roman power, they confidently answered him, We are the seed of Abraham, a person always free, and the peculiar favourite of heaven; and we have never been in slavery to any man whatever, nor do we fear that God will permit us to be so; how then dost thou say to us, You shall be made free upon becoming my disciples?

34 Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Whosoever committeth sin, is the servant of sin.

Jesus, waving what he might easily have replied as to their former history, and the present state of their civil affairs, that he might give no unnecessary offence, answered them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, and recommend it to your consideration as a most important truth, That every one who habitually practises sin[c], and goes on in a course of it, is the slave of sin; and that is a servitude by far meaner and more dreadful b The truth shall make you free.] According to Sir Isaac Newton (on Proph. p. 149) these words were spoken in a sabbatical year, when at the feast of tabernacles, which was just about the beginning of the civil year, great numbers of servants were set at liberty: and he supposes that the answer of the Jews (ver. 33) is to be explained with a peculiar reference to this, and contains two distinct thoughts: "We "are Abraham's seed, and consequently, "had we ever been in bondage, we should "have been set at liberty at this season, "though Gentile slaves are still detained; "and, besides that, we never were in bond-"age to any man at all." But the arguments by which this is fixed to a sabbatical year are dubious; and the words will make a good sense, independent on this peculiar interpretation; which yet seemed remarkable enough to deserve a mention here.

c Who habitually practises sin.] Ποιων αμαρτιαν seems a phrase of the very same import with working iniquity: I have therefore rendered it practises sin, as that word generally signifies an habitual course of action.

d The

SECT. CIV.

John VIII. 35.

dreadful than the yoke of an earthly tyrant. Now, as the servant does not always abide in the family of his master, but is at his lord's pleasure liable to be dismissed or transferred to another; much less can you, who are the servants, not of God, but of sin, promise yourselves that you shall still, on account of your descent from Abraham, continue in those privileges which, by undeserved mercy, you hitherto enjoy: [but] the eldest son and heir of the family continually abides in his father's house, and his power and influence [there] are always increasing[d]. Thus do I ever continue, and have power of receiving whom I will into the family: if therefore I, who am the Only-begotten Son of God, and the Heir of all things, make you free, you, claiming in virtue of my right and authority, will be free indeed[e], and will not only be delivered from the bondage of corruption and the tyranny of Satan, but be entitled to those immunities and blessings here, and to that future inheritance of eternal glory, to which at present you have no claim.

35 And the servant abideth not in the house for ever: but the son abideth ever.

36 If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed.

37 And as to what you say, that you are Abraham's seed, I know that you indeed are, in a natural way, the posterity of Abraham[f], as Ishmael also was; but what can that avail you, while you are so unlike Abraham in your temper, and are so far from being of a disposition suitable to your descent from him, that you not only deride, but seek to kill me, because my word has no place in your hearts, and has not any weight or influence upon you, but is of a tenor directly contrary to your prejudices and lusts. And, on the whole, there is so great a difference between us, that it is really impossible to reconcile your practice with my doctrine: for I speak that which I have seen with my Father, and which I know to be agreeable 37 I know that ye are Abraham's seed; but ye seek to kill me, because my word hath no place in you.

38 I speak that which I have seen with my Father: and ye

[d] The servant does not always abide in the family; but the son abides [there] always.] I think Dr. Guyse's ingenious and pious paraphrase and note on these words contain an excellent illustration of them. The main sense of what he says on this passage is much the same with what I have given above (much as I had writ it several years ago): the casting out Ishmael, though a son of Abraham by the bondwoman, beautifully illustrates the remark and the connection.—It is strange that Dr. Claget should think that Moses was the servant here meant; and stranger yet that Dr. Clarke should adopt so unnatural an interpretation. See his Sermons, Vol. III. p. 4, 5.

[e] If the Son make you free, &c.] Archbishop Tillotson. (Vol. III. p. 578). thinks that this alludes to a custom in some of the cities of Greece, and elsewhere, whereby the son and heir had a liberty to adopt brethren, and give them the privileges of the family.

[f] I know that you are the posterity of Abraham.] It seems probable that our Lord speaks this, not to those who believed in him, but to some others in the company; and that the phrase, They answered him, ver. 33. only signifies that some of those who were present made such a reply.

ye do that which ye have seen with your father.

able to his mind and will; and you do that which you have seen with your father, and shew a visible conformity in your works to him: by which he intimated, that their works as much resembled the nature of the devil, as his doctrine answered to that of God.

SECT. CIV.

John VIII. 38

39 They answered and said unto him, Abraham is our father.—

But they replied with some warmth, and said to him, Take heed on whom this reflection may fall; for Abraham is our father, and surely thou wouldest not insinuate any thing to the injury of that holy patriarch's memory, who was expressly called the friend of God. 39

—Jesus saith unto them, If ye were Abraham's children, ye would do the works of Abraham.

Jesus says to them, If you were indeed, and in the most important sense, the children of Abraham, you would do the works of Abraham, and would make it the great business of your life to imitate so wise and so holy an example.

40 But now ye seek to kill me, a Man that hath told you the truth which I have heard of God: this did not Abraham.

But now you seek and contrive to slay me, a blameless and innocent Man, for no other reason, but because I am one who has faithfully told you the truth, which I have heard and received in commission from God: Abraham, your boasted ancestor, did not any thing like this; but gave the readiest credit, and the most joyful welcome, to all the messages which God sent him. Nevertheless, though you are so far from doing the works of Abraham, I may well say, as I have just now intimated (ver. 38.) that you do the works of him who is indeed your father. 40

41 Ye do the deeds of your father.—

—Then said they to him, We be not born of fornication; we have one Father even God.

Then said they to him, We would have thee to know that we are not born of fornication; we are not bastard Jews, whose blood has been contaminated with idolatrous alliances; but, by virtue of our descent from his people, and our profession of his religion, we have all one great and common Father, [which is] God. 41

42 Jesus said unto them, If God were your Father, ye would love me: for I proceeded forth, and came from God; neither came

Jesus said to them, If God were indeed your Father, as you pretend, instead of attempting to take away my life, you would honour and love me: for, to speak without any reserve on this important head, I renew the declaration. That I proceeded originally, and do come from God[g], and appear 42

[g] I proceeded originally, and do come from God.] This seems to be the proper distinction between εξηλθον and ηκω. The accurately (as several commentators have observed) use the first of these words to express the descent of children from their parents; (compare Gen. xv. 4. xxxv. 11. and Isa. xi. 1.) The form in which the other stands, favours the rendering I have given (do come from God), and may intimate not only his first mission, but his exact attendance to every particular message.

SECT. civ.

John VIII. 43

appear among you as his Messenger; for I came not of myself, but He has sent me, and I constantly keep his commission in view. And why do you not understand this my language, and acknowledge it, simple as it is, to be indeed divine? [Is it] because you cannot hear my word[h]? Can you pretend to say that I decline giving you the most public and frequent instructions, or that those instructions are unintelligible and obscure? Your consciences in general know the contrary as to the main series of them.

came I of myself, but he sent me.

43 Why do ye not understand my speech? even because ye cannot hear my word.

44 The case indeed is sufficiently plain, nor do I fear to represent it in the most express terms: I tell you therefore, You are the genuine children of your father the devil[i]; and the malicious and abominable lusts of that accursed spirit, whom I justly call your father, you will resolutely and obstinately persist to do[k]: and even now there is the plainest evidence of your resemblance to him, in your design to murder me, and in your opposition to the truth that I deliver to you; for he has always acted as the enemy of mankind, and was a murderer from the beginning, in his attempt to bring destruction on the world by sin; (compare 1 John iii. 8.) And to accomplish his destructive purpose, as his original integrity was lost by his apostacy from God, he threw off all regard to what was right, and continued not in the truth, but, by an audacious and most pernicious lie, ruined the first parents of the human race, because there was and is no truth in him: and, indeed, when he speaks a lie, he speaks of his own, and indulges the bias of his own fraudulent and perfidious nature; for he is himself a liar, and was the father of it, or the first forger of that 45 detestable and pernicious crime. And, as you are of such a disposition, if I would flatter your prejudices and vices, you would hear me with pleasure; but because I plainly and faithfully speak

44 Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do: he was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth, because there is no truth in him. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own: for he is a liar, and the father of it.

45 And because I tell you the truth, ye believe me not.

h Is it because you cannot hear my word?] I choose to place a mark of interrogation after this clause, Οτι ου δυνασθε ακουειν του λογου του εμου; and δυνασθε ακουειν may refer either to their opportunity of hearing, which is the most common sense of the word, or to their capacity of understanding: I have therefore included both.—The word γινωσκειν, in the preceding clause, evidently signifies to understand, Acts viii. 30. and to distinguish, John x. 14.

i You are of your father the devil.] The account Josephus gives of the wickedness of the Jews about this time abundantly vindicates this assertion of our Lord from any appearance of undue severity. See Joseph. Bell. Jud. lib. v. cap. 10 (al. vi. 11), § 5. cap. 13 (al. 16), § 6. Edit. Havercamp. and Dr. Lardner's Credibility, part i. book i. chap. 6. Vol. I. p. 304—310.

k You will resolutely and obstinately persist to do.] This is plainly the sense of the words, θελετε ποιειν. See note a on John i. 43. p. 126.

SECT. CIV.

speak the truth, without desire of favour, or fear of offence, yea, being under the influence of this false spirit, do not believe me. If you take upon you to deny this, and accuse me of falsehood and prevarication in any degree, how will you prove your charge? Which of you convinces me of that, or any other sin? But, on the other hand, if it be evident, that I speak the truth, why do ye not believe me? He that is of God, or that is really a child of God, and a partaker of his Spirit, hears, with an affectionate and obedient regard, the words of God, his heavenly Father, and receives them with reverence, by whomsoever they are brought: the reason therefore, why you do not hear mine, is because, as I have often said, you are not the children of God.

John VIII. 46. 46 Which of you convinceth me of sin? And if I say the truth, why do ye not believe me?

47 47 He that is of God, heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God.

IMPROVEMENT.

MAY we approve ourselves the sincere disciples of Jesus, by continuing in his word, and being faithful even unto death, as ever we expect a crown of life! (Rev. ii. 10.) Without this, external privileges will turn to but little account. The children of Abraham may be the children of Satan; and they are so, if they imitate the temper and works of the accursed fiend, rather than of the holy patriarch. The devil was from the beginning a liar, and a murderer; and all falsehood and malice are from him. Let us earnestly pray, that we may be freed from them, and from the tyranny of every other sin, to which we have been enslaved; that Christ, the Son, may make us free of his Father's family, and of his heavenly kingdom! Then we shall be free indeed, and no more be reduced to bondage.

Ver. 31, 37, 38, 44, 36

MAY we prove that we are the children of God by our readiness to hear and receive the words of our blessed Redeemer, the words of incarnate truth, and wisdom, and love; whom none of his enemies could ever convict of sin, nor ever accused him of it, but to their own confusion! May we resemble him in the innocence and holiness of his life; that we may the more easily and gracefully imitate that courage and zeal, with which he reproved the haughtiest sinners, and bore his testimony against the errors and vices of that degenerate age and nation in which he lived!

47, 46

SECT. CV.

Jesus promising immortality to his followers, and speaking of his own existence as prior to that of Abraham, the Jews in the temple attempt to stone him; but he miraculously escapes from their hands. John VIII. 48, to the end.

JOHN VIII. 48.

SECT. CV.

John VIII. 48

NOW when the Jews heard Jesus so expressly declaring that they were ignorant of God, and were the children, not of Abraham, but of the devil, they answered him therefore with great rage and contempt, and said unto him, Do we not well say, that thou, who speakest of Israelites in such language as this, art a Samaritan, rather than one of the holy seed, and art possessed by a demon, who hurries thee on to such outrage and madness [a].

JOHN VIII. 48.

THEN answered the Jews, and said unto him, Say we not well, that thou art a Samaritan, and hast a devil?

49 But to this insolent charge, Jesus meekly answered, It is plain, from the whole series of my discourses and actions, that I am not a demoniack nor can any of you produce any thing in all that I have said or done which looks like lunacy or impiety; but the truth is, I honour my Father, by bearing a steady and consistent testimony to the doctrine he sent me to reveal to the world; and, because this is contrary to your corrupt prejudices and passions, therefore you dishonour me by such opprobrious reflections, to hope of discrediting my message.

49 Jesus answered I have not a devil; but I honour my Father, and ye do dishonour me.

50 But as for what personally relates to me I am little affected with it; for I seek not my own glory; nevertheless, I know there is one that seeketh, and will secure it, and who now judgeth of all that passes, and will at length evidently shew the exact notice he has taken of it, to my honour and to your confusion.

50 And I seek not mine own glory: there is one that seeketh and judgeth.

51 For God will not only finally glorify me, but will confer the highest honours and rewards on all my faithful servants! and therefore, verily, verily, I say unto you, If any one keep my word, he shall never see death [b], but shall assuredly be entitled 51 Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death.

a Possessed by a demon, who hurries thee on to such outrage and madness.] See noted on John vii. 20. sect. xcix.

b He shall never see death.] The turn given to this expression in the paraphrase accounts, not only for this passage, and that in John xi. 26, (sect. cxl.) but for what is said of Christ's having abolished death (2 Tim. i. 10.) having destroyed the devil (Heb. ii. 14,) and raised up Christians with himself, and made them sit with him in heavenly places. (Eph. ii. 6.)—Death is as nothing, compared to what it would otherwise have been to the sinner; and the felicity of heaven is so sure and so near, that, by an easy and common figure, true Christians are spoken of as already there, see the following note.

c Yet

entitled to eternal life, and shall immediately be advanced to so glorious and happy a state, that the dissolution of this mortal nature shall, with respect to him, hardly deserve to be called death.

52 Then said the Jews unto him, Now we know that thou hast a devil. Abraham is dead, and the prophets; and thou sayest, If a man keep my saying, he shall never taste of death.

Then the Jews, thinking he had asserted that his disciples should be exempted from the common lot of mortality, said again to him in a reproachful way, Now we assuredly know that thou hast a demon dwelling in thee, which hurries thee on to this madness and pride, otherwise thou couldest never talk at this extravagant rate: for Abraham, the friend of God, and the great founder of our nation, is dead: and all the holy prophets, whom God raised up in succeeding ages, were so far from being able to bestow immortality on their followers, that even they themselves are long since dead; and yet thou presumptuously sayest, If any one keep my word, he shall never taste of death[c]. What, art thou greater than that venerable patriarch our father Abraham, who is dead, and than all the most illustrious prophets, who are also dead? Whom dost thou then pretend thyself to be, that thou shouldest thus assume such a distinguishing glory to thyself? 52

53 Art thou greater than our father Abraham, which is dead? and the prophets are dead: whom makest thou thyself?

54 Jesus answered, If I honour myself, my honour is nothing: it is my Father that honoureth me, of whom ye say, that he is your God:

Jesus replied, If I only glorify myself, by high encomiums on my own dignity and excellence, while I neglect the honour and service of my Father, my glory is nothing but a mere empty sound; [but] it evidently appears by all the series of my converse and miracles, compared with each other, that it is my Father himself that effectually glorifies me, even he, of whom you confidently say, that he is your God, though in this respect you pay so little regard to his testimony: And notwithstanding all your boasts, yet nevertheless you have not truly known him; but I well know him: and if I should deny it, and say that I know him not, or retract my pretensions 53 54

55 Yet ye have not known him, but I know him: and if I should

[c] Yet thou sayest, If any one keep my word, he shall never taste of death.] This is not the phrase which our Lord used, ver. 51. though perhaps its signification is nearly equivalent. But I think it shews how improper it would be to interpret the preceding words, Θανατον ου μη θεωρηση εις τον αιωνα, He shall not see death for ever; as if they signified, He shall not die eternally: for on this interpretation of the words there could have been no shadow of force in the argument they use, unless they had meant to assert that Abraham and the prophets were dead, εις τον αιωνα, for ever: than which nothing could be farther from the thoughts of any of the Jews, except the Sadducees, who do not seem to have been the persons speaking here. See note [1] on John iv. 14. p. 105.

[d] Was

SECT. CV.

John VIII. 55.

sions to that peculiar and intimate knowledge of him which I have so often professed, I should be a liar like you: but I repeat it again, notwithstanding all your enmity and your scorn, that I perfectly know him, and continually keep his word in its fullest extent and exactest purity.

should say, I know him not, I shall be a liar like unto you: but I know him, and keep his saying.

56 And I will tell you farther, that though you despise me, as unworthy of your notice, your father Abraham himself was even transported with a joyful desire that he might see my day [d], or the time of my appearance and glory; and in some degree he saw [it] by faith, and rejoiced in the distant and imperfect view[e], thankfully receiving every intimation of the purposes of my coming which God was pleased to give him.

56 Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day: and he saw it, and was glad.

57 Then the Jews said unto him, Thou art not yet fifty years old [f], and hast thou, who but half a century ago was not in being, any room to pretend that thou hast seen and conversed with Abraham, who has been dead more than two thousand years?

57 Then said the Jews unto him, Thou art not yet fifty years old, and hast thou seen Abraham?

58 Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, and solemnly affirm it as a most certain truth, how incredible soever it may seem, that before

58 Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Before Abraham was, I am.

d Was even transported with a joyful desire that he might see my day: ηγαλλιασατο ινα ιδη την ημεραν την εμην.] It is necessary to translate the word ηγαλλιασατο thus, not only to avoid the tautology, which our translation occasions, but also to preserve the force of the words ινα ιδη. And indeed the expression may with the strictest propriety signify leaping forward with joy to meet the object of our wishes, as well as exulting in the possession of it. See Blackw. Sacred Classics, Vol. I. p. 46—48.

e He saw it by faith, and rejoiced in the view.] I cannot think with Mr. Fleming (Christology, Vol. I. p. 221) that the appearance of Christ to Abraham, Gen. xviii. 1.) could with any propriety be here referred to as Christ's day. It seems much more reasonable to conclude with Dr. Scot and Mr. Henry, that it intimates some peculiar discoveries which the Spirit of God might make to Abraham for his own private consolation, though not expressly recorded in scripture. And thus, with regard to him as well as many other saints under that dispensation, the secret of the Lord might in an extraordinary manner be with them, and he might shew them much more of his covenant than they could have discovered without such extraordinary assistance.—Compare Psalm xxv. 14. and see Dr. Scot's Christian Life, Vol. V. p. 194.—Since I drew up this note, the reverend and learned Dr. Warburton has shewn that there was great reason to believe our Lord here particularly refers to a special revelation made to Abraham, when he received that command from God to offer up Isaac; by which he was informed that the sacrifice then enjoined him was a symbol of the method which God would really take for the redemption of sinful men, by the death and resurrection of his own Son. See Divine Legation, Vol. II. p. 589—627, and the vindication of it, in the second volume of Occasional Remarks.

f Thou art not yet fifty years old.] Christ was not now five and thirty; but Erasmus thinks that, worn with labours, he might appear older than he was. Lightfoot imagines that as the Levites were discharged from the temple service at fifty (compare Num. iv. 3, 23,) that age was proverbially used; as I think it might have been, without any such institution relating to them. It is little to the credit of Irenæus's judgment to have inferred from hence, or admitted on an uncertain tradition, fathered on St. Luke, that Christ was now turned of forty. See Iren. lib. ii. cap. 39, 40.

g Before

SECT. CV.

before Abraham was born[g], I had a glorious existence with the Father, and I am still invariably the same, and one with him[h].

John VIII. 59.

59 Then took they up stones to cast at him: but Jesus hid himself, and went out of the temple, going through the midst of them, and so passed by.

This appeared to them so direct a claim to the name and properties of the eternal JEHOVAH, that, being ignorant of the divine nature of Christ, they thought it intolerable blasphemy; and though he was then discoursing in so sacred a place as the temple, they immediately took up some loose stones, with which they were repairing either the pavement or the building[i], that they might cast them at him to destroy him: but Jesus in a miraculous manner concealed himself from their sight, and went out of the temple, going through the midst of them unknown[k], and so passed on to another place, till their fury was a little appeased.

IMPROVEMENT.

WITH what patience did our blessed Redeemer bear, and with what meekness of wisdom did he answer the most virulent and opprobrious language? When he was rudely charged with being a Samaritan, and having a demon, he endured the contradiction of sinners against himself, (Heb. xii. 3.) and being thus reviled, he reviled not again, (1 Pet. ii. 23.) And shall we too keenly resent the reflections which are thrown upon us! May but our conscience witness for us, and we need not fear all that are against us! Ver. 48, 49

Christ honoured his Father, and sought not his own glory. So may we be careful of the honour of God, and cheerfully commit to him the guardianship and care of our reputation! And we shall find, there is one that seeketh and judgeth in our favour. 49, 50

It is a great and important promise which our Lord here makes, If any one keep my word, he shall never see death. Sense seems to plead against it; but he is the resurrection and the life, and hath assured us he will make it good. Let us therefore be strong in faith, 51

g Before Abraham was born.] Erasmus observes, that this is the meaning of γενεσθαι; and Raphelius abundantly justifies the interpretation. Annot. ex Xen. p. 133.

h I am invariably the same, &c.] Compare Heb xiii. 8. I have long (with Chrysostom and many others) looked on this text as at least a strong intimation of the Deity of Christ, nearly parallel to Heb. i. 12, συ δε ο αυτος ει, thou art the same, —I cannot apprehend that εγω ειμι is ever used for I was; nor imagine that if our Lord had been a mere creature, he would have ventured to express himself in a manner so nearly bordering on blasphemy, or have permitted his beloved disciple so dangerously to disguise his meaning.

i Took up some loose stones, with which they were repairing, &c.] See Lightfoot, Hor. Heb. on this place; and note h on John ii. 20. p. 129.

k Going through the midst of them.] The omission of these words in this passage, as quoted by Chrysostom and Augustin, as well as in some manuscripts, has led some to suspect they were added from Luke iv. 30. See sect. xxxii. note p, p. 180.

a His

SECT. CV.

faith, giving glory to God: (Rom. iv. 20.) Though not only Abraham and the prophets, but Peter and Paul, and the other apostles, are dead, yet this word shall be gloriously accomplished.

John VIII. 52 Still they live to him, and shortly shall they be for ever recovered from the power of the grave: so that death is to them comparatively as nothing. With them may our final portion be, and we may set light by the reproaches, clamours, and accusations of prejudiced, ignorant and sinful men!

Adored be that gracious Providence that determined our existence to begin in that happy day which prophets and patriarchs 56 desired to see, and in the distant view of which Abraham rejoiced!

Let it be also our joy; for Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, to- 58 day, and for ever: nor could the heart of those holy men fully conceive those things, which God had prepared for them that love him, and which he has now revealed unto us by his Spirit. (1 Cor. ii. 9, 10.

SECT. CVI.

The seventy disciples return with joy: Christ foretells the greater success of his gospel, and praises his heavenly Father for the wise, though mysterious dispensation of it. Luke X. 17—24.

Luke X. 17.

SECT. CVI.

AFTER these things, Jesus determined to take his last, and, as it seems, his most successful circuit through Galilee [a]; and, before he set out upon it, the seventy disciples, who had been sent before him as his harbingers (sect. xcvii. p. 504, returned to him again [b] with great joy, attended with some mixture of surprise, saying, Lord, we have not only cured diseases, according to the power thou wast pleased to give us (ver. 9, p. 506), but, though thy commission did not directly express so much, yet it appears that even the demons themselves are subject

Luke X. 17.

Luke X. 17. AND the seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name.

a His last circuit through Galilee.] St. Luke has given us a large account of several occurrences in it, omitted by all the other evangelists; and I think there can be no doubt but it must come in here. It was dispatched between the feast of tabernacles and the dedication (mentioned John x. 22, sect. cxxxiv), or between the months of September and December.—I call it his last circuit through Galilee, because it is strongly intimated, that after the conclusion of it, he returned thither no more before his crucifixion. (See Luke xiii. 31—33, and John x. 40—42—Quickly after his resurrection, which was the next spring, we find five hundred brethren in Galilee. (1 Cor. xv. 6.) It is probable most of them might be converted in this journey; for we never find him attended by greater multitudes, nor his enemies more alarmed, than about this time.

b The seventy disciples returned to him again.] I presume not to determine where or when they met him; but considering they were by the law obliged to attend this feast at Jerusalem, it seems most probable that was the time and place.

c I saw

SECT. CVI.

Luke X. 18.

subject to us, when in thy name we command them to go out of such as they had possessed.

18 And he said unto them, I beheld Satan as lightning fall from heaven.

And he said to them, I know that it is and must be so: for I myself saw Satan, the great prince of the demons, falling like lightning from heaven on his first transgression, and well remember, how immediate and dreadful his ruin was [c]; and I foresee, in spirit, that renewed, swift and irresistible victory, of which this present success of yours is an earnest, which the preaching of the gospel shall shortly gain over all these rebel powers, which even in their highest strength and glory were so incapable of opposing the arm of God. And, that you may more successfully pursue this conquest, behold, I now give you a miraculous power, securely to tread upon serpents and scorpions, those venomous and hurtful creatures (compare Mark xvi. 18, and Acts xxviii. 5), in token of your triumph over the infernal spirits, and over all the might of Satan the great enemy, which he may set in array against you; and I will so effectually support you in all the trials you shall meet with, that nothing shall by any means be able to injure you, while you continue faithful in your adherence to my service. (Compare Psal. xci. 13, and Gen. iii. 15). Nevertheless, rejoice not so much in this, that the evil spirits are thus subject to you, and that you are enabled miraculously to controul them; but rather rejoice that your names are written in heaven, and that you stand enrolled among the heirs of that glorious world, as the peculiar objects of the Divine favour and love.

19 Behold, I give unto you power to tread on serpents and scorpions, and over all the power of the enemy; and nothing shall by any means hurt you.

20 Notwithstanding, in this rejoice not, that the spirits are subject unto you: but rather rejoice, because your names are written in heaven.

In that remarkable hour, Jesus, in a pleasing contemplation of the success that should attend his gospel, though it was to be propagated by such weak instruments, exceedingly rejoiced in his spirit, and said in the words he had used on a former occasion [d] (Mat. xi. 25, 26, p. 311), I ascribe glory to thee, O Almighty Father, the Creator and Lord both of heaven and earth, that

21 In that hour, Jesus rejoiced in spirit, and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, that thou hast hid these things from the wise and

[c] I saw Satan, &c.] I think this answer to the seventy loses much of its beauty and propriety, unless we suppose Satan to have been the prince of the demons they spoke of, and also allow the reference hinted at in the paraphrase to the first fall of that rebellious spirit. Compare 2 Pet. ii. 4, and Jude, ver. 6.—For the remainder of this section, and some of the following, the reader may consult the notes in the parallel passages referred to, which have been considered in their proper places above.

[d] And said in the words he had used on a former occasion.] They are here repeated with evident propriety, in the view of that glorious success which should attend these his despised servants, as the destined conquerors of the infernal legions, by whom thousands of the poor should be brought to receive the gospel.

SECT. CVI.

Luke X. 21. that while thou hast hid these things from the wise philosophers and prudent politicians of the age, thou hast discovered them in the mean time to others of an inferior character, and hast graciously revealed them to the weak, the ignorant, and the poor, who are but as infants in the eyes of the world, and in their own apprehension: be it so, O Father! I cheerfully acquiesce in it, since such is thy sovereign, wise, and holy pleasure, to humble human pride, and to display the glory of thy name.

and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes: even so, Father, for so it seemed good in thy sight.

22 Then likewise did Jesus repeat the declaration of his own extensive authority, and said (as before, p. 311), All things in the kingdom of Providence and grace are delivered to me by my Father; and no one perfectly knows, who the Son is, except the Father; nor who the Father is, except the Son, and he to whom the Son will be pleased to reveal [him:] so that from me you must learn the saving knowledge of God, and the way to secure his favour.

22 All things are delivered to me of my Father: and no man knoweth who the Son is, but the Father; and who the Father is, but the Son, and he to whom the Son will reveal him.

23 And then, turning to his disciples, he said [to them] apart, Blessed are the eyes which do, or hereafter shall, see the things that you see; and (I may add) the ears which do, or hereafter shall hear the things that you daily and familiarly hear. In the midst of all your poverty, fatigue and danger, you have reason to think yourselves exceeding happy: for I say unto you, and very solemnly assure you of it, That many of the most eminent prophets of the Old Testament dispensation, and even of the most pious and illustrious kings, whom God raised up to reign over his people, desired earnestly to have seen the things which you see, and did not see them; and to have heard the things which you hear, and did not hear them: remember then, how much you are indebted to the Divine goodness, and let it be your care to make a suitable improvement of them. (Compare Mat. xiii. 16, 17, p. 343.)

23 And he turned him unto his disciples, and said privately, Blessed are the eyes which see the things that ye see:

24 For I tell you, that many prophets and kings have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

IMPROVEMENT.

Verse 23, 24 AND are not our obligations in some measure proportionable to theirs, while these glorious sights are reflected to our eyes from the mirror of his word, and these glad tidings are echoed back 21 to our ears! Have not we also reason to adore the peculiar favour of God to us, and to admire the sovereignty of his love, that he has

has been pleased to reveal his Son in us, and has given to such babes, as we must own ourselves to be, that spiritual knowledge of him, which he has suffered to remain hidden from the great, the learned, and the wise! Even so, Father, must we also say, for so it seemed good in thy sight: thou hast mercy on whom thou wilt have mercy, and often exaltest the riches of thy grace by the meanness and unworthiness of those, on whom it is bestowed. SECT. CVI. Luke X. 21.

Have we reason to hope that our worthless names are written in heaven? let us often think of that glorious society, amongst whom we are enrolled as members, and rejoice in the thought of those privileges, which result from such a relation to it: privileges, in comparison of which, a power to heal diseases, and eject demons with a word, would hardly deserve our joy. In a grateful sense of them, let us adore the grace which gave us a place in the Lamb's book of life, and be ever solicitous to behave in a manner worthy of so illustrious a hope. 20

We have great encouragement to expect that he, before whom Satan fell like lightning from heaven, will enable us finally to trample on his power. Let us not servilely fear that condemned criminal, already marked with the scars of the Divine vengeance; but let us cheerfully hope, that the triumph over him will be renewed by the preaching of the gospel. Quickened by that hope, let us more earnestly pray, that the ruin of his gloomy kingdom may be daily more and more apparent, especially among us; that our gracious Redeemer, who reckons the interest of souls his own, may have renewed reason of joy and praise on that account. Exert, O blessed Jesus, thine own almighty arm for that great purpose; and, as thou alone canst do it, reveal thine heavenly Father to those who, by neglecting thee, shew that they know not him! 18, 19 21 22

SECT. CVII.

Christ answers the scribe, who asked what he should do to inherit eternal life; and illustrates his answer by the parable of the good Samaritan. Luke X. 25—37.

Luke X. 25.

AND behold, a certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him, saying, Master, what shall I do to inherit eternal life?

Luke X. 25.

WHILE our Lord was discoursing in this manner with his seventy disciples, an assembly of people gathered round them; and behold, among the rest, a certain man who was a lawyer, or one of those scribes who made it their profession to study and teach the law of Moses, and to resolve many curious questions relating SECT. CVII. Luke X. 25.

SECT. CVII.

Luke X. 25.

relating to it, rose up with a design to try him[a]; and, to judge of the skill of Jesus in divine matters, said, O thou great Master and Teacher in Israel, what must I do that I may inherit that eternal life which thou so frequently professest as the main object of our pursuits, and which is indeed most worthy of them?

26 And Jesus, as he knew with what design he had proposed the question, wisely returned it on himself, and said to him, What is written in the law, which thy profession must engage thee to have made thy study? how dost thou find the case to be determined there? and what is it thou dost so frequently read there[b]?

26 He said unto him, What is written in the law? how readest thou?

27 And he replying, said, It is there written as the sum of all the commandments (Deut. vi. 5. Lev. xix. 18), "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thine understanding; thou shalt unite all the faculties of thy soul to render him the most intelligent and sincere, the most affectionate and resolute service[c]; and thou shalt also love thy neighbour as sincerely and impartially as thou lovest thyself."

27 And he answering, said, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbour as thyself.

28 Jesus readily approved his answer; but was desirous to convince him at the same time how far he was from coming up to what the law required: and, in this view, he said to him, Thou hast answered right: do this, and thou shalt live: do it perfectly, and thou wilt have a legal claim to a With a design to try him.] Dr. Barrow concludes, it was with an intent to insnare him; the question being so determined by the Jewish doctors, that for a different answer he might have been accused of heresy; (see Barrow's Works, Vol. I. p. 221): but I see no certain proof of so bad an intention.

28 And he said unto him, Thou hast answered right: this do, and thou shalt live.

b How dost thou so frequently read there?] Vitringa with great pertinency observes, that what the scribe replies, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God, &c. was daily read in their synagogues, which made the answer more apparently proper. (Vitring. Synag. p. 1060.) And that this passage of scripture is still read by the whole assembly, both in their morning and evening prayers, and is called, from the first word of it, the Shemah, may be seen in Pedahzur's Ceremonies of the modern Jews, p. 49 and 115; only it is observable they leave out that clause, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. See Wotton's Miscell. Vol. I. p. 171—194.

c Thou shalt unite all the faculties of thy soul, &c.] I apprehend, with Archbishop Tillotson, we may acquiesce in this general sense of the passage, without being solicitous to seek a particular distinct idea to each of the words used here. Otherwise I should think καρδια, the heart, a general expression, illustrated by the three following words; even with all thy soul, (ψυχης,) that is, with the warmest affection; and with all thy strength, (ισχυος,) that is, with the most vigorous resolution of the will; and with all thine understanding, (διανοιας) that is, taking care to form rational ideas of him, as a guide to the affections and resolutions. Accordingly we may observe that, in a parallel place (Mark xii. 33), the word συνεσις is used instead of διανοια. And this very word is justly translated Understanding, Eph. i. 18; iv. 18; and 1 John v. 20.

d Passing

to life; or cultivate this temper sincerely, and God will not leave thee finally to perish, but will give thee all necessary discoveries of his will in order to thine eternal salvation.

29 But he, willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, And who is my neighbour?

But he, willing to justify himself as to the integrity of his inquiry, and to display the virtue of his character, not at all doubting but he sufficiently understood his duty to God, said unto Jesus, And who is my neighbour, whom by this latter precept I am obliged to love? for I would fain know the whole of my duty, that I may practise it in all its extent.

30 And Jesus answering, said, A certain man went down from Jerusalem to Jericho, and fell among thieves, which stripped him of his raiment, and wounded him, and departed, leaving him half dead.

And Jesus replying, spake the following parable, which was intended to shew, in the most lively manner, that every human creature, who needs our assistance, is to be considered by us as our neighbour, of whatever nation, or faith, or profession he may be: and he said, A certain man of our own country went down from Jerusalem to Jericho; and, passing through those wild deserts and dangerous roads [d], he fell among some of those cruel robbers who so often assault such as travel that way: and these ruffians, having both plundered, stripped, and bound him, and having also wounded him in a cruel and dangerous manner [e], went off, leaving him half dead. And 30 31 And by chance there came down a certain priest that way; and when he saw him, he passed by on the other side.

it happened, that while he was in these deplorable circumstances, a certain priest went down that way, who was going to Jericho, where so many of that profession were settled [f]; and though by virtue of his sacred office he ought to have been a peculiar example of humanity to the afflicted, yet seeing him lie at some little distance, and being willing to avoid the trouble or expence which a more particular inquiry might have occasioned, he crossed [the road,] and went on, proceeding in his journey without any farther notice. And 31

32 And likewise a Levite, when he was at ing that way, in like manner too, a Levite go- 32 when he was at the place just came

[d] Passing through those wild deserts and dangerous roads.] This circumstance is well chosen; for so many robberies and murders were committed on this road, which lay through a kind of wilderness, that Jerom tells us it was called מדמים, the bloody way.—Jericho is said to have been seated in a valley, and thence is the phrase of going down to it.

[e] Wounded him in a cruel and dangerous manner.] This is strongly implied in the expression, πληγας επιθεις, having laid on wounds.

[f] Where so many of that profession were settled. See Lightfoot's Hor. Heb. in loc. where he produces a passage from a considerable Jewish writer to prove that twelve thousand priests and Levites dwelt at Jericho; which, if it had any shadow and degree of truth, vindicates the paraphrase, and shews how naturally the priest and Levites were here introduced, without any reflection on their office.

Came

SECT. cvii.

Luke X. 33.

came and looked on this miserable object[g], and immediately crossed and passed by, without doing any thing at all for his relief. And thus the distressed creature might have lain and perished, but for a certain Samaritan[h], who, as he was travelling the same way, came to the place where he was, and seeing him in this sad condition, though he might easily know, or at least guess him to be a Jew, yet, notwithstanding the general hatred of these two nations to each other[i], he was moved with very tender compassion to-

34 wards him: And going to him, he bound up his wounds in the best manner he could[k], when, as the only means he had to cure them, he had poured in some of the oil and wine which he had taken with him as a part of the provisions for his journey (compare Gen. xxviii. 18.) and setting him on his own beast, because he was incapable of walking, he held him up as he rode, and with the tenderest care brought him safely to an inn, where he had some acquaintance; and there took farther care of him, that he should be lodged and accommodated in a proper manner that night.

35 And the next morning, as he departed from the inn, he took out of his purse two denarii, or Roman pence[l], and gave them to the landlord of the house; and at the same time said to him, Take all possible care of this poor wounded stranger, and at the place, came and looked on him, and passed by on the other side.

33 But a certain Samaritan, as he journeyed, came where he was: and when he saw him, he had compassion on him.

34 And went to him, and bound up his wounds, pouring in oil and wine, and set him on his own beast, and brought him to an inn, and took care of him.

35 And on the morrow when he departed, he took out two pence, and gave them to the host, and said unto him, Take care of him;

g Came and looked on this miserable object.] This is the import of ελθων και ιδων, as Raphelius has shewn in his Notes from Xenophon, p. 91.

h A certain Samaritan.] It is admirably well judged to represent the distress on the side of the Jew, and the mercy on that of the Samaritan; for self-interest would make them see how amiable such a conduct was, and lay them open to our Lord's inference, ver. 37. Had it been put the other way, prejudices might more easily have interposed, before the heart could have been struck with these tender circumstances.

i Notwithstanding the hatred of these two nations to each other.] See note g on John iv. 9, sect. xxix. p. 162.—Some writers tell us this hatred arose so high, that if a Jew and a Samaritan met in a narrow way, they were exceedingly solicitous that they might pass without touching each other, for fear of pollution on each side. If this was fact, it is a beautiful illustration of the humanity of this good Samaritan, who would not only touch this Jew, but took so much pains to dress his wounds, and to set him on his own beast, supporting him in his arms as he rode, as well as making such generous provision for him at the inn.

k Bound up his wounds, &c.] As the Jew was stripped by the robbers, ver. 30, we may probably suppose the Samaritan used some of his own garments for this purpose; which was a farther instance of wonderful goodness, perhaps tearing them to make a more convenient bandage.—Of the use the ancients made of wine and oil, in dressing fresh wounds, see Bos. Exerc. p. 24, and Wolfius on this text.

l Two denarii, or Roman pence.] These were in value about fifteen pence of our money. It is a very probable circumstance that a man travelling without any attendants, and now going out to a considerable distance from home, should not have more to spare, especially as he was to travel through so dangerous a road; and so it would have been very imprudent to charge himself with much more money than he was like to want in his journey; which would be the less, as it was usual for travellers in those parts to carry their provision with them. Compare Gen. xxviii. 18, and Josh. ix. 12, 13.

him; and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee.

36 Which now of these three, thinkest thou, was neighbour unto him that fell among the thieves?

37 And he said, He that shewed mercy on him. Then Jesus said unto him, Go, and do thou likewise.

and let him want for nothing; and whatsoever more thou shalt spend on his account, I will repay thee as I come back.

SECT. cvii.

Luke X. 36.

Now, said our Lord to the lawyer he was discoursing with, which of these three persons, the priest, the Levite, or the compassionate Samaritan, dost thou think was the neighbour of this poor man that fell among the robbers? And he said, Undoubtedly it was he that had mercy upon him, notwithstanding he was a person of another nation and religion. Then said Jesus to him, If this seem so amiable an example to thee, go, and do thou likewise; and if thou findest even a Samaritan in the like distress, consider him as thy neighbour, and as cheerfully perform all these beneficent and friendly offices to him: for those pretensions to religion are but vain, which do not inspire men with such universal humanity and benevolence. 37

IMPROVEMENT.

Of how great importance is it, that we should every one of us be in good earnest making this inquiry, which the scribe addressed to our Lord, What shall I do that I may inherit eternal life! What ought we not willingly to do, and to bear, that we may secure so great a felicity? Still will our Lord answer us from his word, that we must keep the commands of God, while we are looking to him as the end of the law for righteousness; (Rom. x. 4.) Happy are they that faithfully do it, that through the grace manifested in the gospel they may have a right to eat of the tree of life! (Rev. xxii. 14.) Ver. 25 26

May this abstract and summary of the commandments be written, as it were in golden characters, on the table of each of our hearts! May we love the Lord our God with all the united powers and faculties of our souls, and our neighbour as sincerely and fervently as ourselves! And may we learn, from this beautiful parable of the good Samaritan, to exercise our charity to our fellow-creatures in the most amiable manner! 27

The Jewish Priest and Levite had, no doubt, the ingenuity to find out some excuse or other for passing over to the other side; and might, perhaps, formally thank God for their own deliverance, while they left their brother to bleed to death for want of their assistance. Is it not an emblem of many living characters, perhaps of some, whose sacred office lays them under the strongest obligations to distinguished benevolence and generosity? But the good Samaritan acted the part of a brother to this expiring Jew. 31, 32 33

O seed

SECT. cvii.

Luke X. 34, 35 O seed of Israel, O house of Levi and of Aaron! will not the day come, when the humane virtues of heathens shall rise up in judgment against thee! Let us reflect with shame, what are the differences between one Christian and another, when compared with those between a Samaritan and a Jew! Yet here the benevolence of a good heart overcame even these; and, on the view of a wounded dying man, forgot that he was by nation an enemy. Whose heart does not burn within him, whose eyes do not overflow with tears of delight, 37 while he reads such a story? Let us go and do likewise, regarding every man as our neighbour who needs our assistance. Let us exclude every malignant sentiment of bigotry and party zeal which would contract our hearts into an insensibility for all the human race, but a little select number, whose sentiments and practices are so much our own, that our love to them is but self-love reflected. With an honest openness of mind let us always remember the relation between man and man, and feel and cultivate that happy instinct by which God, who has formed our hearts in many instances alike, has in the original constitution of our nature strongly and graciously bound them to each other.

SECT. CVIII.

Christ visits his friends at Bethany, and commends the diligence, with which Mary attends his preaching, while her sister Martha was too anxious about the entertainment of her guests. Luke X. 38, to the end.

LUKE X. 38.

SECT. cviii.

Luke X. 38. ABOUT this time[a] our Lord quitted Jerusalem, and set out with his disciples on his last journey from thence to Galilee, the feast of tabernacles (as was observed above) being fully concluded. Now it came to pass, as they were on their journey, he entered, with many of his attendants, into a certain neighbouring village, called Bethany, (compare John xi. 1, sect. cxxxix.) and a certain pious woman, whose name was Martha, with the most cheerful hospitality received him into her house, thinking herself greatly honoured by such a visit.

39 And she had a sister called Mary, who, being earnestly desirous to improve this happy opportunity

LUKE X. 38.

NOW it came to pass, as they went, that he entered into a certain village: and a certain woman, named Martha, received him into her house.

39 And she had a sister called Mary, which a About this time.] I express myself in this indeterminate manner as to the date of this little, but very instructive story, because I apprehend the evangelist has not exactly determined when it happened, which it was of no importance for us exactly to know. It might very possibly be just at this time; at least, the want of any sufficient reason for transposing it, obliges me, on the rules I have laid down to myself, to introduce it here.

which also sat at Jesus' feet, and heard his word.

tunity of advancing in divine knowledge and a religious temper, sat down at the feet of Jesus, as an humble disciple[b]; and heard with most diligent and pleasing attention his wise and gracious discourse, which, as his usual practice was, he began as soon as he came in to address to those that were about him.

SECT. CVIII.

Luke X. 39.

40 But Martha was cumbered about much serving, and came to him, and said, Lord, dost thou not care that my sister hath left me to serve alone? bid her therefore that she help me.

But Martha, too solicitous about the variety and elegance of the entertainment she intended for her sacred Guest and the company with him, was exceedingly hurried[c] and perplexed about much serving; and coming in to the room where Jesus was, she, not without some warmth and discontent, expressed how much she was offended at her sister's sitting still, and said, Lord, dost thou not mind that my sister has left me to provide and serve up the entertainment alone, which is more than I can well manage; while she sits here as calmly as if she had no concern in it? I would not take upon me to call her away from thy presence myself; but I beg that thou wouldest interpose in the matter; speak to her therefore, that she may lend her helping hand with mine[d], and let her then sit down to hear thee discourse when the entertainment is over. 40

41 And Jesus answered, and said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things:

And Jesus in reply said to her, O Martha, Martha, thou art over anxious and disturbed with restless agitation of spirit[e] about many things which are not worth so much solicitude, and might well have been spared on such an occasion as this: But let me tell thee, my dear friend, that there is one thing absolutely necessary[f], and 41

42 But one thing is needful. And Mary

of 42

[b] Sat down at the feet of Jesus, as an humble disciple.] It is well known that this was the posture in which learners attended on their teachers (compare Luke viii. 35, and Acts xxii. 3), and likewise grew into a proverb for humble and diligent attention. See the authors cited by Wolfius in loc. and especially Vitringa, Synag. lib. i. part 2, cap. 6.

[c] Was exceedingly hurried.] The word περισπᾶτο properly signifies to be drawn (as it were) different ways at the same time and admirably expresses the situation of a mind surrounded with so many objects of care that it hardly knows which to attend to first. She had probably servants to whom she might have committed these affairs; and the humility and moderation of our blessed Redeemer would have taken up with what had been less exactly prepared; especially as she had so valuable and so signal an opportunity of improving her mind in divine knowledge.

[d] Lend her helping hand with mine.] This is the exact import of συναντιλαβέσθαι, which is also with the utmost propriety used for the assistance which the Spirit of God gives to the infirmities of our frail nature. Rom. viii. 26.

[e] Disturbed with restless agitation of spirit.] The word ταράζη is no where else used in the New Testament. It seems to express the restless situation of a person in a tumultuous crowd, where so many are pressing upon him that he can hardly stand his ground; or of water in great agitation.

[f] There is one thing absolutely necessary: ἑνὸς δέ ἐστι χρεία.] This is one of the gravest and most important apothegms that ever was uttered: and one can scarce pardon the frigid impertinence of Theophylact and Basil, who explain it as if he only meant, One dish of meat is enough.

: The

SECT. cviii.

Luke X. 42.

of infinitely greater importance than any of these domestic and secular cares; even the care to have the soul instructed in the saving knowledge of the way that leads to eternal life, and to secure a title to it: and Mary is wisely attending to that; therefore, instead of reproving her, I must rather declare, that she has chosen what may eminently be called the good part[g], which, as it shall not be finally taken away from her, I would not now hinder her from pursuing; but rather invite thee to join with her in her attention to it, though the circumstances of our intended meal should not be so exactly adjusted, as thy fond friendship could desire.

ry hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.

IMPROVEMENT.

38, 39 So steadily and zealously did our blessed Lord pursue his work, with such unwearied diligence and constant affection! No sooner is he entered into the house of this pious friend, but he sets himself to preach the word of salvation, and is the same in the parlour which he had been in the temple. O Mary, how delightful was thy situation! Who would not rather have sat with thee at the feet of Jesus, to hear his wisdom, then have filled the throne of the greatest prince upon earth! Blessed were thine eyes in what they saw, thine ears in what they heard, and thine heart in what it received and embraced, and treasured up as food, which would endure to everlasting life!

40 How unhappily was her good sister deprived of the entertainment of these golden moments, while hurried about meats and drinks, and tables with their furniture, till she lost, not only her opportunity, but her temper too; as it is indeed hard to preserve it, without a resolute guard, amidst the crowd and clamour of domestic cares! Happy that mistress of a numerous family, who can manage its concerns with the meekness and composure of wisdom, and adjust its affairs in such a manner, as that it may not exclude the pleasures of devotion, and cut her off from the means of religious improvement! Happy the man who, in a pressing variety of secular business, is not so cumbered and careful as to forget

[g] The good part.] That μερις signifies a portion there can be no reasonable doubt; but that here is any allusion to the custom of sending the best portion of an entertainment to a guest to whom peculiar honour was intended, seems too great a refinement, and not exactly suitable to the occasion; though some considerable critics have defended it. (See Wolfius, in loc. and Elsner, Observ. Vol. I. p. 225, 226.) I think, rendering την αγαθην μερίδα, the good part, is more forcible, as well as more literal than our translation; as it intimates nothing else to deserve the name of a good part, when compared with this. Compare Mat. xix. 17, sect. cxxxvii.

As

forget that one thing, which is absolutely needful; but resolutely chooses this better part, and retains it as the only secure and everlasting treasure! Oh that this comprehensive and important sentence were ever before our eyes! Oh that it were inscribed deep upon our hearts! One thing is needful. And what is this one thing, but the care of the soul? what, but an humble attention to the voice and the gospel of Christ? Yet, as if this were of all things the most unnecessary, for what poor trifling care is it not commonly forgot? yea, to what worthless vanity is it not daily sacrificed? SECT. CVIII. Luke X. 41, 42.

Let the ministers of Christ, let the friends of souls in every station, exert themselves, that all about them may be awakened duly to regard this great interest; accounting it their meat and their drink to promote it. Let them be always solicitous, that neither they nor others may neglect it for the hurries of too busy a life, or even for the services of an over-officious friendship.

SECT. CIX.

Christ being entreated by his disciples to teach them to pray, repeats, with some additions, the instructions and encouragements relating to that duty which he had formerly given in his sermon on the mount. Luke XI. 1—13.

Luke XI. 1.

AND it came to pass, that as he was praying in a certain place, when he ceased, one of his disciples said unto him, Lord, teach us to pray, as John also taught his disciples.

Luke XI. 1.

OUR Lord then leaving Bethany, went on his way; dividing his time, as usual, between the care of teaching his numerous followers and the exercises of secret devotion. And as he was one day praying in a certain retired place, when he had ended, one of his disciples said to him, Lord, we desire thou wouldest teach us to pray, and give us some short form which may be proper for our frequent use, as John also taught his disciples[a], and other leading men of the several religious sects among us have taught theirs. SECT. CIX. Luke XI. 1.

2 And he said unto

And he said to them, When you pray, you may use

[a] As John also taught his disciples.] Many learned men suppose that the Jewish masters used to give their followers some short form of prayer, as a peculiar badge of their relation to them. This John the Baptist had probably done, though we know not now what it was. And in this view only can we suppose the disciples could now ask Jesus to teach them to pray; for it is not to be thought, that, in the three preceding years of his ministry, he had not often given them instructions both as to the matter and manner of prayer. In this sense Mr. Joseph Mede and Dr. Lightfoot understand the request and answer before us; and I have never met with any thing upon it, which has given me more satisfaction. See Mede's Works, p. 1, 2, and Lightfoot's Hor. Heb. in loc.

[b] O God

SECT. CIX.

Luke XI. 2.

use that form, which I before have given as a comprehensive model and directory for prayer (see Mat. vi. 9—13, p. 221, 222), and say in your addresses to God, "O God of the spirits of all flesh[b], who dwellest in the high and holy place, with humble reverence we bow before thee, and with a filial confidence in thy mercy, and mutual love unto each other, we would look up to thee as our God and Father, who with the most amazing grace and condescension art ready to attend unto the supplications of thy children from thy throne in heaven: we adore thee as possessed of infinite perfections; and as our first concern is for thy glory, we offer it as our first request, May thy name be every where sanctified; may thy perfections be displayed through all the world, and be regarded with the highest veneration! And, that the honour of thy Majesty may be thus exalted, May thy kingdom come which thou hast promised to establish under the Messiah; may thy victorious grace be universally triumphant over all thine enemies, and thy people be willing in the day of thy power! And, as an evidence of its efficacy on the hearts of men, May thy holy will be done, as it is constantly in heaven, so likewise upon earth; and be as cheerfully submitted to, as fully acquiesced in, and readily obeyed in all things, as it is possible for us, in this imperfect state, to imitate those heavenly spirits, who delight in doing thy commandments, and hearkening to the voice of thy word!

to them, when ye pray, say, Our Father which art in heaven, hallowed be thy name: thy kingdom come: thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth:

3 During our continuance here on earth we would not be solicitous to seek great things for ourselves, but humbly beg that thou wouldest give us day by day our daily bread, and wouldest supply us, as our wants return upon us, with such a competent provision of the necessaries of life, as may enable us to serve thee acceptably, and to attend without distraction and uneasiness to the performance of our duty. And, though the guilt of our iniquities might justly separate between thee and us, and with-hold good things from us, we earnestly entreat thee to extend thy mercy to us, and to forgive

3 Give us day by day our daily bread:

4 And forgive us our sins, for we also forgive

[b] O God, &c.] I think it but justice to the reverend Mr. Godwin to let the reader know that this paraphrase on the 2d, 3d, and 4th verses was written by him. I had here only given a translation, having paraphrased this excellent prayer before in Vol. I. sect. xl. the notes on which may be consulted here.

[c] Who

forgive every one that is indebted to us: and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil.

give us all our sins; for even we, the bowels of whose mercy cannot be compared with thine, are willing to forgive every one that is indebted to us, and desire to pardon all that have injured us: and, to prevent us for the time to come from falling into sin, bring us not into circumstances, that will expose us to the danger of temptation, nor suffer us to be tempted above what we are able to bear; but keep us by thy grace from all iniquity, and rescue us from the power of the evil one, that he may never triumph in our fall, and we may finally be saved from all the ruinous effects of sin."

5 And he said unto them, Which of you shall have a friend, and shall go unto him at midnight, and say unto him, Friend, lend me three loaves;

And when he thus had taught them what they 5 were to pray for, in order to excite and encourage them to a believing importunity in prayer, he said to them, Who is there of you, that has not observed the efficacy of importunate requests[c]? If, for instance, he shall have a friend, and shall go to him at midnight, and knock at his door, and say to him, Friend, I desire thou wouldest

6 For a friend of mine in his journey is come to me, and I have nothing to set before him:

lend me three loaves; For a friend of mine, 6 who was benighted on his journey, is just come to my house, and, being altogether unprovided, I have nothing to set before him for his refreshment:

7 And he from within shall answer, and say, Trouble me not: the door is now shut, and my children are with me in bed; I cannot rise and give thee.

And he from within, instead of granting his re- 7 quest immediately, shall at first be unwilling to do it, and answer him, and say, Do not disturb me at so late an hour; for the door is now shut and fastened, and my children are with me in bed and asleep; so that I cannot rise to give thee what thou askest.

8 I say unto you, Though he will not rise and give him, because he is his friend; yet because of his importunity, he will rise and give him as many as he needeth.

Yet if he still go on to press 8 him, that he would consider his necessity and comply with his request, I tell you, Though he would not rise and give him the loaves that he desired, because he was his neighbour and friend, yet on account of his importunity, as he continues knocking, and will take no denial, he will at length get up and give him as many as he wants.

9 And I say unto you, Ask, and it shall be

Now then, if one who was at first unwilling to 9 regard his friend was overcome at last by his continued earnestness, and yielded to his importunity, much more will God, who is infinitely good and rich in mercy, though he may not see fit to answer you immediately, be certainly prevailed

[c] Who is there of you that has not observed the efficacy of importunate requests?] The words in the original do not make a complete grammatical sentence: but such accidental inaccuracies are sometimes to be found in the most approved authors. The sense is not the less plain.

SECT. CIX.

Luke XI. 9.

vailed upon at length to give you what you stand in need of, if you continue to be earnest and importunate in your prayers to him: and I say therefore to you, Whatever mercy you desire to obtain, ask it of God with a continued fervency, and it shall assuredly be given you: seek it with diligence, and you shall find it; and if it be a while delayed, knock with an earnest importunity at the door of Divine mercy, and it shall at length be opened to you. And the success of others may encourage you to this, as what indeed has been confirmed by happy and constant experience: for every one that asks, with an unwearied fervency, receives; and he that diligently seeketh, findeth; and to him that knocks again and again, though for a while there may be some delay, it shall at length be opened. (Compare Mat. vii. 7, 8. sect. xlii.)

be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

10 For every one that asketh, receiveth: and he that seeketh, findeth; and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened.

11 And, further to assist your faith on these occasions, reflect upon the workings of your own hearts towards your offspring, and consider, What father is there among you, who, if a son of his shall ask him for bread, will give him a stone? or if [he ask] him for a fish, instead of a fish will give him a serpent? Or if he ask him for an egg, will be so unnatural as to give him a scorpion? and, in the room of what is necessary for the support of life, will offer him a thing that would be useless or injurious to him? If you then, who are, at least comparatively, evil, and perhaps some of you inclined to a penurious and morose temper, yet know how to give good gifts to your children, and find your hearts disposed to relieve their returning necessities by a variety of daily provisions; how much more shall [your] heavenly Father, who is infinitely powerful and gracious, and who himself has wrought these dispositions in you, be ready to bestow every necessary good, and even to give the best and the most excellent gift of all, his Holy Spirit, to them that sincerely and earnestly ask him for it; to produce and cherish in their hearts those graces which may fit them for the services of life, and for the joys of an happy immortality? (Compare Mat. vii. 9, 10, 11. p. 233.)

11 If a son shall ask bread of any of you that is a father, will he give him a stone? or if he ask a fish, will he for a fish give him a serpent?

12 Or if he shall ask an egg, will he offer him a scorpion?

13 If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children; how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?

IMPROVEMENT.

WELL does this petition become every disciple of Christ; Lord, teach us to pray! Thou hast taught us by thine example, and by the precepts of thy word; teach us also by thine Holy Spirit!

Excellent

Excellent is this form of sound and Divine words, which our great Master here recommends. God forbid, that any of his followers should censure their brethren, who think it still proper to use it, not only as a directory, but as a form too, though perhaps with some little variation from the original sense of some clauses of it[d]. Let us attentively study it, that, concise and expressive as it is, our thoughts may go along with its several petitions. SECT. CIX. Luke XI. 1.

Let us learn to reverence and love God, and to consider ourselves as brethren in his family. Let the glory of his name, and the prosperity of his kingdom, be much dearer to us than any separate interest of our own. Let it be our cordial desire that his will may be universally obeyed, and with the most entire consent of soul acquiesced in, by all his creatures, both in heaven and on earth. Let our appetites and passions be so moderated, that having even the plainest food and raiment we may be therewith content: and, on the other hand, how plentiful soever our circumstances may be, let us remember, that day by day we depend on God for our daily bread. Nor do we need even the most necessary supplies of life more than we need daily pardon; to which therefore we should be putting in our constant claim, heartily forgiving all our brethren, as we desire to be forgiven by God. Conscious of our own weakness, let us, as far as we can, endeavour to avoid circumstances of temptation; and when necessarily led into them, let us be looking up to heaven for support; labouring above all things to preserve our integrity, and to maintain a conscience void of offence. 2, 3, 4

Depending on the certainty of these gracious promises, and encouraged by the experience of so many thousands, who have on asking received, and on seeking found, let us renew our importunate addresses to the throne of Divine grace: and, remembering the compassion of our heavenly Father, let us be emboldened, in the full assurance of faith, to ask every necessary blessing, especially the communication of that enlightening and sanctifying Spirit, without which our corrupt hearts will find out a ready way to abuse the choicest of his providential favours to the dishonour of his holy name, and the deeper wounding of our own miserable souls. 9, 10

SECT.

[d] With some little variation from the original sense, &c.] Dr. Guyse has excellently shewn in his note on Mat vi. 13. that this prayer in its original sense was peculiarly suited to the dispensation then present, as introductory to the Messiah's kingdom, and has given a just and very expressive paraphrase of it in that particular view. But there is not a clause in it, which will not bear a more extensive sense, and express what ought to be our daily temper, and the breathings of our heart before God. No doubt, thousands of Christians have daily refreshment and edification in the use of it; and it is astonishing that any should venture to condemn their brethren for it. But I would hope there are few of any profession now remaining, who have so much of the spirit of opposition and censoriousness.

SECT. CX.

Our Lord dining at the house of a Pharisee, seriously admonishes him and his brethren of their guilt and danger; by which they are exasperated, rather than reformed. Luke XI. 37, to the end.

SECT. CX.

Luke XI. 37.

LUKE XI. 37.

NOW, after our Lord had delivered these things, it happened one day, that while he was speaking to the people about the great concerns of their eternal salvation [a], a certain Pharisee then present invited him to dine with him; and, with whatever view he might do it, Jesus, that he might not seem morose, or insensible of a civility, accepting the offer, went in to his house, and sat down to table.

AND as he spake, a certain Pharisee besought him to dine with him: and he went in, and sat down to meat.

38 And when the Pharisee who had invited him saw that he was regardless of the tradition of the elders, and did not first wash before dinner, according to the constant custom of their sect, he wondered [at it], considering the character he had for an extraordinary degree of sanctity.

38 And when the Pharisee saw it, he marvelled that he had not first washed before dinner.

39 But the Lord, perceiving his thoughts, and knowing that in some circumstances a faithful reproof is the most valuable token of friendship and gratitude, said to him, As I see you are now offended at my neglecting the ceremony of washing before dinner, I cannot but plainly tell you, that you Pharisees are too much like those vain people that cleanse only the outside of the cup and the dish, while the inside, which is of much greater importance, is left dirty and foul; for with regard to many of you, your inward part, even your very heart and conscience, is defiled being full of rapine, and of all the foulest kinds

39 And the Lord said unto him, Now do ye Pharisees make clean the outside of the cup and the platter: but your inward part is full of ravening and wickedness.

40 of pollution and wickedness. But let me seriously

40 Ye fools, did not he

[a] It happened one day, that while he was speaking, &c.] The attentive reader will easily observe that I have here omitted what occurs from the end of the 13th to the beginning of the 37th verse. That passage is inserted, sect. lxi—lxiv. as being exactly parallel to Mat. xii. 22, &c. seq. and Mark iii. 22, &c. seq. Nor could I see any proof that the same discourse, with just the very same circumstances, happened again here; and as this seemed improbable, in proportion to the variety and resemblance of those circumstances, I thought it was better thus to transpose Luke's story, than to take the repetition for granted.—The phrase εν δε τω λαλησαι, while he was speaking, will, I think, fairly admit the turn I have given it in the paraphrase; but if any judge otherwise, it will be easy to turn back to the passage as inserted before, p. 328, &c. seq. and all I have said above to introduce the section before us will be true on that supposition.

he that made that which is without, make that which is within also ?

ously ask you, O ye thoughtless creatures[b], and let me charge you that ye ask yourselves, Did not he that made the outside, make also that which is within ? Did not the same God that created the body, create the soul too ? and must he not intimately know his own work, and discern and abhor all those secret abominations, which, in contempt of his omniscience, you study so artfully to conceal from your fellow-creatures ? (Compare Psal. xciv. 8, 9.)

SECT. ex.

Luke XI. 40.

41 But rather give alms of such things as ye have : and behold, all things are clean unto you.

I would therefore, from the sincerest concern for your true honour and happiness, exhort you not only to purge yourselves from secret wickedness, but to abound in the exercise of universal goodness, and particularly to give alms with liberality in proportion to your substance[c]; and then, if it be done from a right principle, behold, God, the great Proprietor of all, will accept and bless you ; and though you should not be so exact in this outward washing, all things are pure to you, so that you may use them with comfort ; whereas now you do, as it were, pollute and profane every thing you touch, and all the water in the world cannot wash away the stain. (See Tit. i. 15.)

41

42 But woe unto you, Pharisees ! for ye tithe mint and rue, and all manner of herbs, and pass over judgments, and the love of God : these ought ye to have done, and not

But alas, you seem little disposed to attend to this kind and faithful advice ; and therefore my character obliges me solemnly to warn you of those approaching judgments, which, if speedy repentance does not prevent, will shortly overtake your whole sect, numerous and honoured as it is. Woe therefore unto you, Pharisees ! for, to gain the admiration of the priests and the people

42

[b] O ye thoughtless creatures.] As ἄφρονες is a milder word than μωροι, I chose to render it thus, rather than as in our translation; (see note m on Mat. v. 22. p. 208.) The learned Elsner. (Observ. Vol. I. p. 227.) explains the latter part of the verse as if it had been said, " There is a great deal of difference between cleaning the outside, and cleaning that which is within, and no such necessary connection between them as you seem to suppose." To justify this, he urges 2 Sam. xix. 24. and one passage in Aristophanes, where πλυνειν signifies to cleanse ; but the sense is so unusual, and that commonly received, so much more lively and important, that I could not persuade myself to deviate from our translation here.

[c] In proportion to your substance.] Thus Grotius understands it. The learned Bos (Exercit. p. 26) has, I think, abundantly proved the words τα ενοντα (for καθα τα ενοντα) will very justly admit this sense, and are thus used by some of the best Greek classics. No other seems to agree so well with the connection ; not even that ingenious turn of Raphelius, (Annot. ex Xen. p. 93—96,) who explains τα ενοντα by τοις εν τη πολησι και τη παροψιδι, Mat. xxiii. 26. or that which is within the cup and dish, as if it had been said, " Give meat to the hungry, and drink to the thirsty, and make a liberal distribution of those things that are within the cup and the dish." But the last view in which τα ενοντα had been mentioned was as expressing the temper of the heart, (ver. 40,) which is a strong objection against this great man's interpretation.

SECT. CX.

people, you most scrupulously pay the tithe of mint, and rue, and every [other] trifling herb that grows in your gardens, and expect to recommend yourselves to the Divine acceptance by such kind of observances; but, at the same time, you shamefully pass by and carelessly neglect the practice of righteous judgment to your fellow-creatures, and of the love of God your Creator, as if they were matters of but little importance; whereas indeed these are the duties that you more especially ought to have done; and yet I own, you ought not to neglect the other, as even the least of God's commands are to be revered and obeyed. (See Mat. v. 19.)

not to leave the other undone.

Luke XI. 42.

43 Woe unto you, Pharisees, on account of your pride, which appears on every occasion, and in every affair of life! for you love the uppermost seats in all assemblies, even in the very synagogues, where you meet to humble yourselves before God: and mightily affect salutations in the markets and other public places, by titles of distinguished respect, as the guides and fathers of the people, the oracles of truth, and the standards of holiness. (Compare Mat. xxiii. 6—10. sect. clvii.)

43 Woe unto you, Pharisees! for ye love the uppermost seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets.

44 Woe unto you also, O ye scribes and Pharisees, on account of your deceit, as under all those appearances of the strictest sanctity you are the most egregious hypocrites of the age [d]! for I may truly say that you are like concealed graves,[e] which, being overgrown with grass, men walk over, and are not aware of [them], till they stumble at them, and are hurt, or at least defiled by the touch of them.

44 Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are as graves which appear not, and the men that walk over them are not aware of them.

45 And one of the doctors of the law [f], who happened

45 Then answered one

d O ye scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites.] Though some copies want these words, and Grotius and Dr. Mill give them up, I think Dr. Whitby is right in retaining them; especially because they so much illustrate verse 45. See Whitb. Exam. Mill. p. 46.

e Are like concealed graves.] The discourse against the Pharisees, which is recorded Mat. xxiii. sect. clvii. clviii.) was plainly delivered at another time, and in very different circumstances. Our Lord there compares them to whited sepulchres, ver. 27. adorned on the outside, but defiled within; but here to graves overgrown with grass, which might often happen to be by the way-side, (compare Gen. xxxv. 19.) and so might occasion such accidents as are here referred to.

f One of the doctors of the law.] I apprehend that νομικὸς may well be rendered a doctor or interpreter of the law: which I generally choose, rather than the word lawyer, because that naturally suggests to us a modern idea of an office which did not exist among the Jews at this time, and has strangely misled some interpreters. These Jewish lawyers (as our translation calls them) were the most considerable species of scribes, who applied themselves peculiarly to study and explain the law. Probably many of them were Pharisees; but it was no ways essential to their office that they should be so. What touched the person here speaking was, that our Lord in his last woe, ver. 44. had joined the scribes with the Pharisees.

g Will one of the lawyers, and said unto him, Master, thus saying, thou reproachest us also.

pened to be present, observing that in this last woe Jesus mentioned the scribes, who were a body of men to whom he and his brethren belonged, answered and said unto him, Master, in saying these things, thou reproachest not only the sect of the Pharisees, but us too, in a manner unbecoming the dignity of our holy profession, as the depositaries of the sacred oracles.

sect. cx.

Luke xi. 45.

46 And he said, Woe unto you also, ye lawyers! for ye lade men with burdens grievous to be borne, and ye yourselves touch not the burdens with one of your fingers.

But Jesus was so far from palliating the matter to ingratiate himself with them, that he plainly and courageously said, Nay, it is a righteous rebuke, and I intend it for you, and therefore particularly repeat it for your admonition: Woe unto you also, ye professed interpreters of the law! for, by your rigorous decisions on the ceremonial parts of it, and the human traditions which you have added to it, you load other men with insupportable burdens, and unmercifully lay them on, while you yourselves will not touch the burdens with one of your fingers[g], but suffer your lives to contradict your precepts, even in some of the most important instances. 46

47 Woe unto you! for ye build the sepulchres of the prophets; and your fathers killed them.

I also solemnly denounce a woe unto you all, for the malignity and cruelty of your tempers under this mask of piety and devotion! for at a great expence you build and adorn the sepulchres of the prophets, as if you had a mighty veneration and affection for them, though your fathers slew them. 47

48 Truly you bear witness that ye allow the deeds of your fathers: for they indeed killed them, and ye build their sepulchres.

But as you are regardless of the instructions that the prophets gave, and appear in your conduct to imitate your fathers, truly you bear witness to them, rather than against them, and in effect approve and vindicate the works of your fathers;[h] for as they indeed slew them, and you build their sepulchres, one would imagine that you erected these monuments not so much in honour of the slaughtered prophets as of the persecutors by whom they were so wickedly destroyed. (Compare Mat. xxiii. 29. —32, sect. clviii.) 48

Therefore

[g] Will not touch the burden with one of your fingers.] Perhaps their consciences might charge them with some private contempt of the injunctions they most rigorously imposed upon others in ceremonial precepts as well as moral; or it may refer to the want of a due tenderness for the comfort of men's lives, which they imbittered by such rigour. This seems to prove against Trigland (de Karæis, p. 58, & seq.) that these lawyers were not Karaites; for these added not traditionary burdens to the law.

[h] And in effect approve and vindicate the works of your fathers.] Archbishop Tillotson, Vol. II. p. 195, 196.) has set this text in a most strong and beautiful light, and hinted the turn which I have given it in the paraphrase.

SECT. CX.

Luke XI. 49.

Therefore, also the wisdom of God hath said[i] and I am in his name commissioned to declare it as his determinate purpose, I will yet send them other prophets and extraordinary messengers, particularly the apostles, who shall declare my gospel to them, as the last expedient for their recovery and salvation; but such I know to be the hardness of their hearts, that they will generally despise and reject them; nay, [some] of them they

50 will kill, and will persecute the rest: So that by filling up the measure of their sins, they will bring such a terrible destruction upon themselves, that the blood of all the prophets and martyrs, which has been cruelly shed from the foundation of the world, may seem to be required of this ge-

51 neration. Even from the blood of righteous Abel, who in those early ages for his distinguished piety was murdered by his inhuman brother, to the blood of Zechariah[k], one of the last of the prophets, who was slain between the altar and the temple (2 Chron. xxiv. 20—22). Yea, in the strongest terms I tell you, and repeat it again, The ruin, God will bring upon you in his righteous judgment, shall be so dreadful, that it shall seem as if the guilt of all their blood had been laid up in store, that it might be required at the hands of this generation, and heap aggravated ruin on their heads. (Compare Mat. xxiii. 34—36, sect. clviii.)

52 And I will add, that the disguises thrown on scripture, and the methods used to conceal it from the people, have done a great deal to bring on this terrible sentence: woe therefore unto you, interpreters of the law, on this account! for by these unrighteous practices you have, as it were, taken

49 Therefore also said the wisdom of God, I will send them prophets and apostles, and some of them they shall slay and persecute:

50 That the blood of all the prophets, which was shed from the foundation of the world, may be required of this generation;

51 From the blood of Abel, unto the blood of Zacharias, which perished between the altar and the temple: verily I say unto you, It shall be required of this generation.

52 Wo unto you, lawyers! for ye have taken i Therefore also the wisdom of God hath said.] Dr. Guyse (with Markius, Exerc. p. 669) paraphrases this clause as the words of the historian, and supposes him here to apply this character to Christ, and to declare that Christ, the wisdom of God, farther said, I will send them prophets, &c.—I doubt not but Christ might with great propriety be spoken of by that phrase: but, with all due respect to that learned and pious interpreter, I cannot apprehend it to be the sense of this passage; not only because the phraseology is unexampled in the evangelists, but chiefly because our Lord does not say, I send to you but to them. Yet I see no reason to conclude (with Mr. Whiston, in his Essay for restoring the Old Testament, p. 228) that this is a quotation from any ancient writer. Christ was empowered, without any such voucher, to declare what the counsels of Divine wisdom had determined; and this manner of speaking strongly intimates that he was so; in which view it has on this interpretation a peculiar beauty and propriety.

k The blood of Zechariah.] What reason there is to conclude, the Zechariah here spoken of is that prophet of whose death we have an account in 2 Chron. xxiv. 20, & seq. will be shewn in note g on Mat. xxiii. 35, sect. clviii.

taken away the key of knowledge: ye entered not in yourselves, and them that were entering in, ye hindered.

taken away the key of Divine knowledge[l]; and instead of tracing out a spiritual Messiah in scripture, and illustrating the testimony which the sacred oracles bear to him, you have rather abetted the popular prejudices against him; and have been so perverse and obstinate in your opposition to the gospel, as that you have not entered in to the kingdom of heaven yourselves and even those that otherwise were disposed to do it, and would have entered in, you by your wicked management have hindered. SECT. CX. Luke XI. 52.

53 And as he said these things unto them, the scribes and the Pharisees began to urge him vehemently, and to provoke him to speak of many things:

54 Laying wait for him, and seeking to catch something out of his mouth, that they might accuse him.

But while he spake these severe and awful things with so much freedom to them, the scribes and pharisees were so exceedingly provoked that they began fiercely to fasten upon him[m], and rudely endeavoured to urge him to speak of many things that were the most exceptionable topics. Thereby laying snares for him, and attempting, if possible, to start some unguarded word[n], which they hoped might fall from his mouth in the warmth of natural resentment; that they might take occasion to accuse him for it before the Roman governor, or the Jewish sanhedrim: but the prudence of Christ frustrated their malice, in the midst of all the plainness of his faithful rebukes. 53 54

IMPROVE-

l The key of knowledge.] Vitringa understands this of one fundamental truth, which would have led them into the knowledge of the rest (Observ. Sacr. lib. i. p. 125): but all their endeavours to embarrass and bias the minds of men in their inquiries after truth might be intended here; as well as more especially their disguising the prophecies which related to the Messiah.—If a key was delivered to them as the badge of their office (see p. 463, note g. and Camero on this place), there may be a beautiful allusion to that circumstance; as if he should have said, You take that key, not to use, but to secrete it. See Archbisop Tillotson, Vol. I. p. 203.)—Elsner has well shewn on this text that the heathen priests were called κληδουχοι, key-bearers. Observ. Vol. I. p. 228, 229.

m Fiercely to fasten upon him.] So δεινως ενεχειν properly signifies (see note g on Mark vi. 19, p. 158).—Several more of the words here used are metaphors taken from hunting. Αποστοματιζειν might be rendered to mouth or bear down with the violence of their words, as Theophylact excellently explains it; but the addition of περι πολλων engaged me rather to translate it as I have done. Grotius and Casaubon have shewn that it sometimes signifies to examine in a magisterial way; but Erasmus's note is, on the whole, the best I have seen upon this word.

n To start some unguarded word.] Θηρευσαι in this connection has a most beautiful propriety, and signifies the eagerness with which sportsmen beat about for their game to start it from its covert.—It is very probable as Mr. Cradock conjectures, that the Pharisee, who was master of the house, had invited a great many of his brethren and learned friends on purpose to make a more formidable attack upon Christ, and by their concurrent testimony to charge upon him any thing which might render him obnoxious: and the presence of so many of them made the discourse delivered at this time more proper, and the courage and zeal it expressed more remarkable. See Cradock's Harmony, part ii. p. 6.

IMPROVEMENT.

SECT. CX.

Faithful are the wounds of a friend; and such were the reproofs of Christ on this occasion. How well had all the entertainments of the Pharisee's table been repaid, had he and his brethren heard them with candour, humility, and obedience! These men despised them to their ruin; let us often review them for our instruction, that none of these dreadful woes may come upon us.

Luke XI. 39. & seq.

39, 42 This discourse of our Lord is a most just and severe rebuke to every hypocritical professor, who is scrupulous and exact in matters of ceremony, while he neglects morality; and is studious to shine in the sight of men, while he forgets the all-penetrating eye 43 of God. It exposes the ostentation of those who pride themselves in empty titles of honour, and eagerly affect precedence and supe- 46 riority. And it evidently chastises those who press on others the duties they neglect themselves, and so are most righteously judged out of their own mouth.

44 How melancholy it is to observe, in instances like these, the hypocrisy and deceitfulness of the human heart, and its desperate and unfathomable wickedness! and to see how men impose upon 47, 49 themselves with empty appearances, like these Pharisees; who built the sepulchres of the former prophets, while they were persecuting those of their own day; and, in contempt of all that was 50, 51 said by the messengers of God, were filling up the measure of their iniquities, till the cloud which had been so long gathering burst on their heads, and poured forth a storm of aggravated wrath and ruin!

May that God, who has an immediate access to the hearts of men, deliver all christian countries, and especially all protestant 52 churches, from such teachers as are here described: who take away and secrete the key of knowledge instead of using it, and obstruct, rather than promote, men's entrance into the kingdom of heaven! How loud will the blood of the souls they have betrayed cry against them in the awful day of accounts! and how little will the wages of unrighteousness, and the rewards of worldly policy, be able to warn them against destruction, or to support them under it!

SECT.

SECT. CXI.

Christ cautions his disciples against hypocrisy, and animates them against the fear of men by the promise of extraordinary assistance from his Spirit in their greatest trials. Luke XII. 1—12.

LUKE XII. 1.

IN the mean time, when there were gathered together an innumerable multitude of people, insomuch that they trode one upon another, he began to say unto his disciples first of all, Beware ye of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy.

2 For there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; neither hid, that shall not be known.

3 Therefore whatsoever ye have spoken in darkness, shall be heard in the light: and that which ye have spoken in the ear in closets, shall be proclaimed upon the house-tops.

4 And I say unto you, my friends, Be not

LUKE XII. 1.

IN the mean time, while Christ was thus discoursing at the Pharisee's house, many thousands of people were gathered together[a], and pressed with so much eagerness to hear him, that they even trampled on each other: and [Jesus] going forth among them, began to say to his disciples in the presence of them all, See that you more especially beware, and above all things take heed to yourselves of being corrupted by the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy; a vice which secretly puffs up their minds, and strangely spreads itself through their hearts and lives, so as to taint and spoil the very best of their duties. But seriously reflect upon the folly of it; for 2 you may assure yourselves, as I have told you formerly (Mat. x. 26. Mark iv. 22. and Luke viii. 17.) that there is nothing now so secretly concealed which shall not be discovered, and be openly unveiled another day; nor any thing so artfully disguised or hid, which shall not then at least be made known, if God does not more immediately expose those shallow artifices, which he now discerns and abhors. So that whatever 3 you have spoken with the utmost caution, in the thickest darkness, shall then be published and heard in the clearest effulgence of light: and what you have whispered in the most retired chambers and closets, shall then be proclaimed aloud as from the house-tops in the audience of all.

And therefore let it be your care, not merely 4 to save appearances, but to maintain a good conscience, though at the greatest expence: for I say unto you, my dear friends, with all possible seriousness, and most tender concern for your everlasting

SECT. CXI. Luke XII. 1.

a Many thousands of people were gathered together.] It would be more exactly rendered many myriads; but lest every English reader shou'd not know that a myriad is ten thousand, I render it many thousands; nor is it necessary to take the word in its strictest sense. Perhaps this vast assemblage of people might be owing to an apprehension either that Christ might meet with some ill usage among so many of his enemies, or that he would say or do something peculiarly remarkable on the occasion.—Compare Luke v. 17, 19. sect. xlv

b For

SECT. CXI.

Luke XII. 4.

everlasting welfare, Fear not those, who at the worst can only kill the body, and after that have nothing more which they can do, the immortal soul being entirely out of their reach as soon as it has quitted the body. But I will point out to you the great Object whom you shall fear, while I exhort you most reverentially to fear the great Almighty God, even him, who, after he has killed the body, has power to cast both that and the soul into hell; yea, knowing that I cannot too often inculcate it, I say unto you again, Fear him, and rather choose to venture on the greatest dangers, and to sacrifice your lives, than to do any thing which may offend his Divine Majesty. (Compare Mat. x. 28, p. 397.)

not afraid of them that kill the body, and after that have no more that they can do.

5 But I will forewarn you whom ye shall fear: fear him, which, after he hath killed, hath power to cast into hell; yea, I say unto you, Fear him.

6 In the mean time remember, that your enemies cannot hurt even your bodies without his knowledge and permission; for his Providence extends itself even to the meanest works of his hands: for instance, Are not five sparrows sold for so inconsiderable a sum as two farthings[b] ? and yet not one of them, minute and worthless as they are, is forgotten before God; but he attends to all the circumstances of their lives and deaths.

6 Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God?

7 Surely then you will not be overlooked by him: but may justly conclude that he has such a special and particular concern for you, as that even the very hairs of your head are all numbered, so that not one of them can perish without his notice. Fear not therefore; for as men, and much more as my servants and friends, you are more valuable than many sparrows, and will be more remarkably his care than they. But howsoever he may now permit you to be persecuted by your enemies for your fidelity to me, though he should even suffer you to sacrifice your lives in so honourable a cause, you will be far from being losers by it in the end: for I say unto you, That if any one shall freely acknowledge his faith in me before men[c], the Son of man himself shall also acknowledge his complacency in such a person, and his relation to him, even before the angels

7 But even the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear not therefore: ye are of more value than many sparrows.

8 Also I say unto you, Whosoever shall confess me before men, him shall the Son of man also confess before the angels of God.

b For two farthings, ασσαριων δυο.] This was a Roman coin, that was then current in Judea, called as, or anciently assarius, which was the tenth part of the denarius or Roman penny, in value about three farthings of our money. Two sparrows might be bought for one, and five for two of these. Compare Mat. x. 29, sect. lxxvi.

c If any one shall acknowledge me, &c.] The idioms of languages differ so much, that what is very elegant and proper in one, may, if verbally translated, be contrary to grammar in another. This verse and the following are instances of it. It seems to me a kind of superstition to scruple such little changes as I have here made.

d Him

gels of God, when they come to attend on his final triumph. But as for him that basely and perfidiously renounces me before men, and is ashamed or afraid of maintaining so good a cause, him will I also renounce before the holy angels of God[d], when they appear in a radiant circle around me, and wait, with solemn and observant silence, the important event of that awful day. (Comp. Mat. x. 29—33, p. 399, 400.) SECT. CXI. Luke XII. 9.

9 But he that denieth me before men, shall be denied before the angels of God.

Nothing can therefore be more dangerous and fatal, than to oppose my cause, and that especially when the Spirit is sent down on my followers after my resurrection and ascension: for whosoever shall speak a reflecting word against the Son of man in this present state of his humiliation and suffering, he may possibly hereafter repent, and on that repentance it may be forgiven him[e]: but as for him that blasphemeth the Holy Spirit, who shall then display his most glorious agency as my great Advocate and Witness; as for the wretch that maliciously imputes to diabolical operation the most convincing evidences of Divine power and goodness, that shall be given by the Spirit after his effusion, his crime is of such a nature, that it shall not be forgiven him; for he has thus opposed the last method of God's recovering grace, and shall, as utterly incorrigible, be abandoned to final destruction. (See Mat. xii. 31, and note [p], p. 394.)

10 And whosoever shall speak a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but unto him that blasphemeth against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven.

But let me add, that however others may be affected by this testimony of the Spirit, one happy effect of its operation shall be to furnish you, my apostles, for an honourable discharge of your office in its most difficult parts: and therefore, in the opposition you shall meet with from your enemies and persecutors, when they shall bring you before the judicial courts which assemble in the synagogues, and even before greater magistrates, and the supreme powers, whether Jewish or heathen; though they may have, not only your

11 And when they bring you unto the synagogues, and unto magistrates, and powers, take ye no thought how

[d] Him will I also renounce, &c.] Nothing can be more majestic than this view which Christ gives of himself. To be renounced by him is spoken of as a circumstance which would expose a man to the contempt of the whole angelic world, and leave him no remaining shelter or hope. Compare Mat. vii. 23, sect. xliii. note [d], p. 239. and John v. 22, & seq. sect. xlvii. note [h], p. 260.

[e] It may be forgiven him.] The common rendering of ἀφεθήσεται is more literal; but the connection shews it must be taken as here; for it would be madness to imagine that, in such a case as this, forgiveness must come of course, whether the blasphemer did or did not repent. What grammarians call an enallage of moods and tenses is very frequent; and I shall not always think it necessary to trouble the reader with an apology, when the reason of the change is so evident.

[f] Be

SECT. cxi.

your liberty, but your life in their hands, yet be not anxious how to behave, or what apology you shall make for yourselves,[f], or what you shall say in defence of the gospel you preach: For the Holy Spirit himself shall teach you in that very hour, or in the season of the greatest difficulty and extremity, what you ought to say, and what answer you should make to their most captious inquiries, or most invidious charges: (compare Mat. x. 19, 20, sect. lxxv.) Proper thoughts and expressions shall freely flow in upon you as fast as you can utter them; so that with undaunted courage you shall be able to vindicate the honour of my gospel, and to confound the most artful or most potent of your enemies.

Luke XII. 12.

how or what thing ye shall answer, or what ye shall say:

12 For the Holy Ghost shall teach you in the same hour, what ye ought to say.

IMPROVEMENT.

Ver. 1 LET us from this discourse, which we have been reading, learn the folly of hypocrisy, as well as the wickedness of it. A lying tongue is but for a moment (Prov. xii. 19); and the great approaching judgment-day will shew all in their true colours. May 2, 3 we live as those, who are then to be made manifest! May the leaven of deceit, by Divine grace, be entirely purged out of our hearts; and all our conduct be so fair and equal, that it may appear more honourable and lovely, in proportion to the accuracy with which it is examined; as the whitest garments are recommended by being seen in the strongest light!

If we would preserve such an integrity of soul, let us endeavour 4 to get above the servile fear of man; of man, that shall die, and of the son of man, that shall be made as grass; as if the oppressor had us in his power, and were ready to destroy: and where is the fury of the oppressor? (Isa. li. 12, 13.) With what infinite ease can God restrain it; and, when it is let loose in all its violence, how little can it do to hurt his faithful servants! Let this mean passion 5 be over-awed by the fear of that God, who has our eternal all in his hands; whose vengeance, or favour, will reach far beyond the grave, and determine our final misery or felicity, as we are the objects of the one or the other.

While

[f] Be not anxious how to behave, or what apology you shall make for yourselves.] It is not without reason that Christ so often touches on this topic. The apostles, being poor and illiterate men, would naturally have been thrown into confusion when they appeared as criminals in the presence of persons in the highest stations of life; and their solicitude would be in some measure proportionable to their piety, if they apprehended the gospel, which was dearer to them than their own lives, might suffer by the hurry and disorder of their thoughts, when they were thus called publicly to defend it. Compare note[e] on Mat. x. 19, p. 395.

* He

While we are in the world, let us labour after a firm faith in the universality of Divine Providence; from which the least of his creatures are not exempted, nor are they forgotten by it. Let us endeavour to enjoy the pleasure and comfort of such a thought; assuring ourselves, that He, who regards the life of birds and of insects, will not neglect the care and preservation of his children. SECT. CXI. Ver. 6, 7

In a steady persuasion of this, let us determine courageously to confess and maintain his gospel in the extremest danger; knowing that thus only we shall secure the honour of being owned by Christ, amidst all the glories of his final appearance. 8, 9

And, in a word, to animate us to this holy courage, and to assist us in every other duty, let us earnestly pray for the Holy Spirit; by whose influence the apostles were instructed and supported in the discharge of their difficult and various offices; whose grace therefore must be abundantly sufficient for us, to cause us to abound in every good word and work. (2 Cor. ix. 8.) 11, 12

SECT. CXII.

Christ, being desired to interpose in a dispute between two brethren about property, declines the decision of the case; and takes occasion to advance a caution against covetousness, which he inforces by the parable of the rich fool. Luke xii. 13—21.

LUKE XII. 13.

AND one of the company said unto him, Master, speak to my brother, that he divide the inheritance with me.

LUKE XII. 13.

AND while he was discoursing thus to his disciples, one of the crowd that was then about Jesus, said to him, Master, I desire thou wouldst speak to my brother, that he would agree to divide the inheritance with me, which since the death of our father he injuriously detains to himself; for thou art well known to be a Person of such an extraordinary character, that I would hope his reverence to thine authority may induce him to do me justice. SECT. CXII. LUKE XII. 13.

14 And he said unto him, Man, who made me a judge or a divider over you?

But Jesus, as he did not come to meddle in such matters, prudently replied[a], Man, what dost thou mean by such a rash appeal to me? Who constituted me a judge in temporal concerns, or set me up as a divider over you? My kingdom is of a spiritual nature; and as to the civil rights and properties of men, I intermeddle not with them 14

[a] He prudently replied.] This appellant probably thought, that, as the Messiah, he would act in the character of a prince, who would decide controversies relating to property.—My rendering the phrase, he said unto him, by the equivalent word replied, will not, I hope, be thought to need any apology.

SECT. CXII.

them, but leave them just as I found them. (Compare Exod. ii. 14.)

Luke XII. 15. And upon this occasion, though he would not interpose in the affair, yet, to prevent their being fond of the enjoyments of the world, and to preserve them from a covetous disposition, Jesus said to his disciples, and to them that were present, See to it, that with the utmost care and resolution you be upon your guard against all kinds and degrees of covetousness[b]; for though it be a common, it is a very unreasonable vice; since it is evident, that the comfort and happiness of a man's life does not consist in the abundance of his possessions; nor can the continuance of his life, even for the shortest period of time, be secured by that abundance.

15 And he said unto them, Take heed, and beware of covetousness: for a man's life consisteth not in the abundance of the things which he possesseth.

16 And, to enforce and illustrate this remark, he spake a very instructive parable to them, and said, There was a certain rich man, whose ground bore fruit so plentifully, that he had not room to receive and lay up in store the vast produce of his 17 harvest. And he found all his plenty an incumbrance to him, so that he reasoned with himself, not without some considerable anxiety of mind, saying, What shall I do? for I have not room at present to store up my crop, should I stow 18 it ever so close. And, after some pause, he came to a resolution, and said, I will do this, as what appears to me the wisest scheme; I will pull down my old barns, and build new, which shall be larger, and much more commodious than they; and there I will gather in all my rich increase this year, and all my goods that I already 19 have in store: And then I will retire from business, and sit down and enjoy the fruits of my former labours, and will say to my soul with complacency and confidence, O my soul, thou hast now an abundance of goods laid up, on which thou mayest comfortably subsist for many future years; repose thyself therefore after all thy fatigues; eat and drink freely, without any fear of exhausting thy stores; and be as merry as corn, and wine, and oil, shared with thy most jovial 20 companions, can make thee. But God beheld him with 16 And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The ground of a certain rich man brought forth plentifully.

17 And he thought within himself, saying, What shall I do because I have no room where to bestow my fruits?

18 And he said, This will I do: I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits and my goods.

19 And I will say to my soul, Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry.

20 But God said unto b See to it, that with the utmost care you be upon your guard against all kinds and degrees of covetousness.] Ὁρᾶτε καὶ φυλάσσεσθε is a lively phrase, the full force of which I have endeavoured to express in the paraphrase, not being able exactly to do it in the version. (Compare note c, on Mat. xvi. 6, p. 457.) — Some old versions and very good copies read it, from all covetousness; to which I have shewn so much regard, as to insert the word all in the paraphrase; as it is certain, at least, that our Lord intended the caution in this extent, whether he did or did not so particularly express it.

c Thy

to him, Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall those things be which thou hast provided?

with just displeasure, and by the awful dispensation of his Providence, in effect said to him, amidst all this gaiety of heart, in the variety of his schemes and hopes, Thou fool, who dost thus stupidly forget both the dignity and the mortality of thy nature, and thy continual dependence upon me thy supreme Lord! know to thy terror, that while thou art talking of a long succession of pleasurable years, this very night thy soul shall be demanded of thee[c], and be hurried away to its place; and then, where will all its boasted entertainments be, or who shall possess what thou hast thus laboriously provided, but shalt thyself never enjoy? And accordingly the unhappy creature died that night, and all his wealth could do no more for him than furnish out the expences of his funeral. And so, or such a fool in the Divine account, [is] he that heaps up treasures to himself, here on earth, and is not rich with respect to God[d] in acts of charity and piety, which would secure a fund of celestial treasures, lodged in his almighty hand, and therefore inviolably safe from such calamitous accidents as these.

21 So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich towards God.

Sect. CXI.

Luke XII. 20.

21

IMPROVEMENT.

Most prudently did our Lord decline the invidious office of an arbitrator in civil affairs; and wisdom will require his ministers generally to avoid it likewise. It is more suitable to our office, like our blessed Master, to endeavour to draw off and disengage the minds of men from covetousness, and to pluck up the root of those eager contentions, which so often divide even the nearest relations, and inspire them with mutual aversions, more invincible than the bars of a castle. (Prov. xviii. 19.)

Ver. 13, 14

And that a covetous desire of the enjoyments of the world may not create contentions, and engage us in pursuits that will be fatal to our souls, let us seriously consider the true value of things, and reflect how little riches can do to make us happy if we obtain them;

15

c Thy soul shall be demanded of thee.] It is in the original, απαιτουσιν, They shall demand thy soul. Elsner thinks it alludes to the messengers sent to fetch away the soul; and produces a remarkable and well known passage from Plato, to prove that Socrates thought this the office of a spirit superior to men; see Elsner Obser. Vol. I. p. 231.

d Rich with respect to God.] There is a force and propriety in the phrase εις Θεον, which our language will not exactly express. It represents God as a depositary, in whose hands the good man has lodged his treasure; and who has, as it were, made himself accountable for it in another and better world. Compare Prov. xix. 17.

SECT. CXII.

them; and how very uncertain that life is, on the continuance of which our possession of them does so evidently depend. But, alas, how many are there, who are now as deeply engaged in their worldly schemes, as this rich fool in the parable, to whom God will, in a few weeks, or days, if not this very night, say, by the awful voice of his irresistible providence, Thy soul is required of thee! And then, what will all these treasures do to purchase life, or to allay the agonies of death? So far will they be found from being capable of this, that they will rather serve to increase and imbitter the surprise and anguish of those agonies.

Ver. 16 & seq. 20

21 Let it then be our labour and care that we may be rich towards God; rich in works of piety and charity. So shall we safely consign over our treasure to the bank of heaven, and shall be enriched by it, when we leave the world as naked as we entered upon it, and lose all but what has been so wisely and happily spent.

SECT. CXIII.

Christ repeats the cautions and arguments against an anxious and covetous temper, which he had formerly given in his sermon on the mount. Luke XII. 22—34.

LUKE XII. 22.

SECT. CXIII.

THUS Jesus cautioned his followers against setting their hearts on worldly treasures; but as most of them were in such low circumstances as to be in greater danger of immoderate solicitude about the necessary supplies of life, he proceeded to caution them against this, by repeating some of those admonitions which he had formerly delivered in his sermon on the mount[a]. And accordingly he said to his disciples, For this cause, that is, considering the great uncertainty of riches, I say to you, and strictly charge it upon you, That you be not anxious about your life, what ye shall eat, or how you shall procure food to support it; nor for the body, what you shall put on to cover, defend and adorn it. For you must needs be sensible, the life itself, which you have received from God without any care or thoughtfulness of yours, is much more important than meat, and the body than raiment;

Luke XII. 22.

23

LUKE XII. 22.

AND he said unto his disciples, Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat; neither for the body, what ye shall put on.

23 The life is more than meat, and the body a Repeating some of those admonitions, &c.] Most of the thoughts and expressions used here occurred before, sect. xli. and are, I hope, sufficiently explained there. I content myself therefore with referring the reader to it.

b If body is more than raiment.

raiment; and well then may you hope that the great Author of your life, and the Former of your body, will maintain his own work in a proper manner, without your anxiety and solicitude about it. Especially may you expect it, when you see the care which he takes of the inferior creatures: as, for instance, consider the ravens, how they are subsisted: for they neither sow, nor reap, and have neither storehouse nor barn, to lay up any thing against a time of want; nay, their young ones are early deserted by their dams; and yet, voracious as they are, God one way or other feedeth them, so that you see the species is still continued: now, how much more are you better than they? and how much rather may you hope to be supplied with the necessaries of life, than any kind of birds? (Compare Mat. vi. 25, 26. p. 227.)

sect. cxii.

Luke XII. 23.

24 Consider the ravens, for they neither sow nor reap; which neither have storehouse nor barn; and God feedeth them: how much more are ye better than the fowls?

24

25 And which of you, with taking thought, can add to his stature one cubit?

And moreover, as this care is unnecessary, it will also be unprofitable; for which of you, by taking the most solicitous thought, can add a single cubit, or the least measure or moment, either to his age or stature? (Compare Mat. vi. 27. and note[h] on that text, sect. xli.)

25

26 If ye then be not able to do that thing which is least, why take ye thought for the rest?

If then you cannot do the least matter[b], as in this proverbial expression you grant, why are you anxious about the rest, as if you were to hold your life by a kind of perpetual lease, and were secure against all danger of a sudden ejectment?

26

27 Consider the lilies how they grow: they toil not, they spin not: and yet I say unto you, That Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these.

But, to pursue the argument I began before. Do but consider God's providential care, even of the vegetable creation: survey, for instance, the fair and beautiful lilies, and reflect how they grow; they neither labour to prepare the materials of their dress, nor spin it into that curious form; and yet Providence clothes them in so elegant and splendid a manner, that I say unto you, Even Solomon, when on some grand festival he appeared in all his utmost magnificence, was not arrayed in so beautiful a white as one of these.

27

28 If then God so clothe the grass, which is to-day in the field, and to-morrow is cast into the oven; how much more will he clothe you, O ye of little faith?

And if God so clothe and adorn the grass of the field, among which the lilies grow, though it is [flourishing] to-day in all its verdure, and by to-morrow is cut down and thrown into the furnace or still (see note[i] on Mat. vi. 30. sect. xli. p. 229), how much more [will he clothe] you

28

[b] If then you cannot do the least matter.] This proves, that to add one cubit to a thing was a proverbial expression for making the least addition to it.

[c] Or

SECT. CXIII.

you, O ye of little faith, who thus suspect his care?

Luke XII. 29. And do not you then, who are acquainted with the care of Providence, and are particularly interested in it, be solicitous to seek what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor be like meteors in the air, that are tossed about by every blast of wind, hurried with anxious cares, and agitated with a variety of restless and uneasy thoughts[c].

29 And seek not ye what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink, neither be ye of doubtful mind.

30 For the Gentile nations of the world, who know little of Providence, or of a future state, seek after all these lower things with great solicitude; and they are more excusable in doing it: but you are directed to much nobler objects of pursuit, and furnished with a more substantial support against such anxieties, in that paternal relation which God avows to you; and as your heavenly Father well knows that you have need of these things, he will certainly provide them for you in a proper degree. Leave them therefore to his care; and, low as your condition is, be not uneasy and disquieted about them; but seek ye rather the kingdom of God, and labour to promote its interest among men; and then you may depend upon it, not only, that you shall obtain that most important prize, but likewise, that all these other necessary things shall be added to you, without your anxiety. (Compare Mat. vi. 31—33. p. 229.)

30 For all these things do the nations of the world seek after: and your father knoweth that ye have need of these things.

31 But rather seek ye the kingdom of God, and all these things shall be added unto you.

32 I repeat the encouraging thought; Fear not, ye little flock, my dear property and charge, however feeble you may seem; fear not, I say, that you shall be left destitute of these common blessings of Divine Providence; for it is your heavenly Father's gracious pleasure to give you what is infinitely more valuable, even the kingdom of eternal glory: and can you possibly imagine that, while he intends to bestow that upon you, and even takes pleasure in the thought of making you so great and happy there,[d] he will 32 Fear not, little flock: for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom.

[c] Nor be agitated with restless thoughts.] After all the various and perplexed things which critics have said on this word, μετεωρίζεσθε (of which a very large account may be seen in the learned Wolfius), the sense I have taken is the most simple, and, especially here, the most natural. The authorities produced by Elsner (Obser. Vol. I. p. 233, 234), and several of those mentioned by Raphelius (Annot. ex Xen. p. 97, 98), seem to me to favour this sense, though some of them are produced to establish another. It appears from them, that any speculations and musings, in which the mind fluctuates, or is suspended in an uneasy hesitation, might well be expressed by such a word.

[d] Takes pleasure in the thought of making you so great and happy there.] This is the beautiful and wonderful import of the word ευδοκησεν in this connection; which generally signifies a pleasurable acquiescence.

And

will refuse you those earthly supplies, which he liberally imparts even to strangers and enemies? SECT. CXIII.

33 Sell that ye have, and give alms: provide yourselves bags which wax not old, a treasure in the heaven that faileth not, where no thief approacheth, neither moth corrupteth.

Animated therefore by such a hope and confidence, instead of being solicitous to increase your possessions to the utmost, rather be prepared, when Providence shall call you to sell what you already have, and distribute [it] in charity;[e] and so you may provide for yourselves purses which do not grow old and wear out,[f] even a never-failing treasure in heaven, that region of security and immortality, where no thief approaches to plunder the riches of its inhabitants, nor doth the moth corrode and spoil the robes of glory, in which they appear. And the more careful should you be about this heavenly treasure, because it is certain, that where that which you account your chief treasure is laid up, there will your heart be also fixed, and the whole tenor of your thoughts and affections will naturally flow in that channel.) Compare Mat. vi. 20, 21, 226.) Luke XII. 33.

34 For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. 34

IMPROVEMENT.

ARE we not all conscious to ourselves, that on such topics as these, we need line upon line, and precept upon precept, as being too deficient in our regard, though God speak once, yea twice? (Job xxxiii. 14.) We see our heavenly Father crowning the earth with his goodness: to this day does he clothe the grass and the flowers with the same profusion of ornament; to this day does he Ver. 22, 29 27, 28

And agreeable to this, it is most edifying and delightful to observe, how God is represented in scripture, as enjoying his own prescience, as it were, with a peculiar relish, in the view of those glories which he has prepared for his people. Hence those emphatical phrases of wisdom rejoicing in the habitable parts of the earth, or in the prospect and idea of them, before they were actually made, (Prov. viii. 31.) of God's knowing the thoughts he thinks towards his people, (Jer. xxix. 11. and of his rejoicing over them with joy and silently resting in his love to them, (Zeph. iii 17.) The tenderness and energy of innumerable scriptures depends on this remark; and many of those relating to election, predestination, &c. which have been as dry rods of controversy, when considered in this view, bud out into a thousand fair leaves and fragrant blossoms of hope and joy.

[e] Sell what you have and distribute it in charity.] These words were probably as a fruitful seed in the minds of some who heard them: and the liberal sale of estates a few months after, by which so many poor Christians were subsisted, might be in a great measure the harvest, which sprung up from it under the cultivation of the blessed Spirit. Nothing is more probable than that some of the many myriads now attending our Lord, (ver. 1.) might be in the number of the thousands then converted; see Acts ii 41—45.

[f] Purses which do not grow old, and wear out.] This may be fitly taken as an allusion to the danger of losing money out of a hole worn in an old purse. Such is frequently the gain of this world, and so are its treasures hoarded up, and put into a bag with holes; (compare Hag. i. 6.) The rich men of Judea, so soon ravaged and destroyed

SECT. CXIII.

he feed the young ravens when they cry, (Psal. cxlvii. 9.) nor is the meanest species of insects perished. Still does he know our necessities; and still he addresses us in the same gracious language, and avows the same endearing paternal relation. The experience of his power, goodness, and fidelity, is increasing with every succeeding generation, with every revolving day. The life that he has given, is supported by his care; and the same hand that formed the body, nourishes and clothes it. Let us then cast all our care on him, as being persuaded that he careth for us; (1 Pet. v. 7.) Feeble as his little flock is, it is the Father's good pleasure to give us the kingdom; and we are unworthy our share in so glorious a hope, if we cannot trust him for inferior blessings, and refer it to him to judge, in what manner our present wants are to be supplied.

Let the heathens abandon themselves to these low anxieties; but as for us, let us thank God, and take courage, opening our hearts wide to every sentiment of faith in God, and charity to men; and while we have this inexhaustible bank to draw upon, let us be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate, so laying up in store for ourselves a good foundation against the time to come, that we may lay hold on eternal life! (1 Tim. vi. 18, 19.) the very hope and expectation of which, if our heart be set upon it, will give us incomparably sweeter delight than the securest possessions of this empty world, and the most ample magazines of its richest stores.

SECT. CXIV.

Christ exhorts his disciples to watchfulness and fidelity, in expectation of his coming, and of the final account to be given for all their advantages. Luke XII. 35—48.

LUKE XII. 35.

LUKE XII. 35. LET your loins be girded about, and your lights burning;

SECT. CXIV.

OUR Lord having thus exhorted his disciples to a due moderation as to their worldly possessions, proceeded to press upon them a serious preparation for their final remove from earth, and for the awful solemnities of death, judgment, and eternity[a]. He therefore went on to say, Consider yourselves always as servants, who have a Master

Luke XII. 35.

stroyed by the Romans, particularly found it so.

[a] A serious preparation for—death, judgment, and eternity.] I shall give the reason of my interpreting this passage thus a little below in note f, though I am sensible the generality of readers would rather have expected an apology, if I had gone about to interpret it otherwise.

[b] Let

SECT. CXIV.

Luke XII. 35.

Master in heaven; and, that you may approve your diligence and fidelity to him, let your loins be still girded up, in a posture for active service, and your lamps be continually burning in a readiness to receive him:[b] And be you, on the whole, like men in a waiting posture, who, as good servants left with a proper charge, attending to the work appointed them, wait for their Lord's return from a marriage feast[c], or any other late entertainment; that whenever he comes and knocks at the door, they may immediately open it to him, and not be surprised in any disorder. Happy are those servants, whom, when their Lord comes, he shall find thus watching for him: and happy also will you be, if this shall be your case. For verily, I say unto you, so condescending is your Lord and Master, that, if you answer this character, he will reward you as graciously as if some great man, absent on such an occasion as I have supposed, finding his servants diligently waiting for him at his return, should gather up his clothes and gird himself, and cause them to sit down to supper, and should come forth himself and wait upon them[d]. And, at whatever hour the time of his arrival be, whether he shall come early in the second watch, or come late in the third watch of the night[e], and find [them] thus employed, blessed and happy are those faithful servants.

36 And ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he will return from the wedding, that when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately.

37 Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching: verily, I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them.

38 And if he shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants.

But do not think it is enough, if you would then be happy, to make some sudden preparation upon notice of his coming; for the day of the Lord

39 And this know, that if the good man of the house had known

b Let your loins be girded up, and your lamps burning.] As the Easterns wore long garments, it was necessary that, when they had any thing to do which required them to exert their strength or agility, they should tuck them up and gird them close; a practice to which there are frequent references, both in the Old Testament and the New. (See 1 Kings xviii. 46. 2 Kings iv. 29. Job xxxviii. 3. Jer. i. 17. Eph. vi. 14. and 1 Pet. i. 13.)—That the lamps should be found extinguished, might be an inconvenient circumstance to the master, and would be a demonstration of the servant's idleness.—The expressions, taken together, may intimate the care we should take to inform ourselves in our duty, and the resolution, with which we should apply to the performance of it.

c From a marriage feast.] There is no particular mystery in this circumstance. Our Lord might probably instance in this, because marriage feasts were generally the most splendid, and so prolonged to the latest hours.

d And should come forth himself, and wait upon them.] It is true (as Grotius and many others observe) that the Roman masters did sometimes, during the Saturnalia, practise some condescensions like these to their slaves; but that was, perhaps, chiefly for their own diversion; and it is difficult to judge, how far Christ's hearers might be acquainted with it; at least the words would be very intelligible without supposing any such reference.

e In the second or third watch of the night.] This included all the time from nine in the evening to three in the morning: and was, as if he had said, whether he come early or late.

SECT. CXIV.

Luke XII. 39.

Lord so comes as a thief in the night; and you know this, that there is none so negligent and stupid, where a house is plundered, but if the house-keeper, who is entrusted with the care of it, had been aware at what hour the thief would have come, he would undoubtedly have watched at that time, and would not have permitted his house to be broke open: he then, that acts with prudence will be always on his watch, that, as he knows not when the thief will come, he may not find

40 him unprepared. Be you therefore also ready; for at such a season as you think not of, and may least of all expect it, the Son of man cometh [f]; and as the day of final judgment will be a surprise to the world in general, so the day, when particular persons are called out of this life, is often a sudden thing, and too frequently a fatal surprise to the persons most intimately concerned in it. (Compare Mat. xxiv. 43, 44. sect. clxiii.)

41 Peter then said unto him, Lord, dost thou speak this awakening parable [g] to us thine apostles in particular? or is it also unto all in general, that what thou hast been saying is directed?

42 And the Lord said in reply, Though none are entirely unconcerned, yet you my ministers are more peculiarly to apply it to yourselves, and to consider me as asking each of you, Who is that faithful and prudent steward [h], [whom] his Lord shall set over all the servants of his family [i], to deal known what hour the thief would come, he would have watched, and not have suffered his house to be broken through.

40 Be ye therefore ready also: for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not.

41 Then Peter said unto him, Lord, speakest thou this parable unto us, or even to all?

42 And the Lord said, Who then is that faithful and wise steward, whom his Lord shall make ruler over his household, to give them their portion of meat in due season?

f At such a season as you think not, the Son of man cometh.] The coming of the Son of man often signifies his providential interposition for the destruction of Jerusalem; (see Mat. x. 23, note g, p. 396.) But here I think it cannot be taken in such a sense, because our Lord speaks of an immediate reward to be bestowed on all faithful servants, and an immediate punishment to be executed on all that were unfaithful; and expressly declares this to be a matter of universal concern; all which particulars have very little sense or propriety when applied to the destruction of Jerusalem. It must therefore be understood of his coming to remove them from the capacities of service here, to give up their account. And, if we suppose it to relate to death as well as judgment (which, by a consequence at least it undoubtedly does,) it strongly intimates his having such a dominion over the invisible world, that every soul removed into it might be said to be fetched away by him. Compare Rev. i. 18.

g This awakening parable.] It may signify particularly the similitude of the Lord and his servants, or may extend to the whole of the discourse.

h Who is that faithful and prudent steward?] This interrogation had a lively force to turn their thoughts inward, that each might ask himself, Whether he was the man? The Prussian version therefore (and that English one which follows it so close) loses much of the spirit of the passage in rendering it, If there be any faithful steward, &c.— i The servants of his family.] So I render θεραπεια, which (as Elsner shews at large, Observ. Vol. I. p. 295.) exactly answers to the Latin famulitium, all the servants of a family, ; for which we have no one English word, any more than for σιτομετριον, which strictly signifies a determinate measure of wheat, but here is put for all the daily food; see Erasmus here.) By such a version the distinction between this and the 44th verse is set in a clearer light than critics have generally given it. To be raised from the care of giving out food

SECT. CXIV.

Luke XII. 42.

deal out to each of his domestics the stated allowance of food in its proper season? As the guilt of such an officer will be greater than that of a common servant, if he prove negligent; so the reward of his fidelity will be proportionably great. Peculiarly happy is that servant in so eminent a station, whom his Lord at his arrival shall find thus employed in a faithful discharge of the trust committed to him. Truly I say to you, that he will prefer him to a much higher station of honour and importance; as if a person finding his domestic steward thus faithful, should upon that, appoint him to take the care of all that he hath, abroad as well as at home. (Compare Gen. xxxix. 4, 5, 6.)

43 Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord, when he cometh, shall find so doing.

44 Of a truth I say unto you, that he will make him ruler over all that he hath.

But, on the contrary, if that servant I spoke of before, as set over the family [k], should say in his heart, My Lord delays his coming, so that I have nothing to apprehend from it; and, on that foolish presumption, shall grow so indolent and wanton, as to begin to beat and abuse the men and maid-servants, and to eat and drink in a riotous and extravagant manner, so as to debauch [himself] with it: I assure you, that the lord of that servant will come upon him in a day when he does not expect him, and in an hour which he is not aware of, and will scourge him with such severity, that he will even cut him asunder [l]; and, notwithstanding the profession he has made, God will appoint him his portion with the infidels [m]; nay,

45 But and if that servant say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to beat the men-servants and maidens, and to eat and drink, and to be drunken:

46 The lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and at an hour when he is not aware, and will cut him in sunder, and will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers.

43 46

food to the servants, to have the charge of the whole estate, was a noble preferment.

k If that servant I spoke of before, &c.] It is necessary thus to go back to ver. 42 for the explication of this; for it is most evident, from the whole tenor of scripture, that the servant who at his Lord's coming has passed his account in an honourable manner will never afterwards be in danger of incurring his displeasure.

l Scourge him with such severity, that he will even cut him asunder.] Dr. Whitby has so clearly proved this to be the sense of διχοτομησει, that I am surprised that any should since have coldly rendered it, shall separate him from the rest. But this is one instance of many, in which the version of 1727 has followed the Prussian Testament in some of those parts of it which are the least judicious.—I know not on what authority it has been asserted that the word may only signify confiscating his estate. Wherever it, or any of its derivatives, occur in the Septuagint, it has always the signification which is here given it by our version, and generally answers to the Hebrew חתך. See Exod. xxix. 17. Lev. i. 8. Ezek. xxiv. 4, Septuag.

m And appoint him his portion with infidels.] It has been suggested to me by a person of great worth and eminence, that απιστος signifies unfaithful; and that had infidelity, or the disbelief of the gospel, been referred to here, the word would have been απιστιαν. But I must beg leave to observe, that απιστοι does in several places evidently signify unbelieving: compare John xx. 27. 1 Cor. vii. 12—15. x. 27. xiv. 22—24. (where there is an express opposition in ver. 22 between απιστοις and πιστευουσι); 2 Cor. vi. 14, 15. 1 Tim. v. 8. And I cannot but think that the spirit of this text is much better expressed by such a rendering; especially when the next verse is compared with it, which shews that, though this wicked servant shall have his portion and abode with such (who, by the way, had they not been unfaithful, would not have been unbelievers), yet his punish- nay, in some respects, his case shall be worse than theirs, as his opportunities and engagements have been so much greater.

SECT. CXIV.

Luke XII. 47. And that servant, who, like him I have been speaking of, knew his Lord's will by a particular declaration of it [n], and, disregarding the instructions given him, did not keep himself ready [o], nor set himself to do according to his will, shall have the sorest punishment inflicted on him, and be beaten with many [stripes] [p]. (Compare Deut. 48 xxv. 2, 3.) But he who, like the heathen, did not know the particulars of his duty by a clear revelation, and yet, sinning against that degree of light he had, committed things which deserved stripes, shall be beaten indeed, but with fewer and lighter [strokes] [q] than the other. For it is a received maxim among men, and God will make it the rule of his final judgment, that much improvement shall be required from every one to whom much is given; and where much is deposited, the more will be demanded in proportion to it. (Compare Numb. xv. 29, 30.)

47 And that servant which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes.

48 But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be beaten with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required: and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more.

IMPROVEment shall be more grievous; as there may be a great difference in the condition of criminals confined in the same prison.

[n] Knew his Lord's will by a particular declaration of it.] There is a force and propriety in these words beyond what is usually observed. A servant without express instruction, might know, that to beat his fellow-servants, and plunge himself into debauchery, would be offensive to his master; and he would therefore deserve some correction: but such a conduct in a servant, to whom his master had committed some particular charge, with suitable instructions for performing it, was most monstrous, and consequently deserved severer punishment.

[o] Did not keep himself ready.] So Mons. L'Enfant renders the word ἑτοιμασας, I suppose, to distinguish it from the following clause; and I follow him, though not without some hesitation. Perhaps both may be joined thus, Did not prepare or set himself to do according to his will.—But since I wrote this, I perceive a great emphasis in these words, which I did not before observe. The sense rises on that of the foregoing verse; as if our Lord had said, "Think not, that I merely intend to forbid such gross immoralities as drunkenness, riot, oppression, &c. but be assured, that sins of omission, where there have been fair opportunities of learning your duty, will expose you to the Divine correction."—The opposition here and in the next verse is between a servant who receives an express message from his master, which he contradicts; and another who, though he receive no such express message, yet falls into such instances of misbehaviour as he cannot but know to be inconsistent with his duty and office in general; by which he exposes himself justly to some punishment, though, other things being equal, he is less criminal than the former.

[p] Shall be beaten with many stripes.] Scourging was a usual punishment for negligent servants; but I cannot find that what is properly called giving the bastinado was in use among the Jews, though some suppose it to be referred to here.—Brennius thinks that these words have a peculiar reference to the case of ministers, who have such singular advantages for knowing Christ's will; so that they will certainly be in the number of the most happy or the most miserable of mankind. May they seriously consider it, and rejoice with trembling in those distinctions of their office, which will draw after them such solemn and weighty consequences!

[q] Shall be beaten indeed, but with fewer strokes.] This strongly intimates that ignorance will not entirely excuse any, who have neglected God's service, since they might in general have known at least the main branches of their duty; as every servant may know in the main what kind of conduct his master will approve, though some may be much more fully instructed than others as to his particular pleasure.

IMPROVEMENT.

SECT. CXIV.

MAY our souls be awakened by these awful truths! and may we be engaged to gird up the loins of our mind, to be sober, and watch to the end! (1 Peter i. 13.)

Ver.

Great are our encouragements to diligence, on the one hand; 35, 36 and, on the other, dreadful will be the punishment of our neglect.
The time of our Lord's appearance is uncertain; let us therefore 40 always be ready; solicitous that, when he comes, he may find us so doing, as he has required; living not to ourselves, but to him, and employing ourselves about that particular thing, whatsoever 43 it may be, which, all circumstances considered, we are verily persuaded, may most promote the great ends of life, and the important purposes of his glory.

How glorious are the rewards promised to such! How justly 42, 44 may they awaken our emulation! He will prefer them to stations of more honourable and important service. He will set them down 37 at his table, and minister (as it were) himself to their delight, bringing forth the choicest dainties of heaven, and spreading before them an eternal banquet. Lord, may we, through thy grace, be found worthy to taste of that supper! May the Lamb that is in the midst of the throne feed us, and guide us to fountains of living water! (Rev. vii. 17.)

On the other hand, let us seriously consider the punishments to 45 be inflicted on the unfaithful servant. Let ministers, if such there are, who abandon themselves to a life of idleness and luxury; who stain their sacred character by intemperance; who proudly censure their brethren, and either call, or wish, for the secular arm to smite their fellow-servants, perhaps more faithful than themselves; let such hear and tremble. Their Lord may come in a very un- 46 expected hour; (as indeed, when do such expect him?) and what are the stripes they have given others, when compared with those which they shall themselves receive? stripes which shall cut them asunder, and pierce deep into their very souls! How much more tolerable will it be, even for the worst of Gentile sinners, than for such!

Let all who are in any measure distinguished by the gifts of the Divine bounty to them, or by their stations, whether in civil or sacred offices, attentively dwell on this great truth, so solemnly repeated again and again; let them consider it with a view to their own account: To whomsoever much is given, of him will much be required. May Divine Grace so impress it on their 48 hearts, that they may be distinguished by present fidelity, and future rewards, in proportion to the difference, which Providence has already made in their favour! And may they never have reason to reflect with confusion and anguish on what is now their honour and their joy!

SECT.

SECT. CXV.

Christ observes the evils which would be occasioned by his coming, yet declares his desire to complete his work, and warns the Jews of the great danger of neglecting the short remainder of their time of trial. Luke XII. 49, to the end.

LUKE XII. 49.

SECT. CXV.

Luke XII. 49.

OUR Lord farther added in his discourse to his disciples and the multitude: After all that I have said to promote humanity and charity, yet it will in fact appear, that I am come to send fire on the earth; so opposite is my doctrine to the prejudices and the lusts of men, and such are the violent contentions that my gospel will occasion, through the wickedness of those among whom it is preached: and yet what do I wish? that the gospel might be suppressed? nay, but I rather say, Oh that this fire, fierce as it shall be, were already kindled[a] by the universal propagation of a religion, whose blessings so abundantly counterbalance all the accidental evils which 50 can attend it! But I have indeed, in the mean time, a most dreadful baptism to be baptized with, and know that I shall shortly be bathed, as it were, in blood, and plunged in the most overwhelming distress: yet, far from drawing back on that account, how inexpressibly am I straitened and uneasy through the earnestness of my desire, till, terrible as it is, it be fully completed[b], and the glorious birth produced, whatever agonies may lie in the way to it!
51 But these benefits are to be secured in a very different manner from what some of you, my disciples, imagine: for do you now suppose that I

LUKE XII. 49.

I AM come to send fire on the earth; and what will I, if it be already kindled?

50 But I have a baptism to be baptised with, and how am I straitened till it be accomplished!

51 Suppose ye that I a And what do I wish? Oh that it were already kindled!] I think Sir Norton Knatchbull has abundantly established this version. Dr. Whitby (who here, as in many other places, transcribes from Grotius) seems fully to have proved that τι sometimes has this force. Compare Luke xix. 42, and Numb. xxii. 29; Josh. vii. 7; Psal. lxxxi. 13, Septuag. (Perhaps we may add Luke xxii. 42.) See Grotius, in loc.

b How am I straitened and uneasy till it be completed!] The word συνεχομαι seems to import an ardour of mind, with which a person is so borne on towards the object of his affection and pursuit, that the necessary impediments, which lie in his way, are uneasy to him; compare 2 Cor. v. 14.—Mr. Locke understands it of a kind of embarrassment which Christ was under to know, how faithfully to fulfil his ministry without giving such umbrage to the Roman power as would have drawn persecution and death upon him before the appointed time; (see Mr. Locke's Reasonableness of Christianity, p. 134): but this seems to me a very foreign and unnatural sense.—That, which I take it in, is also favoured by Luke xxii. 15, sect. 168: but if Grotius, whose sense I have hinted in the paraphrase, judge rightly of the particular force and beauty of the word συνεχομαι, it may be illustrated by John xvi. 21, sect. clxxviii.

c Or

SECT. CXV.

Luke XII. 51.

I am come to give peace on earth? I tell you, Nay; but rather division.

I am come to give peace on the earth, or immediately to establish that temporal tranquility and prosperity which you expect should attend the Messiah's kingdom[c]? Nay, but considering how my gospel, notwithstanding all its tendency to peace, will be opposed, and how it will be perverted, I may say to you, that I am rather come to occasion the most unnatural division.

52 For from henceforth there shall be five in one house divided, Three against two, and two against three.

For such 52 are the contentious heats and animosities that will attend the publication of the gospel, that, ere long, five in one family shall be so divided, that there shall be three against two on the one side, and two against three on the other:

53 The father shall be divided against the son, and the son against the father; the mother against the daughter, and the daughter against the mother: the mother-in-law against her daughter-in-law, and the daughter-in-law against her mother-in-law.

And this shall 53 be the case when those families consist of persons in the nearest relations to each other: the father, for instance, shall differ with the son, and the son with the father; the fondest mother with the daughter, and the daughter with the mother; the mother-in-law with her son's wife, and the daughter-in-law with her husband's mother[d]; and so inveterate shall be their hatred against all that embrace my gospel, that they shall break the bands of nature, as well as of friendship, to express it. (Compare Mat. x. 34, 35, p. 400.)

54 And he said also to the people, When ye see a cloud rise out of the west, straightway

And he said also to the people, This perverse- 54 ness already shews itself in your overlooking so many proofs of the Messiah's appearance among you, while you discover such a sagacity in your observations with respect to other things: for when you see a cloud arising out of the west, or coming from the Mediterranean sea, you presently

[c] Or immediately to establish that temporal tranquility, &c.] There are so many prophecies of the peaceful state of the Messiah's kingdom (compare Psal. lxxii. 7; Isa. ii. 4; xi. 6—9; lxv. 25), that it is hard to say how Christ could completely answer the character of the Messiah if he should never give peace on earth: but the error of the Jews lay in supposing he was immediately to accomplish it; whereas the prophecies of the New Testament, especially in the book of Revelation, shew, and those of the Old Testament most plainly intimate, that this prosperous state of his kingdom was not only to be preceded by his own sufferings, but by a variety of persecutions, trials, and sufferings, which should in different degrees attend his followers, before the kingdoms of the earth became, by a general conversion, the kingdoms of the Lord, and of his Christ (Rev. xi. 15). See Dr. Leland's Answer to the Moral Philosopher, p. 353—366.

[d] The mother-in-law with her son's wife, and the daughter-in-law with her husband's mother.] The original words, πενθερα, and νυμφη, are exactly expressed in this translation. The English words mother-in-law, and daughter-in-law, are more extensive, and rather, though not necessarily, lead us to think of [noverca, μαμμια,] a step-dame, or father's second wife, and her husband's daughter.—Our Lord might mention this relation, because, in consequence of the obligation which the Jewish children were under to maintain their aged parents, a young man might, when he settled in the world, often take his mother, if a widow, into his family, and her abode in it might occasion less uneasiness than that of a mother-in-law in any other sense.

SECT. cvii.

Luke XII. 55. ly say, A heavy shower is coming[e]; and it is so. And when [you find] the south-wind blowing from the desert of Arabia, and other hot climates, you say, There will be sultry heat; and so accordingly it comes to pass. 56 Ye hypocrites, that pretend to ask for farther signs, as if you were really desirous to know, whether I be or be not a Divine Teacher; you know how by such remarks as these to distinguish the face of the earth and of the heavens, so as to foretell the changes in the weather before they come; but how is it that you do not discern and judge of the much more evident signs of this time, which are attended with such manifest and unparalleled tokens of the Messiah's coming? (Compare Mat. xvi. 2, 3, p. 456.) 57 Yea, why is it you do not even of yourselves judge what is fit and right[f], and gather from such obvious premises, how you ought in reason and conscience to treat so extraordinary a Person as I appear to be from the whole series of my doctrine and conduct, instead of disregarding all the proofs that shew me to be sent from God?

straightway ye say, There cometh a shower; and so it is.

55 And when ye see the south wind blow, ye say, There will be heat; and it cometh to pass.

56 Ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky, and of the earth: but how is it that you do not discern this time?

57 Yea, and why even of yourselves judge ye not what is right?

58 This, however you may thoughtlessly neglect it, is a matter of the utmost importance: I must therefore enforce the exhortation I formerly gave you (Mat. v. 25, 26, p. 209), and press you to endeavour, with the greatest diligence, that the controversy may immediately be made up between God and your souls. For you count it a rule of human prudence, when you go to the magistrate with your adversary, who has a suit against you, to use your utmost endeavour to make up the affair with him[g] while you are yet on

58 When thou goest with thine adversary to the magistrate, as thou art in the way, give diligence that thou mayest be delivered from him; lest he e A heavy shower is coming.] Ομβρος properly signifies a heavy shower; and καυσων, in the next verse, sultry or scorching heat.

f Why is it you do not even of yourselves, &c.] The phrase αφ' εαυτων does not seem here to signify, "From the like principles of good sense which you use in common affairs, or in matters relating to yourselves;" but it seems an advance on that thought, as if our Lord had said, "Even though I had not so expressly drawn the consequence, yet, from the tenor of my doctrine and character, as well as from my miracles, you might have discerned, yourselves, that it must be a very wrong and very dangerous thing to reject and slight me."—Castalio and Grotius connect this verse with the two following, I think, without any reason.

g Use your utmost endeavour to make up the affair with him.] Theophylact intimates, and Salmasius, and after him, La Cene, largely insist upon it, that δος εργασιαν signifies "Pay the interest, as well as the principal of thy debt, in order to procure deliverance." But Luke make use of another word [τοκον] for usury (Luke xix. 23), which I think a considerable argument for the common rendering, which is also more extensive.—Απηλλαχθαι signifies, not merely any kind of deliverance, but such an agreement as secures the defendant from any farther danger of prosecution; as Elsner accurately shews, Observ. Vol. I. p. 237.—It is well known that αντιδικος properly signifies a prosecutor, or one who has a suit at law against another, whether in a civil or criminal case.

h The

he hale thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and the officer cast thee into prison.

59 I tell thee, thou shalt not depart thence till thou hast paid the very last mite.

on the way; lest he force thee before the judge, and the judge, having found thee to be indeed accountable, deliver thee to the custody of the serjeant, and the serjeant throw thee into prison. It will not then be in thy power to compound the matter upon gentler terms, or to get free from thy confinement; but I tell thee that, when he has thee at such an advantage, thou shalt not be able to come out from thence till thou hast paid the very last mite of the debt thou owest[h]. And thus if you are regardless of the proposals of God's mercy while the day of life and grace is continued, nothing is to be expected from the tribunal of his justice, but a severe sentence, which will end in everlasting confinement and punishment.

SECT. CXV.

Luke XII. 58. 59

IMPROVEMENT.

To what a lamentable degree is human nature corrupted, that so noble a remedy as the gospel, so well adapted to the cure of a malevolent and contentious disposition, should in so many instances only irritate the disease! and that a scheme so full of love and goodness, and so well suited to promote peace and harmony in those, who cordially embrace it, should be opposed with all the violence of persecution, and be the means of introducing strife and division! Ver. 49

How monstrous is it, that any should hate their neighbours, yea, and their nearest relatives, for that disinterested piety, and regard to conscience, which might recommend strangers to their esteem and affection! Yet let not those, who meet with such injurious treatment, be discouraged; knowing they have a Father and a Saviour in heaven, whose love is ten thousand times more than all: nor let others be offended, as if Christianity had been the occasion of more evil than good; for such is the nature of eternity, that the salvation of one immortal soul will be more than an equivalent for the greatest and most lasting temporal evils, which the greatest number of persons can suffer for conscience sake. 51, 53

Let this awaken our zeal to save souls, however great and terrible the sufferings are, to which it may expose us, in proportion to 50

h The very last mite of the debt thou owest.] The mite [λεπτον,] was the least valuable of their coins (see Mark xii. 42), containing no more than half of their least kind of farthing, or of their κοδραντης, or quadrans; which was itself but the fourth part of the as, or ασσαριον, or of the larger farthing, mentioned Mat. x. 29. and Luke xii. 6; so that the mite was but little more than the third part of an English farthing, and a sparrow was reckoned worth four of them.

SECT. CXV.

to the rage, with which the enemy is endeavouring their destruction. May we be animated in it by the example of the blessed Jesus, who, with a view to this, even longed for those sufferings, which innocent nature could not but regard as the object of strong aversion!

Luke XII. 50.

54, 56 May we at all times be so wise as to discern the evidences, and to comply with the purposes, of the gospel, else our knowledge in natural things, should it extend not only to the most common, but the most curious appearances on the face of the earth or the heavens, will turn to no other account but to shame and condemn us!

58 If we have any reason to fear that, through obstinate impenitence, the blessed God is still an adversary to us, let us make it our first and greatest care, that, by an humble submission of soul to him in the methods of his gospel grace, that strict scrutiny of his justice may be prevented, and that sentence of his wrath averted, which would otherwise plunge us into endless ruin and misery; for when could we pretend to have paid the last farthing of the debt of ten thousand talents, which we have been daily contracting, and which is charged to our account in the book of his remembrance.

END OF THE SIXTH VOLUME.

E. BAINES, PRINTER, LEEDS.

Date Due

FEB 23 '61

FEB 13 '62

PRINTED IN U. S. A.